Shall instruct many -- That the Papacy is the Antichrist, the Man of Sin. C37

Yet they -- Those who oppose the Papacy, the faithful few. C37

Days -- Here another parenthesis of verse 34 and part of verse 35 interrupts, until the phrase "to the time of the end, because it is yet (future) for a time appointed." C38

With a little help -- The Reformation movement. C38; OV417:1; B357

The teachings of a few saintly ones gained sufficient headway to bring about the Reformation. R5911:4

But many -- Kings and princes; tares. C38, C154

Shall cleave to them -- To Protestantism; to the wheat. C38, C154

With flatteries -- Honors and titles; promises of help and success if they would shape their courses according to the wisdom of this world. C37, C110

Succumbing, in a considerable degree, to the desire to gain power and influence among the nations. R5911:4

Receiving the favor of the world at the expense of their virtue, their fidelity to Christ. D31

It was flattery of the leaders of the great Reformation that stayed the progress of that good work and caused many to fall from their steadfastness. R1895:2

The kings and princes offered their backing in return for support of their kingdoms. OV417:1

Overcome by flatteries, each reform movement, after accomplishing a measure of cleansing, stopped short. D31

No marks or badges of distinction or flattering homage may be tolerated in the Body of Christ. R1895:2

"A thousand shall fall at thy side and ten thousand at thy right hand." (Psa. 91:7) R414:6

Napoleon, the instrument employed by providence to break Papacy's power and to begin her torture which will end in utter destruction at a later date. C39

France had been, of all nations, most faithful and subservient to Papal authority. Therefore no other nation could have struck Papacy so stunning and destructive a blow as the French. C39

To his will -- He was noted for his wilfulness and determination. C40

Above every god -- Every mighty one. C40

Marvellous things -- Commanding his obedience as a servant, thus shocking the superstitious of the world. C40

Shall be done -- The Pope was brought to the verge of ruin in 1797 AD, taken prisoner to France in 1798 and died there the following year. His successor, Pius VII, in 1800, declared that all, including himself, should obey established governments. C42

A god-like Messiah, combining the qualities of Moses (the great teacher and lawgiver), of David and Solomon (the great kings), and of Melchizedek (the great priest)--on a bigger scale--antitypical--and as a spirit being and not a human. OV109:1, OV115:3; CR137:6

But this knowledge is coming to people who at heart are unprepared for it. R5363:6

A Russian statesman said that education is the basis of all the revolutionary spirit amongst the people. Without some restriction, education is a dangerous thing. To an unregenerate heart it means power in an unregenerate hand-- which is not always safe. R5565:4

Hosea

General

Hosea prophesied in Israel--the ten-tribe kingdom--prior to the Babylonian captivity, dying about the time that Samaria capitulated. The name Hosea signifies salvation and corresponds well with the prophecy. The Lord through Hosea made plain to Israel that their national destruction and captivity was at hand; that it was a punishment for sin; but that it also told the people of God's sympathy for them, of his many loving forbearances, etc., and assured them that he would continue to love them to the end, and eventually bless them and recover them from the land of the enemy. Hosea's own experiences in life in some degree pictured the Lord's experiences with Israel. Hosea's wife was unfaithful to him, as Israel had been unfaithful to the Lord. Following the Lord's direction, Hosea took back his wife, reclaiming her; and his message to Israel was of God's continued love for that people. R5809:2

Hosea was a resident and prophet in the kingdom of Israel during a part of the period in which Isaiah was prophesying in the kingdom of Judah. It would appear that the Lord permitted Hosea to have certain very trying experiences in domestic troubles, with a view to impressing upon his mind the Lord's view of Israel, his spouse. These severe experiences through which the Prophet passed seemed to be preparing him to voice the Lord's sentiments of tender compassion to Israel, his espoused one, who so frequently and persistently went after other gods. If the prophecy of Hosea be read from this standpoint, its tender compassionate appeals will be appreciated as from no other. R2490:3; R2491:1,2; R4811:2

Amos

General

Amos is noted as being one of the earliest prophets to write down the message which he delivered. Amos belongs to a period about a century after Elijah and nearly a century before Isaiah, and about two centuries before Jeremiah, Ezekiel and Daniel. Amos declared himself to have been of humble birth; his parents were not illustrious, neither was he educated amongst the sons of the prophets. Like David he was a sheep tender, a farmer, upon whom the Lord poured his spirit with mighty power, sending him to proclaim the disasters sure to come upon Israel unless a change of course should turn aside the deserved punishment for their iniquities. R3423:3

It was a time in the history of Israel when the prosperous class had become wealthy--when many of the nation's wisest and most brilliant people had settled down to ease and luxury--to self-gratification. They considered that they had won in the battle of life, and would now take their ease and enjoy the fruits of their strife and diligence. It was made the mission of Amos to call attention to the fact that aggressive selfishness had accumulated great riches, and that these conditions fostered pride and moral laxity amongst the wealthy; while the poor were being filled with avarice, losing respect for God and religion, for truth and mercy. Society was on the edge of a great volcano, and God declared that an eruption was near at hand. Amos was his mouthpiece. R5243:1

The message of Amos is likened to a trumpet of alarm, announcing the dire catastrophes that shortly would come. And the announcement is thus made in advance, not with a view to the bringing of repentance, but with a view to the proper appreciation of the judgments when they would come--that the people might know that the things coming were judgments and not accidents. R2356:2

As Amos was faithful in declaring the message of the Lord, and was not deterred into silence from prudential reasons, so those who today are spoken to by the Lord through his Word and are instructed respecting the things that are shortly to come to pass upon nominal spiritual Israel, are not to hold their peace from prudential reasons--for the fear of man bringeth a snare. R2357:4

Amos 1:1

The words -- Portions of this prophecy imply a still larger fulfilment upon nominal Israel in the end of this age.

R3424:6

Prophecies of the kind inspired by the Lord in early days are no longer his method. R3424:1

Of Amos -- Of humble birth, a sheep-tender, a farmer.

R3423:3

One of the earliest prophets to write down the message which he delivered. R3423:3

Belongs to a period about a century after Elijah, nearly a century before Isaiah, and about two centuries before Jeremiah, Ezekiel and Daniel. R3423:3

Concerning Israel -- The brunt of the prophet's message fell against the ten-tribe kingdom of Israel. R3423:3

Amos 1:2

From Zion -- The spiritual phase of the Kingdom of God. A297; T33

From Jerusalem -- The earthly phase of the Kingdom of God. A297

The habitations -- Because of their close identity with Israel, the adjoining nations are made the subject of this prophecy. R2355:6

Of the shepherds -- Greedy, ignorant, lazy teachers. F287

Amos 1:3

For three transgressions -- At the present time to copy either Elijah or Amos would indicate a total misapprehension respecting the divine will and message. R3424:1

The Philistines -- On the west. R3423:6

And for four -- Peter adds the three and the four, inquiring whether the Lord would have his followers forgive seven times. R2665:3

Transgressions of Israel -- The ten-tribe kingdom, the center of the prophet's message. R3423:6, R2356:1
Having captured their attention with words descriptive of the troubles coming upon their surrounding enemies, the circle grew narrower; the weight of the prophet's message was especially against themselves, and they were indignant. R3423:6

The twelve tribes; Israel in its two parts. R2356:1

God's favor to Israel was merely an earthly and preparatory one. R4769:5

Israel only was invited to the "great feast" of Luke 14:15-24 when the feast was ready in our Lord's day. R2701:3

The Gentile nations were "strangers, aliens and foreigners from the commonwealth of Israel"--"without God, having no hope in the world." (Eph. 2:12) R3467:2, R2348:5, R1459:3; HG114:3

God did not exact from other nations a tithe, a tenth, but neither did he promise to other nations his special care, bounty and blessing. R2485:5

God has supervised the affairs of other nations to the extent of hindering conditions which would be inimical to his plan of blessing all the families of the earth. R4055:3, R3012:2

From the time of the fall, none but the one line of Adam's children had divine favor--the line from which Abraham, Noah, Israel and Christ came--the line of Seth. R1459:3

Solomon's mismarriages, though worldly-wise, were unwise from the Lord's standpoint, who desired Israel to be separate and distinct from all the families of the earth. R2324:1

Therefore it was improper to attempt to convert the Moabites, for God had not called the Moabites. R5614:2

Even when the gospel "began to be preached by our Lord" it was restricted to the same "lost sheep of the house of Israel." (Matt. 15:24) R2518:6

Adopted as his special possession in the world. R3752:3

Revealing himself to, and in active cooperation with, the nation of Israel alone. R4055:3; D191

In Israel God placed his own throne, typically, and her kings represented him. (1 Chron. 29:23) R1978:6

Not until Cornelius' day did any Gentiles come into any kind of relationship with God. R4769:4

For 2081 years from the covenant with Abraham in 2045 BC (2081 years after the fall of man) to the end of the 70 weeks in 36 AD. R3459:3,6*

"Go not into the way of the Gentiles" (Matt. 10:5); "I am not sent but unto the lost sheep of the house of Israel." (Matt. 15:24) A97; R2518:6; OV224:T

Therefore -- Because of their special favors they had a special responsibility. R2356:1

Because of their covenant--therefore we should not suppose that every famine, pestilence or war in the world's history has been similarly of special divine imposition in chastisement. R3400:1

I will punish you -- Chastise you for disloyalty. R1979:1

Disciplinary experiences, chastisements. R3223:2, R3400:1, R5768:6

Except they be agreed -- Israel would not walk in harmony with the Lord while their hearts were in harmony with sin. R2356:1

A trumpet -- Of alarm, the message of Amos, announcing the dire catastrophes that shortly would come. R2356:2

Shall there be evil -- "Evil" here means disaster, calamities, affliction, or physical evil, implying no moral quality or responsibility. R4731:1, R849:1, R871:4, R1271:4, R1800:4, R2029:2, R2356:2

In Isa. 45:7, "I make peace and create evil," the same word "evil" is contrasted with "peace," indicating that it means "trouble." If moral badness were meant, the contrasting word would be "righteousness." R1780:2, R1271:5, R1351:2*
The word "evil" in this text has the meaning in the Hebrew language of adversity. Q773:4

Sin is always an evil, but evil is not always a sin. A125; R1226:2

Hebrew "ra." Like the English word "evil" it might be used in referring to anything not good, undesirable. Context must determine whether moral evil (sin) or physical evil (pain, trouble) is meant. R1800:2

Jer 21:10-14; Jer 25:29; Jer 26:2-6; Eze. 14:12-23; Amos 4:4-11; Amos 9:8-10 show that the evil the Lord creates is the calamities and judgments that he visits on ungodly nations in condemnation of their evil of sin, which is an abomination in his sight. R1299:6*

All evil (trouble, calamity) is punitive. Had all things continued perfect and upright there would have been no trouble or any occasion for it. R872:1

Because of Israel's iniquity. (verse 2) R1271:6, R871:5
Calamities sent upon the Jews as chastisements. A125; Q773:4; R1271:5, R1780:2

As covenanted, if they would live in harmony with him and his Law he would bless them in every way; if they did not so live, he would send plagues and disasters upon them.

Instances of calamities as chastisements are the United States' Civil War, freeing millions of slaves and, possibly, the Spanish-American War. R2356:2

A city -- A city of Israel. R1358:5

If the people of any city or tribe got into a state of idolatry or gross sin, God would send a plague or other chastisement for their correction. R1226:2

This does not apply to other nations than Israel. R2024:2, R1887:2

Hath not done it -- Brought it upon them. R1358:5

Two things must be borne in mind: the proper significance of the word "evil" and the special covenant relationship of Israel to God. R1780:1, R1271:4, R2356:4

Have naught to do with it? R1271:4

Their calamities could not come without God's permission or knowledge. R849:1, R871:4, R1271:4,6, R1358:5, R1780:3, R1887:2, R1226:2

Every drouth, famine, pestilence, etc., should not be considered as a judgment from the Almighty. R4731:1, R2356:2

God declared man guilty and pronounced the righteous penalty, death. In carrying it out, various agencies are allowed to operate against man. Thus God is said to "create evil." (Isa. 45:7) R849:1

Divine providence deals differently with spiritual Israel, natural Israel and the world. All Israel's calamities were of providence and for chastisements; the Gentile's calamities are not generally, but only occasionally, so; the Church's experiences are as the world's, but overruled to bring some blessing. R2357:1, R2356:6

Revealeth his secret -- The Israelites were generally forewarned of impending evils and given the alternative of repentance. R1358:5

That his people may profit by the chastisements and experiences of the Lord's hand. R2356:2

Pre-announced, not to bring repentance, but with a view to the proper appreciation of the judgments--that the people might know they were judgments and not accidents. R2356:2
"The Spirit of Truth...will show you things to come." (John 16:13) R3551:4, R437:3*

Those in full harmony with him will not be left in darkness. B22

God's Word explains many mysteries, and his faithful servants who study his Word are not in darkness (1 Thes. 5:4-8) as the worldly are (1 John 2:11). R1063:4

Unto his servants -- Thus Abraham and Lot knew of the destruction of Sodom beforehand; Noah knew of the flood in time to build the ark; at the first advent, Simeon, Anna and the wise men of the East knew to expect Messiah. B21

Jonah

General

Skeptics have long been inclined to treat the story of Jonah's experiences in the belly of the great fish as a seaman's yarn. Many pulpiteers even laugh at the account of Jonah's experiences as suitable only for the credulous and not for wise "Higher Critics." Nevertheless, the Great Teacher refers to Jonah and his experiences in the belly of the great fish, and those who believe the Scriptures will seek no better ground for their faith in the story than this. The exceptional character of Jonah's experience constituted him a type of Jesus, who, in death, was swallowed up of the earth, as was Jonah by the fish; and as our Lord was liberated from his prison house, so was Jonah. R4785:2

Suggestions regarding typical character of Jonah. R3568:1-5*

Jonah -- A type of Jesus. R4785:2

A sharp contrast to the other prophets along several lines: His character, disobedient and ignoble; his mission, to a heathen city; his success, unparalleled; his predictions, failed.

R3568:2*

Perhaps, in his disobedience and fleeing from God, representing Adam, and hence also our Lord Jesus, who took the sinner's place. R3568:2*

Nevertheless a prophet of God, whose predictions at another time came true. (2 Kings 14:25) R3568:2*

He was from Gash-Hepher, in Galilee; a fact contradicted by the Pharisees in John 7:52 when they wished to gain a point of argument. R3568:2*

Jonah 1:2

Nineveh -- A great city outside the pale of Jerusalem and, therefore, at that time outside the lines of divine favor.

And cast him forth -- Representing Christ's crucifixion. R3568:4*

Applicable to some extent to the members of Christ's Body. One government after another, like the Romans, has been compelled by God's nominal people to exterminate them, to cast them overboard. R3568:4*

Had prepared -- Prepared a special fish, either at the moment or long in advance. R4785:2

A great fish -- A special fish, not necessarily a whale. R4785:2

To swallow up Jonah -- A type of Jesus, who was swallowed up of the earth. R4785:2

While the throats of the majority of whales seem too small to admit a man, they are quite elastic. The great sulphur whale, of enormous size, is said to have a throat capable of swallowing a skiff. R4785:2

It has been reported that a sailor, overboard, was swallowed by "a great sulphur whale," but after several hours escaped. Another seaman had a similar experience during a whaling voyage. R4785:2, R3373:4

Three days and three nights -- Typifying our Lord's stay in the tomb and his resurrection on the third day. Also the fifth, sixth and seventh 1000-year days, during parts of which the Church was in the tomb. R3568:5*

Parts of three days. OV362:2

Important because this alone, of all the types, gives the exact length of Jesus' entombment. R4603:5

"He hath torn, and he will heal us; he hath smitten, and he will bind us up. After two days he will revive us: in the third day he will raise us up, and we shall live in his sight." (Hos. 6:1-3) R92:6*

What is true of the glorification of the Church of Christ, as to time, has been shown to be true also of the restoration of Israel. R92:5*

Jonah 2:1

Jonah prayed -- This prayer holds a type of the history of the nation of Israel since Jesus left their house desolate. R92:5*

Jonah 2:2

The belly of hell -- Sheol, oblivion, death--not torment. E374; OV362:2; R4603:2
Grave-belly, sheol-belly. SM520:1; OV362:2
The belly of the fish was, for a time, his tomb. R2599:2,6
Jonah had been in hell and came out. Also true of Christ, whose "soul was not left in hell." (Acts 2:31) HG556:5, HG735:1*

Vomited out Jonah -- The Christ resurrected. R3568:5*

Jonah 3:1

Jonah the second time -- Jonah would then represent the great prophet, and Nineveh, the world. R3568:5*

Forty days -- May indicate the 1000 years of the world's trial time. R3568:5*

Often associated with a time of trial: Israel's 40 years in the wilderness; Christ's temptation of 40 days; the Jewish and Gospel Harvests, 40 years each. R3568:5*
possibly prophetic or symbolic time, a day for a year.

Jonah 3:7

Herd nor flock -- It was commanded that the brute beast should participate in this fast before God. HG508:5

Beast -- Not, as some say, the Negro, but the "herds and flocks" of verse 7. R3044:4; HG508:4

God repented -- God's purposes do not change. He never repents of them, but he does change his conduct. He was pleased to have the Ninevites turn from their sins to hearty repentance. R4785:6

He did it not -- We understand that God, knowing the end from the beginning, knew that the Ninevites would repent and that he would not blot them out in 40 days in accordance with Jonah's preaching. R4785:5

Jonah did not really fail. The old, the wicked Nineveh did perish. In its place came repentant Nineveh. So with the world. The wicked shall be destroyed, but all can have their wickedness cleansed and be spared. R3568:5*

Jonah 4:1

It displeased Jonah -- Jonah was more interested in himself and his own reputation than in the Ninevites and their interest. R4785:6

The Lord's servants must not be so. R4785:6

How much greater is the compassion of the Almighty than that of his human servants. R4785:6

Perhaps, in his murmuring, only a practical lesson; perhaps representing a class that poses as God's mouthpiece, but who do not like the "Millennial nonsense" of having Nineveh spared. R3568:6*

May picture the nominal church in this Harvest time.

Prepared a gourd -- May be a picture of the image of the beast. R3568:5*

Jonah 4:8

And the sun -- May illustrate the Gospel, the truth.
R3568:6*

Pity on the gourd -- The Lord taught Jonah a lesson respecting his sympathy for a gourd, an inanimate thing, and his lack of sympathy for the Ninevites. R4786:1
Similarly, many have sympathy for flowers, birds, animals, etc., but become angry at the suggestion that God will not eternally roast people. R4786:1

Spare Nineveh -- Spare the poor world in the Times of Restitution. R3568:5*

As a logical consequence of the increase of knowledge the civil and ecclesiastical powers of Babylon are now being weighed in the balance of justice in full view of the whole world. D75

Many of the Lord's professed followers regard his present "strange work" (Isa. 28:21,22) as an innovation, rather than a preliminary preparation for the glorious reign of the Prince of Peace. R1487:6

In which the increase of knowledge, of God's appointment, is one of the influences now at work binding Satan by curtailing his influence and circumscribing his power. A265

Inventions of this time have been a great blessing; yet, because of selfishness, they have been injurious to many. SM699:1

Mechanical inventions, which for a time brought prosperity and promised great future blessings, proved to make the best of all slaves, decreasing the need for unskilled labor, even while population rises rapidly. R1691:3

If present inventions are but preparations for the glorious day, what may we not expect of a growingly intelligent race under the supervision of the perfect Ancient Worthies and the great Messiah. OV46:2

God is getting the forces of nature ready for the blessing of all the nations of the earth. CR60:5

The Lord did not favor general education until the Day of His Preparation. SM160:T

When 75 years of this day had developed the proper conditions for the beginning of his great work, the Master stepped upon the scene quietly. The remaining years of this Day will accomplish the setting up or establishment of his Kingdom in power and glory. C130

Referred to by Paul (Acts 13:40, 41) as applicable to the Jewish Harvest, which is typical of the Gospel age Harvest. R1487:3

First, gathering his saints and separating them as wheat from tares; second, the binding of the tares; third, the heavens rolling together as a scroll; fourth, the elements of earth getting ready for the final conflagration. R1488:2

"His work, his strange work." (Isa. 28:21) R1487:3

Fulfill a work. R622:2

In preparation for Christ's glorious reign. R1487:6

Ye will not believe -- Conservative Pharisees of today shake the cautious head, saying that we cannot be on the eve of a new dispensation, for " lo, all things continue as they were from the beginning." (2 Pet. 3:4) R1488:5

Though it be told you -- If you did not see some evidences you would consider the things impossibilities. R622:2

Habakkuk 1:6

The Chaldeans -- Communists, Socialists, Nihilists, etc. R622:2

Babylon was the capital of Chaldea, so symbolic Babylon reigns over the civilized world, and the masses are fitly termed the Chaldeans. R622:2

Nation -- People. R622:2

Habakkuk 1:7

For correction -- Thou hast appointed them to correct nations. This is the confidence of the saints. R622:4

Habakkuk 1:13

Of purer eyes -- Nothing short of perfection can find favor in God's eyes. R1610:2

Than to behold evil -- With approval. R5901:6*, R1351:5*

God detects the smallest deflection in our hearts, and his character is so holy that he cannot but hate it. R5902:1*

We must be purified from all iniquity before we can have the approval of God. R5901:6*

Hence ultimately all who are in any way imperfect will be destroyed. R1610:2

He will not permit evil to all eternity, for this condition would not be pleasing to him. R5211:4

Canst not look on -- Recognize with any degree of allowance; countenance. F120; R870:3, R386:6, R5901:6* Denoting his abhorrence. R1351:5*, R5901:6*

According to the principles of divine government and law, he has no degree of allowance; he cannot condone sin nor admit its necessity in any degree. E418

This does not signify a perfection in the flesh, but a perfection of heart, of intention, of will, of endeavor. R5902:1

In eastern countries long ago, to show the face was a mark of favor; to turn the back, a mark of disfavor. B188

To have pardoned Adam, God would have made himself a liar. The absolute unchangeableness of God is the firm foundation upon which all his loving promises rest. R386:6 Since the ransom has been laid down, Jehovah, in due time, will no more disregard and treat men as sinners, turning his back upon them, but will send refreshment from his face, his favor, through Jesus, his agent in the restitution of all things. (Acts 3:19-21) B188

Will watch -- Studying his Word. R1475:5

Some are called to make the truth plain for the benefit of all the rest. R1475:5

Wait for it -- If, in the Lord's providence, the time should come 25 years later, then that would be our will. R5374:3

The year 1915 is now more than half gone, and I think it is very doubtful whether we shall see all we had expected in this year. It looks as though we were trying to hasten the fulfilment of the vision. Q730:1

In their haste, some supposed that all things concerning the Day of the Lord were to transpire immediately, but instead the trouble comes like spasms. R621:2

Let none of the consecrated be in haste to rush into print with crude, undefined ideas, and thus become stumbling blocks in the way of many others. R1475:6

It will not tarry -- It does not really tarry. It is a matter of God's time and our understanding of it. R5731:6; Q730:2
Its seeming tarrying was not so, but a partial mistake on the part of William Miller, foreknown and permitted by the Lord for the testing of his "holy people." C89

Showing that great enlightening and educational influences will be set to work. R1248:2

Breaking the shackles of ignorance and superstition.

OV384:1

As with the Gospel Church, a gradual matter--line upon line, precept upon precept. F709

Haggai

General

Haggai's prophecy dates from a period fifteen years after the return of Israel from Babylonian captivity. The date of Haggai's prophecy is given as the second year of the reign of Darius, but this Darius was not the one who succeeded Belshazzar, but Hystaspes, who succeeded Cambyses. R2520:1-3 Haggai's prophecies were delivered to Israel about the time of their return from the captivity, and therefore at the time of the founding of the Temple. R3650:3

A message of reproof from the Lord to them, chiding them for neglecting the important work of rebuilding the Temple and giving themselves up to their own pursuits. When the Lord thus stirred them up to a sense of duty and privilege in the matter, the people and their leaders obeyed his voice and again began to build. In all this what a vivid type we have of the great reformation work which began in the sixteenth century with the preaching of Luther and his contemporaries. We call to mind that the one great work accomplished at that time was the laying again of the foundation doctrine of "justification by faith" in the one "continual" sacrifice of Christ. Thus again Christ Jesus became the recognized foundation of his Temple, which is the Church. R1484:3

Haggai 1:1

Darius -- This Darius was not the one who succeeded Belshazzar, but Hystaspes, who succeed Cambyses. R2520:3

Haggai 1:2

The time is not come -- Having been hindered by opposition, Israel became indifferent and indisposed to encounter the difficulties necessary to its further prosecution, and thus became more and more engrossed in their own affairs, leaving the Lord's house in ruins. R1484:2

Should be built -- Only the foundations were laid on the return from Babylon. Building operations were not properly begun until the second year of the reign of Darius Hystaspes, king of Persia, and it was finished in the sixth year of his reign. (Ezra 4:24; Ezra 6:15,) R3577:4*

This house -- Its foundation, laid again in the Reformation, was the foundation doctrine of "justification by faith" in the one "continual" sacrifice O Christ. R1484:3

Lie waste -- Protestantism ceased to be a protest against the iniquitous system that gave it birth, and for a time made no further progress. R1484:3

Haggai 1:5

Consider your ways -- The law of God is a detector of false ways; therefore, we should test all our ways by it. R705:6*

Apparently, a considerable portion of the difficulty lay in a lukewarmness toward religion. R2520:1

Many people justify an improper word or action by saying, "It is my way." The Lord says, "Amend your ways." (Jer. 7:3) R705:3*

Experience would lead us to question whether or not prosperous ones were living as near to God as when they were less prosperous. R2520:2

Haggai 1:6

Bring in little -- Because they had neglected to honor the Lord with their substance. R2520:1

Haggai 1:9

Mine house -- The people had provided themselves with comfortable houses, gardens, etc., while the Temple lay desolate. R2520:1

Haggai 1:11

I called for a drought -- This was the Lords covenant with Israel--temporal prosperities for faithfulness, temporal adversities as punishment for religious neglect. (Deut. 28:1-42) R2520:2
With Christians, the reverse is frequently true--experience leads us to question if the prosperous are living as near to God as when they were less prosperous. R2520:2

Haggai 1:12

The people, obeyed -- Realizing that, in neglecting the Lord's cause and merely caring for their own temporalities, they had not only dishonored God but had also justly hindered their own temporal prosperity. R2520:2

Haggai 1:13

I am with you -- Haggai came, not only a reprovener of the people's neglect, but also as an encourager to a reformation in this matter. R2520:1

The LORD stirred up A vivid type of the great Reformation of the 16th century with the preaching of Luther and his contemporaries. R1484:3

Did work -- Clearing away the rubbish of false doctrines and establishing the faith of the Church in the truth. Since the re-awakening, this work has been going forward. R1484:5

Haggai 1:15

The sixth month -- September, 521 B.C., 1845 years (the length of the Jewish double) prior to 1324 A.D., the time of the publication of Marsiglio's Defensor Pacis, the morning star of the Reformation. R3577:4,5*

Prior to 536 BC and 1309 AD, fleshly and spiritual Israel were completely in the power of Babylon; but these years marked the turning point, and then, step by step, the great reform went on. R3579:1*

Both Haggai and Ezra would reckon by the ecclesiastical year, beginning in the spring. R3577:5*

Haggai 2:1

Seventh month -- Haggai's prophecy dates from a period of 15 years after the return of Israel from Babylonian captivity. R2520:1

Haggai 2:2

Residue of the people -- Fifteen years earlier this expression referred to foreigners residing in Palestine, but now to returned exiles the people of the land--God's people in the land of Promise. R2520:3

Haggai 2:4

Be strong -- When the Lord's people are weak in confidence in themselves is the most hopeful time to cultivate in themselves a spirit of reliance upon the Lord. R2520:4

And work -- To those who have no interest in the work, the message respecting the Lord's presence will be undesirable. R2520:4

Especially applicable to those who, having returned from mystic Babylon, are seeking to build again the spiritual Temple, the Church. R2520:4

For I am with you -- God's people do not always need a berating. They need the wine and oil of consolation and encouragement. R2520:4

The basis for Haggai's encouragement and exhortation to be strong in the Lord and in the power of hi might. R2520:4

Haggai 2:5

According to the word -- Assuring them that his spirit, promised in the covenant given coming out of Egypt, was still in their midst to guide, overrule and bless. R2520:5

Fear ye not -- If God so loved us while we were yet sinners, much more now that we are special objects of divine care and grace. R2520:5

Haggai 2:6

Yet once -- Yet once more--presupposing a former shaking, that typified in the giving of the Law at Sinai, including subsequent shakings and siftings through captivities and otherwise, that only the loyal and true might remain. R3052:6,3

Signifying a finality--that there will never more be requirement for shaking, for revolution, because with this shaking will be ushered in the Kingdom of God. R2521:1

Shake the heavens -- Powers of spiritual control. A318; R1484:6, R3052:6, R5516:6

Christians of all denominations will be shaken in faith and shaken from their self-conceit, superstitions and bigotries. R5516:6

And the dry land -- Aristocracy of wealth and social independence. R3052:6, R1484:6

And I will shake -- In the time of trouble. D528, CR114:1; SM505:1

Transferring authority from Satan's kingdom to the Kingdom of God. R34:1*

While Socialism has been shaking the political earth for the past 30 years, other forces have been shaking, with great severity, the ecclesiastical heavens. R5516:6

The present war (1914) will drain the world so that the nations, sick, weak and faint, will fall a prey to Socialism which will become anarchy. R5526:4

This war (1914) and the anarchy of Armageddon, which will follow it, will prove conclusively the great need of divine interposition in human affairs. SM409:T

As in the days of Eli's sons (1 Sam. 4:1-18), men couple the cause of God with their national projects. The two are entirely separate. God's cause will prosper best by a great defeat to all the systems of men. R5626:4

Zechariah

General

Zechariah the prophet was a priest as well, and was a young man at the time of his return under the governor, Zerubbabel, from the Babylonian captivity. As a prophet he was the successor of Haggai, who was now old, and his career as such began in the second year of Darius Hystaspes, and continued about two years. It was part of his mission to encourage Zerubbabel and all who labored in the construction of the Temple, and who were beset by innumerable oppositions, difficulties, etc. It is not until we realize that the prophecies, although having some force and application to the times in which they were written, have a special force and application to us, as the antitypical Israel, and to the building of the antitypical Temple, that we get the true force, value and beauty of these prophecies--a force and meaning that is entirely lost to those who take the Higher Criticism view. R2521:2,3

Zechariah prophesied during the period of the rebuilding of the Temple. The joy and zeal associated with the founding of the Temple was followed by a period of slackness, the result of the opposition of the Samaritan neighbors, who employed their every art to discourage the builders and to cause an interruption of the work. As a result several years elapsed before the structure was finally completed. Zechariah, a younger prophet (than Haggai) was raised up by the Lord at this time, and other messages were sent to the discouraged Israelites to show them that they must not expect great national prosperity at the time, but that nevertheless the Lord was with them, and that going on faithfully in an apparently small, insignificant matter, they would be accomplishing his purposes. This corresponds to some degree with the messages which have come to the Lord's people since the time of Wycliffe, and which have led to the Reformation movement in its various aspects, and incidentally to the development and preparation of the various living stones of the glorious Temple. Verses 20 to 23, together with Ezek. 37, help to prove that the New covenant is with fleshly Israel only.

Thus, from Israel, under the New covenant, through Israel's Mediator, a way of approach to God will be opened up for all the Gentiles. OV96:3; R1341:2

Zechariah 9

Zechariah 9:9

Rejoice greatly -- Verses 9:9 to 10:4 were fulfilled at our Lord's first advent. R2124:5

Great is the joy now among saints as they recognize the King. R1795:5

Shout -- "If these should hold their peace, the stones would immediately cry out." (Luke 19:40) B225;

R2746:1, R3538:4, R5090:6, R5362:4; PD65/77

"Hosanna!" (Matt. 21:9)--Salvation, Blessing. Praise!

R2746:1, R5090:3, R3538:5, R3850:6, R5495:1; B225

The word Hosanna is an acclaim of praise, confidence and expectancy, closely resembling the thought of the word, Hallelujah. R3538:2

Nationally, they did not receive him with shouts of rejoicing. R599:4

After the shout of the multitude ceased, it was apparently taken up by the children in the Temple without any particular meaning. R3852:4, R3538:5

The people, recognizing the wonderful miracle wrought upon Lazarus, congregated and hailed him as Messiah.

R2447:6

Their unstable and fickle minds, swayed by false teachers and unwilling to act on their convictions in the face of opposition, would, only a few days later, cry, Crucify him! Crucify him! R1795:2, R1696:4

The saints' proclamation of Christ's presence and Kingdom is the shout--heard, if not believed. R1795:5

Daughter of Jerusalem -- The Lord did not consider the multitudes with him as, in any sense of the word, representing the city and the nation. R2746:2, R599:4

Thy King cometh -- The day when Israel's double, or Mishneh, turned. OV77.5, OV95:4; B226; R2296:6

At his baptism John introduced him as the Bridegroom; during his ministry he superintended a reaping work; at the end of his visible ministry he rides in as a King.

R114:6*

Being rejected, as foretold, he consequently did not then set up the Kingdom. R113:2

It was a grand or ludicrous triumphal entry into the city of the great King--according to the standpoint from which it was viewed. R2745:3

Unto thee -- Not to Herod's palace, to demand possession of it; not to Pilate's palace, to demand recognition of him; but to his Father's house or palace--to the Temple. R2746:3

Lowly -- He was to be a King (Isa. 32:1), yet he would be born in a manger (Luke 2:12) and come as one of the humblest of earth. R1063:2*

Riding upon an ass -- This was fulfilled just five days before his crucifixion. R4122:3, R3850:6

The Jews were familiar with this prophecy, and had long been awaiting for Messiah to fulfill it. R3850:6

An ass was used rather than a horse. Tradition tells us that so all the kings of Israel were accustomed to ride to their coronation. R2745:3

The only occasion we have any knowledge of Jesus riding--not for weariness, but after the manner of kings, to ride in triumph on white asses. R3850:2; PD65/77

It was necessary that the Lord do literally what the prophets foretold, that Israel be without excuse in their rejection of him. R3850:6

Of an ass -- Of a she-ass. OV77:6

Zechariah 9:10

I will cut off -- Verse 10 notes the evil consequences to follow their rejection of their King. B225

It was that very day he wept over the city, left their house desolate, and the second half, which makes the double, began. HG53:5

The standpoint of the future is taken, and the things spoken of as accomplished facts. R1754:6

Render double -- Mishneh, a second portion, a repetition; implying a casting off from all favor for as long a period as they had enjoyed favor, namely 1845 years, from AD 33 to 1878, when the Berlin Congress of Nations was held, which greatly ameliorated the condition of the Jews. B218

Twofold. OV78:T

Malachi

General

Malachi's prophecy concludes the Old Testament canon. It contains not only a divine rebuke for sin, but also a divine promise of rescue. It fits well to the time generally assigned to it--Nehemiah's period. R4930:3

Malachi the prophet spoke for and represented Jehovah to the Israelites. His prophecy is supposed to have been written during the time of the absence of Nehemiah, the governor, at the court of the king of Persia. The interim of his absence is thought to have been one of religious declension, as the record shows a considerable stirring up and setting in order again after his return. Malachi's prophecy, therefore, may have served a double purpose--first to reprove and stimulate the people of that time, and secondly, and much more important, to give a general lesson applicable all the way down through the more than twenty centuries since. His prophecy is the last one of the canon of the Old Testament Scriptures, and closes with exhortations and promises respecting the coming of Messiah, for whom the Jewish people had at that time waited for more than fifteen centuries. R3683:1,2 Malachi uttered his prophecy during the period of Nehemiah's absence from Jerusalem at the court of Persia, and the return of Nehemiah may at the time have seemed like a fulfillment of Malachi's prophecy--"The Lord whom ye seek shall suddenly come to his temple," etc. No doubt the testimony of the Lord given through Malachi prepared the people for their quick response to Nehemiah's energetic appeals and commands. R2540:2

This prophecy is addressed to Israel. It is a reproof for their wayward and evil course and a warning of the just retribution that must surely follow, if they did not repent and turn to God. Malachi was the last of the Hebrew prophets; his name signifies, "The Messenger of Jehovah." He was the last messenger to Israel previous to John the Baptist, the immediate forerunner of Christ, the great messenger of Jehovah's covenant; and well would it have been for Israel had they heeded the warning and prepared their hearts to receive the Lord's Anointed. While it is clear that the prophecy thus addressed to Israel applied to them primarily, it is also manifest, as shown by the Lord and the apostles, that it had a much wider application; and that in a yet fuller sense it was addressed to spiritual Israel, and that it applies to the second advent of the great "Messenger of the Covenant," whose work will fully accomplish all of these predictions. In the largest and fullest sense, therefore, we recognize this prophecy by Malachi as addressed to "both the houses of Israel"--to all Israel after the flesh, toward the close of the Jewish dispensation, and subsequently to all of nominal spiritual Israel, toward the close of the Gospel dispensation. R1537:3,6; R1538:1

Malachi 1:1

The burden -- Containing not only a divine rebuke for sin, but also a divine promise for rescue. R4930:3
Serving a double purpose--to reprove and stimulate the people of that time and, more importantly, to give a general lesson applicable ever since. R3683:2

While more or less applicable at the time and to the people addressed, it was evidently intended specially for the Gospel Church. R2542.3

Word of the LORD -- The last message sent by Jehovah to Israel. B249

By Malachi -- "Messenger of Jehovah." R3683:2, R1537:3

The last of the Hebrew prophets. R1537:3

Malachi, the prophet, spoke for and represented Jehovah to the Israelites. R3683:1

Malachi uttered the words of his prophecy during the period of Nehemiah's absence from Jerusalem at the court of Persia. R3683:1, R2540:2, R2534:1, R4930:3

Yet ye say -- The needed reformation fits equally well to our day. R4930:3

Malachi 1:4

Whereas Edom -- Christendom. D15

Malachi 1:6

Son honoureth his father -- Such love and reverence should be the greater toward God in proportion as God is great above all others. R2540:3

If they claimed God as their Father, they should render to him the love of children. R2540:3

Disrespect and disobedience to parents fosters proportionate disrespect to God and irreverence in holy things. R2540:6

Because of superior educational opportunities, children today are inclined toward self-confidence and self-satisfaction, and feelings of disrespect toward their parents. R2540:6

A servant his master -- If they claimed to be God's servants, they should render to him servant's reverence. R2540:3

Ye say, Wherein -- Presupposing that the majority does not realize how completely the spirit of selfishness dominates their hearts. R2540:6

Ye offer -- You Jews, in the days of Nehemiah's absence. R2534:1

Contemptible -- Common--they had become careless respecting the things offered unto the Lord. R2541:1

Ye offer the blind -- And not the unblemished fatling. R2534:2

The spiritual Israelite offers the fruit of his lips in prayer and praise; but if in a perfunctory manner as a duty and not from his heart, they are blind, sick and lame offerings, which the Lord despises. R2541:1

So with some in spiritual Israel; they have consecrated but they have lost the spirit of devotion. R2541:1

Ye offer the lame -- As Christendom, with an outward show of reverence, observes Lenten seasons as duty, not prompted by the spirit of love. R2542:6

Unto thy governor -- Using, for illustration, the custom of that time of entreating an earthly governor for a favor by bringing a gift. R2541:1

Malachi 1:9

Hath been by your means -- Consider what kind of present you have brought to him. R2541:2

Malachi 1:10

Who is there -- "O, that there were someone." (Leeser, R.V.) R2541:2

Shut the doors -- Lock up the doors of the sanctuary. (Leeser, R.V.) R2541:2

For nought -- Omit these words. R2541:2

Neither do ye -- "That ye might not." (Leeser, R.V.) R2541:2

Altar for nought -- From the Lord's standpoint, merely formalistic religion may just as well be abandoned entirely. R2541:2

Malachi 1:11

Shall be -- The Common Version, "shall be," in the future tense, is correct; and not "is," in the present tense, as the Revised Version. R3874:2

"Is," in Revised Version, meaning God's name was great at the time of the writing of the prophecy. We have evidence that other nations, even those in idolatry, had a reverence for Jehovah--the Philistines (1 Sam. 4:7,8; 6); Nebuchadnezzar (Dan. 4:37); Darius (Dan. 6:26, 27); Cyrus (Ezra 1:2) and Balaam (Num. 24). R2541:3

Of life -- It is not heaven or hell, or any other place or condition, that was held out through the Law; but life itself, that renders any condition possible. R822:3*

Malachi 2:11

Hath married -- Judah is represented as being the unfaithful husband. R1389:1

Malachi 2:15

A godly seed -- Or, margin, "a seed of God." In other words, a second Adam and his wife; "for the children of the promise (the Gospel Church) are counted for the seed." (Rom. 9:8) HG100:3

Malachi 3:1

Behold -- Malachi's prophecy contains not only a divine rebuke for sin, but also a divine promise of rescue. Not the Messiah, but the forerunner of the Messiah. R1736:3

Showing that Messiah would not be Jehovah, but Jehovah's representative. R2781:5

The angel, or messenger, who comes down from heaven at his second advent and binds Satan. R1233:2

R4496:4

Christ and the Church now minister: (1) in gathering the members of the Mediator; (2) in learning and teaching the lessons necessary to qualify for the position; and (3) in preparing the blood with which it is to be sealed. R4496:4

All of those who profess to be his people are now under rigid inspection. R1440:6

When he appeareth -- Inspects. R3865:2

He has been appearing, in the sense of making himself known to those in the right condition of heart. R4708:3

Referring to the entire appearance of Messiah, beginning at Jordan. His appearance will culminate in his glorious revelation at his second advent. R4708:6

A refiner's fire -- Now doing its work, and thousands and tens of thousands are falling. R5916:5, R4208:6

The Refiner is seeing to it that the members of his Body should pass through fiery trials to test them. R4646:5; SM213:2

Giving close inspection, that the heat be neither too great nor too little, the time neither too long nor too short. R4931:4

The Lord will require such purity, such holiness, that few will come up to his requirements. R4931:4

He will purge all imperfections from those to be associated with him. R4595:5

R1944:5, R1538:2

Separating with unerring precision the pure gold of actual loyalty to God from the dross of mere profession and outward forms of godliness. R1440:6

SM213:2

Referring to the antitypical priesthood--both the Royal Priests and the Great Company. R5119:5, R4708:6

Not literal, but antitypical--the Church constitutes the Levitical system, spiritual Levites. R4877:5

The Church are members of the great Refiner and, at the same time, of the Levite company being refined. R4709:4

The earlier part of the judgment upon Christendom will be especially upon the antitypical sons of Levi, the silver class.

The silver class--the Great Company, who come up out of great tribulation. R5442:4, R4079:4*

Applies also to fleshly Israel, who are to be purged and prepared for the great Messiah. R5442:5, R4940:4

Purge them -- Of everything in the nature of dross--self-will, personal ambition, pride. R3865:2

This purging does not come all at once, but in our daily experiences. R4709:4

Strange as it may appear, yet in accord with the records of the past, the fiery trial seems to find the most dross amongst the leaders of the flock. R3865:4

The Great Company will be dealt with, not with a view to their destruction or injury, but with a view to the destruction of their flesh which they have failed to sacrifice--"that the spirit may be saved." (1 Cor. 5:5) R5442:5

This purgatory will begin in the close or "Harvest" of the Gospel age--the Millennial or purgatorial age lapping over upon it. R1470:1

As gold and silver -- Priest and Levites, the Little Flock and the Great Company. R4709:2, R3684:5, R3865:1, R4708:6, R5119:5

The trouble which will purge the Great Company of the nominal church, who are unworthy of a place in the real Church, is a part of that which is coming upon the world in general. R1470:2

That they may offer -- Themselves. R1470:1

The Great Advocate imputes his merit to each who offers himself in sacrifice. R5119:5, R4632:4

In righteousness -- A right offering; also an offering which will effect righteousness through the cancellation of sin. R3867:4, R4493:4

As Israel's sin offerings were to effect righteousness. R3867:4

Making good, in the Father's sight, for all their blemishes of the flesh, enabling them to offer a righteous sacrifice which God could accept. R4632:4, R4493:4

Then -- After "Jacob's trouble." R5442:6

Of Judah -- All antitypical Israelites--all those who are truly the Lord's people in the Millennial age. R3684:6

Pleasant -- Accepted. SM213:3

Fleshly Israel will be received back to favor under the New Law Covenant, and be used as a channel of blessing to all the world. R5442:6

Having learned distinctly, and in a practical form, what is pleasing and what is displeasing to the Lord. R3684:6

Hitherto Zionism has been a political movement in the interest of Jewish nationalization; but the time has come for a real movement for those who have faith to draw near to God. SM213:3

Malachi 3:5

Near to you -- To the great systems which compose nominal spiritual Israel--Christendom, so-called. R1538:2

To judgment -- Messiah's Kingdom means requirements of faithfulness to the principles of the truth. SM215:3

Who cannot see, in the severe criticisms leveled at Churchianity in these days, that the judgment has begun? R1538:4

And I will -- In the time of trouble, and afterwards. R3684:6, R1653:6

Be a swift witness -- His reign will be a terror to evildoers. Its first work will be the smiting of the earth with the rod of his mouth and the slaying of the wicked with the breath of his lips. (Isa. 11:4) R1352:2

Against the sorcerers -- Following in the wake of the disregard of divine Law that led to the neglect of tithes and the offering of the poor, lame and blind. R2534:1
Those who teach doctrine of devils in the name of Christianity. R1538:2

The adulterers -- Those claiming to be the virgin Church of Christ, and yet living in unholy alliance with the world. R1538:4

False swearers -- Those who have made a covenant of entire consecration to the Lord and have been unfaithful to it. R1538:4

Those that oppress -- Great corporations, trusts and monopolies on the one hand, and unions and labor federations on the other. R1518:5

I change not -- Because perfect in justice, love, wisdom and power. E34; R586:5, R5857:1

Because he is so wise that he knows the future as well as the past. CR425:2; R904:2, R1267:5, R1560:1, R2026:6
He cannot reverse his decree. R1030:4, R1005:6; E34
God has a definitely fixed purpose, and all his purposes shall be accomplished. A65

All the changes of God's course or conduct are working out the accomplishment of his original purpose which contemplated these very changes. R2026:6

Therefore God's original purpose has not been changed by reason of Adam's failure. R1267:5

The gifts and callings of God are things he will not repent of. (Rom. 11:29) R3685:1

And will never clear the guilty. R586:5

If God were an unjust God we could never depend on him. He might make some term or condition today and then alter it tomorrow. But he is absolutely just. R5857:1

"From everlasting to everlasting, thou art God." (Psa. 90:2)
HG731:4

The basis for all our hopes lies in the unchangeable character of our God. R3684:6, R1030:4

Are not consumed -- Were it not for the enduring mercy of the Lord, the workers of iniquity would surely be consumed. R1538:4

Days of your fathers -- At the covenant at Sinai. R3685:2

Ye are gone away -- They had been unfaithful to their part of the covenant. R5442:5

Return unto me -- Unto proper accord with the Lord.

R3685:2

The Lord is very gracious to those who return from the ways of sin, patient with those who lack the spirit of love and forgiveness, entreating them to join in his gracious plans and arrangements. R3836:4

The parable of the prodigal son illustrates this promise.

R3835:2

Return unto you -- Prompt repentance, even at this critical juncture, would save "Christendom" from the great impending scourge. R1538:5

He would be as prompt and faithful in giving them blessings as he was prompt and faithful in giving them chastisements for their unfaithfulness. R3685.5

But ye said, Wherein -- This is the attitude of nominal spiritual Israel in our day. "Thou sayest I am rich and increased with goods and have need of nothing." (Rev. 3:17)

R1440:6

Their hearts had become so selfish, so stunted along spiritual lines, they did not realize they were merely praying to the Lord with their lips and their hearts were far from him.

R3685:5

God -- A mighty, powerful, adorable one--to the enlightened mind of the Christian; additionally, the gracious, benevolent one. R2541:4

Have robbed me -- Of the loyalty and devotion of heart promised. R1441:1

Of his honor, by affirming the doctrine of eternal torment, ascribing to God a character blacker than Satan's. R1538:5

Instead of offering the Lord the very best, they proffered him the weak, lame and poor, keeping the better for their own use.

Wherein have we -- The natural Israelite is represented as doubting the matter. R2541:4

The spiritually starving find that either they have been worshipping in a wrong direction or, worshipping in the right direction, they have failed to present unto the Lord their very best. R2541:4

In tithes -- One of the tithe-chambers of the Temple was desecrated by fitting it up as a dwelling place for Tobiah, the Ammonite, who, by marriage, became related to the High Priest. R2534:1

Cursed with a curse -- Pass through the great tribulation and be brought through severe tests by trials and disciplines. R2541:6

The coming of caterpillars, army worms, palmer worms, locusts and grasshoppers upon Israel meant special chastisements from the Lord. Similar things upon the world of mankind meant no such thing. R2485:5

Have robbed me -- Many spiritual Israelites who have made covenants with the Lord keep the very best of everything for their own use, leaving for the Lord only the remnants, the fag-ends of time, influence, reputation and money. R3685:3, R2541:5

Sacrificing to human institutions and not to God. R2541:4

This whole nation -- God did not exact from other nations a tithe, but neither did he promise other nations his special care, bounty and blessing. R2485:5

Being one people, many of their interests were common; likewise with the Lord's spiritual people before the Harvest. R2541:5

Bring ye -- Not because he is needy, but because he seeks evidence of our sincerity and faithfulness in respect to our covenant engagement when we pledged all that we possessed. R3685:4

While opposed to "dunning" in religious circles, we fully realize that the grace of giving is indissolubly attached to all the other graces of God's spirit. R2540:3

If the heart of the giver is touched with a desire to offer something in loving appreciation and worship to his Creator, the effect will surely be a blessing to the giver--the sacrificer. R2540:3

All the tithes -- The Jews had two obligatory tithes or tenths--one tax for the support of the government and the other for religious purposes. R2542:1

To be used for the maintenance of the priestly tribe, the Levites, and for the relief of widows, orphans and other unfortunates. R2485:1

To teach the people of Israel generosity and to inculcate in them a realization of their obligations to God, and that all that they enjoyed were his bestowments. R2485:2

Your will in all things. R2486:5

A tenth. He makes no positive requirements for spiritual Israelites, leaving it to us--that by the degree of our sacrifices we may demonstrate the measure of our love. R3686:6

Spiritual obligations, represented by the holy tithe, are now left to the option of the spiritual Israelite, with no command or stipulation as to the amount. R2542:1

We find no authority for the tithing system now, although we believe that systematic giving is a helpful discipline, increasing one's interest in the cause to which he gives.

R2486:2

Partakers of the spirit of the Lord have a mind, not merely to give a tenth of all possessions and income to the Lord, but to consecrate it all. R2542:2, R2486:4

Not an abandonment of houses, lands, families, etc. R2542:4

And prove me -- By fulfilling the terms of your covenant.

R3685:5

Spiritual Israelites--awaken to a fresh realization of his goodness and bounty, and of your own obligation to spend and be spent in his service. R2541:6

Pour you out a blessing -- A revival of spiritual health, energy, vigor, joy. R2541:6

"There is that scattereth, and yet increaseth; and there is that withholdeth more than is meet, but it tendeth to poverty."

(Prov. 11:24) R2485:6

Not be room enough -- An overflow blessing. R2541:6

The devourer -- The pests which injured the crops of natural Israel. R2485:6

He shall not destroy -- The Lord reproves, not to discourage, but for reformation. He chides, not to dishearten, but to stimulate and revive. R2541:6

Your -- Nominal Christendom. R2542:6

Words -- Attitude and sentiments. R2542:3

Your teachings. R1441:1

Stout against me -- In direct opposition to my Word.

R1441:1

Because the truth would expose their errors and sins and destroy their friendly relationship with the world. R1441:2

Malachi 3:14

What profit is it -- Showing the restiveness of nominal Christendom. What advantage will we have? A selfish standpoint--viewing divine requirements as penal servitude.

R2542:6

"I see so many all around who do not serve the Lord, yet they are not thus burdened and their lives hold rich reward."

We might just as well have a good time. R2542:6

Walked mournfully -- Contritely. R1441:1

With an outward show of reverence, observance of Lenten seasons, etc. R2542:6

Malachi 3:15

The proud happy -- The present is called "the present evil world," (Gal. 1:4) not because there is nothing good in it, but because evil is permitted to predominate. A67; HG538:2

This causes perplexity until the reason is seen. R376:6

"Though their eyes stand out with fatness and they have more than heart could wish." (Psa. 73:7) R2025:5

But in the new Kingdom every one that exalteth himself shall be abased, and the humble shall be exalted. (Luke 14:11)

Are set up -- In power. A257

It is those who selfishly seek their own present aggrandizement, regardless of the interests of others, that are most prosperous now and occupy the chief positions of control. R1562:4

This is the age of the triumph of evil and the persecution of righteousness. R1773:3

"Lord, how long shall the wicked triumph, and all the workers of iniquity boast themselves?" (Psa. 94:3,4) R1653:3

Then -- In the Harvest of the Gospel age. D600, D601; T86

They that feared -- Perfect love casts out slavish, but not reverential, fear. R2289:5

Reverenced. OV423:1; R1441:4, R2289:6

Those who study their character. OV423:1

"The secret of the Lord is with them that fear him." (Psa. 25:14) R2208:3

This verse shows the attitude of the true saints in contrast with that of nominal Christendom, shown in verses 13 to 15. R2542:3

Encouraging and building one another up, telling of the Lord's goodness and truth wherever they can find a listening ear.

The topic of their converse is the inspired Word of God. R2406:3

At annual and one-day conventions. R3121:5

Those who have, but fail to use, opportunities for meeting and speaking together manifest a lack of interest in our great salvation. R2802:1

One to another -- Specially anxious for fellowship with those who have similar characters, similar faith in the precious blood, similar consecration, and who are similarly passing through the hands of the great Polisher. R2406:3; OV423:2

Being drawn nearer to each other as they realize that, after all, the number of the faithful is extremely small. R2543:2

"He that loveth him that begat, loveth also him that is begotten of God." (1 John 5:1) R2406:2

"Forsake not the assembling of yourselves together." (Heb. 10:25) R4078:1, R2466:2

"Where two or three are gathered together in my name, there am I in the midst of them." (Matt. 18:20) R2406:3, R2543:3

We are like coals of fire, which, if separated, will cool; but, if brought together, will increase the fervency of the entire mass. R4077:1

Personally or through the printed page. Many isolated ones meet through the Truth publications. R2543:2, R2406:2, R2802:2

The LORD hearkened -- Noting those who spoke for those things which are loving, gentle, pure, good, true, modest, humble. R2407:1

Those who realize the Lord's presence with them when they meet will be very careful of their words. R2543:3, R2407:1
Hears, notes and prospers our blessing of one another. R4090:5

Reading the loyalty of our hearts with reference to his glorious plan and our declaration of it to others. R1441:5

"Where two or three are met in my name, there am I in the midst of them." (Matt. 18:19, 20) R2543:3

Thus representing his interest in our efforts to understand his plan. R2543:2

Book of remembrance -- Signifying friendship, love and blessing. God keeps a permanent record of his friends, but no record of his enemies. NS69:1

Showing that the Lord takes full knowledge of his true people. R2543:3

Indicating that he does not forget, and that he loves this class, his true Church. OV423:3

The prompt and ready use of even the smallest talent is carefully noted by our loving Lord. R1441:6

Not recording the imperfect rendering of service, but the perfect intention with which it is rendered. R1441:6

If our names be not blotted out of this book through unfaithfulness, we shall surely be gathered among the jewels. R1441:5

Before him -- Before Jehovah. F666

That feared the LORD -- Reverenced the Lord. OV423:1; R1441:4, R2289:4, R2543:3

Thought upon his name -- Not the names of Wesley, Calvin, Knox or Luther. R1441:4; SM127:1

In olden times the name stood for the character--God's name stands for his character, glorious in righteousness. OV423:4

His character, his goodness, his infinity, his plan, his love. R2543:3

As they daily think upon the character of God they are gradually changed into his character-likeness--"from glory to glory." (2 Cor. 3:18) OV424:5; R2543:3

Wishing to have all the helps the Lord is providing in these last days; desiring to know all the various parts of God's plan. OV423:1

Those ready to sacrifice every earthly hope, aim and object.

R5426:2, R4873:2, R3871:4, R3849:5, R795:5, R176:2

A class that is faithful, loyal, zealous for God and his truth.

R5145:1; OV424:7

These gems must be all found by God; he has appointed our Lord to be the Master Workman in their preparation.

R5119:1

The faithful class, now gathered out of nominal spiritual

Israel, as well as a similar class gathered out of nominal

fleshly Israel in the Harvest of the Jewish age. R1538:5

Their character is fixed, their love for righteousness is permanent and thoroughly developed, their spirit of love is indelibly marked. R2689:5

Made manifest by the love of the truth. God sends strong delusions to those who receive it from any other motive, or for any other reason. R5800:4

The name of the bridegroom is given to his bride. R3970:5

"The Lord knoweth them that are his." (2 Tim. 2:19) F76;

Lesson of a future reward. R4930:6

In that day -- In one sense, the Jewish Harvest, beginning AD 29; but its completeness is shown in connection with the Gospel Harvest. R2543:5

A harvest rather than a sowing time, a gathering rather than a planting time--a time for the perfecting of those who have consecrated all to the Lord. R442:2

The time of the Lord's second presence. B164; F274; T86; OV425:2

The Lord's house is built up during the downfall of the nations. R82:5*

Contradicting the thought that the Lord has been gathering his jewels all along for the past 6000 years. R2404:2

The day that brings the glorification to the faithful "jewels" or "wheat" class brings a different experience to the "tare" class. R2543:6

When I make up -- Come to make up. SM246:T;

Preparing them. R5119:2

Searching for and gathering them. B164

Having been found by God, they are placed in the hands of the great Lapidarist, Jesus, for cutting, polishing and fitting.

Suggesting a gradual and not an instantaneous work. R58:2*

The magnet of truth is gathering out the jewels, and the reproaches of the world and the nominal church are refining and fitting them for the Master's use. R472:6

The man who handles jewels sees to it first that they are properly cut and polished; and afterwards he mounts them--the mounting has much to do with the beauty of the jewels.

OV424:2

The jewels will not be made up, glorified, until the full number of the elect has been found, polished and prepared.

SM246:T

Of his jewels God will make a beautiful diadem, set in the gold of the divine nature, not to wear, but to exhibit to angels and men. OV424:4

"Gather my saints together unto me." (Psa. 50:5)

"Gather the wheat into my barn." (Matt. 13:30)

B164; C139; D600; OV107:T; R4244:4*

My jewels -- The first of these jewels was our Lord Jesus.

The other jewels will be cut and polished after the similitude of God's Son. R5119:1

The greatest of these was our Lord Jesus. The twelve apostles were twelve large stones. Throughout the Gospel age, jewels of different sizes have been found and cut. God will mount them all in the first resurrection. OV424:3; R4931:1,

R5119:1, R5470:4, R5758:1

The Church class. R4646:2

CR56:3

These must be completed and glorified before the Ancient Worthies can receive their blessing. OV119:2; R4931:1

Under the Headship of Jesus, they will constitute the Messianic Kingdom. SM130:2

As diamonds are hard, firmness, endurance and patience is required of the Lord's jewels. R5651:2

All know the necessity for cutting and polishing jewels so that their real qualities may be developed; so the necessity for our trials, perplexities and persecutions. OV425:1

Jewels are scarce, require to be searched for and washed from the mire before being prepared to refract the light. Diamonds are hard, representing character; crystallized, representing willingness towards righteousness; worthless unless cut; cannot cut, shape or polish themselves; sometimes require to be more than half cut away before they are suitable; and are embedded in cement while being polished. R2404:3, R2405:3

The Christians are to be God's jewels on the spirit plane, as the faithful Jews of the past are to be jewels on the earthly plane. R4931:1

As jewels are scarce, so the "Lord's jewels" are described to be only a Little Flock. (Luke 12:32) HG752:1

Be not discouraged if ye find but few jewels. R1348:6

Jewels have a value of their own, an intrinsic quality that would be appreciated even if plentiful, but is all the more marked because of their comparative scarcity. R2404:2

It is the spirit of the Law, the front part of Aaron's breastplate, which bears the jewels, set in gold, representing the true Israel, the Lord's "Little Flock." T36

Contrasted with the "proud" of verse 15; these are they "that feared Jehovah and thought upon his name." (verse 16)

I will spare them -- Not in the sense of relieving them from all suffering. R5119:2

Delivering them from those things which would prove too weighty for them. R5119:2

But not from the polishing processes necessary to make them acceptable as sons. R2405:4

As one who cares for precious jewels, so God cares for his saints. OV424:2

They will be spared from passing through the culmination of the great time of trouble. OV425:2; C146; R2543:5, R1538:5, R1441:4

From both the great time of tribulation and the 1000 years of judgment or trial which begins in the "time of trouble."

Turn about, see things from the divine standpoint. R3209:1, R492:5, R2406:1

There will be a grand reversal of the present order of things. R1441:4, R2406:1, R376:6

A re-turn of the rule of righteousness. R2543:5

Discern between -- A work of division and separation, in God's due time. R1270:6, R1779:3

Ignorance and superstition will be things of the past, and righteousness will receive its due reward, while to evil will be meted out its just deserts. A217

For in that day the distinction will be manifested. T87

Righteous and the wicked -- "In his day the righteous shall flourish" and the "evildoer shall be cut off." (Psa. 72:7; Psa 37:9) R2406:2

Malachi 4:1

Happy those who will surrender their pride and evil to be destroyed that they themselves be not destroyed also in the Second Death, as some resisters evidently will be during the Millennial age. B151

Shall be stubble -- Under the feet of the righteous. R2025:5

Shall burn them up -- All evil systems, errors and wilful sinners. B151; R5317:2

Burn up evil throughout the entire Millennial age. R2544:1, R5317:3, R5567:6

At the end of the Millennium there will be no proud people on the earth. A319; R5704:5, R2544:1

Not consuming the individuals. They will cease to be "tares," but not cease to be human beings. R2543:6

Root nor branch -- For further development. D552

Completely consuming their hypocrisies and pretended devotions to the Lord. R2543:6

Until every root and branch of sin is thoroughly consumed. Q719:3; R4628:4, R5567:6, R5704:5

Those refusing to come into harmony with righteousness will be destroyed in the Second Death. Q719:3; R5567:6

Blessing and healing the sick and dying, but redeemed, world.

Illuminating the whole earth with the knowledge of the glory of the Father, which will result in the healing and blessing of all the families of the earth. Q822:1

Completely scattering darkness, superstition and error.

Its beams of grace and truth. OV205:4

"All that are in their graves shall hear the voice of the Son of God and come forth." (John 5:25) A210

And grow up -- Grow spiritually fat. R2544:1

Of the stall -- During the wintertime of the reign of sin.

Tread down -- As ashes. R2544:1

Indicating the completeness of the victory of righteousness over sin. R2544:1

The wicked -- Sin and the workers of iniquity--a strong figure of sin's complete defeat. R2544:1

Remember ye -- Whoever has ears to hear. R2542:3

The law of Moses -- Typifying the law of love. R2544:1

The man Christ Jesus, by full obedience to the Law covenant, superseded Moses as the Lawgiver, of whom Moses said: "A prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you like unto me. Him shall ye hear in all things." (Acts 3:22) R1725:4, R5046:6 "The Law was given by Moses, but grace and truth came by Jesus Christ." (John 1:17) R1725:4, R5046:5

Send you Elijah -- The Christ in the flesh, Head and Body. B254; OV323:2; R557:1, R968:5, R5741:3

The name signifying "God (mighty one) of Jehovah" or "My God is Jehovah," a fit name for the Lord's Anointed, whose work will be to restore all things. B265

John the Baptist fulfilled this prediction so far as fleshly Israel was concerned. R2544:4, R556:6; OV323:1; B251, B253

John the Baptist stood for a multitudinous Elijah as Jesus stood for a multitudinous Christ. R557:1

Though John came in the spirit and power of Elias (Luke 1:17) and would have fully answered as his antitype if he had been received, yet he was not the Elias, the Great Prophet, referred to by Malachi. R1687:6; Q772:4; OV322:3; B253

There is some measure of likeness between John and the true antitypical Elijah: both fail to establish unity and harmony between man and God, and both fail to do a mediatorial work except for a few; the masses are not prepared by their message and, as a consequence, there is a time of trouble such as they had never previously had. OV323:1; B250, B256

It was not prophesied that Elijah would have success. OV323:3,1

Indirectly, Elijah is shown in the New Testament to have been a type of the Gospel Church--his experiences typifying our experiences. OV326:1

The antitypical Elijah, beginning with Jesus in the flesh, has been coming and giving his message to the world for more than eighteen centuries. R5771:3

As Melchizedek represented the Church in glory, so Elijah represented the Church in the flesh. R4757:2

Before the coming -- The coming of Elijah must precede the Day of the Lord; but his work belongs to that day.

HG68:3

It is important to show that Elijah has come before the return of the Lord. B250

The work in which the Church is now engaged is preliminary to its future work, so far as the reforming of the world is concerned. B252

Day of the LORD -- Which began in 1874 AD, and will end with the complete overthrow of worldly and Satanic dominion in the earth and the full investiture of Christ Jesus and his saints with power and dominion. B250

Malachi 4:6

He shall turn -- Endeavor to bring about harmony, reconciliation and fellowship between God and his people.

OV323:2

Exhorting and seeking to bring the nominal system into harmony with God. R2544:5

Though foretelling failure, knowing that the effort would react favorably upon ourselves, his commission to us is to try to convert the world. B252

In its kingly office, the Church shall effect for the world what it fails to do as the Elijah teacher. B252

The heart -- Sentiment. R2760:5

To the children -- To childlikeness. B249

And the heart -- Would seem to mean the establishment in the earth of a spirit of reciprocal love. R2544:4

Of the children -- Of those who have been converted to a child-like attitude. B249

To their fathers -- To harmony with the faithful patriarchs and prophets. B249; R557:4

The world, whom Israel typified, coming into harmony with God. R557:4

Lest -- Testing the people, whether they will receive the King in peace and joy. R2839:1

A conditional statement--if he succeeds, the earth will not be smitten; but if he succeeds not, the curse will come. R557:4

It was not prophesied that Elijah would have success.

OV323:3

Other scriptures clearly indicate that no such reform will occur, and that the "curse" or trouble will surely come.

R2760:5; OV323:3

The antitypical Elijah, the Church in the flesh, will fail to establish righteousness and love on the earth, fail to bring about reconciliation. OV324:2; C129

If the world had heeded, the Kingdom of Messiah on the spirit plane would have been eventually ushered in without any great time of trouble. R5741:5, R2544:4

Smite the earth -- The world has not heeded, hence the smiting of the earth with a curse is the only way by which Messiah's Kingdom can be ushered in. R5741:5, R2839:4

With a curse -- The great time of trouble. B250;

OV323:3; R4757:3, R5741:5, R2839:4

When John the Baptist failed to turn Israel to repentance and they crucified the Lord. Hence the curse, or time of trouble, came upon that nation, destroying it in AD 69-70, R2544:4, R1537:6

But it shall not be utterly cursed and forever destroyed because the exalted Elijah--Christ shall put down all opposition and then restore and bless. R557:5

That the curse, the trouble, will be effective and yield blessed results is distinctly shown in Zeph. 3:8, 9. OV323:4

The scourging, the curse, will accomplish for mankind in short time what the message of Elijah failed to accomplish.

OV324:T

THE FOUR GOSPELS--GENERAL

In each of the four Gospels we have a historic account of the Lord's earthly life and work, and in each the individuality of the writer appears. Each, in his own manner and style, records those items which seem to him most important; and, under the Lord's supervision, all together furnish as complete an account as is necessary to establish the faith of the Church (a) in the identity of Jesus of Nazareth with the Messiah of the prophets; (b) in the fulfillment of the prophecies concerning him; and (c) in the facts of his life, and the divine inspiration of all his teachings. If the inspiration had been verbal (i.e., by word-for-word dictation), it would not have been necessary for four men to rephrase the same events. But it is noteworthy that while each exercised his own individual freedom of expression, the Lord so supervised the matter that among them nothing of importance was omitted, and that all that is needed is faithfully recorded and is thoroughly trustworthy, as evidenced both by the personal integrity of the writers, and also by the promise of the influence of the holy Spirit to refresh their memories. R1525:4,5; F218

They are simply told. Unfavorable truths are not ignored. It is freely conceded that Jesus died between two thieves; that he was betrayed by one of his own disciples; that all forsook him and fled; that one of them even denied him with cursing. The humble origin of the disciples is stated, yet without parade, and in narrative form it is innocently declared that when the Apostles Peter and John preached under the power of the holy Spirit their learned hearers could "perceive that they were ignorant and unlearned men." What biographies or other writings of today display as much candor as we thus see at a glance as we open the Bible? OM11:6; SM169:4

The world was then for a time at peace and quiet, the Roman dominion having brought all the world under its powerful control; and as all men were in expectation of Messiah's advent according to the Jewish prophets, whose fame had gone out into the world, the sudden announcement of his birth attracted wide attention, as it would not have done in less peaceful times. The Greek language, noted by all scholars as the most nearly perfect, exact and precise medium for human speech, had at that time been fully developed and widely disseminated. Thus was prepared in due time the very best medium for the communication of the Gospel. The Old Testament had been translated into the Greek language three centuries before Christ; and Jews had been dispersed among all peoples, carrying the Old Testament with them and bearing witness to its prophecies of a coming Messiah. It was a time, too, of increased intellectual activity, which was ready to operate on this and every other question of public interest. Thus the circumstances of the time were peculiarly adapted to the announcement of this wonderful event--the advent of the world's Redeemer. The fullness of time had come, and under the overruling providence of God, the conditions were ripe. R1673, 1674

In the last analysis we must admit that the great influence which has moulded the civilization of our day has come to us from the words and example of "the man Christ Jesus." The great truths which he uttered have come echoing down the centuries, speaking righteousness, peace and love, even for our enemies. Everywhere his wonderful words of life have made an impression, and here and there have affected the transformation of character. R4866:5

Many and varied are the precious lessons taught by the Master during his earthly ministry, and they never grow old. To the true disciple of Christ they are ever new, ever fresh. Whether he taught by the seaside or on the mountains or by the wayside, as he walked and talked with his chosen twelve, his words of wisdom and grace come to us vibrant with meaning, pulsating with life, full of strength and power, cheering, encouraging and blessing our hearts. R5990:2

Regarding Higher Criticism of the gospel writers and canon of the four books--R2816

The evangelists differ, but do not disagree. Matthew is the Jewish Gospel, connecting the Old Testament with the New Testament, and is written to prove the Messiahship of Christ. Mark is written to the Gentiles, and its theme is Christ's ministry, his works. Luke applies universally to both Jew and Gentile, and brings out Christ's humanity; while John is an essentially spiritual Gospel, dealing wholly with the divinity of our Lord. R1046:3*

Matthew

General

Matthew, elsewhere styled Levi, was a publican--that is to say, a collector of taxes for the Roman government. Publicans were despised for two reasons: (1) It was considered very disreputable to assist a foreign government to collect taxes from one's friends--kin. (2) Many of these publicans were rascally and took advantage of their position to make themselves wealthy through bribes, over-collections, etc. We may be sure that Matthew--Levi was not of the dishonest type, else he never would have been called to association with Messiah as one of his apostles and prospective joint-heirs with him in his kingdom. For such position the highest degree of honesty is requisite. And if Jesus would never call a dishonest man, neither would a dishonest man have accepted his call, because there was nothing to be gained--neither reputation, wages nor fraud. R4587:4

It is worthy of note that Matthew tells us of himself that he was a publican, while none of the other evangelists make this comment, doubtless because the occupation of a publican was considered a very dishonorable one. Hence, for Matthew to tell us of his previous occupation may be esteemed an evidence of his humility, and his desire not to represent himself more honorably than was truthful. Matthew was known by the name of Levi while he was a publican, but his name was changed when he changed his occupation and became a member of the Lord's company. His new name, Matthew, signifies "the gift of God." How great a change the Gospel of the kingdom produced upon Matthew, to lead him to forsake all--the profitable income of his occupation, leaving it to others--and to become a follower of the despised Nazarene! The influence of the fact that our Lord would accept a publican to be his disciple was far-reaching, and no doubt inspired an interest in our Lord amongst the degraded and outcast classes. We are not surprised, therefore, when we are told that many publicans and sinners resorted to our Lord, and gave ear to his teachings. Nor did he treat them after the manner of the scribes and Pharisees, but on the contrary received them as the children of Abraham--as some of the lost sheep of the house of Israel. R2260:1,2

Matthew 1

Matthew 1:1

The book -- Matthew is the Jewish Gospel, connecting the Old Testament with the New, and is written to prove the Messiahship of Christ. R1046:3*

The son of David -- Matthew speaks of Christ as the Son of David; hence his genealogy is complete. R1046:6*

The necessity of thoroughly establishing the pedigree was important since of this tribe (Gen. 49:10) was to come the ruling king of Israel as well as the promised Messiah. A42; HG532:4

But it was not necessary that he should have a human father of the Davidic line. R453:1

Matthew 1:6

David the king -- Matthew presents Jesus as king of the Jews, Luke presents him as a worker, and the other two gospels as a philanthropist and as the manifestation of God. R1046:6*

Begat Solomon -- But Solomon's line was not the Messianic line. E129 Only the legal heirship came through Solomon, through his descendant Joseph, the legal father of Jesus. R2060:4

Jechonias begat -- That this line of genealogy is not that of Mary, our Lord's mother according to the flesh, is conclusively shown by a comparison of this verse with Jer. 22:30. R2060:4

And Jacob -- The real father of Joseph, in contrast with Heli, his father-in-law. (Luke 3:23) E129; Q791:2

Begat Joseph -- Christ's legal father; but it is not necessary for Christ to use Joseph's genealogy. E130; Q791:2

If Jesus was a son of Joseph and Mary, he was just as much a son of Adam as you and I; and just as much an inheritor of Adam's sin, under the death sentence, and therefore not able to redeem himself, let alone the world.

Q363:1

Matthew traces Joseph's genealogy; for, though Jesus was not the son of Joseph, nevertheless, being adopted by him as his son, he might, without impropriety, inherit through him. R2555:3,6; Q791:2

Mary, of whom was born -- The principle of inherited royalty through a mother is illustrated by the heir apparent to the throne of England-- the Prince of Wales, an heir, not of his father, but of his mother, the present queen. R453:1

Fourteen generations -- Greek, genea, as in "This generation shall not pass." (Matt. 24:34) D603

The difference in the number of generations from David to Christ--27 in Matthew, 42 in Luke--need not be considered as remarkable. It would be remarkable had they been the same. Q791:2,1

Before they came together -- Mary was a sharer with Joseph when Jesus was born, though not when he was conceived; hence the genealogy of Joseph, the son of Solomon the son of David. R453:2

The knowledge of these circumstances was the evident cause of his kinsfolk's sneer at him, "We be not born of fornication." (John 8:41) R2425:1

With child -- If we can have a perfect life germ, we can have a perfect child from an imperfect mother. R4964:1

Matthew 1:20

Of the Holy Ghost -- Holy Spirit. His life came not from an earthly father, but from his heavenly Father. R4964:2

Not the seed of man, hence his very nature was perfect, holy, unlike our nature. R84:3*

Matthew 1:21

His name JESUS -- Meaning "Savior" or "Jehovah's salvation."

R3687:6, 5335:3

In olden times, the name stood for the character. OV423:4

The Greek form for Joshua, signifying Savior. In the Syriac, Savior signifies life-giver. He has not yet become the life-giver or king. R4534:6

Signifying Savior or Liberator. Hence, only those who receive him as such are given liberty to become sons of God--none else. R1006:1

The entire work of our Lord Jesus is summed up in the meaning of the name, Jesus. R3687:6

Our Lord was publicly recognized as Savior as a babe; but it was only when he had fully completed that sacrifice at Calvary that he had the full right, and became owner, or Lord. R745:1,4

Only at the conclusion of the Millennial age will the full meaning of Savior be appreciated by the world. R4535:4

For he shall save -- The name of Jesus is nothing, except as it means a Savior from sin and its penalty. R687:6

The Church's salvation begins now in the sense of reformation and rest in the Lord's promises; but they are not saved actually, but "saved by hope." (Rom. 8:24) R4535:1

His people -- The good tidings of a Savior shall be to all people (Luke 2:10,11), but the special salvation from sin and death will come only to his people, those who believe into him. A107

All who ultimately become his people, no others. R4534:4, 3687:6, 1604:4; SM502:2

Let us make sure that we have accepted him and are "his people." R1604:4
Such noble shining heathen lights as Aristotle, Plato, Confucius and others are the Lord's "sheep" and "friends"--"his people" whom he came to save from their sins. (John 10:16; 15:13,14) R1180:3, 1178:3

From their sins -- From all the mental, moral and physical degradation which came through father Adam's disobedience. R4702:4; A107

And from the penalty of their sins, death--which includes degradation, mental, moral and physical. R1604:4

Matthew 1:22

That it might be fulfilled -- Matthew's characteristic introduction to a quotation. Mark uses "as it is written." John has "as said Esaias," and Luke seldom makes any introductory references. R1047:1*

Quoting Isa. 7:14 and partially fulfilled at that time, as a type, with the prophet representing Jehovah, the prophetess representing the virgin Mary, and their child representing Jesus. R436:2,4

Virgin shall be with child -- Showing that it was not the child of Joseph, but specially begotten by divine power. R4964:1

The narrative of Jesus' miraculous conception has the best and oldest Greek manuscripts to support it--the Sinaitic and the Vatican; the Alexandrian contains it in Luke, though in Matthew it is missing--not omitted. R434:4

Zoroaster taught that in the latter days a pure virgin should conceive and, at his birth, a star would appear with undiminished luster, even at midday. R4098:4*, 1674:6

Call his name Emmanuel -- Must we set aside this prophecy because the child was called Jesus? Many names and many offices are his. His name has been called Immanuel (God with us). The church in general has recognized him by that name for 1800 years. R436:4

God with us -- "God was manifest in the flesh." (1 Tim. 3:16) R27:2*

Matthew 1:25

Her firstborn son -- The birth of Jesus was a gift of love divine.

R5135:2

Implying that she brought forth other sons--his brothers and sisters (Mark 6:3)--afterward; a contradiction of the Catholic doctrine that Mary is "ever a virgin." R560:2*

Matthew 2

Matthew 2:1

When Jesus was born -- For the suffering of death; the first step in the divine plan for our salvation. R1603:6

About October 1, BC 2; 33-1/2 years prior to his death in April AD 33. B60

Herod -- Of the house of Esau, an Edomite. R4956:2

There came wise men -- Magi, sages, philosophers. R1674:3

According to tradition, three in number. R3702:3, 4098:4

When we remember that Daniel was at one time a prince in Persia, it is easy to see how Daniel's prophecy respecting Messiah's birth would be handed down, and well known to the disciples of Zoroaster. R3702:3 The Nestorians say that Zoroaster was a pupil of Jeremiah. R3703:3

We are not informed whether or not these were Hebrews; but we consider it probable that they were part of the twelve tribes scattered abroad

"waiting for the consolation of Israel." (Acts 26:7; Luke 2:25) R4098:3

Not only wise men, but reverential men, full of faith. R3703:3

Although heathen, not of Israel, they were good men. R3703:3

Thirty years before our Lord was anointed as the Messiah. B247

Even the Gentile world was in expectation of the coming Messiah. (Luke 3:15) R1674:3; B21; C85

Typifying the Millerite movement in 1844 AD. B247, 241; C85

Those in full harmony with God were not left in ignorance of so important an event. B21

Astrologers, rather than astronomers, affecting to read in the stars the history of nations and individuals. R3703:1

The term originally belonged to a class of priests among the Medes and Persians who constituted the king's privy council and who cultivated astrology, medicine, occult and natural science. R1674:3

From the east -- Supposedly Persia. R4534:3, 3702:2, 1674:3

In the Far East, the Chinese and Japanese and other nations have cherished a very ancient tradition that God would descend to the earth in visible form to enlighten men and to redeem them from their sins. R1674:3

Today even the Mohammedans and the Brahmins of the East are waiting for Messiah and the Golden Age, seeking evidences. Contrast this with the unbelief of the prominent ministers of "Christendom." R4956:5

To Jerusalem -- Apparently the star's leading discontinued when they reached Judea. R4534:3, 4098:6

The Lord may have given them additional explanation of the matter, even as he subsequently warned them in a dream. R3703:1

Matthew 2:2

King of the Jews -- Tacitus, Suetonius, Josephus, Virgil, Confucius and Zoroaster all bear testimony that there prevailed throughout the entire East at this time an intense conviction, derived from the prophecies, that about this time a child from heaven would be born in Judea, gain dominion over the whole world, establish the Golden Age and take away sin. R4098:4, 3703:2

He was born King of the Jews, but that work was still future--at his second coming when he appears in glory and becomes King of Israel--on the spirit plane. R4534:6, 4956:5, 1675:1

Have seen his star -- God made some astrological sign which the wise men understood and reverently followed. R4534:4

Because they had no special revelation from God, the nobler minds among the other nations gave special study to the starry heavens along the lines of astronomy or astrology. R4534:2

Thus, kindly, God condescends to human ignorance and weakness. R1675:1

It is not a rare occasion for stars to suddenly blaze up, and then suddenly fade in a year or two. Such a star was observed in 1901. We think this was different, however. R3703:2

We have the assurance that there was a truth connected with the manifestation of a special peculiar star, but we have "the more sure word of prophecy." (2 Pet. 1:9) R3703:1

Come to worship him -- Showing their reverence to the mighty God of Israel, their faith in the divinely inspired prophecies, and their zeal as truth-seekers and their humility to inquire of the God of another nation. R1675:1

Herod the king -- Although called King of the Jews, Herod was the representative of their conquerors, the Romans. R4098:5

An Edomite, who had built a temple grander than Solomon's. R4956:2

He was troubled -- By the suggestion that his dynasty might be overthrown. R4956:2, 4098:5

With jealousy on his own behalf, and on behalf of the Roman Empire. R3702:6
Similarly, those who are now in influence and power are troubled at the prospect of a change in government which their own wise men announce as imminent. R4966:2, 4534:3, 4099:1

Any announcement today that Messiah's Kingdom is nigh meets with resentment. R4534:3, 4956:2

And all Jerusalem -- All under Herod's political influence. R4098:5

Evidently they were in a very self-satisfied condition, experiencing great prosperity, and had ceased to specially long and pray for Messiah. R4956:2

When he had gathered -- Evidently, knowing of the Jewish tradition respecting Messiah, he sent for those who were learned in the Scriptures. R4098:5

Priests and scribes -- Although they answered correctly, they showed no enthusiasm in quoting the prophecies of Messiah's birth. R4956:3

They said unto him -- Showing their faith, even though it was an irreverent and selfishly jealous faith; indirect evidence of the esteem which the Hebrew Scriptures commanded. R1675:2

In Bethlehem -- Only six miles distant. R3703:2

For thus it is written -- Though the scribes and chief priests understood his birthplace from Micah 5:2, they could not see that, as the Judge of Israel, he would be smitten with "a rod upon the cheek." (Mic. 5:1) R436:1

Matthew 2:8

Bring me word again -- Let the civil government, if it chooses, fight down everything associated with the new dispensation; the religious elements remain quite indifferent. R4956:5

That I may come -- Herod's selfish faith was in strong contrast with the reverent and devotional faith of the wise men. R1675:4

Worship him also -- The crafty Herod feigned reverence, but only that he might destroy the child. R4534:3,5

They departed -- None of the priests and teachers of the day followed them to Bethlehem to find the newborn king of the Jews. They had become Higher Critics and no longer believed the prophets. They had less faith in them than had Herod. R4956:3

And, lo, the star -- Probably a bright, electrical, luminous spot travelling near the earth. R3703:2

Thus, even in his infancy, this light that was to lighten the Gentiles began to shine into some waiting and devout Gentile hearts. R1675:5

Near Rachel's tomb, by Bethlehem, is a cistern where tradition says the star appeared to the wise men the second time to guide them to Bethlehem and the manger. R1401:2 Till it came -- Greek, elthon, it ceased to go.

Its arrival was accomplished; it stood. R149:5*

Stood over -- Apparently indicating the very house in which they found the newborn king. R4098:6

And fell down -- Prostrated themselves, physically expressing their reverence. R3703:4

And worshipped him -- By prostrating themselves; in their hearts and with their tongues, by giving expression to their rejoicing; and by opening their treasure boxes to him. R3703:4

The humble surroundings did not alter the reverent condition of their hearts. R4534:5, 3703:4

Unto him gifts -- Let us be true wise men and present to him our treasures--all that we have and are--our hearts. R4534:6, 1604:4

Gold -- Representing obedience and consecration. R4534:5, 3703:4,5
Our earthly substance. R3703:5

And frankincense -- Representing praise, devotion, heart adoration, appreciation, gratitude. R4534:6, 3703:4,5

And myrrh -- Representing submission, a willingness for service, to the extent of bitterness and suffering. R4534:6, 3703:4,5

Have we shown a joy to honor the King even to the extent of suffering with him? R3703:5

Matthew 2:13

Angel of the Lord -- "Are they not all ministering spirits, sent forth to minister for them who shall be heirs of salvation." (Heb. 1:14) R1681:3

Flee into Egypt -- We should be on the lookout for divine deliverance and the opening of a way of escape from things too difficult for us to endure. F508

God did not miraculously interfere with Herod's plans. The lease of power granted to the kingdoms of this world has not yet expired. R1681:6

When he arose -- The faith and prompt obedience of Joseph and Mary to the warning and counsel of the angel of the Lord is notable. They did not hesitate or question, but immediately acted. R1681:3

Matthew 2:15

Death of Herod -- Unreliably and variously dated by scholars as 4 BC, 2 AD, 7 AD; therefore not reliable evidence in establishing the date of Jesus' birth. B56, 57

By the prophet -- This prophecy has three fulfillments: the deliverance of Israel in the days of Pharaoh; the return of the infant Jesus to the land of his birth; and The Christ being called out of the world (Egypt). R1681:6, 436:1; C316

Out of Egypt -- Type of the world. C316

I called my Son -- To the higher, divine nature. C316

Likewise his joint-heirs are called out of Egypt. "They are not of this world even as I am not of this world." (John 17:16) C316

Matthew 2:16

Slew all the children -- Seeking to destroy Christ that thus the kingdom of Israel might be preserved to his own family--as it was through his six successors. R4534:3

Matthew 2:18

Lamentation and weeping -- But another note of the long wail of distress of the groaning creation which will be permitted for wise and benevolent ends until the "times of restitution." R1682:4

Rachel -- Rachel was the mother of two of the tribes, Joseph and Benjamin, which tribes occupied Palestine at the time of the first advent. R436:1

They are not -- Not in hell or purgatory; they have ceased to exist. CR430:2; R822:5

Young child's life -- Greek, psuche, soul, being. E335

Matthew 2:22

Archelaus -- Herod's son and successor, who even surpassed his father in oppression, cruelty, egotism and sensuality. R1681:3

He turned aside -- Not disregarding the Lord's directions, which were to go into the land of Israel--in any part of which they might settle. R1681:6

Called Nazareth -- A despised place, the object doubtless being to bring the truth into disrepute; as Second Adventism has brought the time features into disrepute. B29

Called a Nazarene -- Although born in Bethlehem, he was reared in Nazareth, "that he might be called a Nazarene"--that he might not have the honor of the "City of David," but the odium of "a mean city." R4556:3

Matthew 3

Matthew 3:1

In those days -- It was the time of the greatest missionary effort that had ever been made by the Jews. As Jesus said, "Ye compass sea and land to make one proselyte." (Matt. 23:15) R2236:3

John the Baptist -- Six months older than our Lord, he began his ministry that much sooner. R3292:2

The last of the prophets, and none of them was his superior. "There hath not arisen a greater prophet than John the Baptist." (Matt. 11:11)

R4958:2, 4543:1

John was the first one to use baptism. R5964:4

Type of the Church, especially in the harvest. R4958:5; B253

We are to be copies of God's dear Son, our Lord, and not to be copies of John the Baptist--not to stir up strife by trying to mind other people's business. R4978:5

Of Judea -- At the time, Judaism was in a more flourishing condition than ever before. Idolatry in its cruder forms was unknown, and Pharisaism was the controlling influence. R2236:3, 358:3*

Repent ye -- Reform (Diaglott). R358:4*

"Change your minds"--(See Young's Concordance). R357:3*, 358:4*, 191:6*

This act of repentance brought them back under the blessings and favor of their Law Covenant. R5963:4

The only ones who can claim to belong to Abraham's spiritual seed are such as show repentance from sin, and make a full consecration to oppose sin.

R4958:6, 2245:6

Saying, in substance, Examine your life. If you are living according to a lower standard than the best of which you are capable, you are guilty.

R5962:2

John had given them more definite instruction, and with increase of knowledge there should be a corresponding change of mind. R358:4*

And not that they should believe on God, for he was addressing only the believing, covenanted people, Israel. R2417:2

It was because they were not in the right condition of heart that they were not fit to have the Kingdom which, therefore, was taken from them and given to a new nation, a peculiar people, a royal priesthood. R2417:2

Change of mind is a necessary operation with all finite creatures, so far as we know, because their knowledge is imperfect. R358:1*

Some had nothing to repent of and nothing to wash away by baptism. R5963:3

The words of this verse have been the message of the Christ in the flesh down through the centuries. R4958:5, 2245:6

Kingdom of heaven -- The royal majesty of the heavens. R358:4,6*

In its embryotic state. B14

John's mission was to announce that Kingdom, but it was not his privilege to become a member of it. R3292:1

The Lord commenced his ministry with the same announcement exactly (Matt. 4:17); and the apostles were sent forth to preach the same message. (Matt. 10:7; Luke 9:2) A273

This Kingdom was the hope of every Israelite. A273

The Jews had been waiting for that Kingdom for centuries, and John's mission was the announcement that the fulfillment of the divine promise was at hand. R2417:2

This message was expected to arouse all the "Israelites indeed" and point them to Jesus the King. R4593:2, 4543:2

As the Jews were all baptized into Moses, so when Jesus took the place of Moses, the baptism into Moses was counted as baptism into Christ for all who accepted Jesus as the Messiah. R5963:5

Is at hand -- Has approached. R358:4,6*

The royal heir was then present, though unknown. R191:6*

In the sense that Jesus was present to make a formal tender of the Kingdom to Abraham's natural seed. R4958:5, 4557:2

Announcing to the Jewish nation, in the beginning of the Gospel age, the great feast of Jesus' parable in Luke 14:15-24. R1957:3

The great feast of fat things for Israel, which God has so long promised, is ready. R2701:4

Now true in the sense in which he declared it was yet to come at that time (John 18:36,37)--"in power and great glory." B14

The voice of one -- Not "the Word." R2409:2

John the Baptist was an antitype of Elijah. R3292:6

Directly announcing the Savior. R4543:1

God chose a strong, rugged character to bear his message. R4543:3

In the wilderness -- John's peculiar raiment and food enabled him to be free of sectarian bondage, and gave him freedom of utterance. R4543:3

His wilderness experiences specially qualified him. R4543:3

The Church has cried "in the wilderness" in the sense that she has been alienated and separated from the world. R4958:6

Prepare ye -- John's work and baptism were merely preparatory. R4543:4

The way of the Lord -- To arouse the people of Israel to the fact that Messiah had come. R4543:2

Make his paths straight -- As a forerunner was sent to fleshly Israel to prepare them for the first advent, so a greater forerunner would precede the second advent. R2563:4

This greater Elijah will be equally unsuccessful with that of the lesser antitype of Elijah, John the Baptist. The Church in the flesh has not succeeded in making straight the paths of the Lord for a triumphal entry to his Kingdom on earth. R2563:5

Messiah's Kingdom will straighten every crooked path, level up the path of righteousness, and make of it "a highway." (Isa. 35:8) R2563:5

By the end of the Millennial age this great messenger will have prepared all the arrangements, all the affairs, for the establishment of the everlasting reign of the Kingdom. R3683:4

Raiment of camel's hair -- His peculiar raiment and food enabled him to be independent of all religious sects and parties, gave him a freedom of utterance and made his message more striking to the minds of the people. R4543:3

We do not advocate the example of John in respect to food and raiment, but we believe a good lesson may be drawn from his course--a simplicity of diet and wardrobe. R3292:2

And wild honey -- John's course indicated that his entire life was devoted to the special service of the Lord; that he had nothing, wanted nothing and needed nothing. R3712:3, 3292:2

Jerusalem, and all Judea -- The baptism of John was not appropriate to any but Jews. Gentiles could not repent or come back into harmony with Moses' Law because Gentiles were never under the Law of Moses. HG254:5; PD56/69; NS48:4, 49:6

He did not go to sinners in the ordinary sense of that term, those living outside the pale of divine influence; but he went to the sinner class, the renegade class, of the Jews, "publicans and sinners." HG254:3

Baptized -- The Jews did not practice baptism. The whole nation was recognized as baptized into Moses in the sea and in the cloud. (1 Cor. 10:1,2) HG254:3

Symbol of washing, cleansing, or reformation from sin. SM643:3

John's was a special baptism for a special purpose, and not a matter of getting outsiders in, for he did not assume to get anyone in. Q32:3

Not into Christ. They were already baptized into Moses. But, Repent, be baptized, and wash away your sins. Q33:5

Not the "Israelites indeed," but those who conceded that they had been living in open sin. HG254:5

John's baptism was not Christian baptism, though it would amount to Christian baptism for the Jews who observed it; they would thus be transferred into Christ after Pentecost. R5964:6

"The baptism of John" was to the Jews only and was wholly different from the baptism appointed for those called from amongst the Gentiles. R2417:3

An acknowledgment that you repent of sins, and you will thus wash away your sins. R5963:1, 4543:2, 3292:3

We have no reason to think that any of the disciples except Paul participated in that baptism, because they were not of the class that were called sinners at that time. Q34:T

Water baptism could not remit sin, but it restored the sinner to full harmony with God's arrangement for Israel. R5963:4

Baptism for the remission of sins is no longer effective for the Jews because their opportunity is closed, the way by which they might have a preference over the Gentiles. R5963:6

Not an actual cleansing from guilt. Only the blood of Jesus could actually take away sin. R5963:1

We don't know if baptism will be practiced in the new dispensation. It may be introduced as a symbol of washing away sin, or as a symbol of consecration. R5964:3

The very word signifies to immerse, as is fully admitted by the best exegetes--Catholic, Protestant, English and German. (Supported with 15 quotes.) NS56:3-6

Of him -- Many of them who received Jesus had previously received John. R3292:4

Confessing their sins -- Thereby coming again into harmony with Moses, type of Christ, into whom they had all once been baptized. F432; R5963:4; Q33:4

Recognized sin. NS49:5

What sins? All things against the Mosaic covenant, against the law covenant, all the outward transgressions they had committed that they could have avoided. Q33:5, 34:2

The people washed away their own sins, typically. John the Baptist did not wash them away. R5963:1

Pharisees -- Today a synonym of hypocrite and impostor; but, at the time, the professedly most pious class in Israel, professing consecration, studying the Law diligently, zealous in prayer and the propagation of the Jewish religion. R2236:3

Sadducees -- Practically unbelievers; of the wealthier, more respectable class. R4986:3

Professed holiness of life, though denying much of the Scripture; practically the "higher critics" in religious matters among the Jews of that city. R2236:3

To his baptism -- John would not baptize these until they showed by outward conduct a change of life, a change of heart, and not merely a changed profession. R3292:5

Generation -- Greek, Gennema, race. D603

Of vipers -- By some prophetic power John was enabled to read their hearts in a manner which would be improper for us to do. R3292:5

Thus implying that their religion was one of outward forms and ceremony merely, and not of the heart; similarly today, many have "a form of godliness" and outward devotion to Sectarianism and its propagation. R2236:3

Their repentance would not be considered genuine without certain proofs. R4543:4, 2236:3

Who hath warned you -- Exercising the same godly boldness as Elijah in denouncing popular and respected sin and sinners. R556:6

Wrath to come -- Not torments after death; but a wrath of God about to come upon that nation because of its hypocritical formalism and failure to live up to the light and privileges it enjoyed. R2236:6

"Wrath to the uttermost" (1 Thess. 2:16) which came upon the Jewish nation in the end of the Jewish age. R3292:5, 2301:3,4

Think not to say -- Although God had elected or chosen them as a people in the past, that was no proof that they would always be the people of his special favor. R1140:3

Within yourselves -- As nominal Christendom says to itself. R2564:3
Arrogant, haughty and self-confident. R4782:1

We have Abraham -- They were his natural children without having his faith. R3292:5, 2236:6

To our father -- We are nominally God's people. R2564:3

Concluding that God must keep his promise to Abraham and that they, being his children, must sooner or later be the Kingdom to bless the world. R4782:1, 2236:6, 1217:4

God is able -- Also, thus able to resurrect, or create again, that which was once destroyed. R1018:1*

Of these stones -- Of some that you consider as far beneath you as the stones under your feet. R2564:3

As a matter of fact, after the wheat had been separated from the chaff of that nation, the Lord sought others from among the Gentiles to complete the elect number of Israelites indeed, the true seed of Abraham. R2245:6, 2236:6, 1795:1

Raise up children -- Neither will God destroy the wills of the unwilling and make them mere machines; rather than have such children, he could and would create men out of stone. R1176:3

And now also -- A type of the end of the Gospel age. R2237:5,6

The axe -- Of divine judgment. R2237:1

The same axe of Gospel requirement, reckoning the intention for the act (see Matt. 5:22-28), still lies at the root of the trees--there must be an utter destruction of the flesh. R518:3*

Is laid to the root -- Pruning would no longer do. R4958:6, 731:4

True again today. It is no longer a question of being a citizen of favored Christendom, nor of being a member of its various sects; but it is an individual test. R2237:5

Every tree -- It would thenceforth be an individual matter and not a national question as to who shall be the children of Abraham in whom would be found the good fruitage of righteousness. R2237:1

Good fruit -- The fruitage of righteousness. R2237:4

Only such as bore good fruit in their characters and lives would any longer be recognized of the Lord as Israelites and identified with the Kingdom. R4543:4

These would be spared of the Lord and transplanted into the more favorable conditions of the Gospel dispensation. R2237:1

Is hewn down -- Nominal fleshly Israel was thus cast off from divine favor. R3292:5

Cast into the fire -- The time of trouble in AD 69-70. R3292:5, 4958:6, 4543:4, 2237:1, 376:3; B233,242

I indeed baptize you -- The three baptisms of this verse (of water, of Spirit and of fire) correspond to the three activities of verse 12: separation of wheat and chaff, gathering of wheat, and burning of chaff. R198:4*

Unto repentance -- See comments on Matt. 3:6.

He that cometh after me -- John recognized that his work was merely a reformatory and preparatory work, and that the one who was to do the testing was mightier than himself--the Messiah. R2237:1
When John had announced Jesus as the Messiah, his work soon began to wane; so the work of the John class closes with the announcement that the Kingdom of Heaven is at hand and the King is present. R968:5
Not worthy to bear -- As his most menial servant. R4543:5
He shall baptize you -- Messiah's baptism was to be of two parts: one upon the faithful and the other upon the unfaithful. R4543:5
With the Holy Ghost -- At Pentecost, upon the Israelites indeed. R5443:2, 4959:4, 2237:2; B233; E290
And with fire -- The fire of God's anger, wrath to the uttermost. F445; NS21:2, 626:4
The fire of trouble upon all others during the 37 years following their rejection of Messiah. B233
Culminating in the destruction of the Jewish polity in the year AD 70. E290; R4959:4, 4543:5, 2237:2
The baptism of fire is not a blessing, nor is it intelligently that Christian people sometimes pray for it. F445
As there was a baptism of fire in the end of the Jewish age upon the chaff of that nation, so there will be, in the end of this age, upon the tare class of Christendom. F445
Not to be confused with the fire-likeness of the tongues on the Day of Pentecost. R2820:4

Matthew 3:12

Whose fan is in his hand -- As a winnower, he separated the wheat of the Jewish people from the chaff. R3292:5, 162:3
Thoroughly -- In order that every grain of wheat might be found and separated from the chaff. R4543:5
Purge his floor -- Cleanse his threshing floor. B260,261; R175:3
The purification of the sons of Levi (Mal. 3:3); the household of faith. R4708:6, 4709:1
Gather his wheat -- The true Israelites indeed. B233; C149; R2237:2
A small proportion of the whole. B205; R4408:3
The harvesting of the Jewish age began with our Lord's first advent and ended forty years later at the destruction of Jerusalem. NS626:3
One of the three great periods of separation revealed in God's Word--chaff from wheat, tares from wheat (Matt. 13:37,43), and sheep from the goats. (Matt. 25:31) R34:2*
Into the garner -- The Christian Church. R5443:2, 4543:5, 3292:5; B233; C149
The Gospel dispensation. R162:3
By begetting them of the holy Spirit at Pentecost and onward. R4959:4

He will -- Not only the work of separation and gathering of the wheat are under the supervision of Christ, but also the burning of the chaff.

Burn up the chaff -- The balance of the nation, the refuse. A229; B233; C149; R2237:2, 1316:6

As the closing of the Jewish age included the burning of the chaff, so the closing of the Gospel age includes the burning of the tares. (Matt. 13:40)

R98:4*

As soon as all of the worthy have been selected out. R3433:6

The Jewish harvest is spoken of as being a separation of wheat from chaff, while the harvest of this age is designated a separation of wheat from

tares. (Matt. 13:30) R2237:6

Indicating the compactness of that people, as contrasted with the wheat and tares, indicating the scattered and confused condition of the present harvest. R1743:3

Unquenchable -- The Jews were powerless to avert the catastrophe. A229; R2237:2

In the sense that it was the divine intention that the nation should be consumed, and it was not in the power of the ablest of the statesmen and rulers to prevent this. R4543:5

"Wrath is come upon this people to the uttermost." (1 Thess. 2:16)

Fire -- Not literal, but symbolic fire. C149; R5363:3

The great fire of religious and political contention which destroyed the Jewish nation. B233; C148; R5443:2, 4543:5, 175:3

Confusion, anarchy and the Roman legions. R3292:6

Matthew 3:13

Then cometh Jesus -- He was thirty years of age, the legal age at which a priest could offer sacrifice. R4544:2, 3297:1, 2565:1, 2417:1, 2237:3; A179; B66

To Jordan -- Meaning "judged down," "condemned"; typifying the curse, the sentence against our race, which has rested for 6000 years. R3086:4

Unto John -- His second-cousin. R2565:1

Baptism is valid even though the baptizer be a believer not of the Kingdom or Church class. R1541:4

To be baptized -- Symbolizing his death. CR460:1

This was a cross, a humiliation; for the masses, as well as John, thought of it as a washing away of sin instead of a symbol of death. SM643:3

John forbad him -- Because he knew nothing of the baptism which is unto death. R3296:6

Asserting that, of the two, he himself, rather than Jesus, needed that baptism. R3296:3

Our Lord Jesus was holy, harmless, undefiled, separate from sinners (Heb. 7:26); hence it would have been wrong for him to have been baptized for the remission of sins--John's only understanding of baptism. R2565:5, 4644:2, 2417:5, 2237:3, 1917:1; HG261:6; NS51:4

He knew Jesus well from infancy to manhood; as cousins they doubtless had discussed various features of divine law, and were of one heart as respects service to the Lord. R2417:1

I have need -- We have no record that John was ever immersed himself; nor would we need to have, since he was evidently a godly man, living up to the standard of the Law Covenant to the best of his ability. R2417:5

If either of the two needed to confess sin and profess a washing away of sin, it would be John himself rather than the Master. HG254:5; Q34:T, 35:6

To be baptized of thee -- But Jesus did not baptize John and he did not explain to John the philosophy of it all. Q32:3

Matthew 3:15

Suffer it to be so -- Thus intimating that he was not following John's baptism to wash away sins, but that His baptism had another special meaning. PD57/69; R4544:2; Q35:6, 32:3 "I have a baptism to be baptized with; and how am I straitened till it be accomplished." (Luke 12:50)

R2417:6; PD57/69; NS51:6

He did not dispute John's argument, but insisted upon being baptized. HG261:6

Jesus did not stop to argue the matter with John because John could not have understood; it was not due time for John to understand; he was not of those begotten of the holy Spirit. Q35:6

It was not then due time to explain Christian baptism because the new baptism belonged to the new dispensation which did not begin until Pentecost. R2565:2

Thus it becometh us -- I have a reason for so desiring it, and it is proper that I should do it in the fulfillment of certain things which I recognize to be right. R3296:6, R2417:5

It behooved him, who was the prospective Head of the prospective Body, to set an example that we, coming after, might follow in his steps. NS51:5

The Christ, Head and Body. R1917:4

Fulfil all righteousness -- Righteousness obtained through Jesus only. PT390:3*

The righteousness of God's law which could by no means clear the guilty without a satisfaction of the claims of justice by the sacrifice of a life for a life, which he was about to fulfill by the sacrifice of himself.

R1917:1

It is merely a question of knowledge and obedience, both as respects the real baptism of the will, and also respecting the outward, symbolic baptism in water. R2167:1

This act was doubtless foreshadowed by the high priest washing himself with water and putting on the holy linen garments (Lev. 16:4). Clean linen is the symbol of righteousness. (Rev. 19:8) R157:4*

The satisfaction of mind and peace of heart that we, like our Lord, have endeavored to "fulfill all righteousness" contributes to the peace of God that passeth all understanding in our hearts. NS56:1

Matthew 3:16

And Jesus -- At 30 years of age, manhood according to the Law, the right time to consecrate himself as a man. A179

When he was baptized -- Symbolizing the full consecration of his life, even unto death. He was laying down a foundation for a new order of things. Q32:3; A197

He sacrificed all the blessings and favors that were his under the Law Covenant. R5090:1

Our Lord's baptism was more than John's baptism. R3296:3

Our Lord's baptism in water was not his real baptism, but merely a symbol or picture of it. His real baptism was unto death, and his real raising up was his resurrection. HG262:2; NS51:5

Not as a sinner, but as a sin-offering. R4544:2

A new baptism, not for sinners, but exclusively for holy ones; not symbolic of cleansing from sin, but symbolic of a sacrificial death for the sins of others. R2565:2

As Jesus' baptism signified his death sacrificially for sins, so the baptism of Christians symbolizes their participation with the Lord in his sacrifice. R2565:4

Symbolizing the laying down, burial, of "the man Christ Jesus, a ransom for all" (1 Tim. 2:5,6). In the dying he represented the sacrificial bullock of the Jewish Atonement Day. HG262:1; Q183:T

Not into the Church of Christ, for there was no Church of Christ as yet, not until Pentecost; but the beginning of a new institution in every sense of the word. HG261:6

It was a symbol, not a type. Q35:2

Scriptures tell us it is pleasing in God's sight that we symbolize our consecration by water immersion as Jesus symbolized his by water immersion. So we will follow his example. Q32:3, 33:T

Out of the water -- His raising up from the water symbolized his resurrection from death on the third day after Calvary. In the rising from the water, he represented the antitypical High Priest. HG262:1; Q183:T

The heavens -- The word heavens in both the Greek and Hebrew signifies "higher things." In this case, spiritual truths, the higher things that he had not seen before. Q183:T

Opened unto him -- Connecting his experiences as a man with his prehuman experiences with the Father. R5157:5, 5065:1, 2565:5

The higher, the spiritual things, the heavenly things, were opened unto him. R5128:5, 5847:1, 5157:5; OV159:1; CR402:5; Q183:T; PD57/69

Things, which as a natural man he could not receive, revealing the divine purpose respecting himself. R4968:2, 4970:1, 5054:2, 5157:5, 3297:2; Q547:4
Literally, rent asunder. R4970:1

Jesus became conscious of some great change in his own condition and in his relationship to the Father and to spiritual things. R5157:5

This enlightenment came by the receiving of the holy Spirit. PD57/69

That very moment marked the time of our Lord's spirit begetting, and we believe that he then received special knowledge of heavenly things.

R5157:5, 4544:2 No matter how perfect a man may be he cannot receive spiritual things. "The natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God." (1 Cor. 2:14) R5157:5, 4544:3

With us, as with Jesus, the Father provides not only a clearer appreciation of our trials and responsibilities, but also a clearer perception of the glories which will follow to the faithful. R4970:1

All who are baptized into his death (1) receive an opening of their minds to see heavenly things; (2) hear the voice of the Father saying they are now beloved sons; and (3) receive the holy Spirit in their hearts, the peace-giving, meek and gentile spirit of holiness. R2565:6

And he saw -- John alone, probably, saw the dove. E212; R5157:4, 3297:1, 3296:6, 2565:5, 2417:6

John was granted the privilege of seeing the dove and hearing the voice to the intent that he might bear witness to the fact. R2565:5, 2417:6, 2237:4; Q35:4, 36:8

The Spirit of God -- A manifestation representing the invisible. E212

Jesus could receive the spirit without measure, whereas all imperfect members of his Church may have a measure of the spirit only. R370:1

The human nature had to be consecrated to death before he could receive even the pledge of the divine nature. A179

Our Lord was already dead to his own will; otherwise he would not have gone down to John at Jordan. But God's manifestation of his acceptance of Jesus' sacrifice apparently waited until after Jesus had performed the symbol. Q36:8

Illustrated by the oil that anointed the unleavened wafers of the meat-offering. R84:3*

Like a dove -- An outward representation of God's power coming on Jesus. CR460:2; R5291:6

Emblem of peace and purity, representing the fullness of Jehovah's spirit of love in Jesus. E212

Possibly a stream of light which came not violently, like the lightning, but gently, like a dove. R3296:6

A dove was a favorite figure with the Jews as an emblem of peace and salvation. It represented fittingly the meek and quiet spirit of all those who possess the spirit of holiness unto the Lord. R2565:5, 2237:4
Neither the voice, the opened heavens or the dove are experiences granted to his followers; nor to be expected today. The coming of the holy Spirit at Pentecost was signaled by an outward demonstration which serves the entire Church. R2565:6

Lighting upon him -- Giving the earnest of his inheritance of the divine nature. A179

Anointing him. Jesus was not the Messiah, the Christ, until this anointing took place. T27, 37; B66

Matthew 3:17

And lo a voice -- Such a voice was heard on three different occasions: (1) on this occasion, (2) on the Mount of Transfiguration (Mark 9:7) and (3) at the close of our Lord's ministry (John 12:28). R2237:4

Both the voice and the descent of the holy Spirit showed the Lord to be perfect and to have made a perfect consecration. R5080:5

My beloved Son -- Jesus was the first Son of God after Adam. R5623:5
Being begotten again to the spiritual plan and to the divine nature. R418:3, 164:5*

Again, after his baptism unto death, the Spirit bore witness to him still being the well-beloved Son, in raising him from death and highly exalting him to the right hand of power. R1411:3

Jesus claimed to be the Son of God and, consequently, the Messiah. R944:4*

I am well pleased -- At his baptism our Lord was at the mark of character which merited the promised reward of the Father. R5081:5
Because he was holy, harmless, undefiled and separate from sinners and knew no sin. (Heb. 7:26; 1 John 3:5) R1585:5

The words, deeds and character of our Lord Jesus illustrate to us what pleases God. R1781:4, 1273:1

Pictured in the fine flour of the meat offering, flour that had no roughness or unevenness. R84:2*

Matthew 4

Matthew 4:1

Then -- Temptations immediately followed his baptism. This is the experience of all who follow in his steps. R3296:3, 2566:3, 1688:1; F141

Was Jesus -- Not God, "For God cannot be tempted with evil, neither tempteth he any man." (Jas. 1:13) R370:2

Led up -- Mark expresses it, "driven into the wilderness." (Mark 1:12)
R3297:2, 2566:1

We should never voluntarily go into temptation, but, knowing our weakness, should seek to avoid it. R3715:6

Therefore we think that the Scripture, "Lead us not into temptation" (Matt. 6:13) should be translated as in the Diaglott, "Abandon us not in temptation." R3716:1

Of the Spirit -- The holy Spirit--which was now his own spirit, or mind, or will. R3297:2

His own spirit: his own enlightened new mind. Thus it is our new mind, the result of full consecration to the Lord, that leads us into temptations, trials and difficulties. R3716:1, 4970:2, 5054:2, 5579:3; Q183:T

The illumination (Matt. 3:16) gave Jesus such new views respecting his work that he was impelled to go aside to think, pray and study what his course should be as outlined by the Law and the prophets. R4544:3, 2566:1, 2243:2

He must not even take his own previous conceptions of his work. He must look at everything from the new standpoint of the Spirit. No wonder he wished to be alone with God. R3297:3

That he might study the divine Word, treasured up in a perfect memory, and now fully intelligible by the power of the Spirit. "The natural man receiveth not the things of the spirit." (1 Cor. 2:14) R5157:6, 3297:3,2, 1688:2

Into the wilderness -- Away from every friend and acquaintance and distracting thing. R3297:2

Instead of being taken to the mountain top of joy. F141

That in solitude he might know thoroughly the proper course for him to take in announcing himself as Messiah to Israel and the world. R3716:3

He must not confer with flesh and blood respecting his future course, even if there had been anyone perfect like himself with whom he might have conferred. He must confer with the Father. R3297:3, 2566:2

To be tempted -- Along the very lines of his work--the consecration which he had already made. R5065:5

Along the line of selfishness. R3715:3

The three temptations here recorded illustrate practically all the temptations that came to our Lord during his ministry; and, likewise, the temptations that come to his followers. R3297:6

The environment of the present world, and the natural and often legitimate desires of the flesh, are the mediums through which the temptations are presented. R1689:5

Temptation does not imply sin. Our Lord was tempted "without sin"; so may his brethren be if they follow his example. Sin only comes through yielding to temptation. R2568:5, 1802:5*, 1689:5

"In all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin" (Heb. 4:15); not referring to ordinary temptation, but trials and temptations as a new creature. R3715:6, 3297:6, 2566:3, 2243:5, 1689:5; E110; Q706:2

There is a difference between temptations which the Father considers proper and the temptations which come of the Adversary. R3297:5
The temptations or trials which Jehovah permits to come upon his consecrated people are of the same kind that he permitted to come upon our Redeemer. R4970:3, 4544:3

Since we read that God tempteth not, neither is tempted of any man (Jas. 1:13), then Jesus must not be God. R370:2

Of the devil -- Greek, diabolus. The word always appears in the singular and undoubtedly refers to Satan. R3716:1, 3297:5, 2567:5

Whose very existence is now denied by many. F609

Satan is the Adversary in a sense that the world and our own flesh are not our adversaries. They are not bitter nor malicious. Satan alone is the willful, intelligent plotter and schemer. F611, 612

Matthew 4:2

Fasted forty days -- Doubtless the entire period was spent in meditation and prayer, being led to this course by his spirit of devotion to the Father--his anxiety to do the Father's will in the Father's way. R3716:4, 5054:2

Mark and Luke imply that he was tempted for the entire period. Both thoughts are evidently true--he was tempted all during the 40 days, while the three temptations narrated here occurred at the close of the 40 days. R3716:1, 2566:3

Aided by a perfect memory, he considered the prophecies, including those which showed he should be rejected of men and led as a lamb to the slaughter. R3716:4,5

These 40 days were spent in meditation and prayer. He had no Bibles nor concordances, but a perfect memory and 18 years of hearing and reading the Law. We may safely say that he knew the entire Word of God by heart. R3716:4, 3297:3, 1688:2

Apparently he neither ate nor slept. R4970:2, 3716:6

If it was proper for the Master to make a study of the divine plan before beginning his work, how much more is it necessary for his followers to do so. "Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth." (2 Tim. 2:15)

R3717:1, 2566:2

Afterward an hungred -- It was an appeal to one of the strongest cravings known to human nature. R2243:4

Up to this time his perfect mind was so absorbed in his great theme, and so perfect was he physically, that he probably neither ate nor slept.

R3716:6, 3297:3,4, 2567:5; Q184:T

While busily engaged in searching the Father's will he was not molested by the tempter; but when he had reached a conclusion, that was the moment of the tempter's assault. It is the same with us. R3717:5

Shipwrecked sailors have been exonerated for turning cannibals under the stress of hunger when they have been without food much less than 40 days. R2243:4

When the tempter -- One who was of a higher order of being than himself, who had not taken upon himself a bondman's form. R5084:6
Choosing the time when Jesus' overtaxed human powers sought refreshment and recuperation. R4970:2,3, 3717:2, 3297:5; Q184:T

Came to him -- Probably not personally, but by suggestion. R3717:3, 5084:2

He said -- I remember you well from the long ago when we were in fellowship, before my deflection. R4970:4

In approaching our Lord, Satan did not attempt to lie outright, nor to distort the facts, but rather to put a false color on them. R5084:6

Representing himself as a friend, an angel of light. R3717:3, 4970:3

If thou be -- This demand of the tempter would seem to be a challenge to prove himself the Son of God, to prove that he received the holy Spirit in full power; and that, if he did not do so, his claim might be considered fraudulent. R2243:3

Compliance meant not only the relief of his hunger, but additionally it meant the apparent conversion of Satan, who seemingly was in a repentant attitude. R2567:1

Be made bread -- The first temptation--the flesh. R3717:4

Use spiritual gifts to further temporal ends. E110; R4970:3, 3798:1, 3058:2

Since you have so unwisely forfeited your higher form of life, so that you may never regain it, don't give up, but keep the life you now have. If you die now you shall never live again, neither will you be able to liberate mankind from death. R314:2 Illustrating our temptations to preach for worldly applause, wealth and social positions, and to seek the healing of our bodies which we have consecrated to death in God's service. R5965:5, 4970:6, 3798:1, 3717:6

The spiritual gift could no more be used to procure temporal comforts than it could be sold for money to Simon. (Acts 8:18-20) R2567:2

So far from using his miraculous powers selfishly, we find that many of his miracles, especially healings, were done at his own personal expense.

"Virtue [vitality] went out of him and healed them all." (Luke 6:19)

R2243:5

Our Lord subsequently used this power in feeding multitudes and turning water into wine, but it would have been sinful for him to use it upon himself, to sustain the human life which he had already consecrated unto death. R4544:5, 1689:4; Q707:2

Food thus secured could sustain life for but a little while; the better plan would be to trust in the Word of God and have eternal life with God.

R4897:1

When he hungered, he sent his disciples to buy bread. When weary, he rested on the well or elsewhere. He never prayed for deliverance from natural troubles, but cheerfully endured them as part of his sacrifice. So should we. F636, 650

But he answered -- The fact that Jesus discussed matters with the Adversary does not furnish us with an excuse to try our ability in this direction--as in spiritism. R5084:6

If we are positive in our rejection of temptation it increases our strength of character, not only for that time, but also for subsequent temptations. R2567:3

It is written -- Although filled with the Spirit, he relied upon that which was "written" for his replies to temptations. R1688:4; Q708:T
The sure defense of the true child of God. F200

Man shall not live -- I could not enjoy life, even with all my wants supplied, apart from communion with my Father. R314:3

By bread alone -- Thus refusing to use divine power for his personal comfort and healing. F636, 650; R4970:4

Natural food alone will not sustain us. We cannot live except as we have the smile, the favor, the approval of the Lord our God. To live without that, for us, would not be living. R3717:6

Man can find no kind of bread, no kind of food, that will produce life in the full and complete sense of that word--that will swallow up death in life. R3058:3 The increase of learning, wealth, conveniences, medical skill and dietetic knowledge which the world has recently experienced has not increased its peace. NS521:2

Every temptation to sacrifice spiritual privileges or violate spiritual responsibilities for the attainment of earthly advantages would be a yielding to this form of temptation. R4544:6

The most that we should do is to make mention to him of those promises for temporal provision and of our trust in them. R5202:5

If God calls us to be members of the body of Christ, neither lack of food nor anything else can hinder us from the full opportunity of making our calling and election sure. R5202:5

The wrong course is symbolically prefigured in Esau's selling the birthright for a mess of pottage. (Heb. 12:16) R4544:6, 3717:6, 2567:2

But by every word -- Not merely the milk of the Word. R3622:2, 1568:2
All hopes of eternal life depend upon God--upon the divine plan and its promises. R3058:5, 4896:3

Every admonition, every encouragement, every promise, is necessary to the development of those called to eternal life. R4896:6, 3060:4

It is as certain that we need spiritual bread--the truth--constantly, in order that our spiritual life be sustained, as that we need natural bread daily to sustain our physical life. R136:3*

Truth is the proper food of man, and a large share of it must be received by faith. Thus we must live by faith. Faith is to truth as eating is to bread. R74:1*

The words of God's mouth to us are not exactly the same as to our Lord Jesus and to the holy angels. To us they are the words of justice, pity, sonship, promise, admonition, patience, consolation and resurrection. R3058:6-3060:4

His word is that "whosoever seeketh to save his [earthly] life [at the expense of his covenant] shall lose it; and whosoever shall lose his [earthly] life [laying down his life in harmony with his covenant of consecration, faithfully unto death] shall find it [eternal life]." (Matt. 10:39) R2244:1

If he would deserve eternal life, it must be as a result of absolute obedience to the divine law. R4544:5, 3058:5, 2567:2

He had been feeding upon this heavenly food. He was strong in spirit and determination to do the Father's will. R3717:6

Our meat and drink should be to do the will of our God, and to finish his work. (John 4:34) R1689:3

"Whoso keepeth his Word, in him verily is the love of God perfected." (1 John 2:5) R4897:4

Mouth of God -- God's word is that obedience is the condition of life everlasting. R4896:6

Then the devil -- The second temptation--the world. R3718:2

Not even dissenting from our Lord's decision, he presented him a second subtle temptation. R5084:6, 3718:2

Into the holy city -- Mentally, not physically. R5084:3, 4970:4, 4544:6, 3719:2

On a pinnacle -- The roof of the southern wing of the Temple. R3718:2, 3298:2, 2567:4

About 600 feet above the bottom of the valley. R3298:2

Of the temple -- Overlooking the Valley of Hinnom (Gehenna). R3718:2, 3298:2, 2567:4

And saith unto him -- Again posing as a friend, an angel of light. R3718:3

If thou be -- Your trust in Jehovah is misplaced; first prove Him and see if He will keep His word. R314:4

Cast thyself down -- Not a temptation to gross wickedness, but a temptation to do the Lord's work in another way than that which the Lord had planned. R2567:3

Recklessly expose yourself in proof of your mission. E111

Thus drawing the immediate attention of all Israel to the fact that you are the Messiah. R3718:3, 5965:6, 4970:4, 4544:6

"A wicked and adulterous generation seeketh after a sign" (Matt. 16:4), such as the laying on of hands, the gift of tongues, physical healing, peculiar dress, robes, mitres, relics of saints, etc. R3718:5

"This generation seeketh a sign" (Mark 8:12); and thus it is with every generation. The world wants miracles or outward shows of sanctity and great professions. R3718:5

Illustrating the temptation to recklessly expose ourselves to any danger--moral, financial, physical or spiritual--expecting miraculous deliverance. R2244:2,3, 4970:6

He had not been called upon to thus hazard his life, but rather was required to sacrifice it--laying it down in the service of the truth and of humanity. R4545:1

The Lord's people should be on guard against any unreasonable procedures in the proclamation of the Gospel. The service of ambassadors for God is a reasonable service. R3718:6, 3298:6, 2567:5

Another temptation of the same character: To expect divine interposition to put truth into our mouths and hearts while failing to obey the divine instruction to "Search the Scriptures." R2244:3

It would be a sin to use spiritual power for the gratifying of our human nature when it was given us wherewith to crucify it. R146:5

The wonder-working spirit is contrary to the spirit of humility and, if gratified, would lead to spiritual pride and egotism. R4545:1

We are to do all in our power before expecting divine interpositions. We are not to thus tempt providence. R2421:2

If we should presume to go out in cold or stormy weather improperly clad, when it is not necessary to do so, and thus risk contracting illness, we would be doing a wrong and unwarranted thing. Q708:1

It requires greater courage to ignore the shame and ignominy of the world in the disesteemed service of God than to perform some great and wonderful feat that would cause the natural man to wonder and admire. E112

For it is written -- Satan quoted Scripture but misapplied it.

His angels -- Ministers of divine truth who, in the present harvest-time, would be commissioned to bear up the feet members with such counsels, admonitions and expositions of Scripture as would be necessary for them. (Psa. 91:11,12) R2567:6

Bear thee up -- If he had been thrust off the Temple pinnacle by the hands of an angry mob before his time had come, or if he accidentally fell, surely the Father would have intervened that he not be injured; but to do so deliberately would have been to tempt God. R4970:5, 3718:4, 3298:3

Dash thy foot -- This Scripture really belongs to the feet members of the Body of Christ, that they may surmount the difficulties and receive blessing instead of injury. R4545:1, 3719:1, 3298:4, 2567:5, 2244:2, 1680:6, 844:3

Against a stone -- It is possible that our Lord at that time did not know the proper interpretation of this Scripture; if he had, there would have been little temptation in the suggestion. R3298:3
We now see that the Lord himself was the "stone of stumbling and a rock of offence to both the houses of Israel" (Isa. 8:14), and that his "feet" represent spiritual Israel particularly during the harvest time. R3298:4
In our day there is a stumbling-stone permitted for the testing of our faith. Whoever is of the proper character will be aided of the Lord to victory so that the stumbling-stone will become a stepping-stone to higher riches of grace and blessing. R3719:1, 3298:5

It is written again -- Seemingly conflicting Scriptures should be harmonized by examining the underlying principles. R3298:3
Not tempt the Lord -- By trying him through a misapplication of his promise. Q708:T
To deliberately defy the laws of nature and to expect divine protection would have been to tempt God. This Jesus refused to do. R4970:5, 3718:4, 1688:4; Q707:4

Matthew 4:8

Again, the devil -- The third temptation--the devil. R3719:2
In seeming sympathy with our Lord. R3719:3
Again changing his method of attack. R5084:5
This time he no longer disputed with Jesus that he was the Son of God. R2244:5
Taketh him up -- Mentally, not physically. R4970:5, 3719:2, 3298:4
High mountain -- Satan's own dominion over the world. R5084:5, 4970:5, 4545:2, 3719:2, 3299:1, 2244:4
And sheweth him -- Thus picturing his own power over the world, the power of a usurping prince imposing upon him the ignorance and superstition of mankind. R4545:2
This panoramic presentation of Satan's power was designed to impress upon our Redeemer the thought that Satan's friendship and assistance would be most valuable--nay, of almost vital importance to the success of his mission. R2567:6
All the kingdoms -- Held and ruled through his minions, the blood-thirsty kings of earth. R615:1*
Our Lord clearly understood that sometime he was to have authority over these kingdoms, and that his mission was to lay the foundation for a Kingdom, but he probably did not yet fully understand how or when--hence, the peculiar force of this temptation. R3299:1

Though God has given over the world to the "prince of this world" until the full end of the Gentile times, yet God has not given him unlimited power. R5205:4

Pray God's guidance and direction over all the affairs of life and over rulers to the end that the piety, sobriety and growth of the Church may be conserved. R5205:4; HG570:4

All these things -- You will be great indeed. You are a perfect man and you can live forever. Since your life is not forfeited, no one can take it from you. You can be Lord of lords and King of kings to bless mankind. R314:4

Will I give thee -- Satan controls the invisible spiritual phase of the present kingdoms of earth, as well as the visible human phase. A251; R4970:5

This offer was no farce; it was the climax of the temptations, the last resort of a baffled enemy. R615:1*

To give the impression that he himself was tired of rebellion against God in the world and that he was ready to join our Lord in a great social uplift. R5084:5, 4970:5, 4545:4, 3719:3, 3299:2; E113

Furthermore, this would involve my own conversion to righteousness, which surely would not be amiss, either in your sight or in the sight of Jehovah. R2244:5; E114

The suggestion was that with some maneuvering and wire-pulling he, as a perfect man, and therefore far superior to other men, could soon win his way to a chief place of power and dominion over the whole world. R1688:6 His proposition is a social uplift which shall ignore individual responsibilities and sins and merely regard social conditions and make society outwardly clean. E115

If thou wilt fall down -- Bend a little; make compromise with the worldly spirit. R2568:2

He foresaw that the suggested course would involve many compromises with evil men then in power, just as all office-seekers under the present order have always found it. R1689:1

Similarly today, he proposes to the Lord's followers identification with nominal Churchianity. R3299:5

The temptation is, Will we connive with and recognize unjust and sinful institutions because they have power and because to oppose them would imply their opposition and the bringing of shame, scorn and death. R4545:5, 3299:5

Satan was willing to become a reformer in all particulars except one--his ambition must be gratified. E113

Worship me -- Cooperate with me for the world's uplift. R4970:5; E112
Implying that Satan would not require such suffering and sacrifice as God required; that, if Jesus would cooperate with him, all would work smoothly and prosperously. R5966:1; Q708:3

As does the nominal church when it seeks to increase membership by resorting to worldly customs, games, entertainments, etc. R3719:5, 4970:6
When the Papacy did this, Satan was true to his promise. B293; E114
Recognize his influence and cooperation in the work. Not for a moment can we suppose that he expected him to kneel before him and worship him as a God. R2568:1

I do not ask that you shall not recognize Jehovah, but that you shall be under my supervision. You will not be required to do anything very bad. R5084:6

I, on the spirit plane, and you, on the human plane, will be quite masters of the situation. Let us federate and cooperate. R4970:5, 4545:4

By not opposing evil, by respecting or reverencing evil customs already established under Satan's regime, Satan would cooperate with our Lord in the establishment of his Kingdom. E74

It was not long after the apostles fell asleep in death that the Adversary succeeded in deluding the church to go into partnership with him for the control of the world and its blessings through a combination of religion and politics. R2245:1

Get thee hence, Satan -- Adversary, opposing spirit. F611

I cannot be a co-worker with you in any sense of the word. R4970:6, 3299:4
Fully awakening in Jesus a realization of the fact that there was no real reformation at work in Satan's heart. R2568:2

Our Lord was saved from any vacillation on the subject by reason of the fullness of his consecration. R3299:4

Our Lord was indignant that it should be thought for a moment he would prove traitor to his covenant and enter into a confederacy with the great Arch-enemy of righteousness, Satan. R4970:6

Had he not reached this final decision we may presume that Satan's temptations would have continued for days or weeks or years. R3299:6

Let each of us, as followers of the Master, be prompt in giving our response to the Adversary's proposition of compromise. He who dallies with temptation increases its power every moment. R3720:1, 3299:6; Q184:T

We are to resist the Adversary courageously that he may leave us permanently. R4970:6

When we take a positive stand on any question we have special help from the Lord along those lines. R4339:4*

Worship the Lord -- The Greek word translated "worship" in the New Testament is proskuneo which signifies "to kiss the hand," as a dog licks the hand of its master. The significance is reverence. E72

Thy God, and him only -- Reverence to those in honored positions, if not rivals of Jehovah, is proper. E73

Shalt thou serve -- I will follow the divine program at any cost. R2244:6

Devil leaveth him -- And never made another attempt, as far as the record goes. R5292:4, 4970:6; Q184:T

"Resist the devil and he will flee from you." (Jas. 4:7) R1689:5; Q184:T

Behold, angels came -- Uninvited. R1689:6

From the moment of our positive resistance of temptation and positive standing up for the Lord we become stronger in the Lord and in the power of his might. R3300:4

Our Lord had no Advocate to sympathize with him, and to succor and encourage him in the hour of temptation. With us, however, matters are different. R4545:5

Whatever terror lay in the intimated opposition of the Adversary was more than counterbalanced by the assurance of divine favor and assistance. So it is with us. R3300:4

Ministered unto him -- Strengthened him, revived him. R4970:6

Now when Jesus -- Probably six months or a year after his baptism. R2245:2

Heard that John -- Foreshadowed the closing work of the Church at the second advent. B261,253

He departed -- "When they persecute you in this city, flee to another." (Matt. 10:23) F508

It is our duty to be on the lookout for divine deliverance and the opening of a way of escape from things too difficult to endure. F508

Into Galilee -- More amenable to the teachings of Jesus than were many of their more religious, more enlightened, and more priest-ridden brethren of Judea. R4557:1

The expression "Can any good thing come out of Nazareth?" (John 1:48) applied to all Galilee. R4556:6

In Capernaum -- Moving there with his mother and brethren, as a family. R2245:3

Capernaum was more closely in touch with the Gentile world, its good and its evil, than was Jerusalem. R4557:2

Galilee -- Signifies circle; implying that this land would be encircled by the Gentiles. R4556:6

The people -- The people of Palestine, long in doubt, uncertainty, etc. R4988:2

Sat in darkness -- Separated from the great religious center of their day, they were in greater darkness than their brethren. R4557:1

Saw great light -- Jesus and his teachings. R4988:2

Symbol of God, of Christ, of the Church, of truth, of influence for righteousness. R4987:3

Which flared forth in Capernaum, Bethsaida, Chorazin and Nazareth, chief cities of Galilee, and blessed and gathered some, the elect. R4557:1,5

The benighted Galileans were blessed in the great light which shone in their midst; but it also tested them as truth, light, always does. R4557:5

All mankind shall see the great light which God has provided. R4988:5, 4557:1

Shadow of death -- In the very shadow of the death-darkness that was upon the Gentiles. R4557:1

Subject to a reign of sin and death, under a pall of darkness, ignorance, superstition, sin, etc. R4987:6

Even these must come forth that all may be enlightened by this "true light which lighteth every man that cometh into the world." (John 1:9) R4988:6

Light is sprung up -- Before the world will be enlightened, the Church must be enlightened, completed and glorified together with her Lord. R4988:4

Repent -- From our Lord's viewpoint the healing of soul-sickness was of greater importance than physical healing, which was merely incidental. R2246:4

Kingdom of heaven -- The hope of every Israelite. A273

Matthew uses the terms "kingdom of heaven" and "kingdom of God" interchangeably. R396:3,6

Is at hand -- The 69 (of 70) weeks of Daniel's prophecy have expired. R3630:2

In the sense that Jesus was present to make a formal tender of the Kingdom to Abraham's natural seed. R4557:2

Simon called Peter -- "Simon Peter, lovest thou me more than these? [nets, boats, etc.]" (John 21:15) NS656:4

And Andrew -- This calling was not their first introduction to Jesus, but merely the Lord's invitation to them to become special associates in the work. R2245:2

They were fishers -- Christ did not call idlers, but workers, into his ministry. R2246:1

All his disciples (the twelve) were from what might be termed the humbler walks of life. It is declared without disapproval that the rulers "perceived that they were unlearned men." (Acts 4:13) F210

Matthew 4:19

Follow me -- While the Lord called each individually, there was also a special occasion upon which he dedicated them to their office as apostles. (Luke 6:13) R1521:2

I will make you -- The twelve whom I have specially chosen. F217

Fishers of men -- Spiritual fishing requires knowledge, tact, bait, and that self be kept out of sight. Fish are easily alarmed when they think anyone wishes to take them. "Be ye wise as serpents and harmless as doves." (Matt. 10:16) R5555:1,3, 3308:3; CR156:4

The skillful fisherman catches the fish individually. Likewise, very much of the work of this age has been an individual work, accomplished by talking to people. R5555:1

"The Kingdom of heaven is like unto a net that was cast into the sea and gathered fish of every kind." (Matt. 13:47) C214; R920:1

Left their nets -- Forsook all to follow him. The "seventy" commissioned later on were never recognized as apostles. F210

Evidently retaining some sort of interest in them, however, as they had no difficulty in regaining possession of them when they re-embarked in the fishing business after our Lord's death. R3308:2

Not instantly, but after making necessary arrangements. Similarly, we have a stewardship of duties and responsibilities in life which we cannot abruptly cast aside. R3720:6, 3721:1

The Lord accepts none as his disciples except those who forsake all to follow him. R4557:4

And so it is today. Those who most cheerfully, most zealously forget self and earthly ambitions, aims and projects, and who most fully give themselves to the Lord and to his service--these may walk nearest to the Lord at all times. R3334:6

Matthew 4:22

And their father -- Leaving the fishing equipment in the care of Zebedee and hired servants. R3720:6

All Galilee -- Supposed to have had a population of over 3,000,000. R3334:3

The people of Galilee were evidently thrifty, prosperous work people, people best prepared to receive his teachings. R3334:3

In their synagogues -- They could teach the people there, for a time; but as they shunned not to declare the whole counsel of God, they soon found little and finally no opportunity to teach the people in the synagogues. R986:5

The gospel -- His message is called "the Gospel," the good news, because Israelites, like the rest of the groaning creation, have been long waiting for the promised Golden Age. R2246:1

Of the kingdom -- The sum and substance of the gospel theme. R1579:3

And healing -- "These things did Jesus, and manifested forth his glory." (John 2:11) PD64/74

All manner of sickness -- Let those who are lame through pride and self-will and unable to follow in the narrow way cast away their crutches. Let them learn to walk in his ways of meekness, gentleness, patience, longsuffering and brotherly-kindness. R2246:5

Matthew 4:24

His fame -- As his fame increased, the opposition to him became more and more pronounced, especially from those who were brought into competition and unfavorable comparison with him as public teachers. R1735:3

And they brought -- We urge the necessity of bringing friends, and coming oneself, to the Great Physician for the healing of soul-sickness. R2246:5

Possessed with devils -- The evil spirits of selfishness and pride. R2246:5

The palsy -- The palsy of fear of man which bringeth a snare. [Prov. 29:25] R2246:5

He healed them -- To foreshadow the still greater work to be accomplished during his Millennial reign, and also to draw attention to the message proclaimed. PD64/74; R4557:5, 2246:4

Matthew 5

Matthew 5:1

He went up -- Being wearied with exhaustive labor, too weary to minister to the multitudes. R1493:3*

Into a mountain -- He did not seek a public place where the largest audience could be gathered, but a place of retirement where he could be alone with his disciples. R3243:1

Supposedly a site known as the Mount of Beatitudes, sloping gradually, about 60 feet high, situated about seven miles southwest from Capernaum. R2249:3

It is said that on this mountain the last remnant of the Crusaders was destroyed in AD 1187. R2249:3

His disciples came -- They had not yet become sons of God in the full sense of the word. Jesus spoke in an anticipatory or prophetic sense, as if they were already new creatures. R5623:2,3

His disciples were nearest to him, with the multitudes surrounding. R2249:3, 2589:1

Our Lord's first message was, Repent and get ready for the Kingdom (Matt. 4:17). To those who accepted that message he now gave additional blessed lessons. R4556:3

Jesus was addressing such of the Jews as had the hearing ear, such as had an inclination to be his disciples. Only the spirit-begotten understand these beatitudes fully. R5003:4, 4557:2, 3243:1

Not addressed to a promiscuous congregation of saints and sinners, but to his earnest and faithful disciples who had left all to follow him. R1493:3*

Matthew 5:2

Taught them -- A different message; others hold forth the rich, the learned, the influential, as patterns to copy; but Jesus set forth the reverse to attain happiness. R5003:2

The sermon is entirely devoid of anything like oratory; for evidently its object was to instruct, rather than to play upon the emotions of the hearers. R1493:2*

Instructed his disciples how they could best make their calling and election sure and win the great prize. R5003:5

His words were simple and easy to be understood. They applied strongly both to the judgment and to the heart. R1493:3*

His discourse was so directed as to divide his hearers into two classes--some disappointed, others thoroughly satisfied. Thus does the truth always separate. R3733:3

Not with threats of vengeance if the lessons were not learned; and while only the spirit-begotten can fully appreciate them, others may gather precious lessons from the beatitudes. R5003:5

Saying -- The character of our Lord is one. Here the Lord divides this one character into different sections, giving us a view of each particular part. R2585:2

Blessed -- Much more than happy. Happiness usually proceeds from outward causes, while the word blessed here carries with it the thought of great or honorable. R2249:6

Happiness describes joyful moods which come from time to time; but blessedness relates to that permanent joy and comfort which results from attaining character in harmony with the divine. R3733:2

The contrast between the Ten Commandments and the eight beatitudes illustrates the difference between the Law Dispensation and the Dispensation of Grace. R5003:2

The beatitudes designate the particular graces necessary to receive the blessings which the Father designed we should enjoy through Christ. R2249:3, 2240:1

We advise a reading and pondering on alternative Sundays of this delineation of the graces and the Apostle Paul's summation of the same graces in 1 Cor. 13. R2240:1, 2234:5, 2205:6

The poor in spirit -- The Foundation of the Palace of Blessedness is Humility. R5003:5

The Greek word signifies "extremely poor, utterly destitute." R2250:1

The first blessed state, in some respects, comprehends all the others. It is the gateway, the hallway of the House of Blessing, from which all the other rooms are accessible. R2249:6

Not the rich, the learned, the prominent, the rulers, the self-conceited, but those lacking self-esteem, who appreciate their own littleness and imperfection. R3733:6, 5991:5, 2139:1

Nevertheless, evidently moderate poverty is the most favorable condition for us in our present weak and fallen condition. R2250:1

Humble-minded, and therefore more teachable. R4969:4, 4557:3

While all humble persons will not attain the Kingdom, the Kingdom cannot be attained by anyone who is not humble. R2585:2

God would never accept as a member of the Kingdom class one possessed of the spirit of pride and selfish ambition. R5003:5, 2585:3

Not necessarily poor in pocket. Some who are poor in pocket, or in intellectual gifts or attainments, are very proud in spirit. R2585:5, 1920:5

A full appreciation of our own spiritual destitution is essential before we will be ready to receive the measures of divine grace provided. R2250:1

It is only when we are little in our own eyes that God can use us with safety to ourselves. R1920:5

Luke omits "in spirit"; those who become poor in any sense of the word, whether financially, socially or otherwise, by sacrificing themselves.

Blessed are all the sacrificers. R1493:5*

If the success of yesterday makes you fret under the humiliation of today, then beware: you are not as roundly developed spiritually as you should be. R1920:6

Theirs is the kingdom -- They are the prospective kings and priests of the new dispensation. R2139:5*

To those, all the Master's gracious promises and lessons of wisdom, comfort and instruction are given. R5991:5

Even now these constitute the embryo Kingdom. R2139:4*

Only the poor in spirit can submit to the discipline and training necessary to fit them for the Kingdom. R2139:4*

Blessed -- Growing out of the first quality, as a tree of many branches out of the root, come the other graces of the spirit. R2585:3

So if we find that the great majority of mankind have had considerable mourning and sorrow, there is comfort that the majority shall be comforted and receive joy. NS614:4

They that mourn -- The Palace Reception Room is the Chamber of Sorrow--mourning. R5003:6

The sympathetic, who realize their own imperfections, and are touched with pity for the poor groaning creation as they see them dying in sorrow, pain and disappointment. R3734:1,2, 5003:6, 2586:1, 2250:2; NS190:4

Necessary for our complete separation from the things of the world, the flesh and the devil. R5003:6

Mourners in Zion, true saints in the nominal church, distressed at the worldliness therein. D30; R1441:2

Mourning, of itself, is not a grace, but it betokens an attitude of mind which is acceptable in the Lord's sight. R2585:6

Our Heavenly Father is not a continual mourner. The thought, rather, is Blessed are ye that mourn now. R2585:6

Because iniquity abounds. R2138:6*, 1493:6*

Not expecting that becoming his disciples would lift them out of trials, difficulties, sorrows, tears, but that such experiences would be overruled for their good. R4557:5

It was this mourning in sympathy that led to Jesus' tears at Lazarus' tomb; and to his being called "the man of sorrows and acquainted with grief." (Isa. 53:3) R3734:3 We can cultivate this grace by frequently thinking of others and their interests and seeking to enter into these as though they were all our own. R2586:1

"Ye shall weep and lament, but the world shall rejoice." (John 16:20)
R1493:6*

They shall be comforted -- The word comfort does not contain the thought of relief, but rather that of strengthened together, or added strength.
R3734:4

Our Lord notes their tears as well as their efforts in opposition to sin.
R2250:3

Their comforting will begin at once, for their mourning will bring a readiness of mind to hearken for the Lord's favor. R3734:2, 2586:1
Blessed are those who, being comforted themselves, shall be used of the Lord in the comforting of other members of his Body. R3734:5
In receiving the reward of the righteous, and in beholding the final triumph of righteousness and truth. R1493:6*
"Beauty for ashes and the oil of joy for mourning." (Isa. 61:3) D30

Are the meek -- The Palace Library is Meekness. R5003:6
Submissive to the divine will. R2586:3

The teachable; not too proud to learn. R5003:6, 5186:1, 2586:1; Q469:2
Self-controlled, gentle, not easily provoked or irritated, forbearing under injury or annoyance. R3734:5,6

Meekness is necessary to learn valuable lessons in character-development, to be prepared to be the teachers of the world. R5003:6, 4557:3,6
"God resisteth the proud." (Jas. 4:6) E255

Impossible without the first two graces of a humble mind and the large sympathies of the mourner. R2586:2

The outward manifestation of the second grace, which is an inward quality.
R2586:2

There is quite a difference between this gentle submission to the divine will and ordinary gentleness which is frequently exercised to gratify selfish desires. R2586:2

Any wise man may learn something from a child; but anyone who is not meek finds it difficult to learn anywhere. Q469:2

Not bold, grasping, ferocious, self-willed, getting the best of the earth and everybody in it, but submitting to injustice in the interests of the coming Kingdom. R4557:6, 3734:5

The blessed meek of verse 5 are the same class who, in verses 10 and 11, are bold and courageous enough to withstand evil and error and champion righteousness and truth. R1493:6*

It is a life work with many to conquer their too-high appreciation of themselves and to obtain the spirit of a sound mind as respects their own talents. E255

Nothing is more dangerous to the child of God than self-conceit; it hinders reformation of the heart, as well as true usefulness to others, and especially usefulness in God's service. R5186:1

For they -- The seed of Abraham, members of Messiah. R5370:5, 5003:6, 4557:6

And not the selfish, avaricious and grasping. D633 Shall inherit the earth -- Purchased, as well as man, by the great sacrifice finished at Calvary. R2250:3

The reward of this grace, like the others, is future. R2586:6

When God's Kingdom has come and his will is done on earth as it is in heaven. R3734:5

The Lord's followers now have more enjoyment of the earth than others; while others are grasping, they are enjoying. R3734:6, 2586:3

Losing houses, lands, parents, children and friends, eventually they will inherit the earth. R4557:6

Under the primary and original covenant, as the Seed of Abraham. As members of Messiah, these will come into the full possession and control of the earth. R5370:5, 5003:6

The Church of the Firstborn is soon to have the entire Inheritance, the land as well as the power, dominion, glory and honor. R1164:2,4

"I will give thee the heathen for thine inheritance; and the uttermost parts of the earth for a possession" (Psa. 2:8) as soon as the last member of the elect has been prepared. R2250:4

To bring it to becoming again a Paradise of God, a world-wide Eden. R4557:6

The overcomers of this age inherit it now by faith, and the overcomers of the next age will do so actually. R3734:6

During the Millennial age the meek of the restitution class shall inherit the earth. R3734:6

At the close of the Messianic reign, the meek will turn over their inheritance, the earth, to mankind. R5004:1, 2586:3

Blessed are they -- Others are wholly unprepared to come to Jesus--such as those morally of a superior class who feel less the need of divine aid. NS121:1

Hunger and thirst -- In a symbolic palace of blessedness the dining room is Hunger for Righteousness. R5004:1

"As the hart panteth after the water brook." (Psa. 42:1) R5163:6

The human heart, as well as the human body, has its appetites. NS119:3

Some of the soul's appetites are: (1) craving for sympathy and fellowship; (2) craving for ease and comfort; (3) craving for name and fame; (4) craving for pleasure. NS120:1

Uncontrolled by the other graces, has led many reformers into wild excesses; yet, under the control of a sound mind, the child of God waits for the fulfillment of his promises. R2586:5

The first step of justification does not admit to the Lord's table except as it prepares us for it. The second step is full consecration to the Lord. NS121:4

A heart condition of faith and teachableness; and, while exercising our reasonable faculties, we expect divine guidance. R4744:6

Nothing is more conducive to spiritual hunger than approach to the throne of grace. NS122:3

The hope inspired by God's promise to Abraham is the power which has taken the spiritual stone out of the mountain--the world. (Dan. 2:45) OV429:3

God allows us to get very hungry before he gives us the truth. CR54:3

Many of the Lord's people reach his table without having a very keen appetite--such are easily satisfied. NS121:6

Lovers of righteousness and haters of iniquity. R5004:1 Who desire more and stronger spiritual food that they may grow thereby. Milk is for babes, but strong meat is for those who have passed the infant stage. (Heb. 5:14) R1358:2

Manifested by the desire to draw near to God, which the Lord expects before he fulfills his promise that they shall be filled or satisfied.

After righteousness -- That which is right, truth. R4971:1, 3735:1

Wisdom, knowledge, understanding of the good and true. R3284:6

The satisfying portion--at the table of divine provision. OV260:3

The Scriptures assure us that "There is none righteous, no, not one" (Rom. 3:10). There is a relative righteousness, however, which God can approve.

Righteous heart or character. R5901:3*

Righteousness is so interwoven with its various parts--justice and injustice, truth and error, holiness and sin--that whoever is careless in one element is deficient in all. NS123:2

Righteousness here applies to right in every matter--truth. R3735:1; NS120:4

New Year is a favorable time for heart reformation--not only because of the suggestions of new things, but also because of heart disappointments incidental to the holiday season. NS122:1

Seeking to be in harmony with Him to the best of their ability, and trusting in the precious blood of our Redeemer. R5218:2

With an antipathy to untruth in every form, and to all injustice and inequity; modified by the third grace, by patient submission to the divine will. R2586:5

So loving righteousness, truth, that they renounce and denounce bondage to creeds and stand forth for the truth. NS123:1

We find what we seek! Those who desire to find God's message will be guided of the Lord. Those who approach from the standpoint of cavil, unbelief, antagonism, are equally sure to find what they seek--flaws, contradictions, etc. R4971:1; HG473:6; Q643:2

They shall be filled -- Made holy. R5901:3*

The truth on every subject necessary for us will be given as the Lord is pleased to reveal it. R5570:4, 4744:5, 5004:1

The very fact that we do not know everything, far from being a cause of disappointment, is a source of pleasure. Each fresh item of knowledge is a new well-spring of pleasure. NS742:3

Satisfied with the spiritual refreshment God provides; we shall be bountifully fed and sweetly refreshed with the "meat in due season" and the water of life. R1396:5, 3735:1, 1899:2, 4558:1

The water of life and truth which Christ has furnished satisfied as nothing else could do. Those who drink of it have no cravings for vain philosophies of men which make void the Word of God. R1703:4

Righteousness and truth are scarce commodities at the present time. R4558:1

There is nothing in unrighteousness to fill any man. There is a filling power in righteousness. NS122:5

The appetite for truth and righteousness will remain, but the prevalence of truth and righteousness shall be its satisfaction. R2586:5

Does not imply a miraculous filling. They will make use of their time, knowledge and opportunities for seeking the bread of eternal life which satisfies. R3735:1

Repeatedly filled as full as the present poor earthen vessel will contain.

With the filling comes the enlargement of our capacities, and still further filling and a further enlargement, and so on. NS122:4

Satisfaction will not be attained fully in the present life; the believer progresses more and more to this satisfaction, receiving the full measure on the other side of the veil. R2671:1, 2586:6, 2250:5

Their own perfection in the first resurrection, and the establishment of righteousness in all the earth during the 1000 years of Messiah's reign. R5004:1

The merciful -- In a symbolic palace of blessedness the door is Mercy. R5004:1

Those who, having recognized their own need of divine mercy, are merciful and compassionate toward others. R5004:1, 3735:2

Only such could be entrusted with the works of restitution. R4558:1

A genuine mercy, a forgiving "from your hearts." (Matt. 18:35) R2587:1
God would rather have us err in the sense of being too lenient than have us be merely just. SM432:2

A genuine mercy and not a feigned one; it must cover from sight, and, as far as possible, blot from memory the failings and weaknesses of others. R2587:1

An outward expression, which men can discern, resulting from an appreciation of righteousness and a hunger and thirst for it in the renewed heart. R2586:6

It is for God to be just; it is for men to exercise the blessed characteristic of mercy, compassion, forgiveness. R2587:3

When Abraham requested mercy for Sodom (Gen. 18:23-32) the Lord was proved, in every case, to be no less just and no less generous than his servant. R3948:1

As applied to thought: it is better to be deceived a hundred times than to go through life soured by a suspicious mind. R4919:4

The unmerciful, evil-thinking mind is father to unmerciful conduct toward others. R4919:4

It is very unbecoming for those who themselves have need of divine mercy to be sticklers in the last degree in the requirement of justice for others. R3735:3

"Mercy rejoices against judgment"--against the execution of justice. (Jas. 2:13) R3735:2, 2587:2

Obtain mercy -- Only the merciful shall obtain mercy: "If ye forgive not men their trespasses, neither will your Father forgive your trespasses." (Matt. 6:15) R2587:1, 3803:1

The promise of mercy to the merciful is a principle of divine government, because the more generous and loving the heart, the nearer to the perfect condition. OV210:3

God will extend his mercy toward us as respects those deflections which are not willful. R2587:4

God will deal gently with them, forgiving their blemishes and weaknesses in proportion as they have this spirit of generosity, forgiveness, toward those who trespass against them. R3805:5

But the Lord declines to forgive our trespasses against his law unless we exercise this spirit toward our fellow-men. R4558:2

The strongest incentive towards as lenient a judgment of our fellow-men as circumstances will permit. R1493:6*

Matthew 5:8

The pure in heart -- In a symbolic palace of blessedness the window through which we may see God is Purity of Heart. R5004:4

In his creation, man was made in the image of God, and so was originally pure in heart. R5148:3, 3735:3

We will be judged according to the purity of the heart, mind, intention, will. R4558:2

Those absolutely cleansed in will and spirit, and, as far as possible, in flesh and tongue. F409; R5389:3; SM335:1, 633:2; Q51:3

Loyalty to the principles of truth and righteousness, the principles of divine government; loyalty to God and our Lord Jesus Christ and members of his body. R4929:3

Purity of motive, of intention, of effort, of will; in the sense of transparency, of truthfulness; sincere, unsullied, without adulteration. R5148:3, 5004:4, 5264:5, 3735:3, 2587:3; Q51:4

So long as the motives of the new will are honorable, we have the assurance that we will ultimately reach perfection through obedience.

R5149:2, 5756:3

If we fail to reach perfection of heart-development during the period of our trial, we shall die the second death. But this does not mean perfection of the flesh. R4400:6, 5902:1, 4558:3, 3735:5

To be pure-hearted means to be sincere and to utter nothing which we do not mean. NS673:6

The pure of heart are those whose intentions are pure, whose motives are pure, who desire the best--long for the best. Q51:4

Hence the importance of criticizing or judging our hearts, the necessity of purging from them everything rebellious and sinful. NS163:6

The Lord's judgment will be, not according to outward attainment, but according to inward attainment. NS593:4

We may be sure that the pure in heart, in intention and endeavor, will make considerable progress in overcoming the weaknesses of the flesh.

NS654:4; SM335:1

Purity, charity, holiness of heart and mind belong to our consecration.

R2015:4

The thought is not perfection of conduct, word or thought, but perfection of intention as respects all of these. R2587:5, 2250:6, 1739:2

The honest-hearted, those that have absolutely right intentions. R5148:3

A heart filled with the spirit of love will be sure to bestow it upon others. R4770:6

Maintain purity of heart by purity of mind. R5149:5

An evil mouth, a mouth which does injury to others, indicates an evil heart. R2444:1

They shall see God -- Greek, horao, discern. R1494:1*

"Without holiness no man shall see the Lord." (Heb. 12:14) R2587:3, 1739:2

Such have the clearest views of God's character and plan now; and such shall see him shortly when changed in the first resurrection. R3735:6

Not only attain the character-likeness of the Lord Jesus, but eventually they shall be made like him and "see him as he is" in the first resurrection. (1 John 3:2) R5149:1, 2587:5

In the fullness of heavenly glory. CR393:2; R4929:3, 5004:4, 5958:3

Having no films of prejudice or vain philosophy before their eyes and no clouds between themselves and God. R1494:1*

A foretaste comes in the present life: to "comprehend with all the saints what is the breadth and length and height and depth, and know the love of Christ." (Eph. 3:18) R2587:6

Where God sees the heart pure and true to him and to his spirit and law of love, he will, in due time, give the new body suited to it. F409

In his Word and his plan, in his mighty works, in nature, in the secret closet communions, in his providences. R1739:3

Only such as attain to heart purity can hope ever to see God, to enjoy this evidence of his love. R3735:5

The Church of Christ, begotten of the holy Spirit, may see him with the eyes of their understanding in a sense in which the ancient worthies could not. R5149:5

Those who have a double mind, a double will, also have a double vision, a double eye. They see spiritual things cross-eyed, double, and proportionately indistinctly. R2587:6

The peacemakers -- In a symbolic palace of blessedness the parlor is represented by the characteristics of a Peacemaker. R5004:4

Addressed to the consecrated, Jesus' disciples. SM452:1, 456:2

Purity of heart toward God manifests itself in peaceable desires and efforts to promote peace in others. R2588:1

To be a peace-maker, one must first be a peace-lover. R2251:2

Peacemaking is chiefly done with the tongue, though it may also operate through the eye. R2588:2

The Lord's people are to sympathize with all and join with none in the warring world. R5767:4

We may avoid denunciation of things we cannot endorse, especially things having no bearing on the Lord's Word. What God sees fit to permit, we can see fit to endure. R4978:6, 2621:6, 4558:4, 2948:6

Not mischief-makers, strife-breeders, lawless. R4558:4

Taking opportunity to help others. R5004:4

We should seek to subdue and calm the passions of men in the coming strife. OV287:2

The great majority of those who have named the name of Christ, even if their hearts are pure and their sympathies large, pursue a reverse course. Even some of the true saints use their tongues to stir up strife.

R2588:1,2, 3736:1

With perverse natural dispositions, it may require considerable time and practice to learn and love the path which leads to peace amongst God's people. R2251:1

Not peace at any price, otherwise our Lord and the faithful body might not have suffered. R2251:1

There are times where "backbone" is necessary, when principle is involved, and when retreat would be absolutely wrong; but these cases are rare.

Undoubtedly we can often yield as Isaac did with Abimelech. (Gen. 26:12-25) R3593:6

Combativeness, exercised toward fellow creatures, must be modified by mercy; it must be trained to fight for truth and against error, but not against the ignorant servants of the error. R2588:4

Fighting against the imperfections and weaknesses of our own natures will leave comparatively little time for assaulting others. R2588:4

If we think the majority less wise than we, let us learn patience and wait, as the Lord does, until they learn the error of their course and amend it. R4772:6

We are never to use the sword, earthly power, in seeking to promote the cause of the Master. R3888:1

Children of God -- They have God's spirit. The likeness of his dear Son has been traced in their hearts. R2588:3

Matthew 5:10

Blessed are they -- To be worthy of this blessing means to develop and possess a character which the enemies of righteousness would deem worthy of persecution. R4866:4

It is not until the Lord's people have experienced the preceding blessings of his grace that they reach the point where they can "glory in tribulation also." (Rom. 5:3) R2588:4

Which are persecuted -- In a symbolic palace of blessedness the kitchen represents the trials and difficulties incidental to the rounding out of character and proper nourishment and upbuilding spiritually. R5004:4
Not only in severe persecutions, but also in the lesser ones, when our names are cast out as evil, "when men shall separate you from their company." (Luke 6:22) R3617:4

The Lord is looking for those who are so faithful to the principles of righteousness that they will exercise it toward their enemies even when persecuted by them. R3736:3

For righteousness' sake -- Not for fault-finding and general cantankerousness. R2588:5

For the sake of truth in obedience to the heavenly calling. R4637:1
Peter, John, Paul and Silas, with backs bleeding and feet fast in the stocks, sang praises to God for the privileges they enjoyed of suffering with Christ. R4866:1

"If any man suffer as a Christian, let him not be ashamed, but let him glorify God." (1 Pet. 4:16) R3736:2, 4558:4, 4326:4, 2251:4

Blessed are ye, when -- Addressed to his disciples, all his followers throughout this age. R5544:2

As a result of making the Gospel your all- absorbing theme of life. A347; R5544:3

From the moment of our positive standing up for the Lord and his cause we become stronger in the Lord. R4814:1

"Blessed are ye" signifies that persecution is a favor from God. R5544:2
His followers must take up their cross if they would follow him. Through much tribulation they must enter the Kingdom. (Matt. 16:24; Acts 14:22) NS71:2

We should not court it, but should desire this evidence of our faithfulness. R5544:3

Whoever will faithfully exercise his ambassadorship, and not shun to declare the whole counsel of God, will speedily know something of the sufferings of Christ. E490

Increase the sacrifice daily and you increase the proof daily that you are his; and such as are his he gathers. R581:3

When God gives quietness, none can make trouble. (Job 34:29) R5879:2

Men shall revile you -- Thinking you carry matters to an extreme, are too conscientious, give too much time to religious matters, and run not with them to the same excesses as formerly. NS337:2, 605:2

Followers of him who "when reviled, reviled not again." R3736:3

"Ye shall be hated of all men for my sake." (Matt. 10:22) E490

God permitted his Son to be reviled to demonstrate the kind of character that was pleasing to him, and he wished to test the loyalty of Jesus himself. R5545:5

The chief opposition to our Lord came from the religious leaders and professors; so also with his followers. R4814:1, 4326:2; OV357:1

If, under the pressure, they yield and revile in return, and slander and backbite, they are proving themselves unworthy of a place in the Kingdom. R3736:5

And persecute you -- "Whosoever will live godly shall suffer persecution." (2 Tim. 3:12) F464

Pictured by the bitter herbs of the Passover. F464; NS75:5

The faithful followers of the Lord will be unsympathetically viewed, hated and persecuted; for the presentations of truth make manifest errors and hypocrisies. R4814:4, 4558:4, 4557:5,6

Such trials and difficulties are for the rounding out of character and for nourishing and upbuilding spiritually. R5004:4, 4326:1

Such experiences, overruled for good, serve to test faithfulness and trust; and the joys of the Kingdom, gained through much tribulation, will more than compensate for every tear and sorrow. R4557:5

Should be endured faithfully, calmly, rejoicingly. R4558:4

During the present life the Kingdom of heaven, the true Church of Christ, suffereth violence, and the violent take it by force. (Matt. 11:12) CR493:4

Things may seem to be going contrary to your welfare, to be working out incalculable harm--but have faith. R2699:4

Persecution implies that the person persecuted possessed qualities that are feared; that the persecutor realizes his own weakness to meet the arguments in a more rational way; that either the persecutors are weak or the arguments of the persecuted are strong. R4865:2

Persecution will come to those who have the courage of their conviction. R5547:1

All who have walked the narrow way have received persecution--the Baptists, Methodists, Presbyterians--in their early day, because they had more light than others. R5546:6

It is safe to say that the persecutors are always wrong, even if we cannot say that the persecuted are always right. R4865:2

Sometimes this comes from those who were once brethren in the truth; those who once dipped with us in the dish of divine nourishment at the table of the Lord. R4326:4

And shall say -- Our Lord seems to have taken more notice of the evil-speaking that would come upon his people than of the physical sufferings. R2295:4

All manner of evil -- The call is to ignominy now. R4841:6, 4637:1, 5145:2

Boycotted socially, boycotted in business, slandered in every conceivable manner, and often by those of whom they had least expected it. R2496:2
Their object in this course is to undermine by prejudice what they fail to meet by fair reasoning and Scripture. R1192:3

Our opposers do not try to show wherein we have retrograded in life and action, but put forth all their efforts to show what a fearful thing it is to leave the church. R2142:4*

Those who would say all manner of evil falsely, knowing the charges are false, are the very kind who would crucify or burn at the stake, had they the power. R5545:2

"Woe unto you when all men speak well of you; for so did their fathers unto the false prophets." (Luke 6:26) R5546:1

Falsely -- We should not be surprised at false charges and false insinuations against the faithful. R5173:1, 5294:5

Ignorance rather than malevolence is at the foundation of opposition to the truth. R5145:3

Falsely accused of "fanaticism" because the wisdom of God is oft esteemed foolishness with men. R2588:5

And yet take it patiently as did the Master, continuing faithful to the Lord and his cause at any cost. E191

For my sake -- Not for error, but for the truth; not for sects, but for Christ. R785:4

"Your brethren that hated you, that cast you out for my name's sake, said, Let the Lord be glorified" (we do this for the Lord's glory). (Isa. 66:5)
C182

His followers would be highly esteemed among the nominally religious were it not for their loyalty to the Word of God. Because of faithfully pointing out popular errors and their fidelity to the truth, they are hated by those prominent in Churchianity. R5173:1, 3736:4

Matthew 5:12

Rejoice -- Possible only when we understand that in these trying experiences there is a glorious purpose. R5495:6, 4558:5, 5545:2, 5893:6

Great is your reward -- What we do not get here of prosperity we shall get there, in the Kingdom. R5545:3

The measure of self-sacrifice and sufferings for Christ, endured by each of the consecrated, becomes a measure of the faithfulness of each as ambassadors. E490

There will be some least and some greater in the Kingdom of heaven. R1973:5

He that is not willing to have the Kingdom at such a cost is not worthy of the Kingdom. R4637:1

In heaven -- In spiritual things, not in temporal matters. R3223:2

And it is this heavenly reward for which you have been called and for which you have entered the race. R2699:4

The rewards of Christ's discipleship were not to be expected in the present life. All that we may now have is the peace and blessing of the Lord in our hearts, with glorious hopes for the future. NS602:4

So persecuted they the prophets -- And our Lord and the apostles. Being thus in good company in our experiences, we shall be in like good company when the Lord makes up his jewels. R2588:6

Which were before you -- We have reason to believe that the Master would fare no better in the world today than at his first advent, were he to appear as then. Q752:2

Ye are -- Even now. R2099:3*, 2073:2*

The salt of the earth -- Jesus and his higher law of love, in his own life and in that of his followers. R3736:5

A healthful, cleansing, preserving element in the midst of a world of moral decay and sinful pollution. R2073:2*, 1494:2*

The Christian has a special purpose in the world--to be a preservative power, to have antiseptic qualities, and to draw out all the good qualities of those with whom he is connected. R5426:5

Exerting an influence and power among men of a preservative kind, delaying, if not arresting, degrading tendencies. R4558:5

The preservative influence of God's people affects not only themselves, but spreads over a considerable space around them. R3736:6

A symbol of faithfulness and loyalty, and signifies a purifying and preservative quality that is a detriment to corruption. Q618:1; R5426:5, 5173:2, 4558:5, 634:1*

As a savory article of diet, it symbolized hospitality; as an antiseptic, it signified durability, fidelity, purity; as a preservative, it is a symbol of an enduring compact. R2099:2*, 84:6*

Saltiness from the Savior's teachings has a wide influence upon the world. Without it, corruption and a complete collapse would have come long ago. R5173:3

Civilization is merely the arrest of those elements of decay which are at work in the human family, a preserving or salting of the good qualities which have not yet become extinct. R634:3*

After the taking away of the salt class, putrefaction and disintegration will speedily follow. R4706:6, 5173:3, 3737:1, 2745:1; Q618:1
It will be in and through the glorified Salt of the Earth that the blessing will come, the stream of truth for human refreshment for 1000 years. (2 Kings 2:19-22) R5780:2

Have lost his savour -- That which constitutes the saints the salt of the earth is the fact that they have been salted with the truth. R634:5*
"Have salt [purity, righteousness] in yourselves" (Mark 9:50). If we have not the salt in ourselves, how can we be the salt of the earth? R2099:5*
How important that we not only have salt in ourselves, but that we continue to retain its healthful properties! R2099:5*

Good for nothing -- Absolutely useless except for its intended purpose. R5426:5, 4558:5

"Unto every good work worthless." (Tit. 1:16) R2517:3

Jesus made no attempt at a reformation of the apostate Jewish church. R778:1*

But to be cast out -- If we lose the holy Spirit, there is no way by which we could be renewed again. Q618:1

May picture the rejection of the nominal church systems. R778:4*

Castaways from divine favor. R2073:3*

Trodden under foot -- Destroyed. R634:6*

Ye are the light -- Greek, phos. The same word applied to our Lord. R2409:2

Synonym for truth and righteousness. R5038:1

The Lord was addressing the apostles in particular, and all "overcomers" of that time. R4992:3, 4746:2

You are now so illuminated by the truth that you yourself have become a living representative of it. R3243:2, 5129:2

By his spirit in us. CR313:1; R375:3 The Lord's light shone into a little corner of the world called Palestine, and from his lamp many followers have lighted their lamps. R3686:2, 627:2*

It is the light of God's truth, shining in our hearts, which shines out upon the world. E293

The light will become brighter in proportion to our realization of our own imperfections to the degree of our consecration to the Lord. R5129:3

The Church is now enabled to declare to the world the presence of Christ, the changes impending, and the wisest course to pursue. B141, 142

Light-bearers for the benefit of others--burning and shining lights, sympathetic and helpful lights. CR126:1

As children of the light, every day and year will see progress; their light will be shining more and more clearly and accomplishing the greatest good. R4189:6

Christian fellowship is thought to be one of the very best aids to maintaining the light of the Spirit. R5129:6

Although not yet as the sun, nevertheless luminous even now, and their light may shine within a smaller radius for the blessing of all who will receive it. R2099:6*

It would require the light of the Sun of Righteousness, Christ and the Church in glory, to enlighten the whole world. R5769:3

Continuing to shine in the world in the midst of darkness until the predicted night would come when the world that has loved darkness shall be overwhelmed by it. R1774:1

It is the light which shines from the true Christian which reproveth, condemns and opposes the darkness of this world. E293; R375:2

If we neglect the privilege of prayer, of study, or of fellowship with the Lord through failure to think of him, the illumination of the Spirit will grow dim. R5129:3

But if we should be seduced into worldliness by the spirit of the world, our light would be quenched or extinguished. E264; R371:6

Neither the philosophies of men nor their moral sentiments are light. The true light cometh down from above and only those begotten of the Spirit of the Lord have that light. R5099:6

Of the world -- Not directly, but by a reflex light--through those who possess it--the spirit operates upon, but not in, the world. R375:3; E293
Whatever light the world gets reaches them indirectly, as reflected from the children of God. R3646:3

Civilization is simply the indirect result of the measures of salt and light that have been in the world up to this present time. R2100:1*

Without the Gospel light shining from Jesus and his followers, the corruption of Christendom would be even worse than it is. When the lights have all been extinguished, the great time of trouble will follow.

R3736:6, 3737:1, 1774:1

A city--The Church as a whole. R4558:5

The New Jerusalem. R1494:5*, 1185:5, 421:6, 338:5

Set on a hill -- The Kingdom. R1494:5*

"Established in the tops of the mountains... exalted above the hills, and all nations shall flow into it." (Isa. 2:2) R421:6, 338:5

Cannot be hid -- Its glory shall lighten the whole world. R1494:5*, 421:6*

Light a candle -- The candle light the saints are holding up in the world is powerless to overcome the great mass of darkness. God, in his due time, will dispel the darkness of night by causing the sun of righteousness to arise with healing in its beams. (Mal. 4:2) NS88:3,4

He will test us and prove whether we are worthy to shine forth as the sun, enlightening the whole world in a manner with which our little lamps of the present time will in no sense compare. R3737:4

Under a bushel -- Its light would become extinguished. If light does not shine out, it will soon die out. R4558:6

By covering his light, one demonstrates lack of courage, of appreciation, of earnestness. R4967:5

We should not say, "We know not the man Jesus." He will withdraw the light from such a one. R4993:1, 4558:5

On a candlestick -- In a position where it may dispel as much as possible of the darkness of this world. R2099:6*

It giveth light -- The light is conspicuous because the darkness is general. R4993:2

Though the darkness recognizes the reproof of its presence, it comprehends it not. R375:4

In the house -- Our lights are to shine in the "household of faith." SM241:2; R5769:3, 4558:6, 4305:1, 4189:6

So that our own family, our own household, our neighbors, may see it burning. R4993:1

Matthew 5:16

Let your light -- Of the holy Spirit; its influence is Christianizing, civilizing, uplifting, and produces a regard for right and a respect for God. R4992:3, 4993:4

Not merely the message upon our lips, but also the influence which emanates from our daily lives. R4330:5, 4675:6, 4460:5

It is the duty of every child of God to be very active in the dissemination of the truth. R3243:3

The illumination comes, not only through the truth, but also through the begetting of the holy Spirit. R4746:2

The darkness "hateth the light." (John 3:19,20) R3686:2

So shine -- For the benefit of others, that they may discern what is the right doctrine. R4967:4, 4746:5, 4675:6

That the spirit of devotion pervade every family, every household, including the servants. R2989:3

Flash forth the truth into every nook and corner where dark creeds and black theories have so long lain. R825:6

In proportion as the true followers of Jesus have kept their lamps trimmed and burning, a measure of enlightenment has spread throughout the world. R3686:3

All men who are directly or indirectly in contact with these lights of the world have blessings in proportion to their preparation for them. NS294:2

That they may see -- That all those intimately associated with the body of Christ may be able to take knowledge of them, that they have been with Jesus. R4746:5

This text is not in conflict with that which says we are not to let our left hand know what our right hand does, not to do our good deeds to be seen of men. (Matt. 6:1-3) R4993:2

Your good works -- In accord with the Master's teachings. SM183:T; R4558:5, 4967:4; CR126:1

Your likeness to the character of the Lord. R4558:6

In our daily lives. R4967:4 Our daily walk and conversation in all the little things of life. R1464:2* Will be a reproof on the sins of the world without one word being uttered on the subject. OV155:3; R4746:5

Not carrying our Bibles in an ostentatious manner, but we are exhorted to show forth in our daily lives the lessons we learn from its precious pages. CR126:1

Whether they account for these works properly or evilly. R4746:5

Of some our Lord said that they confess with their mouths, but deny with their lives. Our whole lives are to be in conformity with the professions we are making. R4993:1

Glorify your Father -- By honoring the principles of righteousness as they see them exemplified in God's peculiar people. Recognizing that these are of God, that theirs is the ideal life, they glorify God. R4993:3

Some who see our good works will glorify God in the day of visitation even though they do not become followers now. R4746:6

This shining will have an effect upon the world, reproofing mankind and setting before them an example of better living, better thinking. R5057:2

"In the day of their visitation." (1 Pet. 2:12) SM153:1

Think not -- Jesus and his apostles expounded the harmony between Christianity and Judaism. R5006:2

To destroy the law -- The Jews reasoned that by promising a class everlasting life, even though they were unable to keep the Mosaic Law, was a setting aside of the Law, making void all the prophets. R5006:3,5,6
Moses' Law, the divine law given to Israel. R5006:2

We, under the new dispensation, are under the same Law, but with a higher definition, or explanation. R4226:4

Or the prophets -- The prophecies of selecting a priestly class are now in process of fulfillment; neither the Law nor the prophets are being ignored. R5007:1

But to fulfil -- Jesus was a Jew, and obligated to every feature of the Law. R4703:1

Jesus has been fulfilling the Law during the past 1800 years, as well as during his ministry. R5165:2

He fulfilled the Law Covenant--met all its requirements, and obtained its reward, life. That fulfilled it, for that was the end for which it was given. R1732:6

Only a perfect man could meet its conditions, thus proving that Christ's perfection was not altered by the fact that his mother was imperfect.

R777:1

But he no more fulfilled all the Law than he did all the prophecies. He fulfilled all connected with the sacrifice, and nothing connected with the Kingdom. HG55:6

Jesus will continue the fulfillment of the types of the law during the thousand years, until all is fulfilled at the close of the Millennial age.

R5165:2

The Gospel of Jesus magnifies the Jewish Law by admitting its righteousness, its reasonableness, and by admitting that the full fault is with humanity. R5006:3

One jot -- One iota, the smallest letter in the Greek alphabet. R52:3*

Realizing God's care in making the shadow should not only give us confidence in its correctness, but lead us to examine closely for the meaning of those shadows. T12

One tittle -- Fine point of a letter. The holy Spirit inspired, in many cases, the exact phraseology. R52:2*

Every good promise of the holy Scriptures will surely have fulfillment.

OV129:1

In no wise pass from the law -- The Law stands exactly as it was given, and applies only to those to whom it was given. R970:2

The strictness with which the Jews were obliged to obey the Law indicates the amount of reliance which can be placed on its numerous sacrifices and observances. R72:1; B174

The typical sacrifices continued until Christ died, for Jesus himself was under the law, a part of which he fulfilled. R5163:3

Note the remarkable similarity with 2 Cor. 3:11. (R.V.) HG584:3*

Till -- Our Savior did not say the Law should not pass away, but that it should not pass away until it was fulfilled. But he came to fulfill it, so if it was fulfilled in him, it has passed away. HG582:3*

The observance of all types must be kept up until their fulfillment at least began; for the keeping of a type is not the fulfillment of it. The fulfillment is reached when the type ceases, being replaced by the reality, the antitype. B174; HG55:5

All be fulfilled -- The Law was neither altered nor amended, but fulfilled and set aside, abolished by our Redeemer. R970:2

Referring not only to its covenant obligations, but that all the blessings expressed in it typically would also be sure of fulfillment on an antitypical scale. B174

Including the great Times of Restitution, typified by the Jubilee year.

B173,187; HG55:2

Then the ceremonial, or typical, features of the Law will pass away.
R1527:3

Whosoever -- In the Church class. Q423:1

Shall break -- If any of the followers of Jesus should violate the Ten Commandments and teach men to do so, it would manifestly be done through ignorance and misunderstanding, marking such as one of the least in the Kingdom, unfit for a position of prominence in the service of the Church.

Shall make little of any commandment of God. Q423:1

Whoever will go contrary to God's arrangements or will in any respect, we should thereby consider him less. Q423:1

Of these commandments -- The divine law is briefly summed up: "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart...And thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." (Deut. 6:5; Lev. 19:18; Matt. 22:37-39) R5359:6
The Ten Commandments are but the outer shell, as it were, of deeper sentiments. R5360:1

In other words, we understand the Master to be teaching that the Gospel is not out of sympathy with the Jewish Law. R5359:6, 1730:5

The new hope of Gentile Christians does not abrogate God's law, nor does it release them from the obligations of his law; but our imperfections are covered by Christ's merit. R5359:3

Shall teach men so -- By example or precept, what is not in fullest accord with the divine plan. F258; R5359:5

It is a responsible thing to be the mouthpiece of God, to make sure that not a word is uttered which would misrepresent the divine character and plan. F258; R2156:3, 1475:3

Those who hold and teach a measure of error when it was their privilege to have clear truth shall be called least in the Kingdom of heaven. R3243:6
"Be not many teachers." (Jas. 3:1, Revised Version) R2156:2

Shall be called the least -- Receive a lower position. F258; R5007:2, 5359:3

In the kingdom of heaven -- In the Church, the incipient Kingdom, the embryotic Kingdom. R5359:5

But whosoever -- Our Lord Jesus himself. R1730:5, 5359:5

Shall do -- Those who would keep the divine law most perfectly in heart and life would be most nearly copies of God's dear Son. R5359:5

"Love is the fulfilling of the law." (Rom. 13:10) R5359:6

And teach -- The Christian must study the Law, but he studies it as a shadow of better things, as typical of the blessings promised under the greater than Moses--Christ. HG582:5

Look out amongst you those who are walking the most in the footsteps of Jesus if you want to elect elder brothers and deacons in the Church. Q423:1

Matthew 5:20

Shall exceed -- To be accepted, his followers must be nearer right in heart, have more of the spirit of the divine law, than the Pharisees. R5007:4
The Church's covenant means more than merely the observance of the Law; it is a covenant to sacrifice; and justice, the divine law, could not demand sacrifice. R5006:6

Of the scribes -- They had the whole Law of God and claimed to believe and teach it; but they distorted it by their traditions and their ignoble, though whitewashed, characters. R3243:5

They were particular respecting the little requirements of the Law, but were careless respecting the spirit of love. This, Jesus termed hypocrisy. R5007:4

In no case enter into the Kingdom of heaven -- Not be fit for the begetting at Pentecost. We must distinguish between the embryo Kingdom at Pentecost and the glorious Kingdom of the first resurrection. R5007:4, 4559:2

In danger of -- Amenable to. R2601:5

The judgment -- The judges. R2601:5, 4558:6

Matthew 5:22

But I say -- Jesus, who understands the perfection of God's law, and how fully it will be defined and enforced in the Millennium. R2602:1

That the thoughts are to be considered as well as the deeds. HG304:3

Whosoever is angry -- Thereby disobeying the spirit of the command, Thou shalt not kill. R2601:6

In the heart, unexpressed. R4558:6

Hatred is murder, slander is assassination, and the destruction of a neighbor's good name is robbery and rapine. R2444:6

For one of the Lord's consecrated people to be even slightly angry would be a serious matter. R5007:4

Without a cause -- Malicious anger and vituperation shall be considered a violation of God's law under the New Covenant. R2601:6, 2249:2

Shall be -- Under the regulations of the Millennial Kingdom. R2601:5

In danger of -- Amenable to. R2601:5

As a violator of the Law, whose violation forfeited all right to life under the Jewish Covenant. HG304:3

Because the spirit of anger is that which, unrestrained, would lead to murder. R3254:1

The judgment -- The judges; a court of seven (some say 23) men, empowered to judge some classes of crimes. R2601:5

"I will restore thy judges as at the first." (Isa. 1:26) A294

His brother, Raca -- Villain. R2601:5

Blockhead. R4558:6

A slander is a thief according to worldly standards, stealing one's good name; according to Christian standards, still higher, slanderers are murderers. Thus the very suggestion of slander is to be shunned as of the spirit of Satan. (John 8:44) R3595:4

Of the council -- The High Council or Sanhedrin, of 71 men, the highest court of the Jews, for the gravest offenses; typical of the judges of the Millennial Kingdom. R2601:5, 4558:6

Thou fool -- A moral degenerate. R4558:6

Apostate wretch. HG304:4

If, aside from the Bible, one reaches a conclusion that another considers wholly illogical, neither should he think nor speak of the other as a fool, but should remember that all present knowledge is incomplete and our reasoning faculties at present imperfect. R1815:4

Danger of hell fire -- Of Gehenna fire. By the aid of brimstone, the bodies of specially detestable criminals were burned with the other refuse of Jerusalem in the valley of Hinnom, or Gehenna, adjoining the city. A living thing was never cast into Gehenna. The Jews were forbidden to torture any creature; thus Gehenna typified the Second Death. R2601:2-6, 5007:4, 4558:6; OV362:6; HG304:1; NS840:1

Dead bodies were cast into this valley with the filth of the city, for, in their estimation, they had no hope of a resurrection--a tomb being to them an emblem of a resurrection. HG304:3

The destruction of the body in Gehenna after death, figuratively, implied the loss of the hope of future life by a resurrection. R2601:6

The object of this burning in Gehenna was to make the crime and the criminal detestable in the eyes of the people, and signified that the culprit was a hopeless case. R2601:6

If one were angry enough to call a brother Christian "a fool" it would imply that he were in serious danger of the second death--Gehenna. R5007:4

An antitypical Gehenna outside the New Jerusalem for the offal and trash of humanity who will refuse all of God's favors, the Second Death. NS841:2

Gift to the altar -- Anything to offer to the Lord, of service, worship or thanks. R4077:5, 5938:6

Aught against thee -- It should be noted that the one addressed is not the brother trespassed against, but the trespassing brother. R1694:6

That someone has been wronged by you in thought, word or deed. R4077:5, 5939:1

Matthew 5:24

Leave there thy gift -- Do not think that it will be acceptable to God while in your hearts, or outwardly, you are practicing injustice toward others. R5939:1, 5007:4, 4559:1, 4077:5,

Be reconciled to -- Make amends to; apologize in full. R1694:5, 5939:1
Every moment of delay endangers your spiritual standing with the Lord.
R5007:5

Thy brother -- Explanations in full of whatever wrong you have done him.
R4077:6

And offer thy gift -- Assured that in such an attitude of heart the Lord will be pleased to accept your offering. R4077:6, 5939:1

Matthew 5:25

Agree with -- Appeal for mercy from. R1713:2

Admit that you have come short of the righteous requirements of the divine law. R1713:3, 4559:2

Thine adversary -- Israel's Law Covenant was really their adversary and condemned them all. R4559:1, 1713:1 Only the few agreed with the Law adversary. (John 1:12) R4559:2

The divine Law, which condemns all to death. R1713:3

Quickly -- Before final sentence is pronounced. R1713:2

Whiles thou -- The Jewish people. R1713:2

In the way with him -- While the offer of mercy is made to you as a nation, through faith in Christ. R1713:3

To get free from that Law obligation, a Jew would have to confess his shortcomings and accept the sacrifice of Christ. R4559:2

Lest at any time -- Those who did plea for mercy received Christ as the sent of God, the deliverer from the condemnation of their Law Covenant.
R1713:2

The adversary -- The Law, the demands of which you fail to meet, though you claim to meet them. R1713:4

To the officer -- To some power that will execute the penalty. R1713:4

Thou be cast into prison -- A position of disfavor. R1713:4

Nationally. Wrath came upon that people to the uttermost. R4559:2

Uttermost farthing -- The forfeiture of the chief blessing at first offered exclusively to the Jew. R1713:4

They were blinded and cast off from divine favor for a "double." R1713:2
By the end of the Millennium, Israel will have paid. R4559:2

If we have wronged a brother and not made it right, we will be obliged to suffer the full penalty of our neglect. R5007:5

Matthew 5:28

To lust after her -- Reckoning the intention for the act. R518:4*

To desire to do wrong and merely be hindered by circumstances, is in God's sight as serious, as criminal, as to have really done that wrong. R4020:4, 3254:1, 1726:5, 971:3

It is not only for the actual transgression that men die, but it is for the disposition to transgress. The inherited taint renders them unfit to live because with such a nature they cannot keep God's law. R527:2*

Hath committed adultery -- And he who loves and serves money and spends time and talent for it, more than in God's service, is an idolater. R971:3

If thy right eye -- A depraved desire as dear as the right eye. R2602:1

Pluck it out -- Gladly part with a pleasure or habit contrary to God's law, though it be as precious as a right eye or a right hand. HG304:5

Be cast into hell -- Greek, gehenna, utter destruction, the Second Death. R2601:3, 2602:3

Matthew 5:30

If thy right hand -- A depraved desire as dear as a right hand. R2602:1

Be cast into hell -- Utter destruction, as brute beasts. (2 Pet. 2:12) R2602:2; NS841:4

As the literal Gehenna was not a place of torment or grief, but represented utter destruction and hopelessness of those already dead who were cast into it, so must its antitype teach the same lesson. HG304:5

Matthew 5:33

By them of old time -- The traditions of the ancients. The fact that a matter is ancient is no positive proof of its correctness. R3737:2

Not forswear thyself -- The Law had something to say respecting the taking of God's name in vain, and tradition had modified the law and limited it to false swearing. R3737:3

Swear not at all -- The use of oaths and expletives implies that the simple statement of the user is not to be believed. Nothing in this would prohibit the taking of an oath or affirmation in court. R3737:5, 5020:2
The fact that one swears what he says is true implies that he does not expect his hearer to believe his simple word, and this in turn presupposes that his word ordinarily is not worthy of belief. R5020:3, 3737:5

Wherever oaths of secrecy are demanded it is safe for God's people to touch not, taste not, handle not--except as oaths are prescribed by public law. R1827:6

Matthew 5:35

Neither by Jerusalem -- Which will probably become the capital of the world. A295

Of the great king -- Jehovah. "His feet shall stand in that day upon the Mount of Olives." (Zech. 14:4) D647

Matthew 5:37

Yea, yea; Nay, nay -- Tell the truth! Be so truthful in all that you say that it will be unnecessary to swear to its truthfulness. R5020:3

Neither overstate nor understate the truth. R5020:3

Cometh of evil -- Of the Evil One. R3737:6

An eye for an eye -- Exacting justice of your imperfect fellows encourages an improper spirit in your own heart. R4559:3

Tooth for a tooth -- This law of absolute justice prevailed amongst the Jews, Romans and Greeks, and in some respects was more just than modern laws which enable the wealthy to escape by payment of fines. R3738:1

The way Israel applied this resulted in hardness of heart, a pitiless and merciless attitude. R4559:2

Strong characters to whom the truth appeals are inclined to carry out the law of Moses, but we must remember that it is not the time for us to judge and discipline the world. R5644:5

But I say unto you -- Pointing to the more excellent way--love. (1 Cor. 12:31) R4559:2

Resist not evil -- Do not retaliate. R3738:1, 5898:4

The Church is called out of the world. They are to follow in the footsteps of Jesus. They are to suffer injustice. Jesus gave himself up to suffer for the unjust. R5897:2

As followers of Jesus, we, like him, resign our rights rather than try to get them. To a certain extent we are to permit ourselves to be imposed upon. R5897:3,5

The other also -- In the indirect sense of not opposing the law; or, if smitten illegally, as were Jesus and Paul, by kindly expostulating with the evil-doer, for his own good. R2470:1, 3738:2, 4559:4

Our Lord, when unjustly sentenced, inquired respecting the justice of the matter. Paul fled some places when persecuted, and in other places appealed. R5897:6

Not literally, but in your heart, mentally. R4559:4

A figurative expression; willingness to have both cheeks smitten rather than to do injury to another. OV357:3

Our Lord, when on trial, was smitten, but did not ask to be smitten again. Figuratively he turned the other cheek, but not literally. R4559:4, 3738:2

Matthew 5:40

Will sue thee -- Has made up his mind to bring suit. R3738:3 Not that it would be improper to appeal for justice to the law; but, that when the law has decided the matter against us, we should submit. R5897:5

At the law -- By legal process. R2518:2

Lawfully, even though it may be unjustly. R1735:6; OV357:3

The follower of Jesus is to be thoroughly responsive to all government. R5005:5

Christians are to be law-abiding, whether they consider the laws just or unjust. OV357:3; R4559:4

If ever compelled by law to vote, it would be the duty of each to vote according to his conscientious judgment. R2052:6, 2053:1

If the coat were to be given freely for the asking, the injunction respecting the law suit to obtain it would be meaningless. R2518:3

Take away thy coat -- If no lawful redress can be obtained. R1735:5

Let him have -- We feel we should report a burglar to the authorities to shield the public and to check the evil-doer in his wrong course. R5898:1

Thy cloak also -- The revisers translated this to mean that if any one is disposed to go to law with you and take away your coat, that you should settle with him, even though it deprive you of your coat and cloak. R3738:3
We are to render up willingly all that the Court might decree, more rather than less. R2518:2, 4559:4; OV357:3

And whosoever -- Whatever magistrate or governor authorized by law. R3738:4

Shall compel thee -- Command you legally. R3738:4; OV357:4

We are to show our good will be doing a little more rather than shirk legal exactions or grumble. R4559:4

If compelled to enter the army, the Christian might properly request service as a non-combatant; but if required to kill, he is to obey God rather than men, and not kill. OV358:6

We have been wondering whether our earlier suggested course [the one in the preceding citation] is the best one, whether it would mean compromise. R5755:4

To go a mile -- Similar to the law under which Simon the Cyrenian was compelled to bear the cross of Jesus. R3738:4

Go with him twain -- Do not show a narrow, stingy spirit in complying with the law's requirements. R3738:5

Matthew 5:42

Give to him -- Not necessarily extravagant gifts, not all that the petitioner would desire. Judgment and discretion are to be used. R4559:4
The Lord's people might not thus amass as much money as others, but they would be laying up treasures in heaven. R4559:5

We cannot think that he meant that we should neglect the interests of our own homes and families in giving in to others, or in loaning to them. R3738:5

If an enemy demand of us our goods, we are to submit; but if so situated that we can resist legally, we are to resist any unjust demands, and compel a suit at law, submitting gracefully and heartily to its decision. R2518:3

That asketh thee -- Not that we should lend to anybody who asks for a loan of money or goods, but that we should not turn away from those in need. R4971:1

That demands your valuables. R2518:3

That would borrow -- Often the very best way is to lend him something, even if sure that he would not return it, for thus his coming again would be barred to some extent. Q135:3; R4971:1

Turn not thou away -- We should not turn away with a deaf ear from those in need. Q135:3; R4971:1

Do good and lend, hoping for no similar favor in return. R4559:5

Exercise a benevolent spirit, using the proper discretion and judgment. R3738:5

Ye have heard -- Tradition taught. R4559:5

Love thy neighbor -- The word "neighbor" signifies those who are near, and the Scribes and Pharisees were in the habit of applying this to those who were near in sympathy, in sentiment, in faith, in sectarian relationship. R3804:4

Our Lord points out that in merely reciprocating the love of others we would come far short of the standard he sets us. R3739:1

Hate thine enemy -- Directly contrary to the Mosaic Law which enjoined protection of an enemy's property. R3738:6

Love your enemies -- Be large-hearted and generous toward them, illustrated by David's forbearance toward Saul. R3239:6, 3738:6
As God loves the world--sympathetically. OV357:5; R4766:4, 5275:2
God loves his enemies: he provided a sacrifice for them and a reconciliation with himself. R5703:5 This love is that which ignores antagonism and animosities, and considers only the possibilities, the ways and means, for peace, reformation and salvation. R4766:4, 1955:6
Our hearts must be so full of love that not even an enemy could stir up in our hearts an evil or malicious sentiment. F372
If we have not yet attained this high standard, let us not be discouraged, but press onward that, as soon as possible, we may reach this point, which is the mark of perfected character. R2879:5
Not as you love the brethren, but so as to be ready and willing to do good for them. This is the mark of perfect love. F189, 371; R4470:2; OV357:5
If we have not reached the point of loving our enemies, we are not at the mark of the prize, because none having a lesser standard can be of the elect class at all. Q458:T; R3738:6
No one can win the prize unless he loves his enemies. R5953:1
Your enemies, not the enemies of another. Q260:5
In contrast with the spirit of the Holy (?) Inquisition. PD84/97
But all should hate injustice and be out of sympathy with those who oppress the weak and helpless. Q783:T
Bless them that curse you -- Greek, katara, kataraomai, signifies condemnation--to speak against, to speak evil of, to injure. R2443:3
Not in the oldest Greek manuscripts. R3738:6
Do good to them -- The best way to conquer an enemy is to convert him into a friend by kindness. R139:3*
Pray for them -- That we might be used in breaking the superstition upon them, that the eyes of their understanding might be opened. R5275:3; OV357:5
Manifest generosity of heart toward them. To attain this sympathy and generosity is part of our instruction in the school of Christ. R5125:4, 3739:1
"God forbid that I should sin against the Lord in ceasing to pray for you." (1 Sam. 12:23) R4201:2
Despitefully use you -- Never mind what a supposed enemy said or did. We are not living for ourselves but for the Lord. Q459:T

Matthew 5:45

Children of your Father -- If we are sons of God, we must have his Spirit, his disposition. R3738:6

When we get before our mind's eye the loving and true God as our ideal, we are more and more changed and transformed day by day as we discern our Maker's gracious character. R5474:6

"Like unto your Father"--tending to make the heart and mind more tender, more gentle and more forgiving toward all with whom you have to do. NS674:5

During the Dark Ages, many committed horrible atrocities in the name of religion, thinking that they were copying God--but they had been following demon-drawn pictures. R5474:3

And on the unjust -- God has done much for them, even though they are sinners. R5624:1

At great cost providing for their redemption and restitution. R1821:6

God is gracious, loving, merciful, kind, even to the unthankful, even to the unjust, even to sinners; so should we be unto all men as we have opportunity. R5474:5, 2032:1

All that can be made out of the present life and present unfavorable conditions, the world is welcome to. NS225:2

What reward have ye -- What merit is there in it? R1938:4

And if ye salute -- Extend the civilities of life. R3739:2

Matthew 5:48

Therefore perfect -- Nothing short of purity of heart, intention, will, can be acceptable to God. R5123:4, 5264:5, 5148:6, 5101:6, 4558:3, 3939:1; CR395:2; Q51:2

These admonitions apply only to those who are new creatures in Christ; it is a dark saying and needs to be spiritually discerned. CR391:6,4

We first reach perfection of heart intention; then we pass through experiences which crystallize our characters in righteousness. R5172:2, 4974:3, 4559:6

God has set no lower standard than absolute perfection, but he has provided for us grace, mercy and peace through Christ if we walk in his footsteps. R2587:5

Good heart intention is not sufficient. Our profession of pure heart and God-likeness must be tested. It must be developed to the point of fixity of character. R4558:3, 2250:6

The mark of Christian character is godliness, Christ-likeness, love. We must attain to the same character of love that God possesses and that was manifested by our Lord Jesus. R2754:1

However, we are to remember that we have the new creature in an earthen vessel. It is the new creature that must have the likeness of Christ.

Q51:2; R5264:5

We must have love, sympathy, and not merely justice. There is nothing of grace in the giving of justice; less than justice is wrong. But the Lord's people must be more than just. SM433:2

But God knows that we have this treasure of the new will in a mortal body which is imperfect. Through Christ he has made provision that every imperfection of our flesh may be forgiven. R5101:6, 4974:3, 4558:3, 3987:1, 3739:3

"Walk thou before me and be thou perfect." (Gen. 17:1) R3938:6

Even as your Father -- It was proper that our Lord should give us the perfect pattern, on the same principle that the teacher of penmanship furnishes the pupil with the best engraved specimens to copy. R3987:2, 3939:1, 3739:4; Q533:2

Poor results come from comparing ourselves with ourselves, and neglecting to keep constantly before our minds the perfect copy. R3739:5

God sets before us Himself as the grand copy that we are to follow after.

CR7:4,5; R5794:1, 5148:6; Q533:2; SM434:T

Not that Christians can be all that God's character expresses, but that this is to be their ideal or aim in life. OV367:3; R5794:1, 5336:5, 5123:4; CR391:6; SM433:2

There is no lower standard than that of perfection. It would not do for the Lord to say, Be ye slightly like the Father, or, Be ye nearly like Him. He must present the perfect standard. R5359:6; NS408:2

Are you like your Father? You are in some respects--in your mind. Are you in all words, actions and thoughts? No, but you are trying to get more and more of the character-likeness of God. Q246:4

God is love. The more we grow up into proper, spiritual love, the more we are growing up into the character-likeness of our Father. R5265:6; SM281:T

We are in danger of taking some brother or sister, and saying, I will be like him, or like her! Q533:2

It is a mistake to think that the Apostle Paul's standards for elders are to be taken literally, for no one would be found fully up to all the requirements. He has stated what the ideal elder would be. Q255:7, 248:5, 246:4

The Lord would develop in his consecrated people the spirit of the Father. R3353:3

Those who attain the character-likeness of Christ will have the character-likeness of the Father, of whom the Son is the express image. NS654:3

God could not set an imperfect standard; for Him to do so would mean His agreement, in measure, with sin. R3939:1, 3739:2

Is perfect -- God is the very personification of purity. R849:1

God's perfection is the standard. He cannot have one standard of perfection for you, another for me, and another for someone else. Q533:2

Matthew 6

Matthew 6:1

Your alms -- Charity. R5021:2

Your righteousness (Revised Version). R5021:2, 4559:3

To be seen of men -- If we are actuated by a selfish motive, if we are seeking show and applause or earthly gain, it cannot bring divine approval or blessing. R5021:2

Lest, while we continue to sacrifice or do any good work, we get to looking for human instead of divine approval. R955:2*

If you do good deeds for the approval of men, you will very soon get to doing only such deeds as are likely to bring their approval. R955:2*

There may be times and places where the giving of charity in the presence of others would be perfectly proper; the point is the motive actuating us. R5021:2

Have no reward -- None from God; they may or may not get the reward they seek, human praise. R4559:6

Matthew 6:2

Glory of men -- There are many enrolled in church membership who seek an earthly reward of Mammon, the praise and approval of men. CR16:5,4

Have their reward -- The publicity, the praise of men, which they sought. R5021:2, 5786:6

The subtlety of this temptation lies in the fact that those drawn into it imagine that, while they seek and obtain the praise of men, they also merit and obtain the favor of God. R955:2*

Doest alms -- Done from principle, love for God and his righteousness, love or sympathy for fellow man. R4560:1

Let not -- So quietly should this be done that those close to us in life might only by accident discover our generosity. R4560:1

When thou prayest -- He did not teach the world how to pray, but merely his disciples. R5021:3

Not only in sorrows, but also in joys; to give thanks, praise, worship and adoration. R5021:3

We need have no fear that he is too busy with other matters of greater importance, or that he is weary of our coming to him repeatedly with things of small importance. R1865:4

As the hypocrites -- Not meaning that all who dress peculiarly, who go to church, who pray in public, etc., are hypocritical. R4560:1

Matthew 6:6

When thou prayest -- Before whom should we pray? In secret; before believers (John 17); before believers and unbelievers (Luke 3:21); and in the public assembly of the saints (Acts 12:12). R3698:5, 2251:6
Neglect of prayer is sure to lead to leanness of soul and lukewarmness in respect to spiritual things--unfaithfulness, coldness, death. R2692:1
We have no sympathy with the custom of opening political conventions and legislative assemblies, schools or lodges with prayers. R2023:6

Into thy closet -- Going to the Lord in a formal manner, upon the knees, and in solitude at certain times. R5480:6

The secret place of prayer of the individual family or Church. F687
Our Lord's usual method was to go to the Father privately. R3351:3
This Scripture should not be taken too literally, for Christ prayed audibly in the presence of his followers on numerous occasions, and audible prayer in the Church was counseled by the Apostle Paul. R2252:1
Private apartment. R2649:3, 2501:5, 2023:2

Where no earthly eye will see and no earthly ear will hear. R2251:3
True prayer should be to the Lord, never to the public. Individual prayer, family prayer, prayer in the Church, is proper and is not considered public prayer in this sense of that term. R4560:2

Although fellowship in public prayer in gatherings of the Lord's people is distinctly approved. R5022:1, 2251:6

"The Lord's Prayer" was uttered in the presence of his disciples. It addresses "Our Father," requests forgiveness for "our sins" as "we forgive others." It is a sample of collective prayer. R2023:3

"And when he had sent the multitudes away, he went up into a mountain again to pray; and when the even was come he was there alone." (Matt. 14:23) R5379:6*

Though Jesus sometimes prayed with his disciples in their hearing, he was not content with merely these opportunities, but frequently sought the Father alone. R2649:3

To thy Father -- Only believers who have accepted Christ may approach God in prayer and call him "Father." R2252:3

"Whatsoever ye shall ask of the Father in my name he will give it you" (John 15:16); "No man cometh unto the Father but by me" (John 14:6). R2252:3

While Father Adam was created a son of God, he then had access to his Father. R2024:1

Jehovah is the only Father or giver of the Divine nature. God, the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, is our Father and hath begotten us. R297:1

Seeth in secret -- The discovery of X-rays makes this sound more plausible. R1935:1

"All things are naked and open unto the eyes of him with whom we have to do." (Heb. 4:13) R1935:2

When ye pray -- Should be to the Lord, never to the public; should be simple, earnest, and need not be long. R4560:1,2

Vain repetitions -- "Vain" because not based on the conditions necessary to acceptable prayer. R5311:1

Improper prayer. R3351:6

Formal requests for what we do not expect. R2005:4 Not only vain, unprofitable, but indicating a low degree of spiritual development, imperfect ideas respecting God, and an imperfect relationship with him. R2252:4

We are to recognize a distinct difference between vain repetitions of the heathen and "continuing instant in prayer," in "praying and not fainting." (Rom. 12:12; Luke 18:1) Q539:2

But we do right to pray, "Thy Kingdom come" week after week, year after year, century after century. To grow faint or weary in prayer would not be right. R5020:2; Q539:4

As the heathen -- With great supplications, as though their God was asleep or indifferent. R5219:3

With their praying wheels, Roman Catholics with their beads, and some Protestants with their long details of instructions to the Almighty. R2252:4, 5020:4, 5022:4; Q540:2,3

All the heathen or Gentiles who have not left the world and come into covenant-relationship with God through Christ. R5021:6

Their much speaking -- Prayer in private may be as long as we please; but prayer in public should be short and to the point. R5020:5

Evidencing ambition to be thought pious, effort to make an impression upon men rather than to hold communion with the Heavenly Father. R2252:3

His example of a prayer is brief. Nevertheless, in proportion as we feel the importance of the great work in which we are privileged to be co-laborers, our hearts should and will be drawn to seasons of spiritual communion. R2650:1

We have no sympathy with the custom of some of pretending to pray to God while really addressing the congregation. R2023:6

Therefore let us endeavor to present God's truth in all its native simplicity and beauty, and trust its inherent power to win its way in due time into every heart. R651:4*

Matthew 6:8

Your Father -- "God dealeth with you as with sons." (Heb. 12:7) The fact that we are called sons of God implies the beginning of a new life.

R5624:2, 5623:5

The multitudes were not to call God "Father," only those who were followers of the Lord Jesus. R5623:3

Neither a Jew, nor one of the world today, has a right to call God his Father, nor to think of Him as his Father. R5219:1

Jesus spoke in an anticipatory or prophetic sense as to their relationship with God. R5623:2

Knoweth -- We are not to tell God what we wish, but to give up our will, that His will be done. R5624:3

Our prayers are not to induce God to give us things He desires to withhold from us, but to secure the things He desires us to have and has promised to us. R2252:6

He has fullest knowledge of our needs. R5745:4

We do not need to take up in prayer all the affairs of the world and the affairs of the Church, to tell God about them and how they ought to be regulated. R2252:5

What things -- Some might declare that we should ask God for something definite, but God has said that we need not go into particulars. R5624:5

Whether you will be most profited by abundance of wealth or absence of wealth, in the possession of health or otherwise. R5624:3

Ye have need of -- The Lord does not say that his followers shall have as much of these temporary good things as others have. SM370:2

Present supplies and rations may be small; but oh, what riches of grace are in reservation for them that love God. NS466:5

If proud, experiences that would humble; if rude, experiences that would make more polite. R5219:6

If we need to be transplanted to another place, he can arrange it. R5991:2

Before ye ask him -- But he desires us to ask in order that we may realize our need of his aid and our dependence upon him and be brought into closer fellowship with him. R2252:5, 5219:3

To bring us into that attitude of mind and heart of readiness to receive his blessings. R5745:4, 5022:1, 5834:1

Therefore not asking for resuscitation or special strength as our Lord did not, but accepting such favors as the Father might grant to us unsolicited. R3718:2

As the Christian's experience grows, he comes more to the condition of heart where his prayers will be chiefly thanks for mercies and favors already received. R2252:5

After this manner -- Not a form to repeat, but merely an example of how to arrange our prayers. R4560:2, 5311:4, 5022:1, 4984:4, 3806:4, 3351:6

In a worshipful, reverent spirit. R3806:3

But not necessarily in those words. R4560:2

Note its brevity, its simplicity, its directness, its orderliness. R5022:1

The order of the prayer is beautiful--the chief thing is the glory of God and the outworking of the divine plan, then physical needs. R4560:2,4, 3807:3, 3352:1

There are seven petitions in what is commonly called the "Lord's prayer." R136:2*

Therefore pray ye -- Ye who are his sons, not "children of wrath" (Eph. 2:3) or "of your father, the devil" (John 8:44). R2252:6

There is a great blessing that comes from prayer; we are so constituted that reverence for God and desire for prayer are among the highest qualities of our nature. R5311:6,5

Not only should we have special seasons of prayer, but have the spirit of prayer in all of life's affairs. R5312:1

Prayer is a privilege. Jesus did not command his disciples to pray, nor did he even give them a form of prayer until they requested it. R5021:3

Notice that our Lord never taught the multitudes to pray, nor intimated that they should pray--even though the multitudes with whom he was in contact were nominally the people of God. R3805:2

Our Lord did not tell about how the world should pray. R5021:3

School children should not be taught to repeat the "Lord's prayer." R2023:6

Our Father -- The affection of a true father for his child, one of the most precious in the world, is used to illustrate the relationship of the Lord's consecrated to the Creator. R3352:1

"To as many as received him, to them gave he the privilege to become the sons of God." (John 1:12) R3352:1

Only the consecrated spirit-begotten can call God "Our Father." CR421:1, 499:5; R5022:1, 5833:5, 5834:4,5

We suppose that the children of believers, and tentatively justified believers not yet consecrated, would have the right of addressing the Redeemer in prayer. R3806:3; F681:3

The word "Our" implies a recognition that there are other sons who also have been adopted into God's family. R3805:5

While Jesus was here in the flesh, the disciples were sons in the prospective sense. R5834:4

No Jew then ever made use of such expressions; they were a house of servants. R5683:6, 3352:1

This prayer would assure the apostles that, though they were Jews, God recognized them now, not as servants, but as sons. R3352:1

The great Jehovah is the fountain of life. All life emanates from him alone. CR498:1

We may consider ourselves, in God's estimation, reinstated (through faith in Christ) to the original position as sons of God. R1864:6

Implies: (1) faith in the divine being; (2) realization of dependence on him; (3) faith in reconciliation through a Redeemer; and (4) realization that the Creator now accepts one as a son. R3805:3

Implies that the suppliant is on terms of intimate acquaintance with the great Creator of the Universe, so that he is welcomed into the divine presence and heart. R3805:3

Does not imply the fatherhood of God to all mankind. R2252:6

The prayer of the publican, approved by our Lord, did not address Jehovah as "Father," but as "God"--"God be merciful to me a sinner." (Luke 18:13)

R2251:3

They were to manifest their faith by calling themselves sons of God, though they did not really speak of themselves as sons of God. R5219:2

Some people use the words "Our Father" or "Our God" or "Heavenly Father" more frequently than would seem to be good form. It would sound better if they did not use these repetitions. R5020:4; Q539:6

Which art in heaven -- As the heavens are higher than the earth so are the Lord's ways and provisions higher than our conceptions; and in every way to be preferred. R3805:6

Hallowed be thy name -- Considering first the will and honor of God as superior to their own and every other interest. R3352:3

Reverence for God should be first in all our thoughts, but is losing ground everywhere in our day, even among the Lord's true people. R3352:2, 4560:4, 5624:5

This expresses adoration, appreciation of divine goodness and greatness, and a corresponding reverence. R3352:2

The desire that the great name of God be hallowed by all, and therefore by the petitioner also. R4560:4

Adored, honored. God's name represents His character, His Kingdom, His personality. R5022:2

Profound reverence for the glorious character and attributes of God. R1864:6

His name stands for everything that is just, wise and loving. R3806:4

Matthew 6:10

Thy kingdom come -- Our Lord taught "the Kingdom of Heaven is at hand."

The Kingdom in its embryo condition was then at hand, but the Kingdom is yet to come in glory and power. R1908:3, 2231:1, 4410:4; B14

The Kingdom of God's dear Son--the Millennial Kingdom--the Mediatorial Kingdom. NS729:5, 744:1

With the establishment of that Kingdom will come the blessing of the world through the Mediator and the New Covenant. NS557:6

"My Kingdom is not of this world (age)." (John 18:36) NS623:6

Messiah's Kingdom has various stages of inauguration. First, in his parousia, the resurrection of the sleeping saints; next, his dealing with the living members of his body and their glorification; then the dominion of the world, revealed in a great time of trouble. Thus, the Kingdom of Messiah will be born in a terrible travail, after which "The desire of all nations shall come." (Hag. 2:7) Ciii,iv

Christ has not yet come into this Kingdom for which he taught us to pray. NS575:6

Very soon to be answered; very soon they, the Christ, shall be associated in his Kingdom and sit upon his throne. NS191:6

Implies: (1) that it is not already here; (2) that it is a part of the divine provision; and (3) that it is one of the chief desires for God's people and for humanity. HG438:2

The establishment of the long-promised Kingdom of Messiah is just before us, and is now in progress. B363

An acknowledgment that God's will is not done on earth, that his Kingdom has not come to earth as yet. R2253:1, 5761:6, 5710:4, 4786:2; Div; NS691:2

An acknowledgment that he has faith in the divine promise that a heavenly Kingdom shall, in God's due time, be established in the earth. R2253:1

It cannot be established until the gathering of the elect has been accomplished. CR21:5; Q523:5; NS664:3, 831:4; HG234:6, 178:5, 145:3, 115:2

The complete overthrow of all human government will open the way for the full establishment of the Kingdom. Biii

It began to be established in 1878 AD. R1908:3

While continuing to pray, let us continue to labor in character-preparation that we may be found worthy of a place in that Kingdom. R5762:2, 3352:4

Meantime the great King is selecting the Bride class to be joint-heirs with his Son in that Kingdom. NS465:6, 803:2, 661:5

Longing for the Kingdom that will bless the world, they also long for the promised privilege of being joint-heirs with their Redeemer. R3806:5, 3352:4; NS451:2, 389:1, 235:1, 141:5

This thought will make all the afflictions and trials of the present time seem to us light afflictions. R3352:4; NS236:2

That it might come as quickly as would be in harmony with the divine program; not implying impatience, nor a desire to hasten matters before the divine time, but an interest in the gracious things of the Father's plan. NS683:3

Not a demand; rather an acknowledgment of faith in the divine promise that a heavenly Kingdom shall in due time be established in the earth. R2253:1, 2005:1

All blessings are of the Father. E45

Realizing that his Kingdom is the very thing the whole world needs, and that he has promised that it shall come. R5624:5

When the regeneration of the world will be the great matter in hand. NS102:3, 184:5

As God, his glory and honor, are to be first in the minds of his children, so their next thought should be for the glorious Kingdom which he has promised shall bless the world. R3352:3

Next in order we acknowledge the divine rule, authority. This means that our hearts are submissive to the will of God. R5022:2

Not merely saying, "Thy Kingdom come," but waiting for it and expecting it. R5624:6

Nearly all of the Lord's parables and teachings related to this Kingdom. NS606:3, 627:1

Present troubles are the harbingers of this Millennium. NS187:6, 672:5

Its worldwide dominion is signified by the stone which struck

Nebuchadnezzar's image. NS27:6, 57:5

The panacea for every ill and trouble, not only for ourselves, but for all men. R3352:3, 5602:1; SM103:1; Ciii

Both Jews and saintly Christians still recognize that Messiah's Kingdom is the need and hope of the world. OV156:2

The coming of a great earthly king to a city is the signal for a general cleaning up everywhere. NS852:6

If Christendom had heard the message of the antitypical Elijah, they would be ready to welcome his Kingdom; they would have been praying from the heart what some of them have been praying from the lips. NS143:5

Divine love now permits human pride and selfishness to wreck present civilization because divine wisdom and love, in "due time," will take advantage of the wreck and the lessons it will teach by establishing upon the ruins of present institutions the Kingdom of God's dear Son. NS13:5

The object of which will be that the world may have a trial to determine whether, with the knowledge and experience then granted, they will choose righteousness and the reward of eternal life, or sin and its penalty, Second Death. NS860:2

Not such a reign which papacy recognized as the millennial past, nor the moderate Protestant view that Christ established his Kingdom at Pentecost. HG271:1-3

While appreciating our glorious land and its wonderful blessings, let us rejoice that a still better government and still more favorable conditions are parts of the heavenly promise to the world of mankind. NS665:6

Thy will -- In respect to all of life's affairs. SM371:T

Not now being exerted or manifested in earth's affairs. R1781:2,5

Implies that we have given up our own will. R5833:5, 3352:4

It is not for us to seek to have our wills done in heaven and earth, but rather to learn the imperfection of our judgment and pray, "Thy will be done." NS648:2

Messiah's reign will be a Monarchy, a very exclusive and aristocratic Monarchy. It will be the most autocratic--theocratic; the will of its subjects will not be consulted in the slightest particular. OV191:2

Men sometimes mean, "Approve my will on earth as I approve your will in heaven"--deceiving themselves. NS673:5

Be done -- In respect to all of life's affairs. SM371:T; CR51:1
Right and truth must and shall prevail when our Kingdom has been established, however feeble now may be the voices lifted in their defense. R3068:4

Confessing appreciation of the fact that present evil is not of his will, nor of his government. R1781:6, 1273:4

Wishing that this will rule in his heart to the best of his ability in his earthly condition, even as he hopes to have it perfected in the Kingdom. R3352:5

If we pray this, we should live accordingly. C22

We should have in mind God's promise that eventually, through Messiah's Kingdom, sin and death would be overthrown and "every knee would bow and every tongue confess to the glory of God." R5049:3

The declaration is that Messiah shall reign until he shall have put down all insubordination. (1 Cor. 15:25,26) OV192:2

It will take the whole thousand years of Christ's reign to have the will of God done on earth as it is in heaven. CR291:5; R5768:5; SM502:1; Q6:T; OV192:3

In earth -- The new earth will be the new social order which will come into being at that time under the direction and guidance of the new heavens. PD94/108

We are not to feel careless respecting the interests of the world in general. NS644:2

Many Christians seem to have forgotten the import of these words. B13

As it is in heaven -- The new spiritual heavens of the future will be Christ and the Church in heavenly glory and power. PD94/108

Is God's will in Christendom done "on earth as it is in heaven"? Surely not. HG272:2

None will claim that conversion of the whole world to the present standard of Christendom would answer this petition. C178

Messiah's Kingdom will insure that, to all eternity, God's will shall be done as perfectly in this earth as it is now done in heaven. OV341:8, 247:1; Civ

Matthew 6:11

Give us -- There are occasional scriptural dyspeptics who eat and work not; but the difficulty with most professing Christians is that they eat not at all, or else eat so sparingly that they are dying of starvation. R23:5*

God knows what we have need of; it is not for us to specify, spiritual or temporal food. R5624:5, 4560:4, 5022:4

Showing our reliance upon him for that which he has promised us. R4984:4

Should divine providence fail to make provision, the believing soul is to recognize that it is not from oversight or lack of power, but because divine wisdom sees best thus to deal with us. R5022:4

This day -- Not for a superabundance laid up for many days ahead. R2253:2
We cannot understand how any Christian dare neglect to render thanks for daily food. Those who do neglect this propriety are great losers thereby. R2643:6

Our daily bread -- "Our needful bread." (American Revision)
R3806:5

The necessities of life, temporal and spiritual. R3806:5; CR468:3
It is the new creature that is offering this petition; implying that it is the nourishment of the new creature that is chiefly under consideration. R3806:5

The thought seems to be that of continual dependence upon the Lord, day by day, for the things needed--food, raiment, all things necessary. R3352:5
We are to ask especially for the spiritual bread, praying only incidentally for the earthly things, because we have consecrated our bodies to God. R5745:5, 3806:5, 2253:3

It is certain that we need spiritual bread, the truth, constantly, in order that our spiritual life be sustained, as that we need natural bread daily to sustain our physical life. R136:3*

We are not to ask for delicacies. R5311:4, 5833:5, 3806:5, 3352:6, 2253:2, 2005:2

Not specifying what would be most pleasing to our palate. We are to leave that part to him, merely acknowledging that we are dependent on him for the necessities of life. R5991:5, 5745:5

The most that we should do is to make mention to him of those promises for temporal provision and of our trust in them. R5205:5

We are to eat with thankfulness, even if only bread and water. R5311:3, 4913:5, 5202:4

And not murmuring, as the Israelites of the Exodus, stipulating that they wanted something as good as the flesh-pots of Egypt. R4012:2

It is improper for saints to ask alms. R4101:5*

Matthew 6:12

Forgive us our debts -- Our trespasses. F403

Not Adamic sins, but personal transgressions. R3806:5, 5006:1, 5089:3, 5022:4, 3353:1; Q649:2

God did not forgive original sin, but provided a Redeemer. R4428:4, 4560:5, 3806:6

Those which are ours after we have become new creatures in Christ. R3806:6
Shortcomings, imperfections, etc., through failure to do the Lord's will the best we know how, the culpability being proportionate to the amount of knowledge enjoyed. R5962:3, 4560:5, 5311:4; Q649:2

To petition the Lord for forgiveness of sins implies that we are, at heart, opposed to the sins. R3353:1

This petition signifies that we recognize that the robe of Christ's righteousness granted to us has become spotted or sullied, and that we desire it to be cleansed. R3353:2

In so doing we learn: (1) to keep track of our blemishes; (2) to be reminded of our dependence on the merit of our Savior; and (3) to be merciful, compassionate and generous toward our debtors. R3807:1

Seeking meanwhile to minimize these trespasses, to be so faithful that these will become daily less and less. R4684:1

Divine mercy is pleased to remit the guilt of all unintentional sins. R4560:5

As we forgive -- The very essence of Christian principle is love, sympathy, and the forgiveness of the faults of others. We may not express forgiveness until forgiveness is asked, but should always be in a forgiving attitude. R2253:3,4

Let every Christian, in approaching the throne of grace, daily inquire of his own heart, whether or not he has forgiven those who are indebted to him. R2253:4

Only the merciful shall obtain mercy; only the forgiving shall be forgiven. R5022:4, 5004:1, 4585:3, 4560:5, 4428:4, 3803:1

Tending to make our hearts and minds more tender, more gentle, more forgiving toward all with whom we have to do. NS674:6

As we are imperfect and cannot keep the divine law, so likewise others are imperfect. R3353:3

If fully appreciated, it would influence God's sons to be kind and generous in thought as well as in word and deed. R2005:2

Does not imply that we should pay no attention to the transgressions of others against ourselves, that we should not recognize offenses. R2253:4

If, at heart, we treasure up resentment against others, we shall not be forgiven ourselves. R5123:3, 5624:5

The amount of one's likeness to the Lord, in love, will be shown by his mercy and generosity of thought, word and deed toward his fellows. F404

Our debtors -- Those who trespass against us. R3353:3

Not the forgiveness of financial indebtedness and destruction of our bank account books, except for the debtor willing, but unable, to pay. R2253:4

Matthew 6:13

Lead us not into -- Abandon us not in (Diaglott). R2005:3, 3716:1

To abandon us there, to leave us in our own strength. R5022:5, 3939:5

Not signifying that we fear God will tempt us, but that we entreat him to guide us so that no temptation come upon us too severe for us. R3353:4

(Merely), but (also) deliver us from the evil one. It is a part of the divine arrangement to bring us, or permit us, to be put into positions of trial or testing. R2253:5

God is permitting the adversary to bring strong delusions upon the world and nominal church because it is time to completely separate wheat from tares. R3353:5

"God tempteth no man." (Jas. 1:13) R2253:5 Temptation -- How foolish to pray thus, and not watch! R3939:5

While we must be brought into positions of trial and testing, we may well pray not to be abandoned there, not to be left to our own strength.

R5022:4, 4907:5

Deliver us from evil -- From the Evil One, who is ever ready to attack us to the extent that the Lord grants the opportunity. R3807:2, 5022:5, 5311:4; NS94:6

The Evil One and his helpers are more than a match for humanity. NS127:1
Temptations from those with whom we have contact, the powers of evil, of the air, of our own flesh. R5833:5

There was never a time when there was greater need of this petition than at present. R3353:5

As we thus pray, we surely will labor in the same direction. R3353:5

If the Lord shall not see best to grant a prompt response, we may be sure it is not from lack of interest in our welfare. Let faith hold her anchorage that the time will not be long until the Millennial Kingdom, when the great adversary will be bound and deliverance granted, not only to ourselves, but also to all. R2653:4

For thine is the kingdom -- These words, to the end of the verse, are not in the oldest Greek manuscripts, the Sinaitic and the Vatican. R2253:6, 5022:5, 1865:3, 710:6, 278:2

The Kingdom or rule of the present time is not of God. Properly omitted by the Revised Version as being no part of the Scriptures. R5022:5

Added at a time when an earthly exaltation of the Church had led some to believe that the Papal glory was the glory of God's Kingdom. R2005:3

Matthew 6:14

If ye forgive -- Like the father of the prodigal, to see the repentant one coming in the attitude of humility will touch our hearts and prompt us to go out part way to meet him, to forgive him, to greet him kindly and put on the robe of fullest fellowship and brotherhood. R4978:4, 2296:4
God will be no more generous to us and our imperfections than we are generous toward our brethren in their imperfections. R4651:4

In order to give us an education in forgiveness and sympathy toward the world. R5275:2

We are too inclined to look only at the justice of God's character, copy it and deal severely with our debtors; he would make it clear that the grandest elements of his character are love, sympathy, kindness and forbearance. R4651:4

Also forgive you -- God is ready to forgive the loving and generous who are seeking to copy his character. R4651:4, 2586:6, 2587:1

Only the merciful shall obtain mercy; and if we have not mercy at the hands of the Lord, all is lost. R2587:1
What an incentive to sympathy and generosity and forgiveness is here!
R4560:5

Matthew 6:15

If ye forgive not -- We should not insist upon having from others abject acknowledgment of everything that is wrong. R5275:1, 4978:4
We should always exercise forgiveness and good will toward all, no matter how serious the trespass against us. R4978:4
Forgiveness "in your hearts" is the condition which should always obtain there. We should never harbor any other feeling no matter how seriously they have trespassed against us. R2296:4
Neither will -- None will gain a place in the Kingdom class, in the Bride Class, except they have this forgiving quality of love. R3353:4
Your Father forgive -- Forgive now, but blot out in the First Resurrection. R3729:6, 2970:5
The Lord declines to forgive our trespasses unless we exercise the spirit of mercy toward our fellowmen. "Blessed are the merciful, for they shall obtain mercy." (Matt. 5:7) R4558:2

Matthew 6:16

When ye fast -- Fasting, under the Jewish dispensation, was a symbol of self-denial, and sacrificing under the Christian dispensation. R955:3*
We have good New Testament precedent for the observance of literal fasts. R2022:5
Not a disapprobation to fasting. To the contrary, he is endorsing it as a propriety. R4858:1
Fasting is specially commendable to the Lord's people when they find themselves lacking in spirituality. R4858:5
To be seen of the Lord and not of man. R4858:2
Subordinating the flesh that one might be spiritually strengthened. R4858:1
It would be a very good thing for all of the Lord's people to follow the Lenten custom of fasting, doing so with as little outward demonstration as possible. R4858:5
A very plain diet, if not total abstinence, for a season. R4858:6
But not as -- There is a danger along this line in the observance of the Lenten season by some, but it may not be hypocritical with all. R4858:5
The hypocrites -- Drawing near to the Lord with their lips, while their hearts are far from him. R4858:4
Sad countenance -- Not with long faces to show piety, but cheerfully. R4858:1

If their fasting had brought them nearer to their Heavenly Father, it should have had a happifying effect, which would have shown itself in the countenance. R4858:2

Disfigure their faces -- Giving them a drawn appearance. NS154:3

That they may appear -- Do not go about with a sad countenance telling everyone that you are carrying a very heavy cross. That is not presenting your sacrifice to the Lord, but before men. R955:4*

Have their reward -- The praise of men. R5786:6

They are getting the approval of the ignorant and easily deceived. NS154:3
Let us take heed that we do not barter away the heavenly approval, crown and glory for the mean rewards of this present life. R955:6*

Wash thy face -- Bear the cross cheerfully, with a hearty good will. R955:5*

Matthew 6:19

Lay not up -- It requires considerable determination to draw the line and say to business and the various responsibilities pressing upon us, Thus far shalt thou go and no farther. R732:4*

Trust in the Lord and don't put all your confidence in banks, insurance companies or stock exchanges. Q344:4

Treasure upon earth -- Pleasure, delight, joy, comfort are all suggested by the word treasure. Our thoughts, hopes and plans center there. Our treasure is the inspiration of our lives, the incentive to energy, perseverance and endurance for the hope which it enkindles. R5862:1
Earthly things are to be merely servants always ready for use, for any emergency. R4567:2

Only by making wealth a treasure and setting upon it inordinate desire can one become miserly or very rich. R4567:2

None of these earthly possessions can any longer be their treasures or in any sense stand in competition with the Lord. F574

Christians have renounced the earth. OV357:6

Doth corrupt -- Death and corruption touch everything earthly, under present conditions. R4567:1

Wealth may vanish in an hour; fame may change to censure at the caprice of fickle, public sentiment; friends may prove untrue or even treacherous; even the love that glowed on the home-altar may flicker and become uncertain or extinct. R1820:2

The treasures of wealth, fame, social distinction, houses, lands, friends, home, family, power and influence are all subject to change and decay. R5862:1

Matthew 6:20

But lay up -- Signifying so loose a handling of worldly riches as would hinder the accumulation or preservation of great wealth. R4567:2

Our heavenly treasures may be augmented by special zeal and faithfulness under the peculiar trials of the present time. R5863:2

By buying back moments and hours from worldly matters, social frivolities and various time-killing devices, we are getting an excellent bargain.

NS468:6

Treasures in heaven -- A future reward. OV357:T

The chiefest of all treasures is the personal love and friendship of God and Christ. R5862:4, 1820:3

The honor and privilege of our calling to be "the Bride" should make that the supreme treasure, in comparison with which every other treasure is insignificant. R874:3, 2628:2

Treasures of friendship, of love, of esteem for the sake of our works, of experience that will serve us eternally, of wisdom that will enrich us forever, of divine approval. R1514:1*

Including the marks of just approval and distinction, treasures of mind and character and all the true and noble friendships which have been founded in truth and righteousness. R5863:2, 1821:2

Treasures of mind and character; for nothing that is good, true and worthy of preservation shall be lost. R1821:5

Doth corrupt -- Neither the lapse of time nor the exigencies of circumstance will be permitted to wrest these from us. R1821:5

Matthew 6:21

Where your treasure is -- A treasure is something in which we take special pleasure and delight. It is in our thoughts, plans and hopes, an inspiration to our lives and an incentive to energy. R1820:1, 874:2

That which costs us most and which we give most for, we love most; and thus it is proved to be our treasure. R874:6

Will your heart be -- Those who set their affections chiefly upon earthly things can with difficulty avoid the snares that go with them. R5323:1

Not that a man may not love his wife or children, or appreciate the beauties of nature, but these can no longer be his treasure in competition with the Lord. F574

"Each heart will seek and love its own; my goal is Christ, and Christ alone." F573

Matthew 6:22

Thine eye be single -- To the Lord's glory. R1849:4

Signifying singleness of purpose, of heart intention toward God; clearness of spiritual vision depends upon this. R4445:1, 4567:4

Adjusting your vision to see the great value of the future life in comparison with the present one, and setting your affection there. R4567:2

We have two eyes of our understanding--one a present and one a future outlook, an earthly and a heavenly view. It is important that we get these rightly adjusted to see matters in their true light. R4567:2

Some are cross-eyed, endeavoring to serve two masters, and to walk according to two standards. R4445:4

Full of light -- We have clearness of spiritual vision in proportion as we have loyalty to the Lord and the enlightening influence of his spirit of holiness, the spirit of love. R4445:2

The light -- The holy Spirit, the way of truth. R5099:6, 4399:1

We should let it shine upon men; some who once hated the message have thus been convinced. R4746:3

In thee -- Refers only to the Church class. R5099:6

Originally man had a clear eye, mental as well as physical. R5797:5

Be in darkness -- If the light of the holy Spirit of our begetting becomes extinguished. R5099:6, 4445:1, 371:6; E264, 294

Implying unfaithfulness. R3437:4

Showing the importance of proper spiritual sight in order to discern truth clearly. R5797:5

Calling darkness light and light darkness. (Isa. 5:20) R1800:4

Blessings, misused, may be turned into a curse. R1850:6

By reason of sin, man's discernment of right and wrong have been more or less blurred. R5797:5

The darkness not only affects people intellectually, but morally, blunting their sense of right and wrong. R4586:4

In certain instances, God will force people out of the light into the "outer darkness" common to the world in general. Disloyalty to the Lord tends in this direction. R4445:2

How great -- Both to yourself and to the world, from whom the light is thus obscured. E294

There are different shades of darkness. R5099:5

It would be better not to have known the way of truth than to have departed from the holy command. R4399:1, 3786:1

Is that darkness -- The influence for evil of such an enlightened one, sanctified by the truth and then seduced by Satan, is more than doubled. E294

Such a mind will be in a worse condition than that of a worldly mind. Having lost the fear of man, if they lose also the mind of the Lord, they have no fixed principle to govern their course. R5100:4,2, 5797:5,6, 4567:3,4, 4446:1, 4445:3, 4399:1

If any fail to go on in the development of the spirit of love, they will surely retrograde. R4445:6

Comparable to re-entering a dimly-lit room from one that is brilliantly lighted; the room seems darker than when we left it. R5100:2

A darkness that will only become the more intense as one slips and slides along the backward track. R3103:5

He loses all knowledge of the "mystery"--the peculiar relationship existing between Christ and the Church. (Eph. 3:3-6) R5100:2

Matthew 6:24

Serve two masters -- Dividing the interests between God's affairs and the affairs of self--half-hearted service. R5666:3

"A double-minded man is unstable in all his ways." (Jas. 1:8) C221

No one can possibly render full service to two opposing masters. R5666:2, 5344:2

"This one thing I do." (Phil. 3:13) He concentrated his time, his thought, his energy, upon this one object or goal. HG453:2

Whoever divides his heart, whoever attempts to serve the interests of several equally, will surely fail. HG453:3; NS617:2

"His servants ye are to whom ye render service." (Rom. 6:16) If our lives are in harmony with sin and unrighteousness, we are not on the Lord's side but on the devil's side. NS368:2

No two interests are so completely one that the service of either would not more or less detract from the service of the other. R5344:2

Folly consists in supposing that one can win the world's prizes of honor and wealth, and at the same time run faithfully for the great prize of glory, honor and immortality. C221

While we are not to do anything contrary to the divine law, yet we are to serve our earthly masters faithfully. They have purchased our time, or a large measure of it. R5666:6

Despise the other -- Such a half-way course fails to meet the world's approval and to gain the advantages of this present life. If we believe it would pay best to serve mammon, then we should serve mammon with all our hearts. HG453:3; NS617:2

Ye cannot serve God -- Man was originally God's servant, naturally so. R5666:2

Only a few now are properly fearing and serving the Lord. NS396:6; CR9:3
But merely use mammon and the advantages of life as special assistances leading on to God. HG453:4; NS617:3

And mammon -- The mammon principle, the selfish principle, is of Satan. R5344:5

There are two kinds of love in the world--love for the world versus love for God. The two are opposites to such a degree that they cannot be blended. We must be on one side or on the other. HG551:1

Mammon was the name of an ancient Syrian god--the god of riches, of cupidity, the impersonation of worldliness. R5896:5

Mammon's empire is the world: it is Confucian, Mohammedan, Greek Catholic, Roman Catholic, Episcopal, Presbyterian, Methodist, according to the locality and influence. It is the ideas of the majority, and too wise and crafty to be irreligious. CR9:3; NS397:1

The spirit of the world, selfishness, avarice, and love of wealth. R5896:5
Sectarianism, the fear of man that bringeth a snare. CR9:5

Earthly advantages and comforts, the attainment of which appears to be the main object in life; in Christendom. R2259:1

Those who serve mammon get the best in the political, ecclesiastical, social and financial spheres. R5344:3

The majority are serving mammon, seeking to have its approval and emoluments. CR9:3

Worldly wealth. T93

The Balaam spirit; to be a servant of God and seek the rewards of an opposite course. R5323:1

Typified by the golden calf made by Aaron. R3047:4, 1836:1

Wherever the love of money or honors or luxuries becomes the ruling passion in those who are professedly God's people, it has usurped God's place. Such are idolaters. R2459:5, 1836:1

Matthew 6:25

Take no thought -- This does not mean that the Lord's followers are to be negligent about their appearance, or the provision of food; but, realizing that luxuries may not be the best for them, they are to be content with such things as they have. R5220:1,2, 873:3

Fear and anxiety are amongst the most serious foes of our human family; they produce nervous exhaustion and are very injurious to health. R5874:3

We should recognize a wide difference between carelessness and anxious care. Joseph in Egypt laid up wheat in plentiful years to make provision for the seven years of famine. F573

There is a carefulness which is entirely proper, yea, necessary, on our part, but not this extreme worry, the inability to enjoy today because of fears respecting tomorrow. R5874:6, 4567:5, 2488:2, 873:2,3

Not that they should live from "hand to mouth" and be utterly regardless of the future. F572

Having brought children into the world, it becomes the duty of the parents to see to their reasonable and proper establishment in it. F578; R874:1

For your life -- Greek, psuche, soul, being. E335

What ye shall eat -- He spoke generally to the poor, and the poor in Palestine and other Eastern countries find it very difficult to obtain food and clothing. R5990:5, 5220:1

Eating, drinking and dressing seem to be the most engrossing thoughts of both rich and poor. R5220:2

We should be ready to share our last loaf or last dollar with any more needy than we. R873:6

Is not the life -- Our eternal life. If wise, we will seek the future life at any cost, at any sacrifice of the present one. R4567:4

More than meat -- He would have us absorbed in heavenly things; and to do this he sees that we must be freed from distress of mind with reference to earthly things. R873:3

Matthew 6:26

They sow not -- They know not how to sow or reap, or the lilies how to spin. They get their food and the lilies their glory in God's appointed way for them. So man must get his food in God's appointed way for him. R2804:6*, 2488:2

Feedeth them -- We should consider our Heavenly Father's provision for the fowl of the air and realize that he provides for our best interests also. R4567:5

Better than they -- Will not God much more care for us who have become his children through faith in Christ? R4567:5

Matthew 6:27

Can add one cubit -- Let us realize our own littleness and look rather to the Lord for the things of the present as well as the future life. R4567:5

Matthew 6:28

Consider the lilies -- Learn of the Creator by the things created. R3313:1

A common reddish flower, not the kind generally termed lilies, but very beautiful. R5875:1, 5991:1

Our Lord, as was his custom, drew an illustration of something familiar to all his hearers. R5990:2

Their beauty teaches us that the Lord has a deep appreciation of the beautiful, and that God is abundantly able to produce the beautiful without our aid. R3313:2

The bulb is continually sending up nourishment to its stalks; not idle, but merely exercising its functions by the laws of its nature. R5220:4

Not a hot-house plant, dependent upon some horticulturist; but a flower from the field, growing because the great Protector has provided for its interests. R5220:4

The lily would always have a humble place; it would never be great like a tree. So it is with us here in the flesh. R5875:4

God's care over a simple flower is a reminder of his greater care over his own people. R5990:2

The heart that fails to consider the little things is hindered from a proper appreciation of God and his plan. R5220:5

How they grow -- In a very reasonable way, without unnatural, unusual stress. It does the best it can wherever it happens to be and develops grace and beauty. R5990:6, 5875:1

The lily has a right to use everything within its power for its own nourishment. So it is our right and duty to use the means within our power for beautifying our characters, and for spiritual nourishment. R5220:5

The lily is not idle, else it would die, but it does not worry. R5220:4

We are not to be anxious about the things of the present life, nor are we to be over-anxious regarding our spiritual growth. R5991:1

They toil not -- Does not mean that he would not have us labor with our hands and our brains in order to care for our family, home, etc. R5991:1
Similarly we believe that in the heavens the angels are free from toil.

Divine power exercised in their interest makes toil unnecessary. CR65:1

But a state of lethargy, indolence, respecting the duties of life and opportunities for presenting truth to others is a sure indication of spiritual poverty. R2488:4

Matthew 6:29

Like one of these -- The finest clothing cannot approximate the delicate structure of the flower, created by an infinite hand. R5875:1

Matthew 6:31

Take no thought -- Not worried; as free from anxious care as the lilies. R5991:1; F679

Be content with such things as you have. (Heb. 13:5) R5220:1,2

Give all of the surplus of your time and energy, over and above that spent in providing things needful in the accumulation of the heavenly riches.

R874:5

Matthew 6:32

After all these things -- Food, raiment, health, etc. R3718:2

The emoluments paid by mammon. CR9:3; NS396:6

Spiritual Israelites are exhorted by the Lord to appreciate the spiritual clothing, the spiritual food, the heavenly riches, which moth and rust cannot corrupt. R3665:1

Do the Gentiles seek -- The procuring of food and raiment is the most important consideration with most people. R5990:5; SM370:1

It would be unsafe for any of the New Creation to request temporal blessings. R3665:1

They could not pray for spiritual things for they had no appreciation of such gifts. Be not like them. R5202:4, 3665:1

Father knoweth -- We should accept what he gives us as being for our best interests. R4567:5

To be without worry does not mean to be without proper concern and due diligence to find work and do it. R4567:5

It is for them to rejoice that their affairs are being more wisely and more favorably ordered than if under their own control. SM371:T

How happy and free from anxious cares are the hours of childhood. Perfect trust in parental wisdom and love casts out all fear. R732:1*

It is improper for the Lord's people to ask alms. R4101:5*

Ye have need of -- Our prayers should be more in the nature of thank-offerings, worship and adoration, recounting the blessings and favors we already enjoy rather than in asking those things which the Gentiles seek. R1999:5

Many, however, who know nothing of real, actual want of life's necessities, are much more exercised by the loss of luxuries when adversity comes. R873:6, 832:5

All these things -- In their case, sickness could not come without the Lord's special permission; hence it should be regarded as from him, and not directly from Satan. R2007:2

Every event and affair of life will be overruled for the highest good. R2468:5

Matthew 6:33

Seek ye -- It means to seek a place with the Redeemer in the true glory and power of his coming Kingdom. R4730:6

Not merely seek them in prayer; we are to seek them by setting our affections on those things and by lifting our affections from earthly things. R2479:5

It will not be thrust upon anybody. SM369:1

First -- Primarily; as of the first or primary importance. SM370:1; F679; R5990:6, 4567:5, 2765:5; NS680:6

First interest; earnestness and singleness of heart are necessary. R5917:6

God will look out for the earthly interests of those who pursue this course. R4567:5

Do that which is in harmony with our Kingdom aspiration. R5171:1, 4913:5

These may lose in temporal advantage, but by faith they recognize it is to their spiritual advantage. R4730:6

All who will be counted worthy to be kings and priests must demonstrate now their willingness to sacrifice their own personal interests and rights in favor of the Kingdom. SM374:1

If the interests of the Kingdom need money, we would feel guilty if we should use the Lord's consecrated money in self-gratification. R5220:2

The Kingdom of God -- The invitation to joint-heirship in the Kingdom of God. SM370:1; NS680:6

Giving to it all the time, attention, thought, energy, influence and means not needed for the present life. R2765:5, 5918:5

The Jewish nation was first invited to become the Kingdom of God. R5917:2
To which spiritual Israelites are now invited. R4730:6

Messiah's Kingdom is sometimes styled the Kingdom of God. Civ

If seeking the Kingdom seems to hinder some of our earthly prospects, so much the better. The Master said it must cost us our all. R5048:5

His righteousness -- The standard of perfect love toward God and toward men. SM371:1

The heirs of the Kingdom are to be governed strictly by the laws of the Kingdom. SM372:1 That is to say, the righteousness necessary to attain a place in the Kingdom. R5219:6; NS680:6

God has provided a righteousness in Christ. R5918:4

We shall not only seek the Kingdom, but seek its righteousness: the righteousness which the Kingdom will bring, the righteousness which God will approve. SM371:1

If we seek and find his righteousness we shall also find his Kingdom. (2 Pet. 1:5-15) R2804:6*

Our first thought should be for the glory of God; our second, for our own profit; our third for the benefit of others. Here we owe it to ourselves to put ourselves first, for if we fit ourselves for service, we have the larger opportunity of helping others. R5130:1,4

All these things -- Food, raiment, etc. SM370:1

Not wanting for temporal necessities, for light, for necessary cares and disciplines, for consolations of divine grace, for friendship and sympathy. R1745:2,4

Be added unto you -- He will not let you starve in his service. B119

All things necessary are promised. R5219:6, 5990:6, 5991:1

According to His wisdom. F679; SM371:T; NS680:6

In fact they shall be our servants, instead of we in bondage to them. R2804:6*

No thought -- Take no anxious burdensome care for the morrow. F572; R4871:3

Be neither careless nor anxious. F573

Sufficient unto -- Sufficient also is the guidance of the Lord and we are to wait and watch for it. Q634:1

The evil thereof -- The difficulty thereof. R5470:5

If our hopes be not realized so soon as we expected, we are not to worry; we are blessed with the truth and there is work to be done. R5374:4

Matthew 7

Matthew 7:1

Judge not -- Harshly, uncharitably, unmercifully, ungenerously. R2329:3, 2589:2

Declaring against evil thoughts, evil suspicions, evil surmisings. R2444:5
Because we do not fully comprehend the divine law of love and cannot discern the thoughts of our own heart. F403

We may at times judge the outward action as wrong, but we are not to attempt to judge the heart, where there is a possibility of misjudgment. R5430:3, 1712:5

It is forbidden us to judge the heart. R4568:5

Judging is a clear token that one has not developed the spirit of Christ, the spirit of love, which is full of kindness and consideration. R2589:2, 1713:6; F403 Our Lord refers to the abuse of judgment and not to the legitimate use of that noble faculty. R1712:2

The Lord discountenances criticisms and accusations and sentences of one another as individuals. R2431:5

But when conduct is in manifest opposition and in defiance of God's law, as that of "wolves," "swine" and "dogs," the condemnation should be recognized as God's judgment, not ours. R1712:5

Some people must be held at arm's length, but at the same time we should be careful to give them credit for good motives they claim to have. NS164:4

The first occurrence of the word in the New Testament and would clearly bear the rendering, "Test not, that ye be not tested." R48:6*

Be not judged -- Harshly, unmercifully. R2329:3

With what judgment -- How we deal with others fixes the gauge of how God deals with us. R5414:5, 5884:5, 5324:4, 5135:5; F403

The Law of Love says: For shame that the weaknesses and shortcomings of brethren should be exposed before the world. F405

See comments on Matt. 6:12

Ye judge -- How many find it easy to excuse their own weaknesses while they are very captious and critical as respects the shortcomings of others. R5324:4

Ye shall be judged -- If at heart we treasure up resentment against others, the Heavenly Father will not forgive us. R5123:3 With what measure -- The fallen or carnal mind is selfish; and proportionately as it is for self it is against others--disposed to approve or excuse self and to disapprove and condemn others. F404

The continual fault-finder, who sees great blemishes in others and none in himself, is blind to his own defects, or hypocritical. R4567:6

Ye mete -- Measure others. R2253:4

Measured to you -- If our words are generous and kind, loving and benevolent, we shall receive similarly kind treatment of the Lord; but if harsh, critical, unkind, we may expect reproof. OV209:4, 210:T; R3453:5

And why -- Busybodying in other men's affairs. F583

The mote -- The little difficulties and weaknesses with which all the Lord's people are more or less troubled. R2589:3

Not the beam -- The great fault of lovelessness. R2589:3
Satan possesses this fault; he is called the "Accuser of the brethren."
(Rev. 12:10) R2589:4

Let me -- Fancying that it is "his duty" to advise, to pick, to investigate, to chide, to reprove. F584

Pull out the mote -- The continual fault-finder who sees great blemishes in others and none in himself is blind to his own defects, or hypocritical. R4567:6

Thou hypocrite -- Wishing to give the inference that you are not yourself inflicted with the same malady of sin. R2589:4
It is deceptive and hypocritical when we claim that fault-finding is prompted by love for the erring and a hatred of sin. R2589:4

Matthew 7:6

Give not -- We are to tell the heavenly things, but not to the natural man. R5065:6

Use the spirit of a sound mind to discriminate between those who are good subjects for the truth and those who are not. R5376:4

This does not mean that we should never bring holy things to the attention of those who are not the Lord's consecrated people. R2589:6

Unto the dogs -- Idlers, breeders of spiritual contagion, self-seekers, biters and devourers, treacherously lying in wait to deceive. R1671:1

We would not expect that dogs would appreciate the difference between meat from the butcher shop and the holy, consecrated meat eaten only by the priesthood. R2589:6

The selfish, the sensual, who mind earthly things and who have never been begotten of the spirit of God. R2589:6

The only preaching proper for such is "Repent and be converted that your sins may be blotted out" and "Flee from the wrath to come." R1671:2

The "brethren" have been neglectful in the endeavor to feed the "dog" class. R2590:1

Cast your pearls -- The deep and precious things that belong to the New Creation and which none others can understand and appreciate. R3265:2, 5699:1, 5214:6, 5065:6, 4568:1; OV5:2; SM242:T

The brutish and swinish. R2589:2

Those who have not the hearing ear and the seeing eye. R5376:3, 327:5*

Those who would not be able to understand nor appreciate our position. R5825:5, 4568:1

They would resent our precious truths and do us injury. R4568:1, 4984:3; SM7:T

Those who mind earthly things, the selfish, the sensual. R2589:5,6

Trample them -- Recognizing no value in pearls, nor appreciating anything that would not give earthly satisfaction. SM7:T

And rend you -- "Reprove not a scorner, lest he hate thee." (Prov. 9:8) R2589:2

Injure you. SM7:T

Matthew 7:7

Ask -- Some of the chiefest of his favors he withholds from us until we make requests, because he thus prepares us more for the blessings he is willing to bestow. R4568:1

All the consecrated are free to make request for the things promised in the Word of God. R4568:1

If you wish to know how to overcome the spirit of fault-finding and harsh criticism of the Lord's brethren. R2590:1

Seek -- Those who approach the Bible with earnest desire to find God's message, will be guided of the Lord. Q643:1; R4983:6, 4971:1

And ye shall find -- The knowledge of the holy Spirit shall be revealed. E167

We find what we seek! Those who desire to find God's message will be guided by the Lord. Those who approach the Bible from the standpoint of unbelief are equally sure to find what they seek--flaws, contradictions, etc. Q643:2

Knock -- Upon the Lord's storehouse of grace and blessing by continued efforts, as well as prayer. R2590:2, 1150:4

Opened unto you -- The door of privilege, of opportunity. R4983:6
The door of knowledge. E167

Every one that asketh -- Anyone, therefore, who seeks God will find him; for the Scriptures promise, "Draw nigh to God and he will draw nigh to you." (Jas. 4:8) R5201:3

He that seeketh -- In the "Law and Testimony." (Isa. 8:20) E167
Seeks the proper blessings: forgiveness of past sins, divine love and care, both temporal and eternal. OV181:2

Findeth -- Those who pray for opportunities to serve the Lord and watch for the fulfillment of their prayers will surely have them. R4913:4
The believer, assuming that there is a superhuman wisdom in the divine word, investigates from that standpoint. NS63:2

It shall be opened -- The door of knowledge shall be opened. E167;
R5201:6
God will reveal his true character to them. OV2:2

A stone -- Traditions as indigestible as a stone. HG692:3

Give good things -- The holy Spirit, the true antidote for a fault-finding disposition. R2590:2, 4568:4

The Lord will also give whatever temporal blessings are to the best interests of the new creature. R5835:1

If he gives us a gift at all, we may be sure it will be a blessing. NS229:5

That ask him -- God is particularly willing to give us the holy Spirit, and is especially pleased that we ask for it. R5310:6, 5835:2

We are not to ask for all manner of earthly things. R5835:1

Therefore -- Connecting this with the preceding; signifying that this will be a test by which we may discern when and to what extent we are misjudging the motives of others. R2590:3

By way of concluding this subject of finding fault, picking flaws, condemning and criticizing. R2590:3

Whatsoever ye would -- Our Lord's words were addressed to his disciples. OV231:1; SM431:2

This is not the rule of love, but of justice. R4827:3

To do justice to your neighbor as you wish that neighbor to do justice to you is the essence of the Law of God given to the Jews for their treatment of others. SM352:2

Under this golden measurement, how few bitter, angry or slanderous words would be used, for how few would like to have others use such to or of them. R2688:6

As we would not wish to have others think ungenerously or meanly of us, so we in turn would find our thoughts of others becoming more generous and less suspicious. R2688:6

To reason, If we were in the slums we would wish that some of God's children would help us and hence we should do so to others, is a mistaken application of this rule. R2689:6

It does not say that we should do to our neighbor as he might wish us to do to him, for he might wish a very unreasonable thing. R2688:4

If Jesus had loved us just according to the Golden Rule, he would not have died for us; but he did more, and he requires that his followers should do more for each other. Q286:6

That men -- Particularly the Lord's brethren and those dependent upon you. R2689:1, 2690:5

It will be applicable to all the heathen world and the substratum of society in the Millennial age, but now it is applicable chiefly to the household of faith. R2690:5

Should do -- Charging only a reasonable profit on goods sold, expecting to pay a reasonable profit to him who sells. R2688:5; OV231:3

To you -- Putting off anger, malice, hatred, strife, envy, slanders, etc. R2688:6

Do ye -- This is a positive rule, to do good; and not a negative rule, to abstain from doing evil. R2688:2, 4567:3

This rule does not express all of the Christian's duty, but marks the very lowest standard which must measure our dealings with others, justice. OV231:2

To the full extent of their ability, the new creatures must render justice. SM431:2, 352:2; R4567:3

We must also be just in our words and thoughts. SM432:1

This law the Apostle calls the "law of liberty," the perfect law. R2688:2

With applications to husbands, wives, children, parents, brothers and sisters. OV232:1

Applications to the Church. OV232:3

The Christian businessman's ideal is the Golden Rule. OV369:2

The Golden Rule is despised and rejected as impracticable. R5723:5

Nothing short of full devotion to the Lord will enable one to live consistently along the lines of the Golden Rule. R4568:4

He who practices the Golden Rule during the six days of his contact with business will surely be faithful on the seventh; but faithfulness to the Golden Rule on the one day only will never win Divine approval. OV232:2

This Golden Rule is necessary in formation of character, not only to develop equity and justice, but also the spirit of love, of unselfishly doing good to others. R2689:3

Only as we exercise benevolence toward others need we expect God's benevolence in respect to our weaknesses and shortcomings. R4567:3,6

The Christian has an additional requirement--the Lord's "New Commandment."

We must "love one another" as our Redeemer loved us, to the degree of self-sacrifice, even unto death. R4568:4

To tell uncomplimentary truth is to violate the Law of Love, the Golden Rule. F406

Even so to them -- By acting kindly, speaking gently, being patient toward weaknesses, not expecting too much. F376

Doing for them now the kind of work which God desires to have done; leaving for the future the things which God has planned to have done in the future (the salvation of the world). R2690:2

This is the Golden Rule and, by comparison, the rule of Confucius, "Do not to others what you would not wish them to do to you" might be considered the brazen rule. R2688:1, 4567:3

This is the law -- Not a Gospel standard, not a love standard, but justice. OV231:2

The Law of God is briefly summed up in this Golden Rule. R4568:4

"The righteousness of the law." (Rom. 8:4) R2689:3

The easy, selfish, worldly way. R2590:5

The present evil world. Q829:2

That leadeth -- As years and centuries roll on, becoming more and more smoothly worn, daily more glazed and slimed and slippery with sin. A205

To destruction -- The way that seemeth right to the world will end in death. (Prov. 14:12) CR497:2

Death, not eternal torture. R4568:2; A205

Many there be -- Our race, now thronging the broad road to death, are to be restored because their guilt and sin are atoned for and will be remitted. R281:4

Mankind daily loses the power of resistance so that now the average length of human life is about 35 years, 900 years less than the first man. A206
Even the Jews were in that Broad Way. CR497:2

Which go in there at -- All mankind are born under more or less adverse conditions and unfavorable environments; and the majority follow on in the way in which they are born. CR496:4

The world's choice is between hastening down the broad road, giving loose rein to their passion, or seeking to restrain these and go down more slowly. NS81:4

Strait is the gate -- Applicable only in the Gospel age. R860:2

Difficult is the gate. A207; R5045:3, 5320:2

Full consecration, even unto death; but within are ministering spirits, all conspiring for our ultimate membership in the New Creation. F152; R4568:3; OV177:4

The love and loyalty of the disciples is tested by their call to walk contrary to the world. R4568:3

The Lord permits the Christian to have adverse experiences so that his character may be developed. Q821:3

Our too-low standards have admitted to membership in all denominations millions who are far below the Master's standards. NS778:5

Narrow is the way -- The way of death by sacrifice with Christ. A212; R5871:5, 5245:2, 2773:2

He opened for us "a new and living way through the veil, that is to say, his flesh." (Heb. 10:20) R279:5

So that only those willing to suffer with Christ may be his joint-heirs. F125; R4964:6, 5005:4

The vows of consecration make the way to glory narrow. NS654:5

So narrow that it admits only the Lord's plan and those willing to conform to it. R5045:3

It is only as "new creatures" that the saints of this age are on the way to life; and only as human beings are we consecrated to destruction, as sacrifices. A213

Were it not that strength is furnished for each successive step of the journey, we could never reach the goal. A214

Those who walk in the narrow way are scripturally called "new creatures in Christ Jesus." (2 Cor. 5:17) NS19:3

We should not be surprised that the way that leads to life is narrow when we realize the grandeur of the life to which it leads. R281:4

Because the successful enduring of these tests is indispensable to those whom he would thus honor. F125

Separate from the world; steep, rugged and beset with snares of the Adversary. CR414:1; OV130:T

Contrary to the general tendencies of the world--upward. R4568:3

Because this Gospel age is a part of "the present evil world" during which Satan is the prince or ruler. NS17:6

Opened up, not to convert the world, but to choose a peculiar people to be associated with the Lord in his spiritual Kingdom. R4246:1*

Its difficulties will act as a separating principle to separate and refine a "peculiar people." A214; R281:5; NS345:5

It means more than negative opposition to the world; it means to make a positive stand for the Lord, for the truth of His Word, for righteousness in general. NS19:1

The law given to Israel was a narrow way and they thought it to be a way of life, but they found it to be a way of death. (Rom. 7:10) NS18:3

It did not exist in the Jewish age and previous ages. NS18:1

We are not to expect that this narrow way will continue in the future indefinitely--during the Millennial age. NS17:6

The divine arrangement for our first parents in Eden was not a narrow way of sacrifice, but quite to the contrary. NS20:2

The little flock will run it with voluntary devotion, but the great company will have experiences which will force them, not to take one special way, but to decide for themselves which course they will pursue.

Leadeth unto life -- Life inherent, life in the superlative degree, immortality. A210; R5045:3; SM10:1

Glory, honor and immortality--association with the Redeemer in the great work of the Millennial Kingdom. R4568:3

This life is immortality. They were living, justified, before, but the strait gate and narrow way lead to another, a different life. R779:3*, 659:5*

The spirit in us is the germ of immortality. Thus we even now are partakers of the divine nature, but the fullness is to be reached when we enter into life. R279:4

There is no other way of life open at the present time. NS19:2

Few there be -- In comparison with the population as a whole. NS808:3

Because the Lord seeks only a very choice class at the present time.

NS19:2, 749:2

Not many great, not many rich or learned, but chiefly the poor of this world, rich in faith. OV123:3

"A little flock." (Luke 12:32) R2122:5; HG186:3

"Many are called and few are chosen." (Matt. 22:14) Paul estimates that many run, though few so run as to obtain the prize of the high calling. (1 Cor. 9:24) R281:1

Our Lord himself was the first to walk in it as the captain or leader of all who would walk in his steps. NS83:4

These few are the bride class who, with Christ, are to bless all the families of the earth. R5691:1

That find it -- The narrow way is a privilege. NS344:4

Matthew 7:15

Of false prophets -- Public expounders. A55

Some will speak perverse things and draw away disciples unto themselves. R5388:6

A class who pervert the truth, stirring up arguments that confuse the flock, manifesting a wolfish disposition. R5388:6

It is not evil-surmising to be on the lookout for false teachers, nor evil speaking to call the attention of the sheep to such. R3746:6

In sheep's clothing -- Those who studiously cover up a wolf-like character with the outward professions of godliness, in order to deceive and lead astray the unwary. R1712:2

Professing to be of the Lord's flock; but really not such, because they do not trust in the great sacrifice offered once for all for their sins.

R3142:3

While sheep can never become wolves, some, who at one time were sheep, after a while manifest a wolfish disposition and take pleasure in doing all they can to injure the flock. R5388:6

Implies the thought of deception, walking like sheep, wearing sheep's clothing, but never being real sheep. R5388:6

However smooth, polished, educated, gentle they may be on the surface, we must get to know them better than by surface indications before we may dare trust them as leaders of the flock. R3747:1

Ravening wolves -- A class who pervert the truth, injure the flock, stir up arguments that confuse the flock, destroy the new creature, dragging them down to death. R5388:6

Greedy, selfish: "Through covetousness shall they with feigned words make merchandise of you." (2 Pet. 2:3) R3747:1

Ready to destroy your faith in the ransom and thus destroy you as sheep. R3142:3

Hungry with ambition for fame and prominence and honor of men, and willing to barter the interests of the flock for their personal aggrandizement.

R3748:2

The wolf is not to be tolerated. He has no rightful place in the assemblies of the true sheep until his character is changed by repentance and submission to the will of God. R1712:2

We should neither reprove as wolves, or disown as brethren, those whose hearts, characters, give evidence that they belong to the Lord, even though they follow not with us in respect to his service. R3747:1

By their fruits -- Sharp, thorny, injurious, poisonous--or, helpful, strengthening, uplifting. R4568:5

Of character, conduct or teaching. R1712:2

Signs that their characters are being transformed in a wrong direction. R5957:1

As James claims, if the right kind of faith be developed in the heart it will surely bear fruit and make an outward manifestation, according to circumstances. R4377:3, 3318:1

The same must be true of the Almighty--by His fruits, His workmanship, fully completed, He may be known to be either good or bad, just or unjust, loving or vicious. SM449:4

Of thorns -- Some, like thorns, reach out to impede, irritate, annoy and injure those with whom they come in contact. R3747:2

Little of this injury is done physically; nevertheless, the thorny and briery people find abundant opportunity for injuring others with their lips and tongues. R3318:2

The thorn and brier classes, however closely affiliated with religious things, are not vine branches. R5148:1

There is a thorn-bush in Palestine which grows a fruit somewhat resembling grapes, and a kind of thistle with heads shaped like figs. R3747:2

Of thistles -- Some, like thistles, are always scattering seeds that cause trouble: false doctrines, evil-surmisings, errors. R3747:2

The thorns and thistles are bad fruits, belonging to the evil nature, and not fruits of the spirit of the Lord. R5224:3

Matthew 7:17

Every good tree -- Contrasting a healthy fruit tree with a diseased or evil one; contrasting a healthy Christian with a perverted and misguided one. R3747:3 A corrupt tree -- The Lord supplies the good soil of truth, the refreshing showers of grace and the nourishment of precious promises; but it is for each of his people to use these and thereby grow. R3747:4

Illustrating that those who are his disciples, sound and proper enough to begin with, might lose their spiritual strength and forcefulness, their carefulness. R3747:3

A Christian who has failed to use the chastisements, trials, and difficulties to correct the weaknesses, shortcomings and wrong development of his nature; a Christian who has set his affections on houses, lands or worldly aims, objects or individuals. R3747:4

A Christian who has failed to grow in grace, knowledge and love has not appropriated the nourishment provided, has not submitted to pruning. His heart has become decayed. R3747:3

So surely as a corrupt tree brings forth bad fruit, so false doctrines will develop bad characters in those who receive them. SM382:2

Evil fruit -- Knotty, wormy, unsatisfactory. R3747:3

Matthew 7:19

Is hewn down -- In Palestine, to this day, fruit trees are taxed, and trees which do not bear are promptly cut down. R3747:5

"Every branch in me that beareth not fruit he taketh away." (John 15:2)

R3747:5

Cast into the fire -- Symbolizing the time of trouble in the end of the Jewish age, and that to come at the end of the Gospel age and beginning of the Millennial age. R3747:5,6

By their fruits -- Lives. HG693:1

What they do with their spare time and money. R2259:3 Outward manifestations. R5000:2

We are to judge the outward conduct, but we cannot go beyond and say what is of the heart. R5000:3

Only in regard to that of which we have positive knowledge should we render a decision in our own minds. R5519:6, 5000:2

Sharp, thorny, injurious, poisonous--or, helpful, strengthening, uplifting. R4568:5, 5224:3, 4592:2

A wicked spirit, a malicious tongue, and pleasure in doing unrighteousness betoken a change of heart, that they have not the holy Spirit governing them as they once had. Q648:T

The holy Spirit or the spirit of the Adversary. R4592:2; Q648:T

The fruits of the people of God are holiness, meekness, gentleness, long-suffering, brotherly-kindness, self-sacrifice for others and for God and His truth. R5504:5; OV401:4; NS205:6, 403:3

Aside from any fruits that would be injurious, we are to accept the profession of all who claim to be consecrated. R4653:6

Ye shall know them -- We know the Almighty by His fruits--His good, just and loving workmanship finally completed. SM449:4

Be able to discern which are brethren and which are "dogs" or "swine." R2589:5

Know that those bearing the fruits of the spirit are no longer children of wrath, but have passed from death unto life. NS403:3

Specially applicable to those who would be leaders of His flock. R3747:5

Know that those having the spirit of anger, etc., are yet in the "gall of bitterness," however outwardly respectable they may be. NS403:4

Matthew 7:21

Not every one -- Who are professing to be his disciples. R3317:6
Not all who have their names upon earthly church rolls, but only those whose "names are written in heaven" and whose names will not be blotted out because of unfaithfulness. (Heb. 12:23; Rev. 3:5) HG315:6

Only those who, after repentance, renunciation of sin, and acceptance of Christ as their Redeemer, make a full consecration of themselves to the Lord, to know and to do His will. NS391:2

Shall enter into -- Can be accepted as a joint-heir with Christ.
R4470:1, 5938:3, 2235:3

Kingdom of heaven -- The actual Kingdom, not the Church in her present condition. R3317:6

Doeth the will -- God's will is to select such as believe His promises for the future so fully that they will give up the present to obtain it.
R581:2

The heart, the will, must be right, sincere, true, pure, loyal to God and the principles of his government. R4568:5

By our deeds, and not merely by our professions. R5938:3

Matthew 7:22

Many will say -- In contrast with the "few there be that find it."
(Verse 14) R814:5*

Not only a few, but "many," who in their outward course of life have in some measure acknowledged the Lord publicly. R3318:2

Many sadly misinformed partial-believers in Christ. D632

Many who have done philanthropic and reform work. R5404:6

The Great Company. R5383:5

Professed church of Christ--"false brethren." SM222:1

Ostensibly they serve the Lord, in reality they serve mammon. SM760:1

In that day -- In the close of the Gospel age. R3747:6, 5404:6, 4568:5

Lord, Lord -- They had a form of godliness. R5407:4

Have we not -- As Laodicea, "I am rich, increased in goods, and have need of nothing." (Rev. 3:17) R4314:4

But these boastings avail little to the interests of Babylon because the lack of the spirit of God's law of love is too painfully manifest to be concealed. D170

The harvest truth is only for the holy and meek. R1348:5

Prophesied -- Preached. D632

He will not guarantee that anybody who has power to work miracles and preach publicly will be granted a place in the Kingdom. R4668:2

In thy name -- The Revised Version gives "by thy name," intimating that the name of Christ is used rather as a charm, to conjure by. R3748:1

Much of this conjuring in the name of Jesus has been merely a cloak.
R3748:1

Claiming divine authorship for their own erroneous theories. R3647:6
Many take the Lord's name in vain, associating it with their enterprises, which are often in direct conflict with the Master's Word and Spirit.

R3748:1

Cast out devils -- Opposing sin and multitudinous forms of evil. R3747:6

Wonderful works -- Good works: mission work, slum work. Q112:5

Miracles are not necessary today amongst the Lord's people, and hence they have passed away. R3301:5

Not that the Lord does not approve of hospitals, asylums and charities, but they are not the fruits of the spirit. NS376:6

The Lord's followers are not to be known by their great works--"by their fruits ye shall know them." (Verse 20) Q783:2

Many there are who are consecrated to a system or to a work who are not fully consecrated to God. R1802:3*

Benevolent institutions, colleges, seminaries, etc. R3747:6

Not acceptable to God because they have not submitted themselves to His plans and methods. R3647:6

The Lord makes use of various characters as agents in these healings, even as Judas was one of the twelve who worked miracles. R749:4

So satisfied with their present world-converting machinery that they would rather dislike to have the second advent occur now and spoil their plans.

R1439:3

Ecclesiasticism is constantly boasting of her great achievements, as here prophesied. D170

Including miraculous physical healings. F639

Some are urged to make money as honestly as possible and contribute liberally to the church, and told they will be granted a free pass to eternal happiness in the future. SM760:T

Some may be found building up Babylon in some of its denominations, but neglecting the divine Word and their own character building. NS319:6

There is so much reckoning, figuring and apologizing for the meager missionary results now, because we are living in the "harvest" or reckoning time. R1078:3

The various persons and systems performing the "many wonderful works" of today, almost without exception, directly or indirectly antagonize the truth. R3158:4

We are not to object to the works if they are good works. R4668:2, 3120:3;
Q112:5

Implying that Satan will have not only false teachers, but false miracle-workers, deceiving themselves and others respecting the source of their power and teachings. R2837:3

I never knew you -- "Never approved you." (Diaglott) R2837:3

Never recognized or authorized your sects. R3748:2

I do not recognize you. R5383:5, 5404:6, 5389:6

You are not fit for the Kingdom class. Q112:5; R5407:4, 4668:2, 4568:6; SM222:2

You did not come in by the door of the sheep-fold (John 10:1). R5404:6

Your work is out of harmony with the principles of my teaching. Such will pass through tribulation and lose the great prize. R4568:6

Only those will be recognized who have done the will of the Lord and who have no theories or works of their own whereof to boast. R3252:4

Because of not having developed characters in harmony with the Father's law--the Golden Rule. R4568:6, 3318:2

Depart from me -- Left to have a part in the great time of trouble, they will doubtless become God's people instead of sectarians, and will be "willing in the day of his power." (Psa. 110:3) D632

Obliged to pass through tribulation with the world, losing their share of the great prize of this Gospel age. R4568:6

It is the duty of every true disciple to rebuke them, for the outward opponents do far less harm than those who wear the Master's name while denying his doctrine. R1418:6

Not into eternal torment. He does not say, "Depart, ye cursed." R5383:5

That work iniquity -- Neglecting the privileges of the high calling when they knew of it. R5407:4

Workers of unrighteousness, in my name. R5389:6, 3748:3

Through misrepresentation of God's character and plan. R3748:3

The 1000 years of Christ's reign will accomplish the real reform work. R5404:6

These sayings -- Jesus' message and teachings. R5407:3

The words or message of the Sermon on the Mount, showing what things are blessed of God in contradistinction to the things which would not have his approval. R3748:4

Doeth them -- Render obedience thereto. R5407:3

Not merely to be doctrinally informed, but he is looking for such character development as will bring us into full harmony with his teachings. R3748:5

I will liken him -- The parable refers not to the Church and the world, but to two parties in the Church. R3748:3, 3318:4

A wise man -- The true people of God who will be able to stand the test of this great day, now upon us. R5443:4

Built his house -- Jesus showed that it was important to be founded upon a rock; and Paul shows that is important also to build with good material. (1 Cor. 3:12) R358:5*

A rock -- Christ. R4568:6, 5443:4

"Other foundation can no man lay than that which is laid, Jesus Christ." (1 Cor. 3:11) R5407:6

Matthew 7:25

The winds blew -- The storms of life are sure to come. R5407:3, 4568:6

Founded upon a rock -- The foundation, God's promises, brings calmness, confidence and security. R5407:3

The twelve apostles, the foundations of the New Jerusalem, were not laid in the sand, but upon the sure and steadfast rock, Christ Jesus. R1522:1

No man can build a proper life unless he have some foundation, some doctrine, some faith. A man with no faith, no hope, is sure to be correspondingly lacking in character. R3318:4

His house -- Faith structure. R5407:6

Upon the sand -- Foundations of human tradition, man-made theories, ignorance, doctrines of demons. (1 Tim. 4:1) R4568:6, 5407:5

The quicksand foundation upon which nominal Christianity is built. R5443:4

Of selfishness. R1190:5*

Those so building will suffer the loss of everything, and at the beginning of the Millennium will be no better off than the world in general. R4569:4

Perhaps some built upon the law, thinking they could commend themselves to God by their own endeavors, without the imputation of the merit of Christ.

R5407:5

Rain descended -- A mighty downpour of truth. R3748:5, 5443:4

The floods came -- "The hail shall sweep away the refuge of lies, and the waters shall overflow the hiding place." (Isa. 28:17) R3748:5

The winds blew -- The strong winds of war. R3414:3, 5443:4

And beat -- The shaking will be the means of God for the liberation of some now chained by superstition. R1308:4

Upon that house -- Nominal Christendom. R3748:5

It fell -- The "great company" will have a faith structure largely composed of error, which will be consumed. R3748:6

Truth will wash out the quicksand foundation of nominal Christianity.

Utter wreck will follow. R5443:4, 5407:6

Great was the fall -- Suffering the loss of all their hopes. R5407:6

At the beginning of the Millennium; they will be no better off than the world in general. R4569:4

Matthew 7:28

Were astonished -- Even though they but imperfectly understood because the holy Spirit was not yet given. R5408:2

Matthew 7:29

Having authority -- Knowing the truth by implicit faith in God and personal experience with its power upon his own heart. R1917:2

As one who understood his subject thoroughly. R3803:2

As one knowing what he was talking about. OV159:1

With a positiveness. R5408:2, 3318:5

Not as the scribes -- Who taught various speculations and wonderings.

R5408:2

Doubtfully. R3803:2

Wherever there is confusion and mysticism, we may be sure there is error and ignorance. R5408:2

Matthew 8

Matthew 8:2

A leper -- Leprosy symbolically represents sin. R4576:3

If thou wilt -- He was inspired with faith as far as his knowledge went, and Jesus graciously supplied the missing link by saying, I will. R436:6*

Matthew 8:3

Put forth his hand -- It is a mistake to suppose that healing constituted Jesus' mission as a whole or one of its most important features. R4576:2

Touched him -- His healings were performed to: (1) draw attention to his message; (2) illustrate his great future work; or (3) test his own faithfulness. R4576:2

Be thou clean -- No suggestion here of the error of the leper's moral mind as claimed by Christian Science. All is real, both the leprosy and the miraculous cure. R4472:2*

Was cleansed -- Represents purification from sin. R4576:3

Matthew 8:4

Tell no man -- The testimony of his Messiahship was to be hidden from the common people until the rulers of the Jewish Church had the opportunity to decide for or against Christ. C168

Telling it forth would tend to make him too popular. R4576:3

To the priest -- This was the demand of the Law. R4576:3

Representative of the Jewish system. C168

Testimony unto them -- To those who would ultimately pass sentence upon him. R4576:5

Matthew 8:5

A centurion -- Captain of a garrison of Roman soldiers; a Gentile.
R5101:4
Probably Cornelius. R1922:6, 2620:6

Matthew 8:6

My servant -- An interest in his employee which we, as Christians, do well to imitate. R2620:6

Matthew 8:8

I am not worthy -- Being a Gentile, it would be an impropriety for a Jew to enter his house. R3755:5
A lesson of humility of mind in approaching the Lord on any subject; that we have nothing of right or merit to demand, only grace and mercy. R3755:5
Speak the word only -- He had this faith because his servants obeyed their authority, and he recognized that Jesus had still higher authority and could so command his messengers. R5101:4

Matthew 8:10

He marveled -- The only other instance where Jesus marveled was at the unbelief of the people of Nazareth. (Mark 6:6) R3755:6
No, not in Israel -- Nowhere among the whole twelve tribes. C293

Matthew 8:11

That many -- Faithful ones from among the Gentiles, called to be the bride and joint-heir of the true and only heir of all things, Christ Jesus. R1095:2
The world of mankind in the Millennium. R3457:1
Shall come -- By a narrow, thorny path of trial. R1095:5
East and the west -- Gentiles. R4576:6
Shall sit down -- Or, be at rest and peace with God, with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob and all the faithful of the earthly class. R3457:1
With Abraham -- The visible representatives of the Kingdom. D619; Q421:3; R4796:1
The Kingdom itself will be spiritual, invisible to men, but its earthly agents will be visible and they will be Jewish. R4796:1
Who will have an honored place for the blessing of regathered Israel, and through them, all the families of the earth. R4577:1

Who died before the ransom was paid and were not therefore called to a place in the spiritual Kingdom. D625

But not the saints. A290

Children of the kingdom -- Israelites, children of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, to whom the Kingdom was first offered. R5101:5

The Lord is here not speaking about the world at all; he is speaking about the Church. Q199:4

The Lord was discussing the earthly Kingdom with the earthly children. Q421:4

Some who, in the end of the age, not being faithful, will be rejected from the light. Q199:4

Cast out -- Out of divine favor. R4576:6

Divine grace or favor was to continue with the Jew until three and a half years after the cross. R5100:6

They should not think that God would take them for his elect regardless of their character, faith, obedience, etc. R5101:5 All the unworthy of the Jewish age shall be excluded from the visible, earthly phase of the Kingdom. R1580:1

Outer darkness -- God's disfavor, which has been upon Jews, especially since the destruction of Jerusalem. R4576:6, 4577:1, 3105:6; Q421:3

As outcasts from God's favor and from the special light of prophecy which for 1800 years had enlightened them. R1095:2

That which is common to the world in general. R4445:2, 4577:1

If any of us do not walk carefully, we will not continue to be children of light. Q199:4

Not like purgatory or hell-fire, because the normal view of these is very light, bright and hot. Q199:4

There shall be -- Those that rejected the Lord found a great time of trouble at the end of the Jewish age. Q421:3; R3105:6

Weeping -- The Jewish nation has suffered for 18 centuries and will continue to suffer until God will forgive them and save them. R4577:1, 1095:5

Grief is indeed implied, but not one word about an eternity of grief and pain. HG303:2

Gnashing of teeth -- Signifying chagrin, disappointment, savage animosity; as in the case of Stephen, "They gnashed on him with their teeth." (Acts 7:54) R4329:1; Q732:2

Darkness respecting transpiring events and, ultimately, the severity of the trouble, figuratively called "weeping and gnashing of teeth." R3105:6

A metaphor describing trouble, distress, perplexity and persecution.
R1095:5

Matthew 8:13

As thou hast believed -- Those who cannot exercise faith cannot have a share in the blessings offered under the Gospel call, but must wait for the demonstration of the Millennial Kingdom. R4576:6

Some were healed in answer to their own faith (Mark 5:34); and some, as here, in answer to the faith of another. R759:3

Was healed -- No miracle of healing was ever wrought by the Savior upon any of his disciples. R4577:4

The fever left her -- Some, as here, were healed instantly; some gradually. (Mark 8:24,25) R759:3

Ministered unto them -- Demonstrating that her cure was miraculous, since the operation of the mind could not have restored at once the strength lost by the fever. R3311:1

And healed -- The miracles of healing which our Lord performed were incidental to his preaching. R4137:2

The healings had three ends in view: (1) to draw attention to his message; (2) to illustrate his great future work; and (3) to test his consecration vows. R4576:3

All that were sick -- "Virtue (vitality) went out of him and healed them all." (Luke 6:19) R5096:4, 4576:3; A230; E124; F645

Himself -- The gift which costs nothing cannot be so highly esteemed as that which costs much. R4138:2

Took our infirmities -- At his own expense, his own sacrifice. R4576:3, 4138:1, 574:4; E106,124

"Touched with the feeling of our infirmities." (Heb. 4:15) E106; F632

Perfection is the opposite of infirmity. E122

Greek, asthenioas; used in the singular when the sickness of Lazarus is spoken of (John 11:4); proof from the Scriptures that Jesus was sick and so able to sympathize with us in our sicknesses. R2767:4*

Greek, astheneo, meaning without strength. R4099:6,2*

Our Lord, who had none of the imperfections of the fallen race, needed to take from men their sicknesses in order that he might be touched with a feeling of our infirmities. R2029:6

Not because pain, sickness and death had hold of him, but that they had hold of our race, and he, full of love and sympathy, was bearing the burdens of others. R574:5

The weaknesses going to him as "there went virtue out of him and healed" the multitude. (Luke 6:19) F632

Experiencing, instead of vitality, a sense of the weakness and suffering of those whom he relieved. F645

Since he himself was not the sinner, all the penalties of sin which could rest upon him must be result of his taking the sinner's place and bearing for us the stroke of justice. E127

Thus our Lord fulfilled his consecration and began to lay down his life for others. R3727:5

He who spake "as never man spake" also sympathized as none of the fallen race could sympathize with the fallen conditions, troubles and afflictions of humanity. E126

"That he might be a merciful and faithful high priest in things pertaining to God," "in all points tempted like as we are." (Heb. 2:17,18; 4:15,16) E128

It is expedient also that all who would be acceptable to God as members of the Bride should be similarly touched with a feeling of the world's infirmities and have sufficient sympathy to voluntarily bear some of the sorrows and griefs of those about them. R4138:4; F645

Bare our sicknesses -- Not the sicknesses of the Church, but those healed at the first advent, to illustrate greater works and grander healings in which we may participate, now and in the Kingdom. F632; R4138:3
A comparison of Isa. 53 with Heb. 4:15 and Mark 5:30 and Luke 6:19 shows us clearly that this prophecy was completely fulfilled at the first advent. R2028:6

It was necessary for Christ to do this that he might be touched with a feeling of our infirmities. F645

Being free from sin, he was free also from pain. Since he could not suffer pain and sickness because of sin, he was placed for a time among sinners, where their weaknesses and pains bore down upon him. R2000:1, 809:2

We do not know that our Lord was sick with any of the ordinary maladies. It would appear that his healing merely exhausted his vitality, and thus left upon him the weight of our sicknesses. R4138:3

It is the most refined and perfect organisms which can suffer most. R454:3

The healing of the new creature and the healing of the flesh are different things. The new creature's soul-sickness is cured by the Good Physician, even though his flesh may suffer pain and go into death. R4979:6

For God's consecrated people to ask for physical healing would be to attempt to take back what they have consecrated to the Lord "even unto death." R4980:1

Matthew 8:19

I will follow thee -- Evidently with the thought that one so gifted must be wealthy. R5370:6

Matthew 8:20

Hath not where -- No home of his own. Only the very sincere would be attracted to follow a leader in such a condition. R5370:6

It seems that persecution from his earthly kindred was not lacking and that he was unwelcome in the home of his childhood. R1069:3

Matthew 8:21

Bury my father -- Leave your service and serve my father until he dies. R1987:1; Q217:1

Matthew 8:22

Follow me -- Jesus did not mean that the young man should not attend his father's funeral, but that if he left the Lord's service too long he might never return. R1987:1

Let the dead -- The legally dead. Q760:4

Here unbelievers are referred to as still dead because of having no union with the life-giver. F697

He was referring to the mass of mankind, all dead under condemnation, and the one who believed in him was the only one that was even reckonedly alive. HG195:3; Q717:4

We are all walking in the valley of the shadow of death and are now far down below the mountain tops of life and perfection. R360:3

From God's standpoint all who are under the sentence of death are considered as though already dead. A150,289; Q717:4, 760:4; CR131:2; R5371:1, 3378:4, 2153:5, 1231:3, 1077:1; NS253:5

Especially those who are unbelievers and hence have no union with the life-giver. F697

"The hour is coming and now is when the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God." (John 5:25) R2435:1

Bury their dead -- The actually dead. Q760:4

Let the dead, the condemned and legally dead world, look out for its own affairs. CR131:2

There are plenty in the world who can attend to the earthly things. R5371:1

Entered into a ship -- The Master launched out with them occasionally to obtain rest and quiet. R4577:1

Matthew 8:24

A great tempest -- Its violence may be judged from the fact that even the Apostles, who were experienced on the sea, were alarmed. R4577:2
Probably the Adversary was permitted to develop the storm on Lake Galilee for the very promise of the lesson it gave to the apostles. R4577:3
All are subject to the storms of life in which mighty billows threaten our destruction. R4577:2

Picturing the experiences of the Church during the long night of 18 centuries in which she has been tempest-tossed. R3325:2

Picturing the great time of trouble. R5239:5

In the sea -- The Sea of Galilee is quite subject to such windstorms. R3324:2

But he was asleep -- Evidently thoroughly exhausted with the labors of his journey and ministry. R3324:3; HG459:2

Evidently the Lord's providence had something to do with his prolonged sleep under such circumstances, to test the faith of his disciples. R3324:3, 5239:3

Matthew 8:25

Lord, save us -- If we have trials and difficulties, or inner storms or passion, anger, resentment, we should cry unto the Lord for help. R5239:4

A great calm -- Waters, thus lashed to a fury, cannot be quickly calmed except by a miracle. R3324:4

Typifying the great rest from the Evil One for a thousand years, now near at hand. R3325:4

Rebuked the winds -- Illustrating the manner in which the time of trouble will come to an end. A171

What the Lord is doing for the Church now, and what he will do in the future for the world. R5239:5

Jesus would not have rebuked the storm if it had been caused by the Father. Satan probably thought he could destroy Jesus by this storm. R5239:3

Matthew 8:27

What manner of man -- In general his wonderful personality seemed really incongruous with his general demeanor. SM749:3

During the Messianic Kingdom, all will know Jesus as having been a man, The Sent of God, and as the now Highly Exalted One, far above men and angels. SM754:2

Not until the disciples learned this lesson were they prepared to trust him with all their trials, difficulties and interests. R4577:2

Similarly we, realizing that our Lord now has "all power in heaven and in earth" (Matt. 28:18), can fully trust him and rest in his loving care.

R4577:2

The sea obey him -- The power to deliver from literal waves gives confidence that he is able to deliver from every trouble. R4577:2; SM749:1

Matthew 8:28

Two possessed -- Using the human body as their medium, their body.

R4577:5

Intelligent physicians recognize that probably more than half of the inmates of insane asylums are demon-possessed. R4577:5, 5044:2; SM197:T

Matthew 8:29

They cried out -- Knowing their final destiny, they tremble as the time draws near. (Jas. 2:19) R606:5

Thou Son of God -- The devils acknowledged Christ when they had an object in so doing. R2014:1

Admitting his lordship and power over them. F626

To do with thee -- In common with thee. R3772:2

To torment us -- To destroy us; the fear of destruction being doubtless inculcated by witnessing man's death on account of sin. R254:5, 3772:1

These imprisoned spirits had in mind destruction as their final doom; but their suppositions were incorrect, for Satan had misrepresented Jehovah's plan to them. R697:1,4; HG729:6

The word "torment" here does not have the same thought as our word torment. It would mean "do us distress," as a landlord is said to put a tenant in distress for his rent; that is, he will put him out of the premises for failure to pay his rent. Q222:4

This was the language of the demons. Whatever the fallen spirits might say would not be good theology with any good Christian. Q222:4

We shall consider it an interference with our rights if deprived of the privilege of tormenting this man. R3772:1

Before the time -- The demons evidently understood that the time for the overthrow of the powers of evil was still future. R3727:2, 1722:4

Showing their expectation of some future termination of their present restraint or imprisonment, a culmination of judgment in their case. F626

A plea for extension of time in which to come out of the man. R3772:1

Matthew 8:30

An herd -- Probably hundreds. It would appear that there were enough demons to supply one for every hog, because, unlike sheep, a hog is independent in its action. R4577:5

Many swine feeding -- The chief industry of that place. R4587:1
Contrary to the Jewish Law and therefore contraband. R3772:4

Matthew 8:31

So the devils -- Not attempting to deny their own identity, but admitting his lordship and power over them. F626

These evil spirits were surely beings and not merely a disease of the man's mind; else, how could they enter the swine? R3772:5

Besought him -- Evidently fallen angels cannot impose themselves upon even the dumb animals until given some sort of permission. R2173:3

Matthew 8:32

And perished -- The destruction of everything obnoxious to the divine will, even as swine were contraband to the Jewish law. R4577:6

Matthew 8:34

He would depart -- So today, the multitudes are moved specially by temporal interests; the great blessings of the Lord go unnoticed. R4577:6

Out of the coasts -- Wherever the true gospel goes its effect is to cause division and uproar in the kingdom of darkness. R1633:3

Matthew 9

Matthew 9:2

Brought to him a man -- The chief business of every Christian, besides that of his own development, is to help others to the Redeemer. R3315:4

Seeing their faith -- The faith of the sick man and those who brought him. R1921:2

Said -- Acting as the special agent, the representative of the Father. R3729:2

Be of good cheer -- Possibly the palsied man and his friends felt disappointed, not appreciating his work as Sin-Bearer. R4587:1 Thy sins be forgiven -- The Lord placed the most important matter first. R3729:1
The Lord was teaching a lesson of the relationship between sin and sickness, and his power to deliver from both. R4587:1

The ransom-price for the sins of the whole world was already on the altar.
R1921:3

Similar declarations of forgiveness of sins may be made by members of the body of Christ to all who come unto God by Christ. R3315:2

Matthew 9:5

Thy sins be forgiven -- Transgression of the divine law could not be forgiven except by the satisfaction of that law. R4587:2

The forgiveness of sins with the Jews would imply proportionate release from sin's infirmities. R4587:4

Arise and walk -- If sickness is a judgment or discipline for sin, we should expect that when sin has been confessed and repented of, the Lord would remove the chastisement and raise up the penitent from his affliction, either partially or wholly. R2008:4

Matthew 9:6

That ye may know -- That he could heal diseases he urged as proof that he had power to forgive sins. R144:5

Named Matthew -- Elsewhere styled "Levi." R4587:4

Meaning "the gift of God"; the name given to Levi by our Lord. R2260:3

He had undoubtedly been acquainted with the Lord and his work and the Lord acquainted with him prior to his call. R2260:1

Receipt of custom -- A collector of taxes for the Roman government.
R4587:4, 2260:2

An occupation despised by the average Jew as being unpatriotic. R2591:1
Despised because it was considered disreputable to assist a foreign government and because many of the publicans took advantage of their position to make themselves wealthy through bribes and over-collections.
R4587:4, 2260:2

Sat at meat -- Matthew at once made a supper for his friends, that these might have the opportunity for acquaintance with the Lord, who was also a guest. R4587:5

In the house -- In the home of those who have consecrated themselves to the Lord, the first consideration should be the service of the Master.
R2591:3

Why eateth -- Thereby implying social equality. R2591:5

He was not descending to sin in any form, but seeking to lift up sinners. R4587:5

It was the loving kindness of Jesus that disturbed their pharisaical nature and called forth their opposition. R539:1*

With publicans -- Tax collectors. R2591:1

Despised for two reasons: (1) it was considered disreputable to assist a foreign government from one's friends; and (2) many publicans made themselves wealthy by bribes and over-collections. R4587:4

And sinners -- Those not professing holiness. R2591:3

The Master did not hold himself aloof from people, but was warm, glowing, sympathetic, helpful, intensive, whole-souled. R4967:3

He was fellowshiping with sinners that he might do them good. R4587:5

Matthew 9:12

They that be whole -- He had come as a physician to the sin-sick, and they did not realize themselves as sin-sick, and hence had little interest in the physician. Our Lord's words were uttered in sarcasm. NS410:4

A physician -- A physician has a right to mingle with those whom he seeks to relieve. R2591:6

Physicians and medicine were not condemned by the Lord. He and his disciples spent considerable money for bread, which is the medicine needed when hungry. R2009:4

Matthew 9:13

I will have mercy -- They should have had the yearning compassion which would have delighted to have lifted them out of sin and brought them nearer to the Lord and to righteous influences. R2592:1

Quoted from Hosea 6:6. R4587:5, 2591:6 And not sacrifice -- God's work in Christ was not to sacrifice the world, but to save it. R539:1*

The righteous -- Those who think of themselves as righteous. R2260:5

The sinners -- Those who realized themselves to be imperfect. R2260:5

To repentance -- But we are to recognize a great difference between calling men to repentance and calling them to the high calling. F87

He was not descending to sin in any form, but seeking to lift up sinners. R4587:5

Matthew 9:14

Why do we -- Fasts were intended for one of two purposes: a manifestation of repentance, or with a view to bringing the heart into closer communion with the Lord. NS153:1

From earliest times fasting has been recognized as a valuable adjunct to piety. NS453:1

Fast oft -- Does not signify total abstinence from food, but a measure of abstinence and self-restraint as respects the condiments and delicacies. NS454:6

The more intelligent people of the world practice a kind of fasting or self-denial every day they live. They have an aim in life and eat and drink in harmony therewith. NS453:4

We recognize that the Lenten custom, while not instituted by the Lord, has probably been a beneficial one physically, sometimes spiritually. NS453:5

Fasting, like baptism, may be either a mere form, injurious rather than beneficial, or it may be observed with spiritual profit. NS153:4

But thy disciples -- Expressing surprise that fasting was not enjoined by our Master's teachings as a law. NS453:1

The highest form of fasting, self-denial, is represented in our Lord; but, since he was perfect, it is perhaps better illustrated by the Apostle Paul. NS454:2

Fast not -- Showing that our Lord did not impose literal fasting upon his disciples. R2260:5, 4987:2; NS154:4

Matthew 9:15

Can the children -- Why should they fast? Their sins had been forgiven, they had been accepted of the Lord and taught to call the Almighty "our Father in heaven." NS154:5

Bridegroom -- Jesus, personally, is the Bridegroom, and not Jesus and the overcomers. R398:4

Jesus is pictured as a Bridegroom, and his followers as a bride company. R5178:2

Shall be taken -- Implying that, with his return, the fasting will cease and a great feast of joy ushered in. NS155:1

And then -- When the Bridegroom would be away, there would be abundance of perplexity and sorrow, and then fasting would be in order, throughout the Gospel age. R2592:2, 4987:4

Shall they fast -- Waiting for his return. NS155:1

All through the Gospel age it has been appropriate that the Lord's followers fast with the true fasting of self-denial, hungering and thirsting after righteousness. NS155:1

We may safely conclude that all "abstaining from fleshly lusts" or desires is real fasting, the kind most approved in the Lord's sight. NS153:5

"If any man will come after me, let him deny himself [fast in the true sense]." (Matt. 16:24) NS154:1

In the Dark Ages the food supply was made more and more unnutritious, forcing a fast, which ultimately amounted almost to a "famine for the hearing of the words of the Lord." (Amos 8:11) NS155:2

We have good New Testament precedent for the observance of literal fasts. R2022:5; NS153:3

Discipline the body by abstaining from delicacies and relishes. R3659:5
Very plain diet or total abstinence from food is occasionally desirable to many of the Lord's people who are full-blooded and impulsive. R2260:5
Fasting is proper when done from a right motive, but worse than useless when done as a formality, to be seen of men, that they might think us holy. R2260:5

Typically means self-denial. R2592:2

None will be admitted to Kingdom glories except those who practice fasting, self-denial. Without self-denial no one will ever attain to eternal life, neither in the present age nor in the age to come. NS455:4-6
Let us continue the fasting of self-denial, but let us seek more and more to appreciate and to digest the spiritual food he now is supplying through his faithful ones. NS156:1

A concomitant of mourning and sorrow. R2260:5

Piece of new cloth -- The fuller light of truth due at the first and second advents of our Lord; the Gospel message. C160; R4987:5

Unto an old garment -- Old sects and organizations. C160

It is of no use to patch the sects with the doctrines of the new dispensation. R1084:4*

Perhaps the first intimation our Lord had given of the fact that Israel as a nation would not be found worthy of the Kingdom and would be rejected. R2260:6

The Gospel teaching is not a patch upon the Jewish law, but a new proposition. R4987:5

From the garment -- Would tear it to shreds. C160; R4987:5

Neither do -- These two parables were given to emphasize that before the blessing could come to natural Israel, Spiritual Israel must be selected. R4987:5

Men put new wine -- New doctrines, truths; the Gospel message. C160; R4987:5

New principles of justice and equality among men, now stretching the old system of things, which ultimately will burst and destroy the present social order. R1143:3

Into old bottles -- Literally, old wineskins, out of which all the elasticity has gone; symbolically, old systems. C160; R4987:5

The bottles break -- Rent asunder by the new truths which are out of harmony with the sectarian pride, errors, superstitions and traditions of these systems. C160

And the wine -- The new doctrines. C160

The Gospel message, committed to a special class. R4987:5

Runneth out -- Are left stranded, hampered by all the old errors of the sect and held responsible for its past record by the world. C160

Into new bottles -- New wineskins, "new creatures in Christ," who will be able to stand the stress of the fermentation of trials, disciplines and testings. R4987:5

Matthew 9:18

While he spake -- While Jesus was at the house of Matthew, probably at the conclusion of the banquet, Jairus arrived. R2617:1

A certain ruler -- Jairus, the ruler of the synagogue in Capernaum, our Lord's home city. R4588:3

He knew Jesus well. He sometimes called upon him to read the Sabbath lesson (Luke 4:16). Once he entreated the Lord on behalf of the centurion's servant (Luke 7:4). R4588:3

Properly given audience first because of his prominence as a representative man. R4588:5

The four miracles of verses 18 to 34 illustrate faith from four different standpoints: (1) the faith of Jairus on behalf of his daughter; (2) the faith of the woman on her own account; (3) the faith of the two blind men encouraging each other; and (4) the faith of the friends of the deaf and dumb man possessed with a demon. R4588:3

Worshipped him -- Manifested his faith by his conduct, expressing his homage, obedience and faith. R4588:5

My daughter -- His only daughter, twelve years old. R4588:3

Is even now dead -- Was at the point of death when I left home, and is no doubt dead by now. R2617:2

If, according to some theories, having died she paid her own penalty, she should be free from death after Jesus restored life to her. But she died again. R392:1

Matthew 9:20

Touched the hem -- The strength immediately came into her body, just as the touching of a storage battery with a wire would draw the electric current. R4588:6

Matthew 9:22

Jesus turned -- Imagine the feelings of Jairus in consequence of this delay; while it added to his faith in the power of Jesus, it at the same time tested his faith in respect to the recovery of his child. R2617:2

Thy faith -- Faith does not spurn reason, but uses it with certain prescribed and rational lines. R4588:2

The minstrels -- The hired mourners, some playing doleful tunes on flutes. R2617:4, 4588:5

The people -- Neighbors had gathered, in harmony with Jewish custom. R4588:5

Making a noise -- Shrieking and murmuring. R4588:5

But sleepeth -- A synonym for death, but only in view of the hoped-for-awakening, the resurrection. R2959:2

It is not extinct, has a hope of a resurrection. R2959:2; PD61/72

Death is a condition of rest, of quiet, of peaceful unconsciousness. E329; R5059:6, 4794:2, 4588:5

She was dead, according to the usual human expression, but asleep from the divine standpoint. R4588:5

Because of Christ's redemptive work, death no longer should be regarded as a perished condition, but as a "sleep." R1126:2; HG293:5

If they sleep, it can not also be true that they enjoy immediate communion with God and the visions of his glory. R3028:1

The Second Death is never referred to as a sleep. R1939:4

Matthew 9:25

And the maid arose -- Did not come back from heaven or hell, and was not resurrected, but was merely awakened out of the sleep of death because Christ was "The first-fruits of them that slept" (1 Cor. 15:20), "The first that should rise from the dead" (Acts 26:23). R2618:2,4

Matthew 9:26

And the fame -- As the fame of Jesus increased, because of his miracles and teaching, the opposition became more pronounced, especially from the Chief Priests, as they were brought into competition and unfavorable comparison with him. R1735:3

Went abroad -- Threatening the immediate advancement of Jesus to the kingly office. R1754:3

Matthew 9:27

Two blind men -- Encouraged one another and both got the desired blessings. This illustrates the advantage of Church fellowship in respect to faith-stimulation. R4589:1

Thou son of David -- The long-promised king of David's line, the Messiah. SM210:2; C257; E133; PD65/77

"The Lord shall give him the throne of his father David." (Luke 1:32) C257
The Righteous Branch from the Davidic root. E134

Matthew 9:29

According to your faith -- Now God's rule for dealing with the Church. R5129:1

Because now good and perfect works are impossible. CR324:5

Faith should triumph, or the light of joy and blessing will die. R5148:4

God will reward us according to our faith, confidence, honesty and sincerity. R5594:1

Much faith, much rest; little faith, little rest. R5433:4, 3841:6

Faith which has a true foundation is very precious in the Lord's sight. R5095:6

Faith is a matter of steps and development; and only the developed faith could possibly bring to us the blessing of the Abrahamic covenant. R4377:2

Our faith must be corroborated by our works, but these cannot be perfect because of weakness. Only our faith and intention can be perfect now, and according to these the Lord deals with us. NS70:5

Faith brings advancement towards holiness. PT391:1*

Every exercise of faith is based on something real and tangible to faith.

R5717:5 Not works, as will be the case during the Millennial age. F113

Matthew 9:31

Spread abroad his fame -- Their joy was so great that the Lord's humility in the matter served to draw forth their praises the louder.

NS70:5; R4589:1

Those healed of blindness loudly praised the Lord. So with us when the eyes of our understanding are opened: we cannot refrain from telling the good tidings. R4589:1

Casteth out devils -- Greek, daimonion, demons, unclean spirits, familiar spirits, the fallen angels. R5183:3; SM548:3

Through -- That would be suicidal. It would be equivalent to a king stirring up strife in his own kingdom and working against his own cause.

R1736:2

Prince of the devils -- Greek, diabolos, the devil, Satan, Beelzebub.

R5183:3, 3310:4

No doubt, as a superior order of being, Satan exercises some degree of control over the others. HG725:3

Until the saints of God have been sealed in their foreheads. (Rev. 7:1-3)
R4880:6

To Jesus, a "contradiction of sinners against himself." (Heb. 12:3) An example of "when he was reviled, he reviled not again." (1 Pet. 2:23)
R4802:5,6

Matthew 9:35

In their synagogues -- The fact that Jesus could and did preach in the synagogues shows that the Jews possessed greater liberty than now prevails among God's professed people. R2635:2

Every sickness -- To illustrate the healing and restoring work which his Kingdom will do in its appointed time. R5075:3

Matthew 9:36

With compassion -- Not only upon his people, but, in due time, upon all the families of the earth. R2635:3

Compassion will be an element of the Lord's character as long as there are any who need help and desire it, until the close of the Millennial age.
R2635:5

The harvest -- Of the Jewish age. B15, 160; R5018:2

The end of the Gospel age, like the end of the Jewish age, is called a harvest. B15, 160

The harvest work consists of various parts. These are more or less important. We might misunderstand the value of these different parts of the work. CR339:3

The Great Teacher tells us distinctly that while his work was that of reaping, he blended it with a sowing. R5018:3, 4891:3

He was then manifested in the double character of Bridegroom and Reaper (see verse 15) R115:1*

Is plenteous -- The way to accomplish large results is not to hope that someone else may do and hear and get a blessing in the service, but for each to resolve to do what he can. R3296:4

Private conversation has had the largest influence as far as reaching people is concerned. CR342:5

The details of the Gospel age harvest work in detail. CR341-344

The laborers are few -- His disciples, two by two; and later, he sent "seventy also." R5018:3, 4891:3

It was their privilege to be all the more energetic because of the "great field" and the few to reap it. R5075:6

The labors of Jesus and the Apostles found about 500 brethren worthy of garnering during his ministry. R4968:6

Matthew 9:38

Pray ye -- He wished them to feel a measure of responsibility in the work, even though he himself was the Lord of that harvest, even though he was the responsible one. R5075:6

The Master would have every one of us feel a deep interest in the harvest work now in progress in the end of this age. R5075:6

Whoever is praying for the Lord to send a laborer knows the laborer that is nearest him--that is, himself. CR339:1; R5144:3, 3296:1

Let us labor while we pray. R5146:1

If our work is of him, he is able to sustain it, and he will do so until it shall be finished. If it is not of the Lord, the sooner it stops the better we should be pleased. R4892:1

Prayers not accompanied by efforts are not sincere. R4913:1

Send forth laborers -- Jesus is the Chief Reaper, but he is not doing the work directly himself, but is supervising it. His disciples are engaged in that work. CR340:2

All have the opportunity of harvest work. CR343:6

And ask the Lord to help you be a reaper. R3296:1,5, 2635:6, 225:5

Sometimes the Lord's people put too much value on money and not enough on service. No place are we told to pray for money, but we are told the harvest is great and the laborers are few. R3513:6*

If we were all conscientious, it would mean, What are you doing yourself? CR339:2

Matthew 10

Matthew 10:1

His twelve disciples -- Not until they had received considerable instruction from him were they recognized in their office as apostles and fully empowered for their special work. R2261:1

Gave them power -- Authority. R2635:6

The power for the healing of the sick was Jesus' power. The disciples did not use their own ability, but merely his, which he communicated to them and authorized them to use. R2636:1

They had not the Father's appointment. They had not yet received the holy Spirit. But, by virtue of the holy Spirit given without measure to Jesus, he conferred upon them his own special powers. R4593:2

Unclean spirits -- Greek, daimonion, demons, familiar spirits, the fallen angels. R5183:3, 2173:2

To cast them out -- A power used by St. Paul in Philippi. (Acts 16:16-18) R5908:1

And to heal -- The same power Jesus had because he gave them the same message of the Kingdom to proclaim. R5075:3
At the expense of Jesus' own vitality. R2636:1
Merely as foregleams of the blessings which in fuller measure would result from the inauguration of Messiah's Kingdom. R2261:5
The truth now needs no such endorsement as the miracle-working power given at first. R1742:6
Manner of disease -- Typifying our present privilege of opening deaf ears and blind eyes to the knowledge of the Lord's great plan. R2636:4

Matthew 10:2

The twelve -- No more and no less. F210; CR415:4
Only twelve, St. Paul taking Judas' place. CR415:4
Apostles -- Greek, apostolos, sent forth ones. F210
Typified by the twelve springs, or fountains, at Elim. R4011:2
Only the males were to be the special public servants. F265
Are these -- Mentioned apparently in the order of their sending forth, two by two. R2261:1
Peter -- Bold and impetuous. R2261:1*
And -- Grouping the apostles, whose imperfections were perhaps like our own, of the nature of halfness. We, too, frequently see one side of a truth and not the other. R2261:1*
It seems now also to be his general method to send the messengers who bear to the household the present truth in couples. R2262:1
Andrew -- Far-seeing, careful, cautious. R2261:1*
James -- Elderly. R2261:1*
John -- Youthful. R2261:1*

Philip -- The slow-witted. R2261:1*
Bartholomew -- Nathaniel, the quick-witted. R2261:1*
Thomas -- The doubting, skeptical intellect. R2261:1*
Tradition has it that St. Thomas visited Ceylon and Madras. R5012:4
Matthew -- One of the heroes of faith. R2261:1*
The publican -- Our Lord's choice of a publican indicates the impartiality of his selections and implies that Matthew could not have been one of the dishonest publicans. R2260:2
They were classed with sinners and harlots in New Testament usage, and the Hebrew Talmud classes them with murderers and thieves and regards their repentance as impossible. R2260:2
Matthew is the only one of the evangelists who mentions that he was a publican; this shows his humility. R2260:2
James -- The advocate of works. R2261:2*
Labbaeus -- Jude, a man of doctrine. R2261:2*, 3044:2

Simon -- The zealot, enthusiastic and independent. R2261:2*

Judas Iscariot -- The conservative economist. R2261:2*

In each of the six pairs the Lord made one good man out of two half-men.
R2261:2*

Way of the Gentiles -- Until the 70th week of Israel's favor had come to an end. C170; R1784:1, 1451:2; HG354:4

True Israelites only were to be sought. R2601:2

Because all of God's covenants and promises were still confined to the nation of Israel. R2635:6, 2512:2

No favor could go to the Gentiles until after natural Israel had received the opportunity and used it as far as they would. R5076:1

In due time, when led of the spirit, the disciples did go to all nations.

C170; Q547:T

Jesus did not day by day lay down his life in serving the world, but only Israel. R4492:3

It was appropriate that the harvest, which belonged to the Jews, should be confined to them. R5076:1

Of the Samaritans -- Gentiles with an admixture of Jewish blood.

The mixed people settled in parts of Palestine by the Babylonian government at the time the Jews were permitted to return from their captivity. R3649:4, 4130:2

Not of pure Israelitish stock, nor fully conformed to all the laws and customs of the Jews. R2069:3 Although they claimed Jacob as their father also. R2261:2

A semi-religious people. NS207:5

Our Lord thus marking the Samaritans as being separate and distinct from the Israelites. R2960:3

Matthew 10:6

But go rather -- Even when the apostles were finally sent to preach the gospel to all the world they were told to begin at Jerusalem. (Acts 1:8)

R1783:6

To the lost sheep -- Not because they had wandered out of the land of Israel, nor because they had lost their identity as Israelites, but because they had wandered from the Lord and their covenant. R2261:2

Jesus' ministry was confined to the Jewish nation. OV224:T; HG539:6

True Jews, and these only, were called upon to make ready their hearts to be participants in the Kingdom. R4593:3

Similarly today, the harvest message is only to the household of faith, spiritual Israel. R5076:2, 1742:4

The house of Israel -- "I am not sent but unto the lost sheep of the house of Israel." (Matt. 15:24) "You only have I known of all the families of the earth." (Amos 3:2) A72, 97

The whole twelve tribes, all of whom therefore were represented in Palestine. B207; C252, 293; R2084:6, 1341:1; Q354:1

Our Lord said not a word about "the house of Judah," which he manifestly considered was merely a part of the whole nation of Israel. C300

It was to be a harvesting work and neither plowing, harrowing or sowing had been done with the Gentiles, but only with the Jews. R5076:2

Matthew 10:7

As ye go, preach -- The commission of the apostles was one of service, not lordship. F212

This commission of the apostles was, in the main, the same as the commission of the Lord and the whole Church. R1521:5

Then orally; while in this harvest the preaching is done largely by the printed page. R1742:5

Saying -- Not, "You will go to hell fire and eternal torment unless you repent." R2261:4

Kingdom of heaven -- Promised to Abraham and his Seed. R2261:3

The hope of every Israelite. A273

It was the main topic of all Jesus' preaching, other subjects being mentioned in connection with, or in explanation of, this one subject. A273

The entire work of this Gospel age was to be the preaching of the Kingdom. R2139:1, 1579:3

Is at hand -- In the sense that Jesus was present to make a formal tender of the Kingdom to Abraham's natural seed. R4557:2

The 69 weeks of Daniel's prophecy have expired. R3630:2

The Deliverer has come. B236; C136

Signifying that God's time had come to fulfill all of his promises made to the Jewish nation if they were ready for them. R4593:5

It is this message which was the test of natural Israel and is now the test of Spiritual Israel. C136

Our message is similar now, except that we announce the Kingdom is at hand in great power and glory. R1742:3

The offering of the Kingdom now is much more tangible and can be demonstrated much more clearly than was possible then, for it is nigh, even at the doors. R2636:4

Peter's suggestion to return to fishing after Jesus' crucifixion was because he did not then see how he could continue to preach this message.

B117

Matthew 10:8

Freely ye have received -- This referred to the gift of healing which had been imparted freely to them and which they were to freely use for the good of their fellowmen. R449:4

They were giving what cost them nothing, but which was costing Jesus much daily and hourly. R2636:1

Freely give -- The apostles had something to give, but not to sell. R2261:5

Let us give to others the glorious light of Present Truth. R5063:1

Matthew 10:9

Provide neither gold -- Showing that they were expected to be so thoroughly engaged in the work that they would not have time to "labor for the meat that perishes" and would be provided with their physical needs by those to whom they ministered. R449:4

Subsequently the apostles acted very differently--the Apostle Paul, for instance, making tents. The change was under the Lord's direction. (Luke 22:35,36) R2500:2

Matthew 10:10

Nor scrip -- Valise, satchel. They were not to take up any collections or even have with them anything wherein to carry a surplus. R2261:6
They were to make no provision for their journey. They were to learn a lesson of absolute dependence upon the Master who sent them forth. R4593:3

Worthy of his meat -- They were to expect to find a home and the necessities of life wherever they went, giving back in exchange for these temporal blessings the blessings they had been empowered to bestow. R2261:5
They assumed therefore that they were merely to accept what might be voluntarily tendered. R5076:2 These instructions, afterward changed by the Lord, are not applicable to the present time. R2500:2, 1743:2

The messengers of present truth are not money-gatherers; but they merely exchange, for the blessings which they confer, enough financial support to meet their expenses economically. R2262:1

Who in it is worthy -- Those who hunger after righteousness, truth. R957:1

The most holy people, the ones who would be specially interested in their message, whether rich or poor. R4593:3

It was our Lord's mission, as it is ours as his followers, to preach the good tidings to the meek. (Isa. 61:1) R956:3

Matthew 10:12

Salute it -- Salute the householder in a dignified manner, advising him of the object of your call. R4593:3

Matthew 10:13

Let your peace -- The divine blessing upon all the affairs of the household. R2261:6, 5076:2, 4593:3

The family would be blessed of the Lord because of the presence of his representatives. R2261:6

If it be not worthy -- They were not to stay in any place where the Lord's blessing would not be appreciated. R2261:6

Your peace return -- Those rejecting them and their message would lose a great privilege. R4593:3

Not receive you -- It was the duty of the covenant people to receive and entertain the messengers of the Lord; their receiving or rejecting would be a test of their fidelity to God. R1988:2, 1742:6

Shake off the dust -- For a testimony against them, because in their rejection they were violating their most solemn covenant with God. R1743:1
To symbolize renunciation of all responsibility for the consequences of rejecting the message. R2262:4

Out of order in this harvest, for no city or community as such is now in covenant relationship with God, as was Israel. R1743:3

Matthew 10:15

More tolerable -- In proportion as anyone comes to a knowledge of Christ, he has become responsible. R4594:4, 1986:4, 569:6; HG647:6; NS311:4::

The chastisement and discipline necessary to their restoration to righteousness will be less severe for them than for some who are of the natural lineage of Abraham. R1374:2

This implies that the treatment will be tolerable in any event. R5076:4, 1618:4

Those who have been favored with the message of truth and have turned a deaf ear, while professing to be followers of Christ, will find conditions of the incoming age less favorable to them than to heathen people. R5980:4

The land of Sodom -- Who sinned against the dimmed and waning light of nature. R1618:4

Those Sodomites were condemned to death before they were born, as are all of Adam's children. The only thing that came upon the Sodomites specially was that they died violent deaths. R5076:5

The Sodomites were wickedly immoral; yet they were less wicked than those who, after hearing the Gospel, reject it. R4594:1, 5076:4; PD24/35

Day of judgment -- The whole world will be on trial for everlasting life or everlasting death in the Millennial age. R4594:4

Than for that city -- The condemnation was not an individual one, either then or at the full end of their age. R1743:2

The condemnation was not to eternal death, but to the deprivation of the privileges and blessings of the new dispensation then about to be offered to them. R1743:1

The people of Jerusalem suffered more in their time of trouble (AD 69-70) than did the people of Sodom and Gomorrha in their calamity. R2262:4

The sin of carelessness in respect to the message of the Kingdom is, in God's sight, an indication of a still meaner condition of heart, of a still more wicked person. R5076:4

Either fleshly or spiritual: upon fleshly Israel a terrible overthrow accompanied with desolation and famine; upon nominal spiritual Israel a period of unparalleled trouble. R1743:4

Matthew 10:16

Behold -- The remainder of the chapter shows that the work of the apostles then sent forth typifies the entire work of this Gospel age. R2262:4

In the midst of wolves -- "For grievous wolves shall enter in among you, not sparing the flock." (Acts 20:29) R3331:3

Be ye therefore wise -- Neat in appearance; kind, interested and dignified in language and manner; taking advantage of all circumstances to stir up interest. R825:3

We are to do nothing foolish nor go out on the streets to stir up trouble, but use the spirit of a sound mind--gentleness, meekness, patience, brotherly-kindness and love. R5846:4

Just as Peter was patient in his explanation of the Lord's providence and leadings in respect to the greater lengths and breadths of divine favor. (Acts 11) R2996:5

On every occasion use wisdom, and pray to God in regard to any important step in your life or home. Q543:T

Wisdom is to be exercised in the presentation of the Lord's Word. CR156:4; R5146:3, 5151:6

With our burning love and zeal for God and righteousness, we should also have moderation. R4712:2

There is a mild way of doing things that will avoid much of the bitterness and reproach, and that is the better way. Q740:4

Do not attempt to tell all about the plan of God. The reading will do that better. Tell just enough to make them desire to know more. R825:4

We are not to choke Christian brethren who are merest babes in the knowledge of God's Word. R5151:3, 868:4

Not giving strong meat to those who are babes in Christ, but first the sincere milk of the word, and afterward stronger truth as they are able to bear it. R657:5* If you have opportunity to help one out of wrong views into right views, it should be done with sympathy. R5604:4

In training children, follow the directions of the Lord's Word. Q545:1 Many of the Lord's people need to learn tactfulness; some mistakenly believe that they must use no tact--that to do so would be dishonest. R4130:6

A spirit boasting or glorying over others, because our views are more consistent than theirs, will always drive them away. We might use the truth as a club to show our strength, but it will not bring men to God.

R746:1*

As serpents -- The serpent does not, in approaching his victim, rush out in a manner to frighten, intimidate and repulse. His approaches are very careful, and yet effectual. R745:3*

If necessary, he can wait long and patiently, while the victim runs or flees, still holding himself in that position which will most favorably influence. R745:6*

The cat usually conceals itself, but the serpent often presents itself to full view and, by the attraction which it presents, secures its object.

R745:6*

Harmless as doves -- In talking to friends, we should not give any hint that they do not belong to the family of God; it is better to class ourselves in with all as true neighbors. R5146:3

Beware of men -- Evil men. R1670:6

In their synagogues -- The Lord and apostles could teach the people there for a time; but as they shunned not to declare the whole counsel of God, they soon found little, and finally, no opportunity to teach the people there. R986:5

Matthew 10:18

Brought before governors -- Strikingly fulfilled by Paul before King Agrippa. R1569:4

Take no thought -- Beforehand; relying on God's power. R5330:4

The Greek here seems to give the thought: Do not be worried when you shall be brought before kings and judges. R5330:4

Applied with special force to the early Church when our Lord's followers were ignorant and unlearned, uneducated. R5330:5

It shall be given you -- Perhaps by suggestions from another, perhaps through the testimony of someone else, or it may be a text of Scripture that would come to mind. R5330:4
Supernatural assistance, illustrated in the first Christian persecution: Peter, as spokesman, was "filled with the holy Spirit." (Acts 4:8) R2939:5

Spirit of your Father -- The right thought of ordination. R5363:1
The apostles had not yet received the spirit of the Father directly. It had been imparted to the Son, and he shared it with them. R5363:1
Whoever heard them and despised them also despised the Master and the Father. R5363:6

Speaketh in you -- Not that we are to expect to have miraculous powers of speech granted us, but that we will be filled with the truth. Then it will be true that it will not be our own wisdom, nor our own plan, that we shall declare. R2636:5

Matthew 10:22

Be hated of all men -- Our Lord's faithfulness made him of "no reputation." Paul and the early Church were "counted fools" for Christ's sake. Whoever shall live godly in the present time shall "suffer persecution" of some sort. R1109:6
The world does not realize that the body of Christ, now in humiliation, is a body of kings and priests, who shall by and by bear rule over angels and men. R1102:2

If you faithfully exercise your ambassadorship. E490; R2852:6

Endureth to the end -- A diamond is tested by being put under pressure; so God allows us to come under the constant pressure of years of toil, care and self-sacrifice to see how well we will endure. R3104:1

Matthew 10:23

They persecute you -- Whosoever is faithful will suffer persecution. To be without opposition is proof that God is not dealing with us as sons. R5223:4

Flee ye into another -- From troubles too great to be borne. F508
Illustrated by Paul's flight from Iconium to Lystra (Acts 14:6) and from Lystra to Derbe (Acts 14:20). R4368:6, 1472:4
Illustrated by Paul's flight from Damascus: "Through a window in a basket was I let down by the wall, and escaped his hands." (2 Cor. 11:33) R3738:3
At the first great persecution in Jerusalem, "They that were scattered abroad went everywhere, preaching the Word." (Acts 8:4) R2959:2

We should not always flee persecutions, but sometimes it might be an indication from the Lord that he has service for us in some other field of labor. R4409:4

But we are not authorized to retaliate. R3738:3

The cities of Israel -- The time is short but we shall have time, and no more, to go over all the cities of spiritual Israel before the grand consummation. R2645:3

Son of man be come -- Be presented as king, and the testing of the nation reach its climax, reached when our Lord declared their house henceforth left desolate. (Luke 13:35) R2645:2; HG161:2

Signified that the mission of the Church, witnessing to all nations, will not be more than accomplished before the coming of the Lord in the power and glory of his Kingdom. R4011:2

Matthew 10:24

Not above his master -- As our Lord suffered violence from the Prince of this world, so will his followers. OV343:2

Nor the servant -- These words forewarn us to expect similarly false accusations and cruel treatment. R4473:4

Above his lord -- He taught in various synagogues carrying the same message, which always had the effect to draw the few and repel the many. R356:5

Matthew 10:25

Be as his master -- It will probably be the privilege of the last members of the body of Christ to suffer violence, as did the Head. C231

As his lord -- If the majority heard his words, you might expect them to hear yours; but if as a mass they rejected his words, they will reject yours also. R571:5

If they have called -- The chief religionists of his day. E236; R374:3

If they say all manner of evil against him, what must you expect? CR163:3

Beelzebub -- A prince of devils. E236; R374:4

Because he pointed out their false doctrines. E236

How much more -- Particularly in the case of a faithful and capable elder. F293

Them of his household -- In these, as representatives of the Heavenly Kingdom, the Kingdom of Heaven has suffered violence through- out the Gospel age. CR492:5

They crucified him; do you expect they would receive you very favorably? Q688:1

Matthew 10:26

Is nothing covered -- This prophecy is as true in the judgment of nations as of individuals. D541

The greater portion of divine truth has been expressed under cover so that its full import is not always discernible. R801:2*

Serving several objects: (1) the successful development of God's plan; (2) the saving from discouragement because of the length of time involved; and (3) the trial of the faith of those who believe. R801:2*

Not be revealed -- A testimony dreaded but disbelieved by unjust stewards of wealth and power. C20

The masks will all be taken off and every man will be estimated, by both God and man, according to the real merit of his motives. R801:5*

At the present time, things social, political and financial are being brought to light, more and more shaking the confidence of the people in their teachers, representatives and rulers. NS144:6, 275:3

The secrets of nations are being exposed. Injustice in its every form is being brought to light. Inequity in financial institutions and in politics and in private affairs is being muckraked. NS853:2

If justice were meted out, many of earth's rulers would change places with their subjects or be put into prison; many of the great and lordly would be stripped of glory and seen in their true light as ignoble. C20

God's due time has come to turn on the light; in religion, it is revealing the true and exposing the false. R801:6*

Remember that, by powers yet more subtle than X-rays, "God our inmost thoughts doth read." R1954:3

Truth in every sense must be made manifest. The truths of nature, science and God's written revelation will be seen to be in perfect agreement. R801:6*

That shall not be known -- During the Millennial age. A303

The murderer will be faced by his victim, the debtor by his creditor, the thief by his dupe, the defamer by the one he defamed. R1655:1

Quite probably the restored man of the Millennial period will have considerable of the power of mind-reading, and intuitive discernment, over the imperfect. R1954:3

Matthew 10:27

Speak ye -- With the blessed knowledge always comes the responsibility of making it known. R801:3*

Matthew 10:28

Fear not -- The child of God is to be very courageous, knowing that God will not permit anything to come to him that will not be for his good. R5977:3

Which kill the body -- No man could do more than take away our present earthly life, already under sentence of death; no man can take away our future life. R5977:3, 2602:5; E332; CR9:1; NS396:3

Man is not annihilated at the first death. R1449:5

Are not able -- A future life is a possibility which no man can rob you of. God has provided it through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus. E332

However great a power, "the power of death" (Heb. 2:14), Satan may exercise over the world, we know that his power does not extend to the Church. R1779:6, 1271:3

Our revived souls will have new bodies (spiritual or natural); and these [bodies], none will have liberty to kill. R2602:4

To kill the soul -- The future life. OV169:3

The being which God has promised shall be revived or restored by his power in the resurrection day, the Millennial age, because of Christ's redemption. E332; R5977:3, 5612:1, 2602:4

The right of life that God has given you through your relationship to Christ, the life-giver. HG205:6

But rather fear him -- Have respect and deference to Jehovah, with whom are the issues of life everlasting. E332; R2602:5

Reverence him. We should have a great appreciation of his highness and our own littleness. R4746:6

Fear lest we should lose our fellowship with him. R5977:6

Which is able -- In spite of misbeliefs to the contrary, the soul can be put out of existence. E332; R5611:6

God would bring no being into existence whom he could not destroy if found unworthy of life. CR498:4

To destroy -- It is less difficult to destroy than to create a being. He who created all things must be "able to destroy" both soul and body. R1641:3; HG334:5; OV34:1

Both soul and body -- Both the present dying existence and all hope of future life. SM179:T; R2953:1, 2602:5

Not only the body of the willful sinner perishes; but his soul, being, is forever blotted out of existence, having no hope of a resurrection. R876:4*

In hell -- Gehenna, the valley of Hinnom, defined here by Jesus as a place of destruction and not a place of torment. HG511:3

Gehenna, the second death, utter destruction. R2602:5, 5612:1, 4956:1, 4746:6, 3083:5, 1882:1, 1449:5; CR498:4; HG654:1

Matthew 10:29

Fall on the ground -- He whose mind and heart grasp the personality of the Heavenly Father catches the significance of these words. OV2:5; SM623:2

Matthew 10:30

Hairs of your head -- Our smallest interest is not overlooked. R1906:5

Are all numbered -- May not suffer injury without his knowledge and consent. HG294:6

No accident ever "happens" to God's elect. F646; R2007:2

Matthew 10:31

Ye are of more value -- The true Christian has, in his own personal experiences, abundant proof of our Father's love and care. R5717:6 There is a mental tangibility for faith; but also a physical, or outward, tangibility. R5717:5

He who has begun the good work in you is able to care for all your interests, both temporal and spiritual. NS659:5

Matthew 10:33

Whosoever shall deny -- Every one in the Lord's company will have been a faithful soldier; not a deserter, not ashamed of the Lord, nor ashamed of his truth. R5942:4

Matthew 10:34

Not to send peace -- The harvest is not a time for peace, but, on the contrary, it will surely produce separation and alienation between true wheat and all else. R969:6

While our Lord was courteous and kind, he expressed his righteous indignation against evil-doers, and particularly against hypocrites.

R1103:1

Zion is at ease and self-satisfied; and, when we cry aloud and show God's people their sins, they become enraged and complain that we are troubling Israel. R235:4

As surely as we let the world alone to do their own will without warning, we will escape persecution and live at peace with the world. But as surely as the Lord did not do it, we must not do it. R1069:2*

But a sword -- Division. R536:3

The truth is a sword in the present harvest, as it was in the Jewish harvest. R1843:4, 235:4

Trouble between those who love the truth supremely and others of the family; this division cannot be avoided. B236

Because the children of darkness wage a continual warfare against the light. F533

The Gospel of Christ did create differences in the Jewish system then, as the Gospel truth is doing now in Christendom. R4408:5

"The sword of the Spirit which is the Word of God" (Eph. 6:17) separates in congregations and homes. R2183:2

Matthew 10:35

For I am come -- In the harvests of the Jewish and Gospel ages. B236

At variance -- In the harvest the sickle of truth is doing its work of separation; not only wheat from tares, true from false, but the ripe wheat is also separated from the unripe. R1069:3*

Against his father -- The harvest will mean, in many instances, the uprooting of earthly friendships and the sundering of many tender ties, and the truth will do the separating. B236

His own household -- Because of the truth. B236

And it is true now that many of the Lord's most faithful children live in a matrimonial furnace of affliction. F507

Matthew 10:37

Loveth -- Greek, phileo, as filial or "duty love" toward. R2807:2

Father or mother -- Duty love to our family relatives is right, but it must not equal our duty love to the Lord. R2807:2

Or self, or popularity, or worldly prosperity, or honor of men, or human theories and systems. D268; R942:1

More than me -- And my truth. C210

Not preventing love for others, in proportion as they are good and pure; but if a clash of interest should come, we should be ready to decide for the Lord at once. R874:3

Signifies a cutting off of every other love that would conflict with our love for the Lord. Our earthly loves are to be counted as nothing in comparison. R5426:2 "Lovest thou me more than these?" (John 21:15) R2808:6

Not his cross -- Not sharing the Lord's reproaches and self-denials. R901:6

Not worthy of me -- Not of the class he wishes to make his bride. R901:6

If we turn aside from the path of humiliation and daily cross-bearing and strife for present exaltation and preferment, we are forgetting the very conditions upon which the future exaltation depends. R1988:2

Findeth his life -- Greek, psuche, soul, being. E335; R248:6

To lay hold on what remains of our earthly life and begin again to live after the flesh is to lose all claim upon the spiritual life. R936:5

Shall lose it -- He who keeps hold of the life already consecrated to sacrifice, thereby loses all life. R936:5

Loseth his life -- Surrenders his earthly life. R5476:1

Self-denial, even unto death. R4920:3, 936:2

The life to which we are justified by our faith in Jesus' ransom must be laid down, even as he laid down his life. (John 10:18) R814:2*

We cannot fully possess the new divine nature until the human nature is entirely dissolved, dead. R936:5

Shall find it -- Life much more abundant than now possessed. R936:5

Shall gain glory, honor, immortality; the divine nature. R5436:1

Matthew 10:40

Receiveth me -- The Lord is represented by every saint who is a member of his body. R547:6

Receiveth him -- They represented God as his mouthpieces whom he authorized to speak in his name. R3764:1

As the Queen is the Empress of India, she rules it through the agents of her government. Millions of her subjects, who have never seen her, respect and recognize her authority. R453:4

A prophet's reward -- In the Millennial age. R1469:6

Receiveth a righteous man -- It is toward the brethren of Christ that we should be particularly careful to exercise hospitality, even though they be strangers to us, if we recognize in them the Master's likeness, his spirit. R3432:1

In the name of -- Because he is a disciple. R1655:3, 1469:6

Matthew 10:42

And whosoever -- Including even a worldly man. T93

Including even the poor thief who spoke kindly to the dying Savior. F669

Shall give to drink -- But whosoever would harm one of the "little ones" who believed in him would have punishment. (Matt. 18:6) R5463:5

These little ones -- Of the little flock. R412:1

These were the "little ones" in malice and pride, and in the world's estimate. R2063:4

A cup of cold water -- Money for the Lord's work need not be refused if voluntarily offered by outsiders. F347

Some word or look or act of encouragement. R2073:1*

Not lose his reward -- In the Millennial age. R1469:6, 2612:6, 722:1, 259:1; T93

Rewarded for having ministered to the members of the Lord's body. R412:1
One highly exalted on the spiritual plane will not forget or ignore such loving loyalty of some earthly friends, and will surely manifest some special favor to such. R1821:2
Not a reward of glory, honor, immortality, but a good reward, more than compensating for the kindness they performed. R2701:4
If not in this life, in the life to come. R2847:3, 1655:3

Matthew 11

Matthew 11:1

In their cities -- In "Galilee of the nations," amongst those who made less religious profession, and amongst whom were few scribes, Pharisees or Doctors of the Law. R4594:6

Matthew 11:2

In the prison -- Jesus had not made any attempt to deliver his forerunner from prison, although he continually manifested great power in the healing of diseases and casting out of devils. R4594:6

Matthew 11:3

Art thou he -- Or are you also merely a forerunner, as I was. R748:2
Doubtless the principal cause of John's doubts was the disappointment of his Jewish expectations as to the manner of Christ's coming. The same is true today. R629:5

Perhaps supposing that, when appointed, Jesus would publicly announce himself with power and authority and bring honor and dignity to all associated with him. R748:2

Look for another -- For a still greater Messiah, of whom you are but a forerunner. R4594:6, 2621:1

Matthew 11:4

Go and shew John -- He expected John to be able to discern the time by the events. R748:2

When God would make known to us any great truth, he does not confine himself to any one method of proving it, but gives evidence in various ways. R629:3

These things -- It was by these that the Israelites were to recognize him as the Messiah, in fulfillment of the predictions of the prophets. R1314:6

Hear and see -- And now what do we see? The aims and threats of the discontent are against the wealthy, the Jew once more finding a home in the land of promise--evidences that Messiah is present again. R748:3-5
Jesus did not say, Go and tell John that we are now living in the beginning of the 70th week of Daniel's prophecy (Dan. 9:24-27), though that was true. R629:2

Matthew 11:5

Receive their sight -- It was the fulfillment of Isa. 61:1, the prophecy of his mission, to which Jesus called John's attention. R629:4 But we should not forget that Jesus' miracles were performed with a great deal of secrecy and over a large area of the country. The majority of Jews probably never saw one of the healed persons. R748:3
In due time the eyes and ears of understanding of all mankind will be opened. PD64/74

The dead are raised -- Jesus proclaimed liberty to the captives of death, illustrating the power to liberate by loosing a few from the bands of death. R629:4

And the poor -- Now, as then, it is the poor, the meek, who receive him gladly and to whom his special attention is directed. R629:5

Matthew 11:6

Not be offended -- Not allow John's faith to stumble in respect to me. R4595:1

A reed -- A weak, pliable character, easily shaken. R4595:1, 2622:1

Shaken with the wind -- No! They found John a rugged character, strong, independent in the advocacy of truth. R4595:1

With every wind of doctrine and fancy. R2622:1

Was it because God spoke to him as the wind makes music through the reeds? R5031:1

Matthew 11:8

In soft raiment -- Giving evidence of being related to the great, the wealthy, the noble of that time? No! He was simply clad and lived in seclusion. R4595:1

Matthew 11:9

A prophet -- Declaring the message of repentance, but also foretelling future events: that Jesus was the Lamb of God and that the Lord would baptize people with the holy Spirit and with fire. R4112:3

More than a prophet -- This noble character was God's chosen servant for heralding the Messiah to Israel. R4594:3

Matthew 11:10

Prepare thy way -- It was John's honor to herald the Lord in the flesh; it is our distinction to proclaim the parousia of the Son of Man and his glorious reign. R4113:1

Preparation for Jesus. His message was that the Kingdom of Heaven was about to be offered to them. R5031:1

Matthew 11:11

Not risen a greater -- The most highly honored of all the prophets. R1916:4

Therefore he will share among the highest honors that will come to the ancient worthy class. NS444:3

Great in the sense that he that ruleth his own spirit according to the principles of the divine Word is greater than he that taketh a city. (Prov. 16:32) R1916:1

But he was not great in the eyes of man: never a guest at the palace of Herod, but a prisoner; not an esteemed orator, but "a voice crying in the wilderness"; not arrayed in purple, but in camel's hair. R1916:1

John the Baptist -- The last of the prophets and the last of the "house of servants." To him was committed the honorable service of directly announcing the Savior; he discharged his duty with dignity. R4543:1

The forerunner of Jesus. R4543:5; OV199:1

None of the prophets was his superior. R4958:1; OV199:1

Baptism is valid even if the baptizer is not of the Kingdom class, though an elder or consecrated person would be preferable. R1541:4; F454, 655

He that is least -- The humblest one. R3868:1

There will be some least and some greater in the Kingdom. R1973:5 In the kingdom -- The spiritual phase of the Kingdom. R4958:2, 637:6

The election of the Gospel age. NS369:6

The spirit-begotten Church, joint-heirs with Christ in the Kingdom. R2788:2

Of heaven -- God's callings and elections are definite, positive, separate and distinct, as the various wheels in a great machine are separate and distinct from each other, while they all cooperate together in the work for which the machine is constructed. NS444:2

Is greater than he -- John was the last of the faithful under the Jewish dispensation. R4595:4

John tells us that his joy and privilege was not to be of the Bride, but to be a friend of the Bridegroom and to introduce him. R219:1; HG132:2
Reckoned as members of the house of sons, while the prophets belong to the preceding house of servants. R4958:2, 2562:3, 1872:3, 435:3; E28
Does not imply that John was disappointed. His cup of blessing being full, and never having been begotten of the holy Spirit, he will not be able to appreciate blessings higher than his own. R5030:6
The operation of God's spirit on the prophets was so different than on the Church that the humblest Christian may know more of God's plan than the greatest prophet. R435:3
God had promised him earthly perfection while he had promised the bride of Christ heavenly perfection. John will come forth as a perfect human being, the reward of his faithfulness. R5030:5, 3868:1; NS784:3
The least one in the heavenly phase shall be greater than the greatest in the visible, earthly phase of the Kingdom. R637:6*; HG731:6; NS663:2
Only the blood-justified could be invited to the High Calling, and John died before the sacrifice was completed. D625; F112
"God having provided some better thing for us." (Heb. 11:40) R4595:4, 2035:2
Because from the time of Christ, but not previously, the prize of joint-heirship with the Lord is open to his followers. T108; R2279:3; NS802:5
As Christ was to have the pre-eminence in the Kingdom it was necessary that he should be the first member of it. F86

Matthew 11:12

From the days of -- The Kingdom of Heaven began to have an existence when Jesus was anointed to be the King, at the time of his baptism by John. R703:1*

Kingdom of heaven -- The Church, the embryo Kingdom. A284; R1687:6, 1598:3, 1358:6, 1351:6; Q797:4, 423:1; PD59/70; HG164:6

Suffereth violence -- Violence crucified our king, stoned Stephen, beheaded Paul, crucified Peter, roasted others by fire, tossing them upon piercing forks. R702:6*

As our Lord suffereth violence from the Prince of this world, so will his followers. OV343:2

As with the Master, so with his followers, the violence comes more from the worldly-spirited ones in the nominal church than from the open rejectors of God. R1372:3

As a part of the preparation for the Kingdom glories. PD59/70

For righteousness' sake. OV194:4, 343:2; R5573:6

Teaching us lessons of faith, fortitude, courage, endurance, meekness, patience, sympathy and loving-kindness. R2130:2*

Trodden under foot during the Gentile times. (Luke 21:24) R1979:2

Despised and rejected of men, insignificant and ignored in the sight of men. Historians saw it not, only writing of human organizations, called "Christ's kingdoms," but not the true one. R2128:1

The submission to the violence of dominant evil has not been for lack of power by our Lord, but because it is not yet the "due time." D621

The Kingdom, when set up, cannot suffer, but must reign triumphantly. R702:5*

The violent take it -- The Ishmael and Esau classes, and Satan and his servants. D620; R2777:5; Q797:4

They caused the Lord's death and the scattering of the Church, etc. Q423:1

And have despitefully used the Head and the body members. R2935:2

Similar characters and conditions today, in the tares. R2778:3

They have outwardly been posing as the true Church of Christ, and have usurped the place of the true by force. OV345:6,7

The violent prince of this world lays them all low in death, but divine power will bring them forth to victory. R703:1*

By force -- The violent have dominated it by force for centuries. PD59/70

With overwhelming force of numbers and wealth, they subdue the little handful of saints, trample and crush their influence, and hinder the progress and spread of the heavenly Kingdom. R702:6*

Matthew 11:13

The prophets and the law -- But, though showing forth truth and foretelling the coming Kingdom, they could never be clearly understood until the gospel unraveled their mysteries. R702:3*

Until John -- John was the last of the prophets. R5030:6, 4958:1

Matthew 11:14

And if -- Intimating that John did not do all that is to be done by Elijah, and hence that a greater Elijah is to be expected. R2838:6, 1687:6

Ye will receive it -- By believing his message. B253

To as many of the Jews as were "Israelites indeed." OV323:1

But Israel did not receive John the Baptist as Elias, nor did they receive the Messiah. Therefore, again his presence must be heralded by another, who shall come in the spirit and power of Elias. R1379:2

John's work as Elijah did not fail because of his own lack of faith, but because of the Jews' unreadiness of heart to be influenced by him. R2838:6

To those who recognized his message and obeyed it and became the Lord's disciples, John fulfilled the work of Elijah. R3293:1

Likewise today we announce as at hand the reign of the Christ glorified, and point out the foretold antitypical Elijah to those "who can receive it." B254

This is Elias -- John the Baptist did a reformatory work which was in full accord with the prophecy regarding Elijah. R5030:6

The forerunner of Messiah. B253

Conditionally; in the same limited, shadowy sense in which the Kingdom was offered to the children of Israel after the flesh. HG68:5

Thus, whatever we find in either the life of Elijah or John which fits well the experience of the Church or her future course, we are justified in recognizing as typical. R968:4

In every particular there was some measure of likeness between John and the antitypical Elijah. OV323:1

His relationship to the future Elijah, the greater Elijah, was very similar to the relationship of our Lord Jesus to the greater Christ. OV322:2

John the Baptist stood for, or represented, a multitudinous Elijah, as Jesus stood for, or represented, a multitudinous Christ. R557:1

As John did an Elijah work to Israel, so the Church does the predicted Elijah work to the world, announcing the Lord's second advent. B253; OV322:3

Matthew 11:15

Hath ears to hear -- Jesus and the Apostles attempted, not to teach everybody, but merely those who hungered and thirsted after righteousness. R5244:1; B16; SM51:2, 52:T, 343:3

Sometimes this hearing ear comes through sorrow and tribulation. NS823:5
He must expect meekly to cast away many preconceived opinions as fast as he comes to see their lack of harmony with God's Word. B16

Not bandying the gospel in the streets, giving a reason for our hope to to him that asketh, but neither the Bible nor sound judgment dictates quarreling for truth's sake. R1468:4

Let him hear -- "He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches." (Rev. 2:7) B16

God is not trying to attract the world now; they are blind and deaf. SM343:3

These will have a special blessing, while those who do not give ear will have their portion with the hypocrites. NS435:3,5

This generation -- Greek, genea, meaning people living contemporaneously, as in "This generation shall not pass." D603

Matthew 11:18

He hath a devil -- Because John, as a prophet, was abstemious to the extreme. R5031:4

Matthew 11:19

And they say -- Similarly we may be charged with pride and ambition for making use of business methods to promulgate the "good tidings." R4824:1

A man gluttonous -- There is nothing that either God or his people can do that the Adversary, and those who have his spirit, cannot use as an occasion for faultfinding. R4824:1

Because Jesus presented himself less peculiarly than John. R5031:4

But wisdom -- The divine wisdom, divine truth. R1737:1

Expressed in the Scriptures and in the laws of nature. R2060:2

Neither slander, nor opposition from our enemies, shall swerve us from the path which we believe is marked out for us by the Lord. R4824:5

Is justified -- Proved right, accepted. R1737:1 Of her children -- They show their parentage, reflect their mother's likeness. The children of the light should walk in the light in reference to health, food, cleanliness and clothing, as well as spiritual matters. R20650:2

To upbraid -- Not in the form of a tirade of scolding and abuse, but a simple statement of the facts. R2267:1

They repented not -- The majority rejected his Messiahship. R4599:1

Not for rejecting the favor of the Kingdom, but for the sinful condition which hindered their acceptance of it. They were so sinful, so alienated from God, that very evidently they would be worthy of serious punishment. R2267:1

Because the "god of this world hath blinded the minds of them that believe not." (2 Cor. 4:4) R2267:5

Matthew 11:21

Woe unto thee -- You have had more knowledge and opportunity, and you have a responsibility therefore; it means more disadvantage. CR501:4; R2613:1

Every sin and evil propensity cultivated now will require punishment and discipline in the age to come. R2613:2

His rejection of them incidentally permitted the sending of the gracious call to the Kingdom honors to believers among the Gentiles. R2623:3

In Tyre and Sidon -- Notoriously unholy, licentious, unclean cities. R2623:3

Would have repented -- Yet the worldly-wise and prudent tell us that these poor sinners passed into eternal torment without a chance. R2624:4

Matthew 11:22

More tolerable -- Because their sin had been against less light and privilege. R5363:6, 5083:5, 4599:4

The greater the light rejected, the more will be the stripes received. R569:6, 412:1

God takes a different standpoint from the majority of people. He does not merely say, "Is this moral or immoral?" Rather, "What is the heart attitude?" R2623:3

For Tyre and Sidon -- Two flourishing Gentile cities, very full of wickedness and immorality, so that their names were synonymous for that which was unholy, licentious, unclean. R2623:3

With their gross immoralities but better condition of heart. R2623:3

Tyre and Sidon had suffered a terrible overthrow in the midst of carnage, pestilence and blood. R1618:5

These heathen cities would have repented with far less preaching. R5075:1

Day of judgment -- The thousand years of his Messianic reign. R5179:6

Than for you -- With superior morality, but an evil condition of heart.

R2623:6

Those who heard Jesus, unmoved, had hardened their hearts and would be correspondingly disadvantaged in the judgment day. R5363:5

Matthew 11:23

Thou Capernaum -- Who thought themselves quite respectable, church-going people. HG236:2, 647:6

Capernaum was favored above all other cities of Palestine because there our Lord did most of his miracles and preaching. R5075:1

Exalted unto heaven -- Highly lifted up in privileges of knowledge, opportunity and divine favor and blessing. R5075:1, 4599:2, 4557:1, 3726:2, 2623:2, 2600:4

Highly exalted by having Christ as a resident. E376; PD62/73

Brought down to hell -- Greek: hades, the grave, oblivion; because they received not the message. R5075:2, 4557:1, 4599:2; E375

Even the site where Capernaum stood is a matter of dispute. R2600:4, 3726:3

Fulfilled in the trouble which came upon the Jews and which destroyed their nationality. R2623:3

Not only the Sodomites, but the city in which they lived, is spoken of as going down to hell, and there are other cities there. HG556:2; R734:5*

Been done in Sodom -- The Sodomites were not so great sinners as were the Jews who had more knowledge. A110; OV227:T

Whose wickedness was so great that it brought upon her a fierce destruction from the Lord. R2623:6

It was for want of light that these people were destroyed. R659:3*, 447:3*

They did not, therefore, have a full opportunity. A110; R545:5; OV227:1; HG345:4

Matthew 11:24

More tolerable -- Less severe, less of an ordeal. OV43:1

That time will be tolerable for all in proportion as their sins had been sins of ignorance. HG336:3

The punishment of that age will be in proportion to past guilt. R2613:1, 722:3

There will be rewards and "stripes" according to the deeds of the present life, as well as according to their conduct under that trial. R2611:5

It will be a tolerable time for Capernaum, and yet more tolerable for Sodom. OV227:1; A110; R5179:6, 2267:4; HG149:6, 345:4; NS704:1

Capernaum had sinned against greater light. OV227:1; R5083:5, 4599:2; PD62/73

Sodom and Gomorrah will rise up as superior to some of the Jews. NS704:1

The people of Capernaum were evidently harder-hearted than the people of Sodom and, from the Lord's standpoint, were more blameworthy. R4599:2

Inasmuch as they had superior advantages to others which they neglected, they would be correspondingly less benefited by the Millennial blessings and mercies of God. NS311:4

Their rejection of him much more resembled the condition of wicked rebellion against God that would lead to the second death than did the conduct of the Sodomites. R2267:4

Land of Sodom -- The eternal fate of the Sodomites is not sealed: "Sodom and her daughters shall return to their former estate." (Ezek. 16:55)

R5179:6

Our Lord guarantees them a full opportunity. OV227:1

Showing conclusively that all that are in their graves shall hear the voice of the Son of Man and come forth--to be judged and tried. R2267:5

The death of the Sodomites, therefore, was merely the Adamic death hastened; not the Second Death. OV43:2

Day of judgment -- The 1000 year day of Messiah's reign in which judgment, or trial, will be granted to the world. PD62/73; R5179:6, 4599:1, 2624:1, 2267:4

Showing that no judgment had as yet been reached in any of these cases. R2624:1

Many of the heathen, who have enjoyed little or nothing of God's grace, will be in a more favorable condition than some neglectful ones who are now richly favored. R4599:4

Than for thee -- Because they will then receive and be blessed by the light which you have rejected. A110

And said -- Offered audible prayer in the presence of fellow-believers. R2251:6

I thank thee Lord -- He appreciated the Father's wisdom in not allowing any but those of proper heart condition to see and clearly understand the present call of the Church. R4599:2

We, with the Master, may be glad of the wisdom displayed in the divine arrangement of hiding certain features of the plan of the ages from all except the "very elect." R4599:2

Had those rich and great seen fully the true situation it would have increased their responsibility. R5075:5, 4599:2

It is utterly impossible to harmonize such a statement with the common, but unscriptural, view that they had gone or were going to a place of eternal torment. R2267:6

Hid these things -- This gracious plan which provides such wonderful future opportunities for the poor Sodomites. R2624:4, 236:4*

For the world to have known in advance would doubtless have been injurious. R4644:5, 4444:6

It would not have been wise for him to have revealed all the secrets of his plan because the Adversary and his associates would have done all in their power to upset his plans. CR90:4

The unconsecrated mind cannot understand the Mystery of God. SM12:2

The mass of mankind are blind to the spiritual things, the calling and election of the Church. R4599:1

From the wise -- The worldly-wise, by permitting contempt and ridicule to be attached thereto. B29

Particularly the wise residents of Capernaum and Bethsaida. R2267:5

The Pharisees were too self-satisfied, the scribes too learned, and the Doctors of the Law too proud and pretentious, because they were under the influence of mammon. CR10:2; NS398:2

Whom the God of this world hath blinded with the brilliancy of their own earthly learning and with their love of honor of men. R1418:3

"The wisdom of their wise men shall perish and the understanding of their prudent men shall be hid." (Isa. 29:14) R589:3

Who regard it as a fancy, a fairy story, which none but the simple-minded and children would take seriously. R3585:2 Passing by some of the most learned, the Lord is using channels, agencies and messengers that are not acceptable to many. R5258:4

And prudent -- Prudent according to the world's standards--preferring numbers, popularity and honor among men and the financial emoluments of these rather than the truth. R2639:5

Too prudent. R972:4

The keen and the shrewd, the learned and the great. R3585:2

Those who do not believe in the doctrine of restitution are the ones who think it imprudent to teach it. R236:4*

Revealed them -- Not working some miracle upon the mind to open their understanding; rather, he used natural means, reasoned with them until they were able to grasp the divine purpose. R3910:5

Unto babes -- So far as human craft and policy are concerned; the honest-hearted, the unsophisticated, the meek and poor in spirit.

R2267:6,5; SM13:2

In simplicity and meekness. R589:3

Having less to lose of an earthly kind. CR10:2; NS398:3

"Unlearned and ignorant men." (Acts 4:13) R5258:4

The Lord's "little ones"--meek, humble, teachable. HG518:3

Those who are of humble mind, ready to be taught of the Lord, instead of wishing to teach the Lord. R2624:6

Those who make no boast of wisdom according to the course of the world. R2492:6

The babes in worldly wisdom have more advantage in every way as respects faith and obedience in this Gospel age. NS727:6

It is not possible to deceive the child--the faithful, who ignore all prejudice, pride and ambition, and simply follow the divine word, testing all things by it. R957:5

While the present Gospel message is for the highest type of men, it appeals specially to the middle class of these--the humble but intelligent, rather than the rich or great. R2692:4

From the worldly standpoint, foolish babes to place so much reliance upon the things unseen as yet and to ignore the prospects held out by mammon in the present life. CR10:2

Strong characters may be developed, and high ideals attained in the heart and in deed, amongst the lowly and obscure. R3952:3

Who will babble forth the truth unceremoniously. R942:2, 236:4*

Matthew 11:26

Good in thy sight -- "As the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my ways higher than your ways and my thoughts higher than your thoughts." (Isa. 55:9) CR90:5

There is a wisdom in God's course in this matter which is not apparent on the surface. R5075:4

Jesus appreciated the Father's wisdom in this matter. R4599:2

It has pleased the Father to let "the wise be taken in their own craftiness." (1 Cor. 3:19) R2624:6

God was (is) hiding from mankind truths which are necessary for their salvation; hiding these for good, sufficient, wise and loving reasons--reasons which our Lord understood and also approved. NS555:5

If the hiding of divine counsel from mankind meant eternal torture for the blinded ones, Jesus could not have thanked the Father for that. R4644:5

Matthew 11:27

All things -- To him the Father has given all power in earth and heaven. (Matt. 28:19) "He is Lord of all"--next to the Father, for "the head of Christ is God." (1 Cor. 11:3) R296:3

No man knoweth -- Recognizeth. R2268:1

The disciples knew him as a man, but they did not understand the secret of his wonderful being--his prehuman glory. R1059:5

Neither knoweth -- To know the Father and the Son in the intimate sense as one knows the mind, the heart, of an intimate friend. R2625:1

Save the Son -- Whose prehuman fellowship with the Father, lasting for centuries, was impressed with sufficient clearness upon our Lord, after he was made flesh, to enable him to say "What he hath seen and heard, that he testifies." (John 3:32) E91

Son will reveal him -- All we can know is what is revealed. R106:1*

The Great Teacher reveals the Father to all who are pupils in his school. R4599:5, 5075:5

If it pleased the Lord to make known to us some things of his glorious purposes, it would be disrespectful on our part not to feel a deep interest in them and seek to know more. NS683:4

Come unto me -- Not unto some sect. C186; HG694:2

This is an appeal to reason. R5422:3

This call is to the poor, the broken-hearted, the heavy-laden, the unsatisfied. R5075:6

The Call to follow Christ. OV429:3

A call or invitation to exercise faith in the Lord, to come out on his side, to accept his deliverance from the yoke of sin and death. NS379:6

"No man can come unto the Father but by me." (John 14:6) R469:1*

Those invited to be the Lord's followers are not smitten with symbolic arrow and sword, as are his enemies. SM53:1

All ye that labor -- The Lord does not invite the listless and idle.

R1764:3

May have a measure of application to farm labor, etc., but its special significance is to labor of the heart. HG746:5

The Bible addresses itself, primarily, not to the ambitious and hopeful, but to the laboring and heavy-laden and despairing. CR15:4; NS488:1

The poor, the broken-hearted. R5075:6

The world in general is laboring for the things of the present life, and has almost no faith in respect to the things of the world to come. CR16:2

Not all the poor--but the poor in purse, in influence, in education, in character, with all their disadvantages, have the great advantage that their condition is favorable to humility. HG746:4

Trying to do an impossible thing as members of a fallen race--keep the perfect Law of God. R315:2

There are two classes of laborers: the world, laboring for things of the present life; and the followers of the Lord who "labor not for the meat that perisheth" (John 6:27) but for that which endureth unto life eternal. CR16:2; NS482:5

You who are burdened in the Lord's service. R245:4

And are heavy laden -- Who feel the yoke of the Law Covenant. R1728:5; R5885:3,6, 2625:2, 1540:2

Either from the yoke of the Law, as the believing Jews, or from the yoke of Satan, as the believing Gentiles. R2625:3

The only direct invitations given by our Savior were to the earth-weary, toil-burdened and desolate hearts. R108:2*

Despised and grief-stricken. CR15:5

Who feel the burden of sin, imperfection and death. R2625:2, 5886:2, 5737:3

With an appreciation of sin and degradation. HG746:6

Unsatisfied. R5075:6

Weary and almost discouraged with their failure. R1733:5, 975:2

Not only with our own imperfections, but the weaknesses and frailties of our friends and neighbors all have their influence upon us. NS380:3

It is when earthly hopes become blighted that one gets the ear to hear the Lord's message. CR15:5; NS488:2

The Jews were under the yoke of the nation of Rome, but the yoke here referred to is a religious yoke, the yoke of the Law. R5885:2

There is a class today in Christendom, not under the Jewish Law, but nevertheless realizing laws, rules and standards of divine justice, and desiring to conform their lives thereto. NS381:2

Will give you rest -- Justification. R5105:5, 4579:6, 2625:2; Q66:1

The blessing of justification by faith is merely to fit and prepare us to take the yoke and become a co-laborer with the Lord in the Father's service. R2625:5

There is no rest for the weary at heart except in union with Christ.

PD14/23; SM53:1

There is no rest of heart in the restless striving of selfishness and sin; yet these experiences sometimes lead the weary to the great Sin-Bearer. R4932:4

Mourning and sorrow are necessary before we can appreciate the comfort which God has provided. R5003:6

Only those who feel the need of rest can appreciate the invitation. R108:2*

The Lord's people have a peace and rest of mind through knowledge of God's plan and character. R5403:2

I have the will and the way to help you to come to the Father. R5422:3

In the full assurance that he has "paid it all" for both Jew and Gentile--for all. R975:2

This rest is not of general temporal prosperity and freedom from care, toil and all restraint. R1961:5

A new set of laborers in the world, the followers of Jesus, with new hopes, ambitions, peace, joy, which far transcend any that they had previously had. CR16:2

The blessed rest of freedom from the galling yoke of the oppressor. R902:2

It will mean to us the wiping away of our tears, the cancellation of a large degree of our troubles. NS693:6

The present rest of faith will by and by be superseded by the actual rest of the Kingdom. HG747:1

For your souls, now; and thus you will be prepared to enter into the heavenly rest as "joint heirs" with Christ in his Heavenly Kingdom. R4599:6

Even though he himself was without a place to lay his own head. (Matt. 8:20) R1063:2*

Of all the books of the world, the Bible offers cheer and comfort to hopeless classes. CR15:4

This will be fulfilled in an especial sense during the Millennial Age. B40

Take my yoke -- A yoke signifies servitude. R5885:2, 4599:5, 2625:2, 1276:2*

Not any sectarian yoke. C187; R902:5; NS381:4

The figure being that of an ox yoked to a cart with a load. NS380:4

Jesus was inviting as many of the Jews as were in the proper attitude of heart to join with him. R5886:1

Bind yourself, time, influence, means, opportunities, all, to the Lord's service. This is an invitation, not a command. R2625:5,6, 2268:4

Of obedience to the divine will. R4599:6

He invites us to come and make a full consecration of ourselves to him and his service. R2625:6

All in the world are under yokes of some kind--political yokes, social yokes, financial or business yokes, yokes of sin, of selfishness, of pride, etc. R1961:2

The new yoke would not be upon the old creature. We not only fulfill the requirements of the law, but we do more. But it is the new creature that does this. R5885:5 It is one thing to fight against sin and quite another thing to join with the Lord as co-laborers, and thus to have our puny powers supplemented by his grace and strength. NS381:1

A yoke is generally arranged for two, and our Lord speaks of it as his yoke, by which we are to understand that he is also a servant. R2625:3

The Lord was burdened, not with his own weaknesses, but with the burden of the contradiction of sinners against himself and with the burdens of his disciples. NS380:3

The Lord imposes burdens and yokes upon those now being called, whereas he intends to completely break the yokes and do away with all burdens during the Millennial age. NS379:6

Upon you -- Instead of the yoke of the Law covenant or the yoke of Satan, with which you have previously been bound. R2625:3, 5885:2

And learn of me -- I will be your partner, will take the other side of the yoke with you. R2625:3

Become learners, disciples, pupils in the school of Christ. R5737:3

How to bear the yoke. R955:5*

Not only in an intellectual way, but also through the medium of the heart. R1789:2

Learn the good lessons, whereby he prepares them for future glories, honors, immortality. CR16:3

Do not attempt to guide yourself. R1961:3

From him we learn the way; in company with him we catch his blessed spirit; we learn of that meekness which despises no humiliation. R1276:5*

Not until we have taken the Lord into our daily life as our personal companion, confidential friend, counselor, comforter and guide, as well as Redeemer and Lord, can we fully learn those lessons which give joy. R1789:2

I am meek -- The secret of rest is in a meek and quiet spirit. R1962:1

This humility of mind and heart was, in many respects, the secret of his success. R5186:2

Teachable. Even in his perfection, these were things to be learned. R5370:2

Only those who have meekness and lowliness of heart are prepared to humble themselves, acknowledge their own unworthiness and need of help, and accept the Lord's proffered assistance and take his yoke. NS382:6

The Lord with unerring precision has always chosen the meek for every great work--Moses, the prophets, the ancient worthies, the Lord Jesus, the twelve apostles--and so also the whole Gospel Church. R1921:1

Lowly in heart -- Because he was meek and lowly in heart, Jesus could ignore his own will, cease to do it, and take upon him the yoke of the Father's will. R955:6*

The quiet spirit will humbly submit to the easy yoke of the divine will and cease the strife to gratify the perverted human will. R902:2

Rest unto your souls -- Typified by the seventh day of rest of the Jews.

"We which have believed do enter into rest." (Heb. 4:3) R2534:4

Rest from the vain ambitions and fruitless works and plans which other taskmasters would force upon us. R1276:6*

Rest in him, our true Yoke-Fellow. R5886:2

The second rest, the "second blessing," the growing and abiding peace and joy of the holy Spirit. R2625:4

And not merely rest to the flesh--mind-rest, nor merely bodily rest. He who believes fully, rests fully; he who believes only partially, rests but partially. R2534:3, 2268:1

Soul satisfaction: the peace of God which passeth all understanding will rule in our hearts. R2625:4

Matthew 11:30

For my yoke -- The Master's yoke was his hearty, glad submission to the Heavenly Father's will. NS380:6

We have bound ourselves unto the Lord with a covenant of faithfulness unto sacrifice, sacrifice unto death. NS381:6

As compared with the yoke of politics, society, business, sin, selfishness or pride. R1961:2

Is easy -- Comfortable and enjoyable, an elastic yoke, meeting varied conditions. R5886:4

To the world, consecration looks like a terrible yoke, but to the true child of God it seems a most reasonable service. R2625:5

Easy for those whom it fits. R2268:4, 5886:4

Because of his love to us and our love to him. R1893:4

Because we love righteousness and hate iniquity, and because we love the Lord and the Heavenly Father. NS382:5

Because our yoke is appreciated and because the Lord is with us in the yoke. Our burdens are his burdens, our trials his trials, and our interests his interests. R2625:6

When we let it rest naturally upon us. R902:2

In the sense that it is possible to bear and that it is not galling. R5886:2

Because all things work together for good--the heavier the burden, the greater the blessing and reward. R2625:5

A yoke that does not fit an animal will chafe him and cause restlessness; whereas a yoke that is properly fitted will be comfortable and make the load more easily drawn. R5886:4, 2268:4

That which makes the yoke set lightly upon us is the fixedness of purpose which does not chafe under it nor try to get away from it. R1276:3*

Few would say the Apostle Paul's was an easy yoke, but evidently he thought so, counting it a privilege to endure hardness as a good soldier of Christ. R1961:5

However hard or difficult it may seem to others, the Lord's supplied grace enables those who are his to triumph in all things. NS170:6

We may well count all our losses, all our crosses, our burdens, as light afflictions, because of the excellency of the knowledge of divine favors and blessings which we have received through Christ Jesus our Lord. R2268:4

My burden is light -- Much lighter than the yoke and burden of sin. R4599:6

The secret of the light load lay in the easy yoke. NS380:5

No one is required to do more than he is able to perform. R5886:5

The Lord himself is the great burden-bearer of those who are yoked with him. He will not suffer them to be burdened with more than is for their good. R2625:6, 5886:4

As compared with the yoke of sin and the burden of death. Nevertheless, they have some burdens which decrease as they become acquainted with their heavenly Father. NS223:2

His will is not burdensome, but a delight to us. R245:4

Matthew 12

Matthew 12:1

Jesus went -- Probably on the way to the synagogue. R3316:6

Through the corn -- The wheat. R3754:1

To pluck the ears -- The Pharisees claimed that rubbing the grain in the hands and blowing away the chaff constituted winnowing and threshing, thus violating the Sabbath. R3316:3, 4600:4, 3754:2, 2268:1

Some today who would not ride a street car on the Sabbath would think nothing of allowing their minds to dwell on worldly or evil subjects. This is hypocrisy. R3754:2

And to eat -- The Pharisees had a rule that no food should be eaten until after worship in the synagogue. R3316:6

Matthew 12:2

The Pharisees -- Pharisaism had become formalism in many respects. R2268:6

There is considerable similarity between the scribes and Pharisees of our Lord's day and so-called orthodox Christians of our day. In some denominations particularly, there is evidenced the same spirit of despising others outside their favored cult. R3315:3

They said -- Those who today make an attack upon the truth only cause its beauties and harmonies to be the more clearly discerned by those whose eyes of understanding are opened. R3316:2

Is not lawful -- Those who have little of the truth are sometimes great sticklers for formalities. R2268:2

Upon the Sabbath -- The Great Teacher, as a Jew, was as much under the obligation of every feature of the Law Covenant as any other Jew. We may be sure he violated no feature of it. R4600:2, 2268:6

Christians are free to follow the spirit of the law rather than its letter. This is true of the entire Ten Commandments, as well as of the fourth. R4599:6

Spiritual Israel keeps Sabbath every day: resting in the finished work of Christ, resting from our own works, from all endeavor to justify ourselves through the law. R3753:4, 2269:5

Typical. The true Christian enjoys the antitype. The seventh day represents a rest of a higher character, a rest of faith instead of a physical rest. R4600:1, 2269:4

As seven is a type of perfection or completeness, so the seventh day rest was a type of the complete or perfect rest which we have in Christ. R2269:4

We can rest the most when we work the hardest. Q608:1

Let our homes be the most quiet of all on the appointed day of rest, let no sound of labor or worldly pleasure be heard, but let our joy of hope, love and faith abound. R3753:6

The early Church began to meet on the first day of the week because it was on that day that Christ arose from the dead, and on that day were all of his post-resurrection appearances. No wonder it became known to them as the Lord's day. R4600:2

It wouldn't surprise me if mankind kept the seventh day during the Millennial age. Q608:1

And did eat -- The emergencies of the case justified the deviation from the rule. It was a case of necessity, to preserve life. R3316:3, 3754:2, 2268:3

The shewbread -- Type of the truth. T22, 115

Matthew 12:5

In the temple -- Proving that labor done sacrificially for the assistance of others, as well as for their own necessities, could be no violation of the fourth commandment. R2268:3

And are blameless -- The Law specifically provided for the labor which they would perform, and hence such labor could not be considered a profanation of the Sabbath. R3316:3

Matthew 12:6

Greater than the temple -- These disciples were doing still more consecrated work than the priests and the Levites in the temple because he, the representative of the Father, was greater than the temple. R3316:3

Matthew 12:7

If ye had known -- Equivalent to saying that they did not know its meaning. R539:1*

Mercy and not sacrifice -- God is desirous of seeing in his creatures the quality of mercy toward one another, rather than merely the sacrificing of their comforts. R4600:4

It was the loving kindness of Jesus that disturbed their pharisaical natures and called forth their opposition. R539:1*

Consequently any deeds of mercy, sympathy, pity done on the Sabbath are more pleasing in God's sight than sacrifices performed in the typical temple. R2268:3

This mercy would have hindered them from condemning the disciples. Similarly today, the great failing of many critics and fault-finders is their lack of mercy, of love. R3754:4

Not have condemned -- The fault-finding disposition that is ready to accuse and condemn everybody indicates a wrong condition of heart. R3316:4

Matthew 12:8

Is Lord even of -- Is the proper teacher to set forth the real significance of. R3754:4, 3316:4

The sabbath day -- Type of the Seventh Thousand Year day. B40

Into the synagogue -- Where they wished to find ground for an accusation against the Lord before the congregation. R3316:6

Shall have one sheep -- He knew their tender spots of selfishness. R2269:1

Fall into a pit -- The poor cripple had been trapped into sin and sickness by the Adversary. R2269:1

On the sabbath -- Although labor was prohibited under the Law, it was to bring rest, comfort, refreshment and blessing, and not to bring hunger, inconvenience and distress to either man or beast. R2268:3

Lift it out -- Because of their love of gain, to avoid its death and, hence, a financial loss. R2268:5

Even though it might require considerable exercise for several persons. How foolish, then, to find fault with our Lord who, by one word, could rebuke the disease. R3317:1

Than a sheep -- This is something the world does not seem to have learned. R3754:5

On the sabbath days -- Jesus did many of his miracles on the Sabbath as a prophetic picture of the antitypical Sabbath day being the Millennium. R4600:5

Matthew 12:13

Was restored whole -- Manifesting the predominance of love above any law along the lines of the prophecy he had just quoted, that mercy was higher in God's estimation than sacrifice. R3754:5

Demonstrating that he had the divine favor, and that his teaching on the subject had this evidence of its truthfulness. R4600:4

Matthew 12:14

Then the Pharisees -- Manifesting a rabid spirit of sectarianism and self-importance, imitated by some in our day who lack the spirit of the truth. R3754:5

Council against him -- Less popular in Galilee than in Judea anyway, they felt that their influence before the people had been lessened by their conflict with the Lord. R3754:4

Might destroy him -- The Lord's superior teachings excited the Pharisees to envy, malice, hatred and the very spirit of murder. R4600:5
They felt fully justified in murdering anyone whose words and conduct so overmatched them as to hinder their influence from spreading. R3754:6

Matthew 12:15

He withdrew -- Setting the example to be on the lookout for divine deliverance and the opening of a way of escape from things too difficult to endure. F508; R1735:1

Matthew 12:19

In the streets -- Not bandying the gospel in the streets, giving a reason for our hope to him that asketh. Neither the Bible nor sound judgment dictates quarreling for the truth's sake. R1468:4

Matthew 12:20

A bruised reed -- A Christian not wholly consecrated. F684

A humble, contrite, faithful heart. God takes cognizance of it and confers his blessing. R1945:5

Shall he not break -- God kindly condescends to human ignorance and weakness. R1675:1

If there be even a slight disposition to penitence, he fosters and cherishes it. R1614:5

And smoking flax -- Smouldering faith. F684

Shall he not quench -- If there is even a smouldering spark of love toward God, he will fan the spark, if perchance it might become a blaze. R1772:5, 2073:1*

Send forth judgment -- Justice, righteousness, truth. D18
When Christ shall assume his kingly office at his second advent. NS640:5
Unto victory -- Thus making Jehovah's footstool glorious. E47
Life and immortality were brought to light by Jesus' own successful probation. HG40:3
When all evil and all willful evil-doers shall have been cut off. His victory will consist in the establishment of righteousness and peace, no matter how many or how few fall in the conflict. R1443:5

Matthew 12:23

The son of David -- "The Lord shall give him the throne of his father David." (Luke 1:32) C257
The long-promised king of David's line, the Messiah. E130, 133; C257; PD65/77; SM210:2

Matthew 12:24

Pharisees -- As we see how blindly the scribes and Pharisees hated Jesus, and said all manner of evil against him, we see that really they were on Satan's side. R4608:3
But by Beelzebub -- Satan: the first and, for a long time, the only enemy of the divine government. R2171:5
Refuted by Jesus' refusal to accept the testimony of any demon. R3310:4
The deluded Pharisees had even charged the Master with being Satan himself. (Matt. 10:25) R4608:5
Such a manifestation of hatred, malice and opposition to light came not through the "fall" and cannot be forgiven as such. R723:5
The prince -- The chief, doubtless because of being by nature a superior order of being. R2171:5, 4608:5
Of the devils -- Of the angels which fell at the time of the flood. R2171:5
His influence or spirit is exercised in his servants much the same way that the spirit of God works in his children. R370:6

Matthew 12:25

Said unto them -- The Master took the time to philosophize with them on this subject. R4608:5
"When he was reviled, he reviled not again." (1 Pet. 2:23) R4802:6
Kingdom divided -- Satan's struggles to retain control of mankind will be specially desperate at its close--before he is "bound" for the thousand years. R2189:2
Against itself -- In its continued subdivision into sects the Protestant church has had its strength so decimated that, as the Master long ago predicted, it is doomed to fall. R1294:6*

Matthew 12:26

And if Satan -- Whose very existence is now denied by many. F609
Spirit demonstrations are made by spirits who hate God and have no fellowship with that which is good. They universally reject the Bible as the Word of God, denouncing it as a fable and unworthy of belief. HG327:3*

Cast out Satan -- By aiding the miraculous cure of the sick. F641
We advocate no general rejection of healings and miracles as being Satanic, but a careful study of every person or system seeking to establish itself by miracles. F638

As he is now doing through "Christian Science." R2189:1,2, 3784:3
Now, as Satan's kingdom is about to be overthrown, it is his effort to support it with many wonderful works. R5802:1, 3275:1, 1644:4
Satan's power of death makes quite possible his relief from sickness through agencies of his choice for the purpose of enforcing their false doctrines. R1685:6, 1644:3

The demons must sham to be "angels of light," teachers of advanced truths and good physicians, both of souls and bodies, in order to re-ensnare those who are feeling after God. R2189:2

He has long palmed himself off as a teacher; but Satan in the role of faith-healer is a novelty belonging chiefly to our day, though undoubtedly he has had to do with the relic-miracles of Papacy for centuries. R3120:2

His kingdom stand -- When Satan would work against his own associates, it would imply the speedy fall of his empire. R3784:2, 4608:5

The necessity for his playing reformer and good physician today is an evidence that his fall is near. F641

Matthew 12:27

Beelzebub -- Satan, because created on a higher plane, is styled the Prince of demons in his relationship to the fallen angels. R4608:5, 1686:1

Do your children -- He pointed out that demons had been cast out by some whom they acknowledged and honored. R4608:5

Matthew 12:28

The spirit of God -- Influence or power of God. R372:5
Which I do not claim as my own power. E271

If he, by God's power, cast out demons, it was an evidence that God's Kingdom was nigh, just as he had proclaimed. R4608:5

Matthew 12:29

One enter into -- This would be in the second presence of our Lord. From the time of our Lord's parousia, disorder began in Satan's household.

R4609:6

Strong man's house -- His household, which would include the fallen angels. R4609:3

Spoil his goods -- All the present institutions of the world are Satan's goods and arrangements. Q626:1; SM103:1; R1626:6

In his Reign of Righteousness, our Lord will destroy the works of evil, sin, superstition, ignorance, etc. SM243:1

First bind -- Seems to imply that it will begin in a sudden manner.

R4609:3

The first work of the new king is the binding of Satan. Truth will be the chain which will bind evil. When the knowledge of the Lord fills the whole earth, Satan will be completely bound. R430:3,6*

Before anarchy comes, Satan must be bound. The collapse of Babylon, ecclesiastical systems and false doctrines, will indicate that Satan has been quite fully bound. Q626:1

The prince of this world, being slow to move out though his lease has expired, will be put out, bound hand and foot, causing a great deal of trouble. R5328:6

Every advance step of light and knowledge is that much restraint upon darkness and evil superstition. R4609:6

How will Satan be bound? Not with handcuffs. Q627:2

The strong man -- Satan. SM103:1; R4609:3

"And he laid hold on the dragon, that old serpent, which is the Devil, and bound him a thousand years." (Rev. 20:2) C341; R4609:3

Gentile supremacy. R5526:2

That system of things of which Satan has stood as the head. R4609:3

And then -- If the house is being spoiled already, must we not conclude that the personal devil has been bound for some time. R4695:3*

Spoil his house -- Our Lord will spoil Satan's goods, overthrow his arrangements and institutions that are so deceptive. SM103:1

These will be spoiled in the great time of anarchy which will make ready for the establishment of the Kingdom of Messiah. Q626:1

Christ shall not only bind the strong man, but then he shall spoil his house, and during his reign he shall distribute the spoil to mankind, the dominion of earth. R575:1

Overturn his arrangements in order to establish a better. R668:5

Drive his household out of power. C341

"He shall divide the spoils of the strong." (Isa. 53:12) R575:1

When Satan's power begins to fail because the stronger than he begins to spoil his house, then this system will begin to be seen, revealed, and recognized in its true character, as "The Mystery of Iniquity." R711:1

Hence we cannot pray our Father to grant abundant harvests, send rains, prevent famines, droughts, wars and pestilences. R798:4

Matthew 12:30

Not with me -- The side of God, truth, righteousness. R4608:3

If we believe that there is a Chief Reaper, we ought to recognize him and look for his guidance over the harvest field. We see different things going on, all under the supervision of the Great Reaper. CR63:4

Are we now to have a different Reaper? Will the same Reaper change his plans? Or shall we expect the great Chief Reaper to continue his work just as he began in an orderly procedure to its full culmination? CR62:6

Whoever thinks he may do a separate harvest work, and that each should do a separate work according to the bent of his own mind, has misunderstood the divine program. R3885:4

Is against me -- Having thus answered their objection, he showed that they were against him and thus opposing God. R4608:5

The side of error, falsehood, Satan. R4608:3

The entire human family is either on one side or the other of a great battle between right and wrong, truth and error. R4608:2

The Sadducees, Pharisees and Herodians made common cause in opposition to the Master and the harvest work in the end of the Jewish age. R3883:5

In our day, devotees of every sect can meet together in harmony; but all, with one accord, are violently opposed to present truth. R3883:3

In this day of the Lord's presence, it becomes our duty, as well as our privilege, to judge who is on the Lord's side; and who is against him is against us. R1362:3

So far as the Lord is concerned, nobody can upset the work, but you can do that which is the work of the Adversary in the way of interrupting the Lord's work. CR64:5

Gathereth not with me -- Their zeal is not according to a knowledge of God's plans; they are not working with God. R634:4*

Scattereth abroad -- If others want to work outside and scratch around, let them do so. Let the Chief Reaper do the interrupting if it is necessary. CR64:5

They hinder the harvest work, they attempt to sow discord amongst the under-reapers by saying all manner of evil falsely against some of them. R3884:5

Matthew 12:31

I say unto you -- Whether or not the scribes and Pharisees came to a sufficiently clear appreciation of God's holy power to constitute them amenable to the Second Death, we cannot judge. E272

All manner of sin -- Ordinary sins resulting from the fall, ignorance, superstition, etc. R4608:6; E273

To have misunderstood and misrepresented the invisible God would have been a much lighter offense. E271

And blasphemy -- Malicious words of opposition (see verse 36). R723:5

Shall be forgiven -- Would all, in God's providence, be ultimately forgivable, if not willful. R4608:6; E273

Not may, but shall; but not without repentance. God, by his goodness, will lead men to repentance. R78:1*

In some respects it is a mercy that the world is, in a large measure, blind and deaf, and therefore in the same proportion irresponsible as respects the message now being delivered to the meek. NS208:3

During this age, for lack of light; during the next age, as knowledge and strength will be acquired gradually, all imperfection and shortcomings will still be forgiven because of Christ's redemption, until men reach perfection. R569:6

If there is more or less of ignorance, then the punishment is in proportion to the amount of willfulness. Q281:5

The sins and blasphemies which may be forgiven are such as are committed in ignorance. The sins which cannot be pardoned are the willful sins.

R1984:4

But the blasphemy -- Evil speaking, evil acting, contrary to the spirit of the truth, the spirit of righteousness, the Spirit of the Lord, as they had learned and understood the same. NS244:1

"He that committeth sin is of the devil." (1 John 3:8). Those who sin willfully, deliberately, are of the devil, and are not guided by the holy Spirit of God. NS243:6

The holy ghost -- Every sin against the holy Spirit, against clear light and knowledge of divine power, is unforgivable. E273; R4608:6, 2612:2

The holy Spirit here denotes a light, an intelligence, respecting God's purposes. R5105:6

Whoever willfully and intelligently would sin against Jesus would be guilty of blasphemy against the holy Spirit. R5106:1; Q280:7

Attributing God's spirit or power to Satan's power. R4608:5

There may be various degrees of heinousness in God's sight, small or great sins. R5452:6

When a demonstration of the power, spirit, of God in doing a good work was manifested, though they might not have received it as a proof of Jesus' claims, they were inexcusable for attributing it to Satanic power. R723:5, 260:2

The Pharisees had not intentionally blasphemed Jehovah, nor particularly blasphemed Jesus; they had blasphemed against the holy Spirit which was operating in him. E271; R5453:1

Not be forgiven -- Some sins against the holy Spirit might be punished with stripes, others with death. R5452:6

Must be expiated by punishment. E273

The Pharisees, to whom these words were addressed, could not commit this sin, because they had not the fullness of knowledge. R5293:4, 5452:6

Where any measure of willfulness is associated with sin it takes it to that degree out of the list of forgivable sins and places it in the list of the unforgivable. NS244:3

Adam's sin was an unforgivable one because it was the sin of a perfect being, a willful sin against the Spirit, not unintentional, but deliberate. NS243:2

If we were perfect, as Adam was perfect, any transgression of the law would be as unforgivable as was Father Adam's transgression. NS243:4

Matthew 12:32

Speaketh a word -- Ignorantly. E271; R5390:6

Against the Son -- If one blaspheme the name of Jesus, being deceived in some way, then the sin is not blasphemy against the holy Spirit and may be forgiven. Q281:T

To have misinterpreted Jesus' motives, claiming he was merely trying to usurp a throne and exalt himself in power, would have been a comparatively light offense. E271; R732:5, 260:2

Shall be forgiven -- To the proportion of its ignorance and weakness, any sin is forgivable; to the proportion that any sin was willful, intentional, it is unforgivable and must be expiated by punishment. E273; R5453:1, 5390:6, 5106:4, 4608:6

The Holy Ghost -- Denotes a light, an intelligence, respecting God's purpose. R5105:6

Maliciously attributing to an evil source what could not be denied as a good work, free from sin, selfishness or ambition. E271; R5390:6

All sins against light and ability are unpardonable, cannot be forgiven at any time, and hence they must be punished. R260:5

Sins against clear manifestations of divine grace cannot be attributed to weakness of the flesh and heredity, but must be properly charged as willful viciousness of the heart, which is unforgivable. E272

Not be forgiven -- This does not mean that the individual will be punished for it forever. It simply means that such sin cannot be forgiven and could only be expiated. R5690:2, 723:5, 372:5, 260:3 If punishment does not bring reformation, it would mean the second death. R5390:6

All who receive "stripes" receive them for unpardoned sins, for if the sins were pardoned they would not be punished for them. R260:3

The Lord will accept a judging of ourselves as being the stripes due such a sin and probably give no further stripes, because of the self-correction. NS245:6

Those who do not accept when once they have a full opportunity, die the second death, from which we are told of no recovery, no ransom. R44:2

Neither in this world -- During this Gospel age. R4608:6

Jesus' miracles and preachings were the commencement of the Gospel age, as he is the head of the Gospel Church. R723:5

There is such thing as forgiveness of sins, both in the present Gospel age and in the coming Millennial age. R260:2

The world to come -- The Millennial age. R4608:6

Future. The word "age" occurs but once in the text. R723:5

Those who have utterly apostatized here cannot be forgiven there; but the honest, though weak, who have failed of the crown now, through weakness of the flesh, may be forgiven there. R779:5*

Generation -- Greek, gennema, race. D603

Of vipers -- So set on the traditions of their church that their eyes were blinded against the simplest kind of reasoning. E271; R372:5

The abundance -- Whatever one has stored up in the mind will be topmost and sure to be spoken. R5518:6

A man's treasure shows in which way his mind is bent. His preferences demonstrate his character. The things which we cultivate are an index to our character. R5519:1

Heart -- Used with the force of the word "mind." R5518:4

The heart is representative of the character, and the mouth is the index of the character. R5518:4, 5122:6, 1937:1

If we get the heart right, the effect will be a proportionate cleansing and purifying of the flesh. SM335:1

A right condition of heart is necessary to right words. R1937:1

A heart filled and overflowing with the spirit of love and truth will bestow it upon others. R4770:6, 2444:1

The Scriptures everywhere exhort the Lord's people to be pure in heart. SM336:T

Our first concern, then, should be for the heart, that the affections and dispositions may be fully under the control of divine grace. R1937:2

The mouth speaketh -- If the principles of truth, righteousness, reverence for God and love for the beauties of holiness are established in the heart, we shall have no difficulty in controlling our tongue. R5519:4, 5247:3

He who watches his tongue is putting a detective on his deceitful heart, and can better know and master it. R2445:1

If it speaks slander, it shows the real heart condition. F408; NS590:5

Our words continually bearing testimony of the condition of our hearts. R5122:6

An evil mouth, a mouth which does injury to others, indicates an evil heart. R2444:1

What a fearful responsibility attaches to the tongue that wags in an evil or even in a flippant way, which is also dishonoring to God. R1938:2

The Lord judges the heart according to our words. R5122:5

By this we may judge or test ourselves. OV208:4

Today, opponents of the truth use slanderous charges rather than personal violence. R5545:2

Our Lord referred to the thoughts behind the words. R5518:2

The safe attitude of the soul under afflictions and severe testings is silence before God, waiting and watching to see his leading before presuming to touch things that involve so much. R1937:5

Perfect mastery of our words and ways is to be sought by vigilant and faithful effort. R4805:2

Every evil act and every pernicious word will be recorded in the individual's own character. OV209:2

In the context, referring to words of willful and malicious opposition spoken against manifest light (see verses 24, 31, 32). R2613:1, 722:3

Oh, the power of a slanderous word! the power of an insinuation! Yea, even of a shrug of the shoulder! OV208:3

Shall give account -- Be dealt with, corrected and disciplined in righteousness, to bring to true reformation and final perfection. R1469:5, 5517:3

The wrong-doer specially injures and marks himself by the wrong he has practiced in evil-speaking and evil-doing. OV209:2; R5517:6

The Christian should daily render his accounts at the throne of grace. R4805:2, 5517:6

The Lord has agreed that he will not judge the Church according to their words and their deeds entirely, but according to their spirit, intention and will. OV208:4

Be justified -- Nothing but the merit of Christ's sacrifice can justify any from the Adamic condemnation. OV209:3

The word is used here in a limited sense. R5470:3

Typifying the last part of the fifth, all of the sixth, and the first part of the seventh thousand-year day, in which the body of Christ was to be in the prison-house of death. R2888:3, 3568:5*

This statement of Jesus was idiomatic and implied that he would be in the heart of the earth "till the third day." (Matt. 16:21; 20:19) For proof see Gen. 42:17,18; 2 Chron. 10:5,12; Esther 4:16; 5:1. R3574:5*

In the whale's belly -- If these be false, Jesus must have been a fraud and not the Son of God. It would also imply that he was much less inspired and wise than were the modern wise men who dispute these facts. R4151:6

Rise in judgment -- In the Millennial age the people of Nineveh will rank higher than they. R4608:6

Whosoever hath -- Hath used. R2496:6
Shall be given -- Shall be given more. CR309:3
More abundance -- The Logos, who had always proved faithful in all things, was offered the headship of the New Creation. F64
Whosoever hath not -- Hath not used. R2496:6; CR309:3
Even that he hath -- The privileges that he had; so don't overlook the little things. CR309:3

Matthew 13:13

Therefore -- The purpose was that those in the right condition of heart might receive the instruction while others, indifferent, careless, would be left in ignorance. NS605:6
In parables -- The misconceptions of our forefathers on the subject of punishment for sin were built upon mistranslations or statements meant to be understood symbolically. HG653:6

They see not -- There are many who lack spiritual sight, who cannot exercise faith in what they cannot see; and, according to the Scriptures, they are not responsible for their failure. SM680:T

God is not blaming them. We do not smite a blind man because he does not see. On the contrary, we sympathize with him. SM679:4

They hear not -- When our Lord was preaching, comparatively few had an ear to hear. The majority were too full of their own ideas and projects, and thus it has been all down the Gospel age. SM679:3

Many of the Lord's saints have had the ears of their understanding so perverted by false teachings respecting predestination that they do not know the song of Zion when they hear it. NS634:3

The majority of professing Christians are careless, indifferent to what the Lord has caused to be written for their admonition and encouragement and assistance in this "evil day." SM288:1

Matthew 13:15

They have closed -- Because of ignorance and blindness. R5338:6

Be converted -- Turned to a proper course. R3763:3

Heal -- Greek, iaomai, to heal; also signifying "saved." R4099:3*

Matthew 13:16

But -- God's work in the present time is not the conversion of the world, which certainly is not being accomplished; but the taking out of the world a people for his name, to bear the name of Christ as his bride. NS859:6

Blessed -- Especially anointed, specially blessed. R5418:4, 5372:6

For these alone is the message. OV230:5; SM109:2, 679:3

It is a great privilege to hear and see. SM343:3; NS859:6

With a present opportunity; and, if we respond, we are now on trial. Q590:2

A blessing in the life that now is and also in that which is to come, and a peace and joy which they never knew before, which the world can neither give nor take away. NS412:1

Blessed indeed in advance of the world; but blessed also will be the world when God's due time shall come. NS569:4

Are your eyes -- Of faith, of understanding. R4677:2, 4967:6, 177:5, 175:6; OV57:4; CR126:4

The eyes of our understanding must be opened before we can appreciate spiritual things. PD44/53

The opening of our eyes is a gradual work. CR334:1

God is not trying to attract the world now; they are blind and deaf.

SM343:3

Only a "remnant" of Israelites indeed, who accepted the Messiah, were received into the higher dispensation. R2371:6; NS631:2

The time is coming when all the blind eyes shall be opened and all the deaf ears shall be unstopped. Q416:2; SM729:1; NS386:3

For they see -- Intimating that some could see and others could not. R5338:6; Q590:2

The blessing of present truth. CR13:6

See His Word, showing us the way in which we should go. CR13:5

At the first advent, the humble Israelites indeed were not confused, but enlightened, and the same is true now. D599

We may now rejoice in things too hard for the Jew to understand and equally impossible for the natural man of the Gentiles to comprehend. R3590:6

We are to expect a wide difference of understanding of God, his mightiness and character, as viewed by the saints and by the world. R2712:2

These alone see that the "hell" of the Bible is the tomb, that there is provision for the salvation of all--two classes of mankind--and many other truths. NS588:2

The eye of faith is directed by God's Word. Q416:2

We can see more clearly because we are spirit-begotten. R5418:4

He only wished to have those see it who would accept the blessed truth. R327:5*

The opening up of the divine word, the discernment of the divine plan with its times and seasons, and the confusion upon Babylon are satisfactory proofs of the presence of the King. D599

The manifestation of God's love. The world in general has seen only the display of divine justice in permitting the wages of sin to bring calamities and troubles. NS462:5

And your ears -- Ears of faith. R4677:2, 4967:6, 4557:2; CR126:4

While spirit-anointed members of Christ tell the good tidings unto all people, they understand that only such as have ears to hear will be able to comprehend and appreciate the message until the new dispensation. NS222:2

For they hear -- The message of the Lord. CR13:3,5; SM369:1

You who have heard must have been called. CR13:2

Thus far, Jesus has not been dealing with the world, but merely with those having the eye and ear of faith. R4967:6

Before your study can be effective you must make your consecration to the Lord. These are the ones the Lord has promised shall see and hear. CR14:1; Q186:1

An opportunity to return to harmony with God cannot come except through knowledge; hence, it comes first to those who have the "hearing ear." R4154:6

Matthew 13:17

Have desired -- Before the due time. R1307:5

Have not seen them -- Though much had been foretold by the prophets, they confessed their ignorance of the import of their prophecies. B23
"They say of me, Doth he not speak in parables" (Ezek. 20:49); "I heard, but I understood not" (Dan. 12:8). B23
The operation of God's spirit upon the prophets was so different from the operation of the same spirit upon the Gospel Church that the humblest Christian may know more of God's plan than would the greatest prophet. R435:3

Matthew 13:18

Hear ye therefore -- Understand ye. NS605:3
One of the few parables which our Lord himself interpreted. R4634:6

Matthew 13:19

Word -- Message of the Kingdom. R5039:2
"The Gospel of the kingdom"--the information that God has appointed Christ to be King and he is now seeking a little flock to be his associates in the work of blessing and restoring the world. NS606:3,6
Of the kingdom -- The message respecting the Kingdom, which, germinating, constitutes his Church. R2276:5
The message of the Kingdom may be said to be the only message God has yet given to mankind as a message of hope. R2628:4
At the time of utterance, the message of the Kingdom took on a special form--an invitation to become joint-heirs with the Messiah, the heir of the Kingdom. R2628:5
Understandeth it not -- On such ears, the message is lost. R4634:6
Then cometh -- On the alert, to take it away. R4634:6
The wicked one -- Satan. R3764:3, 5039:2, 4634:6
Catcheth away -- Devouring the exposed seed of truth. R4635:1, 5406:5
In his heart -- In the first parable, the field is the heart; in the second, "the field is the world." (Verse 38) R97:2*
If all hearts were right, the seed would bring forth much fruit. R4634:6
This is he -- We blame not. The Lord blames him not. It was not his fault that his mind was so down-trodden with ignorance that the message of the Kingdom could find no lodgment in his heart. NS607:1
Seed -- The Kingdom message or invitation; many do not understand it. R4634:3,6
By the way-side -- The heart being solid and compact with selfishness that comes with prosperity, needing the plowshare of trouble. R2627:3, 3754:3
Wayside hearers constitute the most numerous class in every nominal church congregation. R4635:1

Matthew 13:20

Into stony places -- Having a veneer of outward grace, but at heart a character of selfishness. R2627:5 The influences of the Kingdom will give them strength of character and take away the unfavorable, stony condition which now hinders fruitage. NS607:4

Matthew 13:21

Not root in himself -- They lack depth of character. R4635:1, 1711:4 The selfishness which is the sub-stratum of their character will not permit them to endure hardness for the truth's sake. R2627:5

Persecution ariseth -- Persecution withers them. NS607:3

As soon as they find that with the truth goes something of persecution and tribulation, their interest speedily dies out. R2627:6

He is offended -- The purpose of permitting offenses and divisions is "that they which are approved [by God, because they endure the tests and stand fast in the truth] may be made manifest among you." (1 Cor. 11:18, 19) R1711:5

Matthew 13:22

Among the thorns -- Pride, ambition for self and for family, love of money and the pursuit of it, and the award which this pursuit brings, are the thorns. NS608:1

Earthly projects and ambitions whose interests conflict with the interests of the Kingdom. R3764:5

Thorns are uprooted by drawing time and attention away from the earthly things in a compulsory manner. R2628:2

In Palestine, the thorns and thistles grow in the very best kind of soil. R2627:6

Is he -- There are many noble people represented by this portion of the parable. R4635:2

Care of this world -- Involved with the spirit of the world. R4635:2, 5055:5

Being swallowed up by ambition or business. R5625:5

Home duties, family duties, business cares, etc. R2628:1

Deceitfulness of riches -- Greediness. R5307:2

Few of the Lord's people can be trusted with riches. R2520:2

If a Christian grows rich, it should be with fear and trembling. The power in money is more dangerous than dynamite. R1045:5*

Choke the word -- Swamped by the ordinary duties of life, proper enough in themselves, to a limited degree. NS607:6

Becometh unfruitful -- Fruitage is a necessary qualification. R4635:2 "Ye cannot serve God and mammon." (Matt. 6:24) R3764:5

Into good ground -- We, as new creatures, have the determining of the condition of the soil in our own hearts. NS608:3

Understandeth it -- We should understand the Kingdom message. Hence the need of Bible study. R4635:4

As study is wisely devoted to prepare for the short earthly life, how much more is it proper for our preparation for eternal life? R4635:5

Beareth fruit -- Of character-development; the manifestation of God's grace in our hearts. R4634:3, 5284:2

Varying amounts according to circumstances, conditions and ability; but always their very best. R5736:5

And bringeth forth -- The harvest of thirty, sixty or a hundredfold illustrates degree and intensity of our earnestness. R4635:5

Some an hundredfold -- Those who love the Lord, his truth and his people most fervently. R2628:4

The rewards of the Kingdom will also be proportionate. R4635:5

Some sixty -- "As star differeth from star in glory, so also will be the resurrection" of the Church. (1 Cor. 15:41, 42) NS608:5

Some thirty -- He does not speak slightly of those which bring forth but the thirty-fold. R2628:3

Matthew 13:24

Another parable -- He had something more to communicate, some additional truths were to be illustrated. R97:1*

These parables are related to each other, but should not be confounded.

The first prepares the way for the other. The first deals with the individual; the second with the church collectively. R97:1,4*; NS626:2

To show some of the difficulties which interfere with the best hearers, the best hearts, some with the best seed. R3769:3

Kingdom of heaven -- Practically every parable which our Lord uttered was given to teach something respecting the character of the Kingdom. NS627:2

The embryo Kingdom during the entire Gospel age. R5048:3, 3769:3

Is likened unto -- It is the invisible world which is the fact; it is the visible world which is the metaphor. R29:5*

A man -- The Lord Jesus. R3769:3, 5048:6

Sowed good seed -- The Gospel of the Kingdom from the Word of God, "He brought life and immortality to light through the Gospel." (2 Tim. 1:10)

R3769:3, 5048:6 Seeds of truth, the promises, which, springing up in the hearts of his disciples, transformed them to newness of life. R2634:1

"Which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord." (Heb. 2:3) R3769:3

Christ and the Apostles sowed the good seed, meanwhile gathering the ripe wheat of the Jewish nation. R5018:3

It was impossible for the Adversary to corrupt the seed of truth which Jesus and the Apostles sowed. R4635:3
Christ's saintly followers. OV395:2
His personal seed-sowing of the Gospel message was accomplished more than 18 centuries ago, but since then he has been represented by his followers. NS626:2
An illustration of slow, gradual, methodical development covering the entire period of this Gospel age. R5049:6
This parable ignores all except the "good ground" hearers of the preceding parable. R4635:2
In his field -- The entire world. R5048:6
The civilized world. C137, 140
Especially throughout Europe and America. R2634:2

Matthew 13:25

But while men slept -- After the apostles fell asleep. F60, 201; R4635:2, 3769:6, 2634:2, 2276:6; OV395:2; NS633:5
In the night, the dark ages, while a general spirit of slumber regarding the truth prevailed among the Lord's people. R3769:6, 5018:5, 4891:4
Even yet the same thing is true. "Therefore, let us not sleep as do others." (1 Thess. 5:6) R3769:6
The Church was kept free from tares before the apostles fell asleep by God arranging that truth be put forth for acceptance or rejection by the Jews in its most unfavorable light, so that only Israelites indeed would be inclined to become followers of Jesus. R2925:1
During the Apostles' days such special gifts as "discernment of spirits" enabled them to prevent tares from getting in among the wheat, hypocrites from getting into the Church. R580:3, 20:1
"After my departing grievous wolves shall enter in among you, not sparing the flock." (Acts 20:29, 30) NS633:6
Many of the Lord's followers have been dreaming about the conversion of the world while the great enemy, Satan, has been sowing tares with liberal hand in their very midst. R3769:6
His enemy came -- The great adversary, Satan. R4635:2; OV395:2
He had a comparatively free hand. R2943:2
Satan and his associates, fallen angels, have been plotting against the divine plan and operating with a view to thwarting the same all through this age. R3770:3
Using human instrumentalities. NS94:3
Sowed tares -- Sham wheat, imitation wheat, professors who draw nigh with their lips while their hearts are far from the Lord. NS94:3
Hypocrites, Nominal Christians, resembling or counterfeiting the true, to choke the wheat, if possible. R4653:3, 5823:5, 5018:5, 4635:3, 3770:2
The offspring of error, children of the wicked one. R4644:2, 5864:3

Errors, more or less twisting and distorting every truth of the divine revelation. F60; C137; OV395:2

It may be a message of morality or purity of life, but it will not produce the Kingdom class. R5736:6

Nullifying the virtues of the death of Christ by a method of imitation. R5848:4*

The tare seed is false teaching, human philosophies and doctrines of devils. R2627:3; NS93:5

Bearded darnel, which cannot be discerned from wheat until the harvest.

The wheat, weighted with golden grains, humbly bows its head; while the tares stand straight, the head having little weight and the seed being black. R3770:1, 5848:3*, 4635:3

The darnel seed is poisonous. R3770:2, 2276:6

Poisonous, and acts as an emetic, causing vomiting. R2276:6

Such spite-work is not uncommon in the Orient, or in Palestine. R4635:3; CR250:6

These have run the church organizations, and the Lord has permitted it to be so and is allowing the truly consecrated ones to be developed under these different conditions. NS292:5

Deceived persons, misnaming themselves Christians, because mistaught by churchianity. R2943:1

The spirit of rivalry, under the guidance of the Adversary, led step by step to the ultimate organization of the great Antichrist system--Papacy.

F201

The tares are begotten of error--false doctrine. NS94:3

With the error respecting the nature of man, that he is alive when dead and needs no resurrection; and respecting the Kingdom of God, that it came in Papacy. HG272:4

The heathen, converted by Papacy, were not benefited, for they were still heathen in God's sight, but deluded into aping what they did not understand or do from the heart. R2598:3

Since the death of the apostles, any number of hypocrites have come into the church, indeed have been dragged and coaxed in to swell the numbers. R2943:5

There are many fine, noble people among the tares who have neither part nor lot with the wheat because they are not of the same nature, not begotten of the truth. NS94:2

Doubtless in the same manner as the wheat; the wheat growing from seeds of truth, while the tares are offspring of errors. C146; NS627:3

False doctrines, false teachings. R5048:6

Because it was impossible for the Adversary to corrupt the seed of truth. R4635:3

A certain amount of tares spring up with the wheat anyway, and these the servants gather out as soon as discerned. But our Lord wished to show an abnormal condition. R3770:3

The Greek implies over-sown; intentionally, maliciously sown in the midst of the wheat, for the very purpose of damaging or totally spoiling the entire crop. R2276:6

More liberally than the wheat was sown. R2634:2

Among the wheat -- The true saints, the children of the Kingdom. C137; R4635:3, 4644:2, 2943:1, 283:6

For the very purpose of choking it, "We wrestle not with flesh and blood, but with wicked spirits in high positions." (Eph. 6:12) R3770:3

Wheat is the standard food of the world and is said to contain the elements of nutrition in the best proportions for man's use. R2276:6

Matthew 13:26

The tares also -- Nominal Christians, much more numerous than the wheat. C137

The children of the devil. R283:6

Imitation New Creatures, respectable, moral, good people. F200; R5736:6, 2277:3

The tares, as well as the wheat, were above the level of the field in general, indicating superior morals. R2277:3

Begotten not of truth, begotten of excitement, of fear of hell, of hopes of worldly advantage, of pride, of social and financial ambition. R2634:2

Matthew 13:27

From whence then -- But God knew all the time. CR250:6

Matthew 13:29

But he said, Nay -- We cannot follow the usual custom in this case, because of the greatly excessive proportion of tares. R3770:4

While it was out of place for any to attempt harvest work before harvest time, it is likewise a mistake to neglect harvest work in harvest time and give attention to seed-sowing. R885:1*

Gather up the tares -- Because the true and false are too intimately associated, their roots intertwining in society, home, etc. R4635:5

Ye root up also -- Unsettle, disturb. C137; R4635:5, 3770:4

So closely intertwined are the roots of the two classes that to disturb such close relationship in life would cause great commotion. NS627:4

"Therefore judge nothing before the time, until the Lord come, who both will bring to light the hidden things of darkness, and will manifest the counsels of the hearts." (1 Cor. 4:5) R98:1*

The wheat with them -- So intimately were the true and false associated. R4635:5

To have cleansed the wheat field in the past would have meant a commotion which would not have served the best interests of the wheat. R2634:4
Only the Lord, who could read the hearts, could distinguish between them with unerring precision. R1362:1

Matthew 13:30

Let both grow -- Christ did not seek to prevent or hinder tare development. F200

The nominal church has neglected these instructions, yet has not kept all the wheat in, or shut out all the tares; hence they are without any excuse. C138

They have set up false, unscriptural standards and doctrines, which have really developed many tares and choked and separated the wheat. C138
For the wheat's sake, God's favor extended even to these mixed bunches of Babylonish systems until 1878, when they were completely and forever cut off from all favor. C155

Together -- Throughout the age. R4635:6; PD59/70

Christians and imitation Christians have lived side by side in the same city, house, family. R5049:1

Only the expert can discern the wheat from the tares while growing. R4635:3

During the Gospel age the wheat and tares together represent the Kingdom of God. R4653:3

In the general nominal church system, elsewhere called Babylon or confusion, because of its mixture of truth and error, wheat and tares. NS93:6

The nominal church has included wheat and tares; many of the latter have found their way into the pulpits. D61

The Lord has not hindered them from associating with his saints or using his name and claiming that they are members of his Church. NS94:4

The tare class has had a general control for some time, and has divided the wheat-field with various creed-fences. NS389:1

The tares received a certain advantage from their attempt to imitate wheat. It has made them more respectable than they would otherwise have been. NS94:4

There were separations of politico-doctrinal storms before the harvest time, but among these the tares, still predominating, formed other though less objectionable, Babylonish systems. C154

We cannot admit that the wheat was all brought under Baptist fencing, and that the tares were all outside. NS49:3

Until -- The command "Come out of her" was not given until after the announcement "Babylon is fallen." (Rev. 18:4, 2) R457:5*

The harvest -- The end, or close, of the Gospel age. A237; B15; R4635:6; OV297:3

The harvesting of the Jewish age began with our Lord's first advent, and ended 40 years later at the destruction of Jerusalem. NS626:3

Parallel to the Jewish age harvest; many believe it began in 1874 and will end in 1915. R5363:4

Forty years long--1878 to 1918. SM287:1; R5049:2, 5018:6, 4891:5; NS627:2

The time in which the tares will be gathered into bundles, and the wheat into the heavenly garner. R5049:2

And in the time -- The close of the summer time of favor. D578

Signifying that it will not be instantaneous, but require time. R5049:2, 580:4, 236:3*, 223:1*

Which chronologically precedes the world's troubles. R593:3

Discussing such matters as when the harvest will end merely takes away opportunities for usefulness. We would be better not to talk about such things and be busily engaged in the harvest work. Q320:3,5

Of harvest -- In which we are now living. D31

Beginning October 1874. R5950:5

Parallel in time and work to the harvest of the Jewish age. B233; HG52:2, 55:1, 70:6

The harvest of the Jewish age gives us clear conceptions of what may be expected in the harvest time of the Gospel age. NS21:3

During the harvest of the Jewish age a two-fold work progressed--the harvest of the Jewish age and the preparation for the Gospel age. NS626:5

A time of reaping rather than sowing, a time of testing, of reckoning, of settlement and rewarding. The harvest of the Jewish age being a type of this age. C135

Three great periods of separation are revealed in God's Word: chaff from wheat (Matt. 3:10, 12); tares from wheat (Matt. 13:37, 43) and sheep from goats (Matt. 25:31). R34:2*

The time of executing the command, "Gather my saints together unto me, those who have made a covenant with me by [self-] sacrifice." (Psa. 50:5) R375:5

When the truth makes manifest the true character of these systems. R767:5

The harvest is not a time for peace; but, on the contrary, it will surely produce separation and alienation between true wheat and all else. R969:6

Harvest work is reaping rather than sowing. We, therefore, dispense stronger truths, not to the world but to the professed church. These truths, as harvest sunshine, are warm and strong and tend to ripen the wheat. R1073:5

The Jewish harvest is spoken of as being a separation of wheat from chaff, while the harvest of this age is designated a separation of wheat from tares. R2237:6; B234

Harvest time is the busiest time of all the year and a very brief period compared with the time for sowing. R885:2*

It has three elements: separation, gathering and burning. R198:5*

The harvest is not ended; our expectations must not be allowed to weigh anything against the facts. R5950:1

I will say -- The recognition of the harvest work in actual progress is proof of the Lord's presence. B150

"He that sat on the cloud thrust in his sickle on the earth and the earth was reaped." (Rev. 14:16) B150

The Lord will be the chief reaper and director of the work, and this would be his first work. B150

He directs them through the Word by opening their understanding to discern the times and seasons there indicated and the work to be accomplished therein. R600:3

It is not we, but Christ, who calls his people out of Babylon. We merely call their attention to this words and show that they are reasonable.

R986:4

To the reapers -- Angels, messengers. C137

Such as he has used in plowing, sowing and watering throughout the age; those begotten of his holy Spirit. D601

Gather ye together -- Into Labor Unions, Trusts, denominations and protective associations of every kind. C140; Q317:4; R4636:1

The true wheat are to avoid membership in lodges, societies, churches, sects, parties. R4636:1

The special trials appropriate to the complete separation of the wheat from the tares are upon Christendom now. SM287:1

First the tares -- Which largely predominate, as did the chaff in the harvest of the Jewish age. B234; R3770:4

Who think themselves to be the true Church. R4636:4

There are two parts to the harvest, the gathering of wheat followed by the burning of tares. R5761:2

There is order in this harvest. R580:4

Very elect, with the appearance of being the masters of the field; illustrating the proud boastfulness of those who are Christians in association and appearance only. R2277:1

And bind them -- Restrain all individual thought and study on religious subjects, as is done by the International Sunday School system, with its carefully printed questions and answers and exercises, singing, entertainment, picnics, etc. C142-144

As the Jews failed to recognize the binding and blinding influences which came upon them, so nominal Christians today fail to see the features of the "harvest" work now in progress. R2237:6

They are bound by human traditions and by a worldly spirit. R920:6

Bound rightly by their own prejudices. R878:6

Pride will hold them together; none will wish to appear disloyal or cowardly. Societies act en masse. R1828:1

They seek to bind all by the impression that it is essential to salvation to be joined to some one of their sects--it matters little to which one--thus combining the idea of individual responsibility with sectarian bondage. C141

In bundles -- Necessary, because of their great preponderance. R3770:4

Human organizations. R3771:1

Not only church organizations, but all the various organizations which tie men together today, as never before. R1828:1; Q317:4

Labor Unions, Capitalistic Trusts and protective associations of every sort. C140

Into lodges, societies, churches, sects, parties. R4636:1

Into great denominational bundles, labeled with various sectarian names. R1488:2

A unification of sects. R3497:4

If it were demanded that we must join a union before we could work, we should join; but if that organization should do anything we could not approve, we should feel free to withdraw at any time. Q318:4

The spirit of the tares is toward sectarian greatness and show, rather than toward individual obedience and allegiance to God. C141

In most of these bundles, sects, there are still some grains of wheat, some consecrated ones, in whom the spirit of truth still has some residence. R375:4

Each denomination retaining its own bondage or organization, and becoming more firmly bound by being wedged in with others. C142

An evidence of the harvest work in progress. R4636:1

Ready for the burning, destruction. R5409:2

To burn them -- To destroy them, not as individuals, but as tares, imitation wheat, in the great time of trouble. B105; C146, 148; F200; R5916:3, 4644:2 Return them to the ground, the world whence they came. C140; R3771:4

Not with literal fire. R4636:4

We cannot burn symbolic tares in literal fire. CR251:3

They do not burn them at once, but proceed to gather the wheat into the garner. Not until the wheat is garnered does the fire consume the tares. R2634:4

The Christian's duty is to lift up the standard and get the true wheat out of all the tare-bundles into liberty, in union with Christ, the only Head. R3566:6

Apparently the consuming of the tares will correspond very closely with the division of the Jordan. R5951:4

So that none of the bad seed might affect the future crop. R4635:6

This is when the Great Company will wake up. R5761:2

Professed Christians will be shown in their true light. The true and false will be completely manifested. R5761:5,6

But -- Without binding it into bundles. C140; Q318:1

Gather the wheat -- With the sickle of present truth. C139

The Church of Christ. R5256:4

Comparatively only a handful, a "little flock." B205

"They shall gather together his elect." (Matt. 24:31) B164; D601

"Gather my saints together unto me." (Psa. 50:5) B164

"Make up my jewels." (Mal. 3:17) B164; D600

"Come out of her, my people." (Rev. 18:4) D601

Evidently in smaller proportionate quantity, being taken directly to the barns unbundled--precious, scarce. R3770:4

Separated from the tares--in spirit, but not necessarily in person. NS390:3

The wheat heads, full of heavy wheat, bend over with the weight; a beautiful illustration of the modesty and meekness of the true and fruitful Christian. R2277:1

Many laborers seem not to know whether they are to sow or to reap. They want to sow and reap at the same time. R628:4*

The harvest is not of the living only, but also of the "dead in Christ."

The angels gather the living, but our Lord, the Chief Reaper, gathers or raises, the dead. R20:2

If he is come to gather his saints and is also to come "with all his saints" (1 Thess. 3:13; Jude 14; Zech. 14:5), there must be two parts or stages of his coming. HG23:6,3

Those who are not spirit-begotten have no right to class themselves with the wheat. R4635:6

Into my barn -- The barn condition of security, separateness from the worldly. C212

Not into another denomination, but gathered to Christ, into oneness with him, in fellowship of spirit through the knowledge of his Word. R2751:4

The spiritual condition; the glorified condition. R2693:2, 4644:2, 3686:2, 2277:6; F200; CR251:4; HG272:4, 438:5; NS21:4, 89:5, 810:2

The heavenly garner, the resurrection change. R4635:6, 5049:2; CR251:4; PD59/70

We are not to understand that the harvest is yet wholly finished. R5761:2

Parable -- These different parable-pictures represent the same subject from different standpoints. R4636:2, 5049:6

Kingdom of heaven -- The nominal church of this Gospel age. R2634:6, 5049:6

The class called out of the world of mankind to be associated with him in his Millennial Kingdom. R4636:2

Matthew 13:32

The least -- The Church of Christ was so unimportant in the world at one time that it was a shame to belong to it. R4636:2

When it is grown -- Ultimately the nominal church would become honorable and great. R4636:3

Illustrates how the gospel of the Kingdom would, from a small beginning, attain considerable size. R4636:2

Greatest among herbs -- Not great among the trees, but among bushes of herbage. R4636:2

Yet this large development does not signify advantage; on the contrary, a disadvantage, in that the fowls of the air come, lodge in its branches, and defile it. R2634:6

Becometh a tree -- With its various branches and denominations, the nominal church is Babylonish. R4636:3

Birds of the air -- Satan and his agents. R2634:6, 5049:6, 4636:2

In the branches -- So great that the adversary's servants would have pleasure in its shade. R4636:3

"The hold of every foul spirit and a cage of every unclean and hateful bird." (Rev. 18:2) R2634:6, 5050:1, 45:6

Satan and his agents have been lodging in the branches of the Gospel Church for centuries, defiling it. R2634:6

Matthew 13:33

Kingdom of heaven -- The Gospel age Church is the Kingdom in its embryo, incipient or preparatory state. R1525:2, 5049:3, 2635:1

A parable of the Kingdom in the sense that it shows one of the experiences which the Church would pass through in its present preparation for Kingdom glories. HG272:5

Is like unto leaven -- Yeast, sin, error, corruption. F464; T98; R5050:1,4, 4636:3, 2635:1

Which a woman -- An ecclesiastical system organized and in power at an early date. R5050:4

"That woman Jezebel," the Papacy. (Rev. 2:20) R2635:4

Three measures of meal -- The pure food provided by the Lord for the household of faith. R5050:4

The entire testimony of God's Word, the food for his family. HG272:5

Equivalent to one ephah, a good, liberal household supply. R2635:1

The faith once delivered to the saints; the hope set before us in the Gospel and love, the bond of perfectness. R2635:4

Whole was leavened -- The food of the entire household became corrupted. R4636:3

The entire mass of theological doctrine is putrid and offensive to all Christian people. R5050:4

Not a particle of it was left uncontaminated. The result has been indigestion. R5050:4, 4363:3

Faith was distorted; hope was changed to another hope; and the spirit of the Lord, love, was perverted to a selfish love of creeds and human institutions. R2635:4

Matthew 13:34

In parables -- None was ready for the depth of his teaching until after the holy Spirit of Pentecost began to give qualification. R5444:2

Unto the multitude -- Jesus, speaking to his disciples, used plain language; on the contrary, when he spoke to the multitudes, he always employed a parable. HG511:4

Without a parable -- Not a statement of literal facts. R5004:3
Symbolic language; this was the customary way for Jesus to preach. CR250:2; R4679:1

Because the true invitation was not for the ordinary multitude, but only for the consecrated. R5088:1

An understanding of spiritual things would do harm rather than good to those not spiritually begotten, to those not fully consecrated to the divine will. R5088:1

Part of our difficulty has been taking the words of Jesus literally when their very form should have shown us that they could not have been meant literally, but as the figures of speech we use today. OV162:10

Spake he not -- None of the lessons of the Great teacher were given in literal language; they were all symbolic. R4679:1

Matthew 13:35

In parables -- In figures and obscure sayings. R2602:6

An illustration of a truth by something which is, in many respects, like it. A138

Not yet understood by the word, neither appreciated by any except the few, his "little flock," the consecrated. CR10:6

I will utter things -- Expound the hidden truths of divine prophecy. F233
Jesus not only expounded the prophets, but he did so in parables, prophecies and dark sayings. R667:6

Matthew 13:36

His disciples came -- Humble and truth-hungry, inquiring earnestly for the truth. B28

Declare unto us -- The special light of both harvests is for the Israelites indeed. B28

A special request for interpretation. R4635:6

The parable -- In every parable explained by our Lord, the thing said is never the thing meant. R1000:2, 283:6; HG385:3

Matthew 13:37

He that soweth -- Jesus and the Apostles, and all his true followers. R5048:6

The good seed -- The Gospel of the Kingdom. R4635:6, 5048:6

The Son of man -- His disciples have assisted under his direction. R576:1

Matthew 13:38

The field -- In which, during this present harvest time, the fruitage of this Gospel age must be gathered; and the work of clearing, plowing and preparing for the sowing and reaping of the Millennial age, must take place. C121

Is the world -- The world of mankind, the civilized world, all nations. C140; R5048:6

The kosmos, not the ge, the earth; nor the aion, the age. R2227:1, 97:2*

The world of mankind; and the seed is sown in their hearts. HG92:6

The world of mankind being counted the ground out of which the wheat and also the tares grow and develop. C140

The world are neither wheat nor tares; they are simply material, as ground, in which both good and bad seed may be sown. HG93:1

He is not dealing with the field, the world in general, but merely with the corner of it which he has planted with the good seed. R3771:2

The good seed was planted in Palestine, Asia Minor and Europe, and from thence has spread to America, and to some slight extent elsewhere.

Strictly speaking, Europe and North America are the wheat field. R2277:2

Children of the kingdom -- The spiritual children; classes n and m on the Chart of the Ages. R275:3

But the tares -- The imitation New Creatures, posing as Christians. F200; R4636:1

The result of false doctrines, false teachings. R5048:6

Not begotten of the holy Spirit. CR251:3

The children of -- Because their presence in the church is the result of false doctrines, false teachings, sown by the adversary, Satan. R5834:3

The wicked one -- Despite the fact that they are mainly respectable, moral, good people. F200; R4636:1; CR251:3

All of class q and many (if not all) of class p on the Chart of the Ages. R275:6

The whole world of mankind, excepting the true Christians, born in sin and shapen in iniquity, aliens and strangers from God, may be spoken of as "children of the wicked one." R2277:4

Matthew 13:39

That sowed them -- Seeds of false doctrines, error, deception, using human lips and pens in Satan's service through pride and ambition. R5137:3, 5769:3, 4635:6

And thus brought the worldly masses into the church. R2598:3

Is the devil -- Whose personality is here recognized in unmistakable terms. R3769:6*

The harvest -- We have entered into that period of time when the present age is closing and the new age beginning. CR438:2, 308:1; R4891:4, 4635:6, 2277:6

There is a large crop of tares. R5769:3

The time of trouble coming upon the church should be recognized as the harvest, the threshing time, the time for separating the real grain from the chaff and tares. R576:2, 82:5*

The sign of the presence is the sign of the time of harvest. The worker and the work are related to each other. R236:3*

There are many harvests as there are kinds of seed (1 Cor. 15:38-44), but order governs all. R576:2

Many believe it began in 1874 and will end in 1914. R5363:4

Is the end -- Is that which constitutes the end. C24, 214; D568

The Greek word suntelia, translated "end," does not mean a "point," but a "period of time." R236:3*

The last forty years of the Time of the End. C24; 121

As the Chart of the Ages illustrates, the harvest of this age and the end of the evil world or dispensation terminate together. NS21:5

Just before the inauguration of the new age of Christ's Millennial Kingdom. R4635:6

The regathering of Israel is a sign of the end of this age, and therefore a sign that we are living in the harvest time. R384:5

No millennium in between is shown. HG272:4

Of the world -- Of this Gospel age. B15; C24, 121; D568; R5049:2, 2977:4

Of the age: Greek aion. CR251:2, 292:1; HG116:1

And the reapers -- Who have learned that it is harvest time and that their work is gathering the wheat. F608

The Lord is sending forth more laborers continually, yet only such as recognize the nighness of the Kingdom, the parousia of the King, and have a zeal to tell the joyful tidings to others. R2674:3

Are the angels -- The messengers, begotten of his spirit. D601; A237; R1279:2

Messengers, missionaries, saints of God. R885:3*

His servants. R2604:1

The Lord's followers now, just as a similar class were the reapers of the Jewish harvest. C139

The "harvest message" is the Lord's sickle and all associated with the promulgation of this message are reapers in this harvest, co-laborers with the great Chief Reaper. R2490:4

Every faithful disciple who now follows in the Master's footsteps has the privilege now of being a co-worker with him in reaping this harvest. R600:3

The Lord uses various human instrumentalities as his servants, messengers or angels. R3771:1

Invisible, spiritual beings, quietly separating wheat from tares. R189:4, 175:5, 124:2

Matthew 13:40

Tares are gathered -- Our Lord would be present at the end of the Gospel age and, as the Chief Reaper, would gather tares in bundles to be burned.

R5769:3

In the winter time: "Pray ye that your flight be not in the winter."

(Matt. 24:20) D578

Burned in the fire -- Destroyed as tares in a time of trouble; not literally burned. R5737:1, 5049:4, 4636:4, 2277:5; CR251:3

Their delusions will be dissolved. R4636:4

Manifested to all, to the intent that all may thereafter profit by the lesson, to all eternity. NS94:5

To occur within the harvest period. R1493:4

The fire already kindled, "the fire of God's zeal." C148

It is not the field, the "world," that is to be burned, but the tares.

NS21:5

Signifying the destruction of the false pretensions of this class. C146

In the sense that none of them thereafter will claim to be what they are not, none of them will claim to be God's consecrated people. R2634:5;

SM287:T

And thus returned to the ground, the world, from whence they came. C140

That the entire field might be cleansed and made ready for a new sowing of the pure seed. NS93:6

The end of this world -- End of this age. D568

Proving that the burning of the tares is included in the gospel harvest, for "the harvest is the end of the age." (Verse 39) R115:6*, 98:4*

Matthew 13:41

The Son of man -- A title of high honor, a reminder of his obedience, even to the death of the cross, by which he secured title to the honor, dignity and power of the divine nature. E151

Christ, who once became a son (in law) of Adam. E150, 152

Shall send -- Christ is superintending the harvest; he sends forth the reapers.

R223:5*

The Lord not only sends the sickle of truth to gather the wheat, but he also sends the strong delusions to gather the tares. OV297:4; NS128:6

Forth his angels -- Servants or messengers, begotten of his spirit.

D601; A237; R1285:1*, 1279:2

Gather out of -- Or from. A239

Various errors gather out of God's Kingdom all that offend. R1644:5

In one sense, the wheat is gathered out from among the tares, because of the greater abundance of the tares; in another sense, the tares are gathered from the wheat. The wheat has the place by right; it is a wheat field, not a tare field. C139

They shall be swept out by the incoming flood of infidelity, overthrown by the winds of false doctrine, and finally burnt up by the scathing reproach of the world. R600:5

He has chosen to make the separation publicly, to demonstrate his own justice in the matter. OV297:4

His kingdom -- The true Church. A239; R275:5

In the sense that the Church at the present time is God's Kingdom in embryo. R4635:6, 1927:1

Harvest siftings are necessary, that the Judas class may be entirely sifted out, and that the Peter class may be thoroughly stirred up by trials and difficulties. R4908:4

It is one thing to gather his people out of Babylon, and quite another to gather the offenders out of his Kingdom. Really the "tares" leave the "wheat" by utterly abandoning the faith once delivered to the saints. R2545:2

Things that offend -- Those who put off the wedding garment of Christ's imputed righteousness. R2275:6

Those that cause others to stumble, including many teachers and preachers, and many doers of wonderful works. R5049:4

Not only "those that do iniquity," the "tares," but also "those that offend," those who fail to come up to the requirements of their covenant in fullness of consecration. R2541:6

That are blameworthy; because they are in the nominal church and posing as Christians. R4636:1

Realizing that this is a present activity, we cannot too carefully consider the principles upon which this judgment and selection are made. R1937:1

All organizations having the motive of hope of improvement deteriorate rapidly into machines of aggrandizement of clique or class, owing to the cupidity and sordidness of men. R1285:1*

Not that a man could not be a member of a union, but the position of separateness from these human institutions and bondages is a safe position for the saints. R1285:5

Which do iniquity -- Which practice sin, or which are not fully in sympathy with the principles of righteousness. R2276:1, 5049:4
"Do lawlessness." (Diaglott) R1285:1*

The tare class, the great mass. R4635:6, 5802:1, 1644:5

The only things that shall remain are the things that cannot be shaken, the true and faithful. R3053:1

Matthew 13:42

A furnace of fire -- A time of trouble destructive to the nominal systems and false professions; occasioned in great measure by the growth of infidelity and Spiritism of various kinds. A239; C146; R275:5

It would be thoroughly illogical to burn symbolic tares in a literal furnace with literal fire. CR251:3; R5049:4, 4636:4

The fire is as much a symbol as are the tares, the wheat and the garner. R2634:4, 2277:5

There is no such furnace for the wheat and tares all down through the Gospel age. R3771:2

So-called Christendom will be the great furnace. R3771:4

Wailing -- There is such a commotion in connection with the separation of the wheat and the tares because Christendom as a whole, though nominally a wheat field, is practically a tare field. OV297:4; NS128:5

The saints won't have any of this weeping, wailing and gnashing of teeth, because the plan of God will be so closely before them that they will rejoice because the things occurring will presage their deliverance. Q733:T

Gnashing of teeth -- Great disappointment, sorrow, pain, trouble and anguish throughout Christendom. R3771:4; Q732:2

"Men's hearts failing them for fear and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth." (Luke 21:26) R3771:4 Signifying chagrin, disappointment, savage animosity: "They gnashed on him with their teeth." (Acts 7:54) R4329:1; Q732:2

The great time of trouble will make general havoc of present arrangements--social, financial, political, ecclesiastical. R5802:4, 5864:1, 2303:5, 1644:5

Matthew 13:43

Then -- In the end of this Gospel age. SM790:2; R5769:3

We are in the dawn of the glorious day. It is not yet sunrise, the shining forth of the Church; but the "Day Star," Jesus, has arisen in our hearts. R470:6

The Lord links the fire upon the tare field with the speedy shining forth thereafter of the Sun of Righteousness. R2760:6

After this age and after its harvest. R857:3

After "the wheat" of this age is gathered into the garner by the power of the first resurrection. R5135:6, 6013:5, 5769:3, 5420:2, 4103:2, 2504:4; CR19:1; SM561:T, 790:2

Shall the righteous -- The Church, as a whole, in glory. F725; R5135:6, 4988:2, 4967:5; SM287:T; HG417:3

Jesus is the head of the Church. SM791:T; R5097:3

When the division is accomplished, the wheat alone will represent the Kingdom of the Church of Christ, while the church nominal will fall and be broken. R593:4

Shine forth -- To refresh and bless the world by scattering the darkness of sin, superstition and evil. R2425:5, 4849:6, 4636:4, 3770:6, 1012:4; SM246:T

To abolish darkness. R4988:1, 4849:6

The manifestation, or appearing in glory; the descent of the new Jerusalem as the Bride of Christ and mother of the nations. Light, deliverance and glory to the nations will be the result. R82:5*; HG163:5, 234:6; NS252:3

Then shall the morning of the Millennial age be manifested to the world.
CR19:1

Be revealed, and be seen by men with the eyes of their understanding.
R2606:3

To heal earth's sorrows and scatter earth's night. R5135:6

To bless, restore, purify and disinfect from sin and error the whole world of mankind. C149

To bring order out of present confusion, to scatter present darkness, ignorance and superstition, to cause the knowledge of the glory of the Lord to fill the whole earth. R3770:6

The consummation of the Church's hope in the end of this age. R4636:4

God gives light that it may shine that others may see and be blessed. To shine can mean no less than to give light. And if the Church give, the nations receive and "walk in the light of it." (Rev. 21:24) R25:2*

That true light will shine first upon the house of Jacob, returning to them divine favor. Then the call will come to them, "Arise, shine, for thy light is come." (Isa. 60:1) R2037:4

His Church is invited to become associated with Him as light-bearers; and, if faithful in permitting their light to shine now, they will by and by be parts of that great Sun of Righteousness. SM560:3; NS89:5

If unfaithful in shining forth under present conditions of prevalent darkness, they will not be esteemed worthy to shine forth as the sun in the Kingdom. HG438:6

God's plan will not always be shrouded in mystery. A86

"They that be wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament [as the sun]." (Dan. 12:3) R1881:6, 722:6; C61; F666; HG334:4 "The earnest expectation of the creation waiteth for the manifestation of the Sons of God." (Rom. 8:19) R6:2

As the sun -- Jesus is the true great Center of the Sun of Righteousness; and the bride will be with him in the morning, shining forth his glory. R5135:6, 5769:3, 4107:6, 3686:1, 2409:1; OV205:5; PD59/70; Q822:1; SM244:1, 791:T

R3686:1

We are not now shining as the sun, but as candles. CR62:2; R5769:3; HG438:6
In the future state of glory, in contrast with its present role as a lampstand. R3560:6

Collectively; but individually there will be differences in position and honor: "as star differeth from star" in magnitude and brilliancy. (1 Cor. 15:41) F725

"The elect," burning and shining lights," are all to come together by and by, all to be changed from human to spirit beings and, with their Redeemer, constitute the great Sun of Righteousness. R3026:6
To heal earth's sorrows and scatter earth's night. R5135:6; NS173:3
Which shall scatter the darkness of earth, binding the prince of darkness, Satan, and freeing mankind from the bonds of ignorance, superstition and credulity. NS292:6, 810:2

For the scattering of the night, the scattering of darkness, superstition and evil that now enshroud the world. HG116:3, 651:5; NS555:2, 614:2

Of their Father -- Primarily, the Kingdom is God's but he has voluntarily, for a thousand years, placed it under charge of a viceroy, the Christ. D642, 643

Ears to hear -- The attitude of heart to appreciate it. R4636:4, 2995:6; CR126:5

The ability to understand spiritual things. R4636:4

Not everyone has the hearing ear. R4636:4

Let him hear -- We should not despise those who cannot hear, but rather sympathize with them and be thankful for the hearing ear which permits us to appreciate the various features of the divine plan. R3771:5

Matthew 13:44

Our thought is that the Great Teacher referred not to himself, but to those whom he instructed. R5047:6

The buyer is the Lord and those who accept his invitation to sacrifice earthly interests. D648; R4636:5

All that he hath -- When our Lord had paid man's ransom price, he had nothing left. "He poured out his soul unto death." (Isa. 53:12) R2410:1

Our Lord laid down the earthly kingdom, the earthly rights, all that he had, as man's ransom. OV251:1; R4536:1, 1015:3

He took our human nature that he might give it as a ransom for all--his human nature for our human nature. R611:3

When Jesus died at Calvary all existence was at an end. After three days he received life as a new creature, but he took not again the human nature and never can do so. R482:3, 240:3

Jesus could not have given a part of his being and retained part. R719:6

The Lord's followers are to reckon that no sacrifice is too great to attain the blessing; indeed, the Kingdom can be attained at no less cost than the surrender of all their earthly hopes and aims. HG439:1

To gain this treasure, we must give all--our time, our will, our property. CR252:2; R4636:5

Seeking -- Seeking imperishable values of not frittering away life and its opportunities; seeking for the best things, and most valuable things, temporal or spiritual. NS514:2

Goodly pearls -- In ancient times the pearl occupied the chief place among the jewels of personal adornment. NS511:1

Those qualities and rewards, even of an earthly kind, which would be enduring. NS514:5

All the other pearls--of being a great doctor, a great artist, a great musician, a model house-keeper, or something else--are trifling and insignificant in comparison with this great Pearl. Q428:4; SM681:2

We all seek something valuable for which to exchange time and influence. Q429:2; SM681:2

Matthew 13:46

When he had found one -- Representing the Gospel offered as being superior to all other propositions of the world. R4636:6

Pearl of great price -- Priceless, the finest he had ever seen. R4636:6; CR426:4

The riches of God's grace. Q161:3

The Kingdom offer of joint-heirship with Jesus in the heavenly Kingdom, and association with him in blessing all the families of the earth.

R4636:6, 5594:3, 5005:5; CR426:4, 244:4; Q429:1; HG746:2; SM681:1

Our high calling of God in Christ. OV24:5; CR365:5; R5198:6, 4969:4

The glorious Messianic Kingdom, the Kingdom of God, of priceless value. CR426:4; R5484:4, 5270:3; Q427:5, 429:1

The prize first presented to our Lord; now set before us. R4535:3, 6
Whoever possesses this pearl will be in harmony with God. SM681:3
Sold all -- Jesus gave all he had, and he had far more than any of us. Q429:2

Illustrating the feature of Jesus' work in the laying down of his life. R4536:1

The price is self-sacrifice, even unto death. R5048:2

All who would gain this pearl must sell all that they have, all that they enjoy of earthly life or privileges. R5342:1, 5048:2, 4636:6; PD59/70
Let us count the things of this earth as loss and dross that we may attain this. R5422:4

Consecrate yourself, all you have. CR252:5; PD59/70

To buy we must consecrate and give--time, energy, study. Each day will bring opportunities for giving up something considered by the selfish, carnal nature to be precious. R1657:1

Whether a man be wealthy or poor, learned or ignorant, influential or otherwise, the cost of this Kingdom pearl will be his all; it cannot be had for less. R5048:2; SM683:1

If seeking the Kingdom seems to hinder some of our earthly prospects, so much the better. The Master said it would cost us our all. R5048:5

He that is not willing to have the Kingdom at such a cost is not worthy of the Kingdom. R4637:1

Some of the earthly treasures can be relinquished in the interest of the heavenly treasures. SM684:T

Bought it -- Our Lord's payment of the price of justice. R4536:1

The terms for us are: Self-sacrifice, faithfulness to God at any cost, patient endurance under adverse conditions. R5461:6

Only those who walk the "narrow way" will gain the great prize. R5005:5

To purchase it, we must submit ourselves fully to the Lord, henceforth to have no will of our own in anything--to suffer reproach, scorn, persecution, loss of friends, tribulations. SM683:1

The number who will obtain this pearl is limited, only 144,000, and is now very nearly complete. SM684:1

We shall gain the Pearl of Great price in the Kingdom. SM685:3

Kingdom of heaven -- The nominal Christian church. C214

As it exists in its incipient and imperfect stage in this age--which, in its widest sense, is the nominal Christian church. R920:1

The embryo Kingdom during the Gospel age. R5048:2, 5555:1

This parable is applicable to the close of the Gospel age. C213

Is like unto -- Not like a net; but the embryo Kingdom resembles a fishing experience with a net. R5048:2

A net -- The Gospel message. R4637:1

Representing the nominal church of this present time. HG438:6

That was cast -- First cast at Pentecost, and from then to the present harvest time it has been gathering in all sorts of fish, together constituting the great nominal Gospel church. R1716:1, 920:1

Into the sea -- The world. C214

The world, where no distinction was recognized between Jew and Gentile.

R1716:1

And gathered -- "I will make you fishers of men." (Matt. 4:19) C214;

R5555:2

Of every kind -- Real Christians, half-deceived and deluded Christians, and multitudes of hypocrites. C214

Some fish are in the Gospel net, looking for worldly ambitions, matrimony, social standing, moral atmosphere, as a cloak for business, etc. R5048:4

"So those servants went out into the highways, and gathered together all, as many as they found, both bad and good." (Matt. 22:10) R2301:4

Not every kind will inherit the Kingdom as joint-heirs with Christ Jesus.

R4637:1

Matthew 13:48

When it was full -- When in the fullness of God's time the full number of the particular kind desired had entered the net. C214, 215

At the end of the Gospel age. R5555:1

They -- The fishermen, the Lord's people. C214; R5555:1

Drew to shore -- Withdrew the invitation to a place in the Kingdom. C214

Sat down -- Not to dive again into the sea, either with net or hook and line, to gather more fish. R920:2

And gathered -- Separated, divided. C214; D600

"Come out of her, my people." (Rev. 18:4) D601

The catching and the sorting are two parts of the one grand work of making ready a people prepared for the Lord, corresponding to the works of the sower and the reaper. R1716:4

In the harvest, from 1874 to 1915, a separating work is to be accomplished. R1716:1

Into vessels -- The special work of harvest is the gathering of the good fish into safety, rather than to catch more fish. R1716:4

Cast the bad away -- As unsuitable for a place in the Kingdom. C214; R5555:1, 2, 4637:1

Corresponds with the tares of Matt. 13:30. The unsuitable fish in the net are all church members. The unprofessing world are not represented in the parable at all. R5048:5

They are not fit for the purpose of the present selection, undeveloped, not overcomers of the world, but are overcome by the world. R920:5

The Lord has not been fishing for all kinds of fish; he has not been seeking all kinds of people; he has been drawing especially only the elect, the saintly. R5048:4

The Great Fisherman has no special use for any more or other than one kind of fish now; by and by the "abundance of the sea shall be converted." (Isa. 60:5) R920:2

During Christ's Millennial reign, these will be dealt with. R4637:1

Matthew 13:49

End of the world -- The end of this age, a sifting and separating time.

R4637:1; C214

"The harvest is the end of the age." (Matt. 13:39) C214

When the Lord shall have gathered the foreordained number of the elect Church. R5048:4

The wicked -- But some of the true children of God will also be rejected and get into the wailing and gnashing of teeth condition because they have assimilated with the worldly-minded. R920:5

Furnace of fire -- The great time of trouble. R5048:5, 4637:1

Gnashing of teeth -- "Gnawing their tongues in pain." (Rev. 16:10) R920:5

Symbolically expressing the vexation and anger of those in whom the truth only awakens a spirit of opposition and hatred. R920:4

See comments on Matt. 13:42

Matthew 13:52

Like unto a man -- Our Lord and Master has come to his waiting people and spread out for them a bounteous table of truths, new and old, in order. R1867:5

Which bringeth forth -- Through his servants, who have the keys. R1150:5

Feeding the flock; not feeding themselves upon the husks of science and man-made theology. R633:2

Out of his treasure -- Considering his parables as a householder would consider his reserve of food supplies from which, time to time, truths "both new and old" would be brought. R5048:5

Things new and old -- Some things old and good might be brought forth from the sectarian creeds, but nothing new. A24

That which our Lord said he would serve at his second coming. R5568:6

New things respecting the glory of the Kingdom and the work of the thousand years. R5568:6

Clearer light on old things: justification, sanctification, the types of Leviticus, baptism, etc. R5568:6, 5569:1

Respecting the covenants and the atonement sacrifices. R4434:2

Features of God's plan unseen since the days of the Apostles. R4434:2
Contained in the Studies in the Scriptures. R4710:1
Not only expounding the hidden truths of ancient prophecy, but also disclosing new revelations of truth. F233
Able to see the new features of his work as well as the old whenever the new features become due; not rejecting the new because they are new. R920:2
Old things that God's people have recognized as true for centuries: note how appetizing they are to us now, how strengthening to faith, how refreshing! R4043:4
The new truth must always be in harmony with the old truths. R116:3*
A new point of interpretation must have the assent of at least two of the best posted and most conversant with the Scriptures before it appears in our journal. R312:3
The reason for the present abundance of truth for the hungry ones is that we are again living in the "days of the Son of Man." NS155:4

Matthew 13:54

He taught them -- As a public teacher he had no equal. What other teacher ever had 5,000 people leave their employment and, negligent of food, follow him for three days in the wilderness. R575:2

Whence hath -- His humble birth gave him none of the advantages of education or social culture. R1682:1

True, also to some extent of those who follow Jesus' footsteps. When the Lord sends you out, you will know it; you will be so filled with the knowledge of the truth and so inspired by it that you must speak. R646:6

This wisdom -- Due to his ages of prehuman existence. E91

Matthew 13:57

In his own country -- Human nature esteems that which is distant as grander. R3494:2, 2424:6

Matthew 13:58

Because of their unbelief -- And hardness of heart; therefore, they lost the benefit of his wisdom and teaching and many of his mighty works.
R1359:3

Matthew 14

Matthew 14:1

Herod -- Antipas. R3325:3

A type of the civil power. R5569:5, 2280:4; B261

The fame of Jesus -- The popularity of Jesus did not evidently become so general until after John's death. R3326:1

Matthew 14:2

This is John -- Wondering whether or not there might be some truth in the Grecian theories that the dead were not dead, but had power to communicate through living persons. R3326:1

Risen from the dead -- His mind was troubled, yet he was not penitent. R3326:1

Tradition has it that Herod was taunted with fear. R4609:5

Matthew 14:3

Herod -- Representing the civil power. R5569:5, 1754:4; B261, 262

John -- Type of the true Church. B261

John was a semi-type, the semi-antitype of Elijah, who was a type of the Church. R5569:5; B253

As there is a striking resemblance between John and Elijah, his type, so there is a strong resemblance between the experiences of John and those of the faithful Church--the great antitype of Elijah. R3325:3, 2279:2, 968:4

And bound him -- After he had preached about a year. R3325:2

Typifying the coming restraint of the church's liberties. B261; R2280:5

John's liberty was restrained soon after the delivery of the message announcing the present One and the work before him. B261; R968:6

Put him in prison -- Josephus supposes that he was confined in a dungeon connected with the castle Macherus. R3325:2

There he remained about a year before execution. R3325:2

For Herodias' sake -- Type of the Roman Catholic Church. R5569:5

The unfaithful nominal church. B261, 262; R2280:4

Governed by boundless ambition, she realized her position insecure so long as John lived. R4609:1,2

Type of the ecclesiastical power of Christendom now seeking and longing for union with, and the co-operation of, the civil powers. R1754:4

Representing the nominal church which, throughout the symbolic Scriptures, is represented by a woman, Jezebel, etc. R2280:4

The second Jezebel; the third Jezebel is mentioned by name in Rev. 2:20. R3326:6

Two strong and two weak characters meet here. John and Herodias were strong characters, the one for the right and for God, the other for selfish ambition and sinful indulgence of it. R4609:5

Evidently she strove to incite her husband to put John to death at the time he was imprisoned; but her influence was offset by Herod's fear of the effect of such a course upon the people who esteemed John to be a prophet. R3325:6

Women are naturally more sentimental than men. If they become evil-minded and vicious, they are correspondingly disposed to even greater extremes of wickedness than their brothers. R2279:6

Philip's wife -- She had married Philip, thinking he would be king. R4609:1, 3325:5

For John said -- Perhaps acting imprudently and exceeding his duty. R3326:2, 4609:1, 2280:2

He was a thorn in the side of King Herod and his courtiers. R4609:1

As a rule, we believe it to be the wiser plan for Christian ministers to speak forth the word of God fearlessly without attempting personal application. R4609:1, 2280:4

It is not the duty of the Lord's people to go through the world rebuking sin, but preaching the Gospel. R3326:3

Paul, personally before Agrippa, Felix and other disreputable men, made no personal attack upon them. R3326:2

Perhaps typical of the duty of the true church to reprove the civil powers as well as the nominal church systems, and to declare their union unlawful, contrary to the Word of God. R2280:4, 1754:4

The true church, like its prototype, John the Baptist, will be unpopular and restrained of liberty because of faithfulness in opposing and condemning the error of the union of church with state. R969:1

Persecution should not lead us to surrender when the kings of the earth stand up with the religious rulers of the people against us and God's truth. R969:5

It is not lawful -- Declaring that Herod and his wife were living in adultery, the king separated from his own wife and improperly associated with his brother Philip's wife. R3325:5, 2279:5

For thee to have her -- For church and state to be united. B261

The nominal church adulterously allied to the kingdoms of this world while nominally espoused to Christ. R3325:3

Prophecy points out that a closer union between church and state than at present [is possible]. B262; R969:1

He feared -- But Herodias feared neither God nor man. R5069:1

The multitude -- The common people, who heard Jesus and John gladly. R4609:1 A prophet -- A public expounder. A55

Matthew 14:6

Birthday was kept -- On such occasions it was customary to have great hilarity and to use intoxicating beverages with more than usual freedom. R3325:6

Wine was in plentiful supply. She well knew that the wine would inflame the passions and relax the moral tone of the company. R4609:2, 3325:6

Daughter of Herodias -- By her former marriage. R3325:6 Salome, a type of the Protestant churches federated. R5569:5, 2280:5

Matthew 14:8

Being before instructed -- The plan succeeded to the letter. R4609:2, 3778:6

Of her mother -- Illustrating parental influence. Evil as she was, Herodias had retained the affection of her daughter and her absolute confidence and obedience. R3326:4

A true, pure, sensible mother has an almost untellable influence, for good or for evil, with her husbands and sons, as well as with her daughters. R2280:1

Said -- While the flush of excitement and liquor was upon him, and while his counselors were present who had heard the oath, before whom any indecision would stultify himself. R3326:5

Baptist's head -- They would cease to have his continual reminder of their wrong course. R5569:6

Evidently thinking that, with the prophet out of the way, all other advantages were accessible to herself and her daughter. R3326:5

Without John's death, Herodias and Salome might any day be hurled from conditions of affluence into the abyss of degradation and poverty. R4609:4

So fully in sympathy with Catholicism, United Protestantism will become her tool in the destruction of the most loyal servants of God. R2280:5

In a charger -- On a platter. R4609:4

King was sorry -- His conscience was not quite dead. R4609:4

We may be sure that his mind was frequently disturbed with the thought of his injustice, and that against one of the Lord's favorites, a prophet. R3326:1

We are not to infer from this any heart-repentance, but merely that the matter was incongruous to his sentiments and wishes. R2280:2

People do things which they recognize to be wrong, violating their conscience, and feel sorry; yet this is not a godly sorrow, for the sorrow God recognizes and appreciates leads to repentance. R3326:2

The oath's sake -- "The fear of man bringeth a snare." (Prov. 29:25) R4609:4

"Highly esteemed among men but an abomination in the sight of God." (Luke 16:15) R3779:1

For pride's sake. R3779:1, 4609:4, 2280:2

He commanded it -- A course which led to his banishment, in which Herodias shared. R4609:5, 3326:5

Matthew 14:10

Beheaded John -- The close of the earthly career of the true church is represented in Elijah's whirlwind and John the Baptist's imprisonment and beheading. R969:5

So when the coming night imprisons the faithful elect, the only deliverance will be through the valley of the shadow of death into the glorious kingdom of our Lord and Savior. R1754:5

Matthew 14:12

His disciples -- Doubtless at the present time the vengeance of the antitypical Jezebel upon the antitypical Elijah will move the friends of the Elijah class, including the Great Company, more closely to the Lord. R3327:4

And told Jesus -- They knew where to find sympathy and consolation. To whom shall we go with trials, difficulties, sorrows, troubles, disappointments?. R3327:1

Doubtless becoming his disciples. Thus their trials in connection with their leader brought them into closer knowledge and fellowship with the Great Teacher. R3327:1

Matthew 14:13

He departed thence -- For private meditation and conference with his disciples, who would be greatly agitated by the news of John's death and needed his calming influence and assurance that Herod could have no unpermitted power over them. R2435:2

Possibly to avoid Herod's interfering with his labors, possibly fearing that his teachings would incite a rebellious spirit, possibly seeking privacy with his disciples to consider the character of his work. R3332:3, 1754:2

Desert place apart -- Out of the dominion of Herod. R3332:2, 2435:3, 1754:3

Near Bethsaida. R2435:3

A great multitude -- In some respects, picturing the world during the Millennium. R3781:4

Evidence of his growing popularity. R3332:3

The crowds continued to gather wherever Jesus went, partly for hearing, partly from curiosity, and partly because the message he gave was one of comfort, consolation, hope. R5095:2

The largeness of the company is accounted for by the fact that it was near the time of the Feast of Passover and large numbers of the religiously inclined were on their pilgrimage to Jerusalem. R2435:3

Moved with compassion -- In season and out of season, so far as his convenience was concerned, he must work the works of God, lay down his life, inch by inch, hour by hour. R3332:3

He is today looking with sympathetic compassion upon the multitudes of so-called "Christendom." R2436:1

Such will be the spirit of all the Lord's followers; not self-gratification, but "doing good to all men as they have opportunity, especially to the household of faith." (Gal. 6:10) R2435:4

Evening -- After three o'clock in the afternoon, in the early evening. R3332:6

A desert place -- Tell the good tidings, no matter in what form they must be presented, no matter how intolerable the conditions. The important thing is that some are hungry for the truth and the Lord will bless us in ministering it to them. R3333:5

Buy themselves victuals -- The people seem to have been so entranced with the good tidings that they entirely forgot their own necessities. R2435:5

Matthew 14:16

Give ye them to eat -- There was a seeming necessity for the miracle. R4617:2

Before sending them away he instructs all his disciples to supply them with something to eat--spiritual food, truths pertaining to the kingdom, affording strength and encouragement for the dark hour of trouble ahead. R2436:1,4; NS123:5

We should be ready at any time to distribute our store of truth; whenever anyone is hungering and thirsting after righteousness. R3333:5

If they do not get spiritual food, they will faint by the way as they go looking for other provisions. We have the very thing which all the household of faith needs. R3334:1

Matthew 14:17

But five loaves -- It was Andrew who returned with word that a lad of the company had five loaves and two small fishes which he put at their disposal. R3333:1

A lesson also respecting the spiritual food, that we should not despise the day of small things. R3333:5

We may feel that the multitude is large and that the means at our disposal for reaching them with the bread of life are limited. R3333:5

It requires faith to go forth and to hope to accomplish the great harvest work under present limited conditions. R3333:6

And two fishes -- The Lord takes our time and talents, little and unworthy as these are, and blesses them and uses them in his service, and accomplishes great things. R3780:5

Matthew 14:19

The five loaves -- About the size of our large buns and made of the entire wheat, ground. R5104:5

And the two fishes -- We object to the claim of special sanctity and acceptableness with God on account of a purely vegetable diet. R3098:3

He blessed -- The giving of thanks did indeed give a blessing upon the food. R3780:6

It is incomprehensible how any consecrated Christian dare neglect to render thanks for his daily food. Mere outward formalistic acts of piety by others, however, are not pleasing to God. R2643:6, 2644:2

To his disciples -- Possibly the increasing continued at the hands of the apostles as they in turn distributed the food to the people. R3333:1

Those who now follow the Lord as his special disciples will, in the Millennial age, be supplied abundantly with the bread of life, and be privileged to distribute it to all the families of the earth. R3781:4

He could have fed the multitude without their help. R2644:4

We now have the privilege of being co-workers in the dissemination of the harvest message. R2644:4

Matthew 14:20

They did all eat -- A lesson of divine power; also, that Jesus was the Son of God, through whom that power was exercised. R4617:6

The Lord's miracles of feeding and healing were performed not upon his consecrated disciples, but upon others, his followers having covenanted to share with him in the work of sacrifice. R1754:6

Exemplifying the coming power and glory of the great King of the world, who is to bless, feed and uplift the race of Adam. R3333:3

And were filled -- If we lived more on the plain substantial of life, we would know when we had enough. R3781:4

Skeptics who deny this miracle cannot deny that this grain and these fishes could, in due time, by natural methods, have brought forth enough to feed this multitude. R3333:2

They took up -- Those who receive of the Lord's bounty should be none the less appreciative of it, and careful of its use. R2435:5

We are not to waste spiritual privileges because they are free gifts; rather we are to prize every spiritual morsel and gather up in store for future needs of ourselves and others. R2435:6

Of the fragments -- Not the fragments left by the multitude, but those broken by the Lord and not yet distributed. R3781:4

The Master displayed frugality and encouraged economy on the part of his followers. R5104:5

Twelve baskets full -- Haversacks, in which the 12 apostles carried their provisions; a good supply for further necessities. R2435:5

It was those who scattered to others who had their own haversacks full in the end, those who are most intent upon feeding others the bread of life are themselves most bountifully supplied. R3504:2, 2436:4

So that none of God's provision for his people might be wasted. R3333:3

The memory is our "basket" in which we are to gather up in store for ourselves and others every spiritual morsel. R2435:6

About five thousand men -- Yet at the time of his temptation he refused to miraculously appease his own hunger. F650; R1063:2*

Arranged in 100 groups of 50 in the form of a three-sided square, after the shape of a Roman reclining table, the disciples passing in at the open side were thus able to reach the entire company. R3333:1

By reason of having received the holy Spirit, Jesus had power to do anything that might be necessary in God's service. Q495:2

Matthew 14:22

Get into a ship -- To expedite the dispersion of the multitude. R2649:3

To go before him -- To give them opportunity to think over the miracle, and talk it over by themselves in his absence. R3333:5

Unto the other side -- Back to Galilee, Herod's territory, evidencing the fact that our Lord's conference with his disciples had a pacifying and strengthening effect on them. R2435:3

A mountain apart -- Pray in secret. R5379:6*

To pray -- The Lord frequently spent whole nights in prayer. R1863:5

For the refreshment of his own zeal, for the keeping warm of his own love and devotion, which was the basis of his consecration. R2649:6

We cannot come too often. R1865:3

Nearly all the Great Teacher's recorded prayers are simple and brief. Whenever he wished to make long prayers, he went to the Father alone. R5095:3

He was there alone -- Even his beloved disciples, not having been begotten of the Spirit, could not enter into fellowship with him in respect to spiritual things, nor appreciate the trials which came to him as a perfect man. R2649:6

Though he sometimes prayed with the disciples in their hearing, he was not content with these opportunities, but frequently sought the Father alone. R2649:3

There are times when we love to join our hearts and voices with others at the throne of grace, and there are other times when we need individual, personal, private communion with God. R3333:4

Matthew 14:24

But the ship -- Representing the experiences of the Lord's true church. R2650:3

Was now -- Throughout the Gospel age. R2650:4

During the darkness of the nighttime which precedes the Millennial dawn, there will be storms and difficulties arising which would overwhelm us without the Lord's aid. R2650:3

Tossed with waves -- Representing the great storm of trouble and persecution, against which the true church has been obliged to contend. R2650:4; SM748:T

"We wrestle not against flesh and blood [merely], but against principalities, against powers." (Eph. 6:12) R2650:4

The wind was contrary -- The great adversary, through the anti-Christ and many less anti-Christ, has aroused, all through the Gospel age, a great storm against the Lord's faithful few. R2650:4

Matthew 14:25

In the fourth watch -- Between three and six in the morning. R2650:2
In the early dawn of the Millennial day. B191; R2650:4

"God shall help her early in the morning." (Psa. 46:5) R2650:4

Jesus went -- Typifying the second advent of the Lord. B191

Unto them -- Typifying the church in the flesh in this harvest time. B191

Walking on the sea -- Typifying the stormy sea of the world's unparalleled trouble. B191

The manner of his coming was different from what had been expected. R2650:4
Storms and trials have beset the church collectively all through the journey from Pentecost until now. In the morning watches he has appeared. SM748:1

Individually we have such experiences. The Lord for a time permits the storms of life to assault us. Then he manifests himself, and the storms no longer cause us dread and fear. SM748:T

Matthew 14:26

It is a spirit -- They supposed it to be an apparition, a spirit manifestation in human form, walking on the water. R5095:3
Thinking they had seen a supernatural being and that it foreboded some calamity. R2650:2

Matthew 14:27

Be of good cheer -- It helped the disciples later to remember how the Master came to them on the troubled sea and brought peace and quiet. R5095:5

It is the privilege of those who are fully consecrated to the Lord to be cheerful, happy, even in the midst of unsatisfactory and painful conditions. R4592:4, 2083:5, 1949:5

Cheerfulness is one of the loveliest graces of the Christian character. R1123:2*

Be not afraid -- They were all affrighted until thus reassured. R4618:2
"All things work together for good to them that love God." (Rom. 8:28)

Matthew 14:28

And Peter -- Representing those who now believe the Lord is present. R2650:4

Answered him -- Showing both the strength and weakness of Peter's natural disposition: noble and courageous, but rather forward and boastful. R4618:1

Bid me come unto thee -- Peter had the wonderful courage to make the effort. R5095:6
Perhaps rashly. SM748:1

Matthew 14:29

And he said, Come -- "Come out of her, my people." (Rev. 18:4) C167

Walked on the water -- By the same power that enabled him and the other disciples to heal the sick and cast out demons. R4618:2

Matthew 14:30

Afraid -- His faith failed. R5095:6

The same Peter who later drew his sword and smote the servant of the High Priest in his Master's defense; yet, only a few hours later, denied him with oaths and cursing. R4618:1

Beginning to sink -- While Peter's faith was stronger than that of the others, and of ours today, it was not strong enough. R4618:2

As the Lord found no fault with St. Peter for his efforts, we are bound to admire the degree of faith and courage which he manifested. R5096:1

When conviction of unworthiness becomes deep-seated, the heart is most likely to cry unto the Lord for deliverance from darkness. R4618:4

Matthew 14:31

Stretched forth his hand -- Our Lord's help of Peter corresponds to that greater help from death for the whole world; and of a helping hand to God's children now. R4618:5

The same arm supports them well who now come out of Babylon. C167
To all who cry unto the Savior for deliverance from sin and death, he lends a helping hand. R4618:4

All God's people, like Peter, would like to do some wonderful thing to show their faith; and often they would utterly fail, did not the Lord interpose for their rescue. R5095:6

So all of the faithful now will need the Master's hand stretched to their relief; otherwise they would sink in discouragement because of lack of faith. R2650:5

He will not reproach for sins repented of; rather, he will say, Why did you not come sooner? I was quite willing to aid you as soon as you cried. R4618:4

O thou of little faith -- Had his faith continued, he would have been sustained. R5095:6, 4618:2

The Lord's rule with his people seems to be, "According to thy faith be it unto thee." R5095:6

Peter made a mirror of his mistakes and thus, learning to know himself more particularly, he was safeguarded through the many dangers natural to his temperament. R5096:1

Matthew 14:32

The wind ceased -- The lesson of the occasion being ended. R4618:2

All the storms and billows of trouble and persecution which may impede and weary us are amenable to his control. R2650:3

If the miracle of the loaves illustrated his power to protect his people from want, this manifested that his power is able to preserve his people in the storms, difficulties and trials of life. R2650:3
When the Lord has joined himself to his church, the trials, storms and difficulties will be at an end, and the desired haven of the heavenly condition will have been reached. R2650:5

Matthew 14:33

Worshipped him -- Realizing afresh that he was the Son of God in power; that even the winds and the waves obeyed him. R4618:2

The Son of God -- If the Son of God, he is true; and if he is true, then all the exceeding great and precious promises which he left for us may be relied upon, built upon, anchored into. R2650:6

Matthew 14:36

Touched the hem -- God's consecrated people have realized a spiritual blessing as Jesus passed their way, and by faith they touched him. R5096:4
Realizing him to be the Son of the highest. R5096:5

Matthew 15

Matthew 15:1

Scribes and Pharisees -- They would have been glad to have recognized him as a Pharisee and do his mighty works in the name of Pharisasm, but his attitude was that of an independent. R3786:2

Prophesying, in the ordinary sense of teaching, afterward became popular with a certain class, and degenerated into Pharisasm. A55

Matthew 15:3

Transgress the commandment -- Make void the law of God. NS843:2

Matthew 15:6

He shall be free -- The commandment had been changed by the Talmud and any man might be free from all obligations to his parents by consecrating himself and substance to God. R5096:6

None effect -- Null and void, which they had no right to do. R5096:6

By your tradition -- Teaching as commandments of God what are really the traditions of men. OV159:T; Q747:2

Similarly, both Catholics and Protestants are teaching traditions of the "Dark Ages" instead of the Word of God. OV159:T; NS762:5

Every creed tends to take the place of the Bible, just as the Talmud does with the Jews. R5298:5

The theories and opinions that had been formed and handed down from the past, that were not based upon the inspired testimony of the Prophets.

Q747:2

As found in the Systematic Theology volumes of Christendom and in the Talmud of the Jews, teaching for doctrine the precepts of men. D64; HG716:4
Handed down through all the creeds of Christendom; the doctrine of Purgatory being a little less unreasonable than the creeds of Protestants.
NS763:1

The traditions of men are unreliable, and from these come the errors which hinder the proper understanding of the Scriptures. NS301:3

Satan could not get Israel to forsake the law, so he took the opposite course and, by multiplying the forms and ceremonies of religion, he satisfied their consciences, while he blinded them to the true meaning of the Law. R525:5

The traditions of men speak fear of the Almighty who, they say, has already sent to eternal torment the vast majority of our relatives, friends and neighbors. NS762:4

There are true traditions (Gal. 1:14; 2 Thess. 2:15) and false traditions. Their harmony with the Divine Word determines which are true and which are false. Q747:2,1

Matthew 15:7

Ye hypocrites -- Hypocritically pretending to make a covenant with the Lord, pretending to be his people. Their punishment will be greater because of their hypocrisy; nevertheless, it will be with a view to their recovery and not their destruction. HG684:5

Matthew 15:8

Draweth nigh unto me -- There never was a time when Jewish laws and ordinances were more faithfully observed than during that harvest--every form, ceremony and tithing was scrupulously remembered; the Temple of Herod was their grandest, and missionary enterprises were on foot for Judaizing the world. R235:1

The outward show and splendor of civilization called Christendom is, in many respects, impressive. SM245:1

With their mouth -- It would be better not to approach the Lord at all than to do so in an improper manner. R5480:1

A Christian should not say prayers, but should pray. He should not think of saying even one word that he does not mean and has not thought out. R5480:1 With what carefulness should we take upon us his worthy name!
R1527:6

"Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain." (Ex. 20:7)

R1527:2

"Let every one that nameth the name of Christ depart from iniquity." (2 Tim. 2:19) R1527:3

Their heart is far -- Few indeed apply their hearts unto instruction; yet, without the least hesitation, multitudes take the name of God and of Christ in vain. R1528:5

The Lord regards anything short of simple candor and honesty of heart with aversion. R1527:6

The command of chief love should be in our hearts. If so, love for God will permeate everything. R4052:3

Matthew 15:9

In vain do they worship -- The difficulty is that these improper worshippers have such a wrong fear of God that they cannot love him and hence cannot draw nigh to him with their heart. NS762:3

Teaching for doctrines -- What gross and hideous doctrines have not shielded themselves under the name Christian, vainly taken? R1528:5

The commandments of men -- Thereby opposing the truth and becoming false prophets or false teachers. A55

Their own dreams, imaginings, or the dreams of their forefathers, in neglect of the Word of God. OV158:6

The traditions of men, the propagation of men's theories, the advancement of denominational interests. R5631:1

Through sectarian creeds and catechisms. The result of even mixing truth with error is confusion--Babylon. R442:5 For their own erroneous doctrines they have claimed divine authorship; their words are not acceptable to God because they have not submitted themselves to his plans and methods. R3647:6

Matthew 15:13

Hath not planted -- The true Church, the New Creation, is of the Father's planting. Our Lord says, "I am the Vine, ye are the branches." (John 15:1-6) F207

Shall be rooted up -- "And the angel thrust his sickle into the earth and gathered the vine of the earth." (Rev. 14:19) F207

Let them alone -- Special light in both harvests is for the Israelites indeed. B28

Corresponds to the command, "Come out of her my people, that ye be not partakers of her sins." (Rev. 18:4) R718:3

Blind leaders -- Bewildered leaders of human thought. R5468:2

These words, though applied by Jesus to the Jewish house, were also intended to apply to that of which it was a shadow, the Gospel house. R718:3

Blinded by Satan who, by mixture of dishonoring falsehoods with their little truth, conceals the grandest elements of the divine nature. R525:5 Illustrated by the prophet in likening them to "blind watchmen" (Isa. 56:10); not for lack of natural vision so necessary to watchmen, but of mental perception--"they are ignorant" of the character and purposes of God. R718:3

The Master denounced the religious hypocrites of his time as greater sinners than murderers and thieves. OV390:1

The body of the ministry today has sadly fallen. R5631:5

The end of the Gospel dispensation would be characterized by general declension in religion, especially by the falling of pastors or teachers from the truth. R718:3

Of the blind -- The blindness will continue upon fleshly Israel until the Gospel church is completed. (Rom. 11:25) R2615:4

In the coming age, their blindness shall be taken away, their pride shall be humbled, and then shall they seek Him whom, with wicked hands, they had crucified and slain. R606:6 Lead the blind -- By the tendency to depart from God's Word. R1717:1

Both shall fall -- While the most influential, who betray their trust as stewards, are the greatest sinners in Zion, those who blindly follow their leading become partakers of their sin (Rev. 18:4) and share the same penalty. R1875:1

Into the ditch -- Into the ditch of general doubt and unbelief here, as their prototypes did in the trouble which closed the Jewish age. R2948:1, 2615:3, 2036:1, 1792:3

The pit (Diaglott). R718:3

Because Jesus was a "stone of stumbling and a rock of offense to both the houses of Israel" (Isa. 8:14)--the fleshly and the spiritual house. R862:5

The Federated Protestant "image" will fall into the ditch of anarchy. R4690:3

Matthew 15:21

Then Jesus went -- With the people discussing the wisdom of making him king, with Herod's boldness manifested in the beheading of John, and with the realization that his time had not yet come, he left the parts where he was so well known. R3786:1

Into the coasts of -- Into parts of Galilee which bordered upon Tyre and Sidon. R2280:3, 3786:2

Not into the countries themselves, for they were Gentile countries. He was still in Israel, in Galilee, but over toward the border of Tyre and Sidon.

R2280:3

Tyre and Sidon -- Within the boundary of the land called Phoenicia. R3786:1

Populated largely by Carthaginians and Syrians. R3786:6

Matthew 15:22

Woman of Canaan -- Not an Israelite, therefore "without God and having no hope in the world." (Eph. 2:12) R2653:2, 4627:1

Of Syrian ancestry, by education and language a Greek. In a word, she represented quite a mixture of nationalities, a Gentile out and out.

R3786:6

Cried unto him -- In a loud voice, and probably with weeping. R2653:2

Not only overcoming the prejudices of her own heathen ideas, but also everything akin to pride and the fear of being rejected as one unworthy of the favor she sought. R2653:2

As a poor and uneducated woman she would naturally have great diffidence in approaching a learned man, especially one so notable as this great Prophet of Israel. R2653:2

Have mercy on me -- Jesus ignored the petition. R4627:1

Thou son of David -- "The Lord shall give him the throne of his father David." (Luke 1:32) C257

The long-promised king of David's line, the Messiah. E130; C257; SM210:2

Grievously vexed -- In danger of entirely losing reason. R4627:5

A devil -- A fallen angel. It is a great and important truth that many humans are more or less obsessed by evil spirits--demons. R4627:5

In a sense, all sin and sickness are afflictions of the devil, the result of Satan's lie. R4627:5

Matthew 15:23

Not a word -- Perhaps the delay was in order to consider well the path of duty, the work which the Father had given him to do. R2280:3

To test the woman's faith as well as to manifest to others, then and since. R2280:3

We consider it not unreasonable to suppose that he thoroughly understood the case from the beginning and adopted the method he did to draw out her faith. R2653:3

To many, this would have been sufficient to have discouraged faith and sent them away weeping. R2653:2

How apt the majority are to speak and act without one moment's thought respecting the will of the Father. R2280:6

How different in our case! We, who were once aliens, have, upon making a covenant, been adopted into the Lord's family. We need not importune for favors; they are ours for the taking. R2653:6

If, in our case, the Lord see not best to grant a prompt response, we may be sure it is not from lack of interest in our welfare. At the very latest, by the Millennial kingdom, deliverance will be granted, not only to us, but to all mankind. R2653:4

With us, too, we may see that it will be better if he should for a time ignore our petitions, that thus we might become more earnest and perhaps increase our faith. R3787:4

Besought him -- Whether from sympathy or from vexation because she was interrupting their opportunity for study and communion with the Lord we cannot judge. R2280:6

Send her away -- Grant her request, and let her go away. R2280:6, 2653:3
Crieth after us -- Her importuning of the disciples would imply that Jesus had left the house. R3787:1, 2653:2

Matthew 15:24

I am not sent -- To manifest God's favor towards. R4627:2

When our Lord sent forth his Apostles to preach and heal, he told them to pass by all who were not Jews. R4627:1

Not because of narrowness on his part, nor because of insufficiency of time on God's part, but because time and order have to do with every feature of God's plan. R4344:2

The time had not yet come for giving Gentiles a place in God's family as children of Abraham. OV365:T

Unto the lost sheep -- Those who have wandered from the Lord and were lost in the wilderness of sin and darkness. R2084:3

Individuals, not tribes. R2085:1

The house of Israel -- Until the full end of Israel's 70th week of favor. C170

Gentiles and Samaritans were passed by. With a few exceptions, our Lord's miracles were confined to the Jews. R4627:1

They alone were God's covenanted people. R4627:1, 2512:2

"Go not into the way of the Gentiles, and into any city of the Samaritans enter ye not." (Matt. 10:5) A72, 97; R2872:1, 1451:2, 257:2; HG343:2; OV224:5

"You only have I known of all the families of the earth." (Amos 3:2) A97

Our Lord said not one word about the "house of Judah," which he manifestly considered was merely a part of the whole nation of Israel. C300

The whole twelve tribes, all of whom were represented in Palestine. B207; C252, 293

No longer represented by our Lord and the Apostles as the "ten tribes" merely, but, as it is expressed, "all Israel." R1341:1; B206; C252

When the apostles were finally sent out to preach the gospel to all the world, they were told to begin at Jerusalem. (Luke 24:47) R1783:6

It was not until Israel had stumbled through unbelief and been rejected of God (Matt. 23:37,38) that he authorized the preaching of the gospel to the Gentiles. R2518:6

So, in this harvest, the message is only to spiritual Israel. R1742:4

Matthew 15:25

Then came she -- The faith was there, hence the persistency of the request. R3787:1

Lord help me -- Her importunity, when she recognized the Lord as the only help. R4627:5

She left it entirely to the Lord's wisdom how the help and mercy should be bestowed. R2281:1

Her daughter's cause was her cause. R2280:6

However degraded and outcast from God's favor, we may still know of the divine compassion. R4627:2

Matthew 15:26

It is not meet -- Because the appointed time had not yet come, according to God's Plan, for favor to be shown to any people but Israel. R1451:2

The children's -- Israelites'. R2604:3, 1000:4

Bread -- Favor. R1451:2

The children of God will be first fed from this table. R4627:4

Cast it to dogs -- Customary Jewish phraseology respecting Gentiles, signifying their inferiority. R4627:2, 5444:4, 5004:6, 2604:3, 1451:2

This did not signify that the Lord had no love for the remainder of mankind; their blessing would come in due time. R4627:4

Our Lord used the form of word which indicates the little pet dogs of the family. R3338:4

The word here used by our Lord, and also by the woman, signifies house dogs or little dogs, pet dogs, and not the objectionable wild dogs of Rev. 22:19. R2653:6

Not ferocious dogs, but house dogs--dogs which were friends and companions of the children. R2281:1

A rebuff, calculated to dishearten one of little faith, but correspondingly to strengthen a great faith; not of disdain, contempt or indifference, but implying interest and sympathy, explaining a reason for rejection. R2653:5

Had pride been in her heart, this response would have been sufficient to put her on her dignity, so that she would have ceased her importunity and tiraded against the Lord and the Jew as ecclesiastical bigots. R3787:2

Are we humble enough to accept his mercy on his conditions, acknowledging ourselves nothing, that we have no merit to plead with him? R3787:4

Matthew 15:27

Truth, Lord -- Her faith, while persistent, was not intrusive nor assertive; as a result, her prayer was granted. R2281:1

Note the difference between this attitude and the curious and unbelieving desire for miracles of the people of his home city, Nazareth. R2579:5

Yet the dogs -- She was willing to confess herself one of the Gentile dogs, that she had no right to claim any of those blessings of healing for her daughter because she was not of the Jewish nation. Q601:T

Eat of the crumbs -- What perseverance was manifested: she believed the Lord to be the Messiah. R4627:2

Jesus granted the woman a crumb from the divine table. R5004:6

"There was a certain beggar named Lazarus, laid at his gate, full of sores and desiring to be fed with the crumbs." (Luke 16:20,21) R2604:2

As he let some of the crumbs of knowledge and blessing fall to the Samaritans in John 4; an illustration of the Apostle's words, "Do good unto all men as you have opportunity." (Gal. 6:10) R2574:5

Offering a clear explanation of how the Gentiles, pictured by Lazarus in the parable of the Rich Man and Lazarus, ate of the crumbs of divine favor which fell from Israel's table of bounties. R1087:1, 1086:6, 1000:4, 802:3, 284:2; HG385:6; Q600:1

In God's due time not only crumbs will fall for the remainder of the race, but rich and bountiful provision. R4627:4

Master's table -- The table, or food, spread before fleshly Israel, God's fleshly children, consisted of those special favors and promises of God to them as his Chosen People. R4782:1

Matthew 15:28

Great is thy faith -- She had more faith than a majority of the Jews. R4627:2

God's chiefest blessings are for the faithful. R4627:1

Matthew 15:30

Lame, blind, dumb -- All "afflicted of the devil" (verse 22), for all afflictions are either directly or indirectly of Satan. R2281:2

To unstop the mental ears is more wonderful than to open the physical ears; to cause the dumb to sing praises to God is greater work than the giving of natural speech. R5104:5

He healed them -- If the laws of nature can be controlled to some extent by man for his own convenience, how much more able is God to control the operation of his own laws. R2281:5

His mission was not to heal the sick and cast out devils, but to give his life a ransom. The miracles and cures were merely incidentals, and not his real work; incidental in that they illustrated his great kingdom work.

R5104:2, 2281:4 It was not so important that certain persons be physically healed, nor that the multitudes not go hungry over night, but that the apostles should get the needed lessons and see the Lord's power. R5920:5

It would have been still greater to have opened the eyes of their understanding and their deaf ears; but this work could not be accomplished at that time. R5104:4

The God of Israel -- Of the whole twelve tribes. C252, 293, 300

Matthew 15:32

I have compassion -- The necessity prompted our Lord to use of the divine power communicated to him by the holy Spirit; but he had refused to use this same power selfishly. R4617:2, 2006:4

On the multitude -- He created food for the multitudes, but not for himself or his disciples. They undoubtedly ate of the food, but its object was for the relief of the multitude. R2006:5

Three days -- What other teacher ever had 5000 people leave their employment and, negligent of food, follow him three days in the wilderness?. R575:2

Matthew 15:36

Loaves -- Of ground whole wheat, about the size of our large buns. R5104:5

Matthew 15:37

They did all eat -- Hungry and thirsty, yet feeding thousands. R1063:2*
Quite possibly some of us would find ourselves equally healthy and strong on similarly plain food. R5104:5

And were filled -- From the Bible standpoint, these miracles are most rational. The power of God, which produces as much as 250 grains from one kernel, is surely sufficient to produce many times as much if the necessity occurred. R4617:5

Jesus refused to use this same power selfishly for his own comfort, even when he hungered after having spent forty days in the wilderness at the outstart of his work. R4617:2

They took up -- The Master displayed frugality and encouraged economy on the part of his followers. R5104:5

Matthew 16

Matthew 16:1

Pharisees -- A strong holiness party. OV71:T; R4986:3, 2939:5, 2485:6

Sadducees -- Higher Critics and politicians; or Reform Jews. OV70:3; R2939:6

Practically unbelievers; of the wealthier, more respectable class. R4986:3
The agnostics or rationalists of that time. R2756:4

Matthew 16:3

Foul weather -- Our interest in the weather leads us to take notice of the conditions of the sky which presage storms and fair weather. NS632:4

Can ye not discern -- Many see the signs of the new dispensation without knowing how to read them or what they signify. NS632:5

Should we not be much more deeply interested in the much more important things pertaining to the development of the divine plan? NS632:4

It was then, as now, the nominal church which discerned not. R384:3

Signs of the times -- Even those who have no knowledge of the divine plan are now reading the signs of the times so clearly as to approximate the time of a new order of things. R1619:3

Matthew 16:4

No sign be given -- The special light in both harvests is for the Israelites indeed. B26, 27

While dismissing the self-satisfied, fault-finding quibbles of the Pharisees with dark or evasive answers, our Lord took time and care in making truth clear and plain to the humble. B27

But the sign -- The one great sign given that nation was not given until Calvary. R5111:3

The prophet Jonas -- As Jonas was (portions of) three days and three nights in the belly of the fish, so the Son of Man would be a similar period in the earth, and then come forth. R5111:3

That sign did have a great effect upon thousands of Jews, as is evidenced in the account in Acts of the thousands baptized upon hearing Peter's preaching of Jesus' death, three days in the tomb, and resurrection on the third day. R5111:3

See also comments on Matt. 12:40.

Matthew 16:6

Beware -- Be cautious, careful and watchful. R1670:6

Be ever on the watch that we be not caught in any snare of the Adversary. R1661:6*

Of the leaven -- Corruption, error, sin. F464; T98

Incipient putrefaction, hence a symbol of impurity. R1800:2

Symbol of an evil influence. R5390:2

Symbolizing not merely false doctrine, but also a wicked disposition. R2283:4

Of the Pharisees -- Typifying the synods, conferences, councils, etc., of the nominal church. C152

Matthew 16:9

How many baskets -- Doubtless our Lord and the disciples partook of the bread and fish after they were made, but the object was the relief of the multitude, and not their own refreshment. R2006:5, 1754:6

Of the doctrine -- With special reference to the state of the dead. R433:1*

Of the Pharisees -- The Pharisees believed in the immortality of the soul and the eternal suffering of the wicked. R432:6*

Of the Sadducees -- The Sadducees did not believe in the resurrection, nor in angels or spirits. R432:6*

Matthew 16:13

When Jesus came -- Probably toward the close of the third year of our Lord's ministry. R3339:2, 2287:3

Caesarea Philippi -- On our Lord's most northerly journey in Palestine, just at the headwaters of the river Jordan. R3788:1

Whom do men say -- Not because of his own ignorance, but that he might draw out the thoughts of his disciples. R4645:1

Drawing out the apostles, and seeking to crystallize in their minds the thought which he knew was already forming or had formed. R3339:6

The Son of man -- A title recognized among the Jews as appropriate to the Messiah; a title applied to Messiah by Daniel the prophet. (Dan. 7:13,14) R3788:1

Matthew 16:14

Thou art John -- Herod, who had beheaded John the Baptist, seems to have started the suggestion that Jesus was John risen from the dead. R2656:2

The answer that some thought him John the Baptist risen from the dead showed that the public mind was being exercised, noting that he was not an impostor. R3339:6

Some, Elias -- The Elijah prophesied to precede Messiah's coming. R2656:2

Others, Jeremias -- The doctrine of reincarnation, wholly unscriptural, is suggested in these answers. R4645:1

One of the prophets -- Very few seemed to have thought of him as the Messiah--expecting Messiah, when he would come, to be very kingly. R2656:2

Matthew 16:15

Whom say ye that I am? -- This was a pointed question, calculated to bring out a full expression of their faith. R1760:2

Jesus had been with his disciples working miracles for nearly two years before he asked them. R5767:5

With the intimate acquaintance that you have had, what is your opinion? R3339:6

This is the great question of today. R5120:5

Simon Peter -- Probably the oldest of the disciples, and their spokesman. R3339:6

Answered and said -- Displaying not only the strength of his faith in the Lord, but also his own strength of character and his zeal. R2656:3
Peter was the one who had the courage of conviction to speak out. CR151:5
Special blessings come, not only from believing in Christ, but also from confessing him to and before others. R4645:2

The Christ -- God's Anointed One; Hebrew, the Messiah. R3339:6
"The man Christ Jesus, who gave himself a ransom for all." (1 Tim. 2:5,6)
R5120:5

The Messiah, the great deliverer of Israel and the world of mankind.
NS194:5

To be the Christ, he must have been the "man Christ Jesus" who gave himself a ransom-price for all, signifying an extraordinary birth; else, as Adam's son, he would have been subject to the sentence of death. R5120:5
As the Anointed Lord, he shall be the great King, Prophet and Priest.
R5120:6

Who left the glory of the Father and was made flesh to be the great Redeemer. R5120:5

This was the first public declaration of Jesus' Messiahship. SM464:1;
HG737:2

Our Lord hesitated to present it; it would better come from the disciples themselves. R4645:1

There was no protest on the part of any; their silence gave consent.
R3788:2

Son of the living God -- The apostles did not contradict the Lord and say that he was the Father, nor that he was equal with the Father. NS195:3
The Scriptures nowhere speak of the Lord Jesus as his own father, the Almighty Jehovah. R3788:3

Not of ordinary birth, but the Sent of God. R5120:5

Not only recognizing Jesus as the Messiah, but also his divine authority and paternity. R2656:3

Possibly, the Son of God who is the author of life; probably, the Son of God, the Living One--the one who has a right to life according to the law; all others are under condemnation to death. R5120:5, 2656:3,5

Peter thus declared his faith that Jesus was the Son of God, not the son of Joseph. R5767:5; OV328:4

The belief that Jesus, the Son of Man (verse 13) was also the Christ, the Son of the living God, lies at the very foundation of Christianity. R944:4*

Matthew 16:17

Blessed art thou -- You have been greatly blessed of God to see this truth. R2656:5

Jesus admitted the correctness of Peter's answer. R5120:1

Not only was Jesus' heart cheered by Peter's zeal, but Peter was also blessed. R785:2

Simon -- Peter, being the most prompt to confess Jesus' Messiahship, received the first and warmest commendation and reward. R1760:2

Bar-jona -- Son of Jona. R2656:5

Flesh and blood -- Signifying human nature. R4793:6, 611:2

Mankind in general. R2656:5

Revealed it -- The eyes of your understanding have been opened. R2656:5

But my Father -- Here again our Lord disclaims being the Father. R3788:3

The natural man cannot see the deep things of God, because they are spiritually discerned. (1 Cor. 2:14) R5920:3

Not that St. Peter had experienced a special vision or revelation, but that such a spiritual fact could be appreciated only by one specially favored of the Father. R4645:1, 5563:2

Which is in heaven -- Jesus referred to the heavenly, and not to an earthly father. R5767:5, 3788:3

Not on earth, except representatively. R3788:3

Thou art Peter -- A piece of rock. NS194:3

The word Peter signifies a stone of moderate size. HG737:2; SM464:2

A stone, a strong-minded, strong-willed character. R4645:2, 2658:5

Greek, petros, a rock or stone; one of the "living stones" of the spiritual temple. (1 Pet. 2:5) E375; F220; R4645:2, 3789:2, 2656:6, 1525:1; NS194:4; SM464:2

A stone ready for the spiritual temple, the first to publicly acknowledge Jesus. HG737:2; SM464:1

Represented as one of the Twelve Foundation stones in the New Jerusalem, the other apostles being equally foundation stones. (Rev. 21:12) R2656:6

He was honored by the name Rock, or Peter, as a memorial of his being the first to recognize the great Rock--Christ Jesus. R813:1*

Upon this rock -- Greek, petra, mass of rock, fundamental rock, truth. SM464:2; F220; R2656:6; NS194:3

This great truth that I am the Christ. E375; SM464:1; R4645:2, 3789:2

Peter's confession of him was a rock testimonial--a declaration of the foundation principles underlying the divine plan. F220

The apostles, the twelve foundations of the New Jerusalem, were not laid in the sand, but upon the sure and steadfast rock, Christ Jesus. R1522:1
"Other foundation can no man lay that that is laid, Jesus Christ." (1 Cor. 3:11) HG736:6; SM463:1

To think of St. Peter as the only foundation for the Church would be to deny Christ's teaching and St. Peter's own statement that the entire Church is symbolically represented as living stones built together by the Lord through his holy Spirit. (1 Pet. 2:4-10) HG736:3

I will -- Spoken of as future. The foundation was not even laid until Christ was risen a spiritual being. The building is a spiritual house and is built on a spiritual rock. R97:3*

Build my church -- The Kingdom of God in embryo, in preparation. R5616:4
Composed only of those who have taken the steps of repentance from sin, restitution to the extent of ability, acceptance of Christ's sacrifice, and consecration. F275

Probably the first intimation that the Lord gave of his intention to build a Church. R2657:1

The Church which Christ organized has existed through the centuries and is composed of all those individuals inside and outside of man-made churches, sects and parties. NS193:6

The Church of Rome holds that Peter was its founder, but it can produce no evidence to this effect. R2657:2, 812:3* Not the present-day, man-made, creed-bound and clergy-lorded systems. R2657:2

The gates of hell -- Greek, hades, oblivion, death, not torment. E375; SM459:1; NS195:5

Not gates to some place of torture, nor to purgatory; it might well be translated "the gates of the grave." R4645:2

We are not to suppose it is a barred gateway to a fiery hell and the Church trying to break in; nor should we imagine the Church on the fiery side, trying to get out. "O hades, where is thy victory?" 1 Cor. 15:55)
R3789:4

Shall not prevail -- As the heavenly Father raised up Jesus Christ from the dead, so the gates of death shall not prevail against the Church.
OV363:4; SM463:3; R4693:2; NS196:1

The gates of hades did close over our dear Redeemer himself for portions of three days, but they did not prevail. R2657:2, 1760:3

Our Lord prevailed over hades on the third day in his resurrection; the Church also shall prevail on the third thousand-year day. R1760:3

An assurance of the resurrection of the dead. HG737:1

Bursting the bonds of death, bursting the restraints of sheol, of hades, by the Father's power. R3789:4

Persecution, even unto death, would afflict the Gospel Church, but never prevail to her utter extermination. R4645:2, 2600:2, 1760:3; E375, 376
Not that his followers should not enter the portals of death, but that eventually these prison-doors of death would open. R2657:2

Matthew 16:19

Unto thee the keys -- Representative of the opening power vested in the one who has been duly authorized to act; as we sometimes say, "He holds the key to the situation." Q783:4, 795:4

The opening power. F221; E214; R4345:4

Symbol of power or an authority or an initiative. HG737:4; SM465:3

A key implies a lock. The thought here is that God's Kingdom was locked up so that none could enter it. R3789:5

Our Lord did not open the doors of the Kingdom in the full sense of the word; they could not be opened until first the great transaction of

Calvary had been accomplished. R2657:4

The key which Peter used was dispensational truth then due, and first made clear to the mind of Peter by the holy Spirit. R1525:2

Keys represent power and authority. He needed more than one because hitherto Jew and Gentile were totally distinct and the Gentiles were not fellow-heirs, not of the same body. R376:1

Keys, in the plural, implies that more than one door was to be opened. As a matter of fact, there were just two doors and just two keys, one for each door, Jewish and Gentile. E214; NS803:1

The first key, on the day of Pentecost, to open the door for all Jews; three and one-half years later he used the other key and threw open the door to the Gentiles. PD73/87; SM465:3,4; R4645:4, 4345:4, 3789:6, 1760:5, 1525:2, 795:4; Q783:4

In 69 AD the door of Jewish favor closed. Since then, they are privileged to enter the Kingdom of heaven class only upon the same terms and conditions as the Gentiles. NS186:6

But, the door once opened, neither Peter nor any other man can close it.

Our Lord has the "key of David." (Rev. 3:7) R1525:2

So powerfully was the Kingdom key used by Peter that 3000 believers were found--six times as many as had accepted our Lord during the three and one-half years of his ministry. NS185:5

The other apostles were associated in the work, but Peter was the leader and chief spokesman in that opening work of the Gospel dispensation. NS185:4

This door will be closed forever when all the wise virgins shall have gone in to the wedding. R3789:6

Of the kingdom -- Which, when Christ spoke, was securely locked. R3789:5

A class being called out of the world to become, with Christ, the ruling power of the world. SM465:2

The Lord used the words "Church" and "Kingdom" interchangeably, showing that the Church is the Kingdom in embryo. R32:3*

Whatsoever thou -- All of the apostles, including Peter. R3789:6, 1760:5, 1525:2

As Peter was only one of the foundation stones of the Church, so he was only one of the twelve to whom this declaration was made. (Matt. 18:18)
HG736:4; SM462:2

Not that the Lord turned matters over to St. Peter and made him Lord of heaven and earth; nor that any or all of the apostles were so honored.
R4645:4

Not applicable to all of the Church, but chiefly to the apostles. (John 6:70; 15:16; Rev. 21:14) R2658:1

Shalt bind on earth -- Binding and loosing was a common form of expression in those days to indicate forbidding and permitting. R3789:6
Respecting the apostles alone, we have the assurance that whatever they forbade or allowed was under heavenly guidance and sanction. R3789:6;
CR415:4

If they bound certain doctrines and teachings, we must know that those are bound and firmly established in heaven. R4645:5

They would be enabled to understand which things of the Jewish Law were binding upon the Church and which were not binding. HG736:5; SM463:T
Informing us that certain sins, willful sins, are not forgivable and may be indeed sins unto death, unto the second death. R2658:2

Shall be bound -- We must recognize the apostles as God's inerrant mouthpieces. R4645:5

Signifying that God would specially control their utterances so that their decisions and writings might properly be considered authoritative.

R2658:1, 1760:5, 1525:2; HG736:5

Loose on earth -- Permit in the Apostolic writings. R3789:6; CR415:4
Whatever they loosed under the Mosaic law, they were supernaturally directed to do so. R1760:6, 1525:2

If they declared that certain of the Jewish commandments were not binding upon Christians, we know that the statement is true and that, in heaven, the release or change is recognized. R4645:5, 4122:2

Informing us that certain sins can be remitted or forgiven: sins of weakness and of ignorance, traceable to our fallen nature. R2658:2

Shall be loosed -- The Lord's overruling would make the twelve apostles safe guides for his Church. SM462:4

Said to the apostles, and respecting them; applies to none others of their day or since. R5002:2

Matthew 16:20

Tell no man -- Because the result of such a program would have been to have aroused at least a party spirit amongst the people, and insurrection would naturally have followed. R2658:2

Because it might hinder his crucifixion; or else bring it before the due time. R3790:1

The people in general still needed line upon line and precept upon precept in the way of evidence before they would believe. R1760:6

In view of the Jews' expectation of Kingdom glories, had Jesus announced himself the Messiah at the beginning of his ministry, the effect would have been disappointment to the degree of disgust. R3339:3

The time for the proclamation of Jesus as the Messiah did not come until after his death and resurrection. Indeed his Messianism properly dates from his resurrection. R4645:5

He must purchase the world of mankind before he could become its Lord and Life-giver, its Restorer, its Messiah. R3340:2

That he was -- He did not need to proclaim his Messiahship, for he already knew that whomsoever the Father would draw would come. R2658:3

Matthew 16:21

From that time -- After preaching the blessings of the Kingdom for three years. R3340:2 About the Passover season. R3178:3, 1238:2

Implying that thereafter his coming death was frequently a subject for discussion and consideration between him and them. R3340:3

The former part of our Lord's ministry was devoted apparently to the establishment of his disciples' faith through cures, miracles and instructions. R2287:3

Truth should be told as the hearers are able to bear it: milk for babes, meat for men. R2287:6

There is a lesson in this for us: we should tell our hearers about the blessings of restitution before we preach the sufferings of the narrow way. R3340:5

Suffer many things -- Testings of faith are as necessary to Jesus' followers as they were to him; for the same reason: to develop and crystallize character. PD76/90

And be killed -- He knew the cup was about to be poured for him, but the disciples did not understand. R5421:2

They must be prepared in advance for his shameful death, else it would prove such a shock to their faith that they could not recover from it, nor believe in the resurrection. R3340:2

Matthew 16:22

Then Peter -- Perhaps unduly elated by our Lord's words of commendation just uttered. R3790:1, 3340:3, 2287:6

Allowance must be made for Peter in that he was not only the eldest of the apostles, but quite a good deal older than our Lord and of a very ardent disposition, strong and impulsive. R3340:3

Moved, not merely by selfish motives of prejudice, but doubtless also by his love for the Lord. R2658:3

Like all strong characters, he had proportionate opportunities and liabilities to misuse his strength for evil. R2656:2

Took him -- Apart from the others for a private interview and exhortation. R2658:4

And began -- Our Lord did not wait for him to finish. R2658:4

To rebuke him -- Peter undertook to be the teacher, "not holding the head" in proper reverence. R3790:2

Let us each see to it that we be not disposed, as Peter was, to be wiser than our Lord, and to attempt to tell him how matters should be conducted. R3340:5

Be it far from thee -- Master, do not talk that way. R5585:2

Tempting our Lord to repudiate his sacrifice. R3178:6

He urged that the Master should not think of any steps which would lead to death, but should think rather of prosperity and earthly favor. R4645:5

Trying to persuade the Lord not to yield himself as the sin-offering. R1217:3

This shall not be -- This death, and the scattering of thy people, and the triumph of evil generally. D564

The apostles could not understand how the Messiah could be crucified. R5331:2, 5330:5, 4831:6

Matthew 16:23

But he turned -- Though tempted, he ignored his own will and all suggestions from others contrary to God's plan. Therein lay the secret of his success. R1125:5; HG292:6

And said -- Not privately, but in the presence of all his disciples. R3340:4

Satan -- Adversary of God and of all in harmony with God. R5585:2, 5427:1, 2658:4

Adversary, opposing spirit--Young. F611

Hinderer of the work. R5585:2, 4645:5, 3790:6

You are becoming my opponent. R5585:2, 3340:4

In this course, St. Peter was opposing the divine will and plan, of which the death of Jesus was the very center or hub. R5120:2, 4756:2

"His servants ye are to whom ye render service." (Rom. 6:16) R5427:1, 3340:4

Peter had come under the influence of Satan and become the mouthpiece of error. The great enemy of God sought to use Peter as a channel of temptation. R2288:1, 1217:3, 450:3

He had become the unintentional servant of Satan, whose bad counsel, if followed, would have been a violation of Jesus' covenant. R1217:3

As Peter was the Lord's adversary, so the world often becomes adversaries of God's children. R5546:5

The followers of Jesus sometimes need to resist their friends who offer counsel contrary to the divine will. R5585:2, 4645:5, 2658:5

Informing compromising friends that their influence is being exercised in the wrong direction, against the truth, our best interests and the divine plan; hence they are not only our adversaries, but also adversaries to the Lord. R2658:5

Beware that Satan does not get possession of our talents and, under the guise of working for Jesus, really use our powers against the truth. R451:1

Let us take heed that we be not tools of the adversary in stumbling others and that we be not stumbled by others who take such positions, no matter how kind and sympathetic their manner and intentions. R2288:2

Even kindly-meant dissuasions from duty on the part of our own friends, or the natural desires of our own flesh, we should recognize as besetments of the Adversary. R1760:6

Jesus was full of love, but he spoke most emphatically against evil-doers; yet, how differently the Lord's rebukes affected his loving disciples and the proud Pharisees. R664:1*, 416:1*

An offense -- "A stumbling block" (Revised Version); a stone of stumbling. The same Peter earlier designated a stone, indicative of strong character, was now in danger of becoming a stumbling stone. R2658:5

Instead of helping, you are hindering me. R5585:2

It was about the Passover season, the time when the Lord's people seem to be in the greatest danger of stumbling. R3178:3

"Be not many of you teachers, brethren" (Jas. 3:1), knowing that a man that is a teacher has severer trials. R3790:2

Savourest -- Partakest. R2658:5

That be of God -- Divine wisdom. R3340:4, 3790:3

That be of men -- Human wisdom. R3790:3, 3340:4

The things of human judgment and preference. R5120:2

You are viewing matters, not from God's standpoint, but from the standpoint of fallible, fallen men. R2658:5

Your counsel is that common to the world and not of God. R4645:5

Your suggestions are contrary to the divine program; it is necessary that the Son of man suffer sacrificially. R4756:2

Matthew 16:24

If any man -- Who is already a believer. R5003:5, 3235:6

The reference is exclusively to those on the "narrow way" and does not at all refer to the world of mankind. R2615:5

Many--all believers during the Gospel age--are called, but all do not care to accept the conditions of sacrifice which are attached to the call.

R1310:4

His words imply that it is a matter of choice with the individual, and not a matter of compulsion in any sense of the word. R3235:3; Q282:1; NS344:5

Will come after me -- Will follow my example, be my disciple. R5654:1, 5596:6, 5588:3, 5553:1, 5223:1, 5003:5, 3790:3

Not merely believing that Jesus died, and that he was holy, etc. R5833:2

Be a follower of mine, walk in my steps of obedience to the Father's will, and share with me in the Father's reward. R3236:4

Let him -- Take the steps which the Master indicated as necessary, not optional, for membership in the household of faith. SM636:1

His followers should count the cost of discipleship in the same cool, calculating, methodical manner in which they would count the cost of erecting a building. R3235:6; NS344:5, 654:3

Any who decline these terms are declining the only entrance conditions connected with the school of Christ. NS671:5

Deny himself -- Sacrifice himself, his earthly interests and ambitions. R5696:6, 5588:3,4, 5570:1, 3845:5; Q399:T

Set himself aside, ignore himself, renounce his own self-will. R5691:1, 5596:6, 5588:3,4, 2616:1; Q399:T; CR409:4

Self-sacrifice unto death. R5006:3

Give over the doing of his own will--his self- sufficiency. CR347:2

Let him deny all ability to wash away his own sins; deny his own righteousness and accept of mine. R761:5

Die to himself. R5719:2

Humble himself. R5303:3

It is easier to deny everything else than to deny yourself. CR149:1

In so doing we are sowing to the Spirit and shall reap the great reward. R5665:6

The first step is self-renunciation, full consecration. R5719:2, 5654:1, 5303:3

Set himself aside, ignore himself, his talent, his will, his wealth, his everything--discipleship first. R5588:3

Self-negation, absolutely necessary to discipleship. R2658:6

Self-renouncing and fasting, in the highest sense of the word, is enjoined with fasting from fleshly desires (both good and bad) in the interests of the new creature and for effective service. NS154:2

Ignore self-will and self-gratification, including all earthly ambitions and desires, the sinful, and no less they that are laudable and proper.

R2616:1

Whatever is sweet to nature must be disowned; illustrated by honey being forbidden in sacrifices. R84:6*

Not merely the outward form practiced by Christendom during Lent, but that of self-consecration and immolation which our Lord's words signify. R2616:6

Kill his will outright, not merely hack and mutilate it. This is not a cross. The desire to give up our will and accept God's will must be a pleasure. "I delight to do thy will, O my God." (Psa. 40:8) R3237:2

This first step in following the Lord is properly designated a sacrifice, but it is not the taking up of the cross. R3236:6

Self-denial relates more to passive obedience, cross-bearing to activities in the Lord's service; self-denial means courage and zeal, cross-bearing means victory; self-denials may be victories in our own hearts; cross-bearings may be seen by others. R2616:2

In order for the sacrifice of our wills to be acceptable to the Lord at all, it must be no cross to us. R3237:1

All subsequent sacrifices which we may make in the Lord's service are included in, and represented by, this sacrifice of the will. R3236:6

We should not sacrifice others in order to be his disciples. It is ourselves that we are to deny, ourselves that we are to sacrifice. R3845:5
Take up -- Thoroughly imbued with a zeal for God and for righteousness. R3236:1

Having counted the cost of discipleship. R3235:6

It is not enough that we should start out with a courageous intention, a bold acknowledgment of Jesus and a bold profession of discipleship.

R5426:4 It is to be not merely lifted, but carried. R5223:2

The taking up of the cross is done after we come to a knowledge of the truth. We cannot take up the cross until we have seen what the cross is. R5223:2,4

Bearing the cross means enduring it. R5223:4

The bearing of the cross is the way of growth in character for the consecrated child of God. R5223:5

His cross -- The trials, difficulties, disappointments; the "crossing" of the human will made necessary by doing God's will under present unfavorable conditions. R5596:6, 5553:4, 3237:3, 3236:4, 2658:6

Suggestions of the world, the flesh and the devil which conflict with the divine will. R5426:4 Self-denial, cross-bearing is the sacrifice necessary to discipleship at the present time. R5055:3; SM642:2

As soon as we take hold of the cross and put forth our efforts, our Lord lifts the real weight of it. R3236:6

A symbol of self-denial, self-sacrifice, suffering for righteousness' sake in opposition to the spirit of the world, the flesh and the adversary.

NS622:4 In the sense of being sacrificed, even of earthly interests.

Q399:T

A crossing of their own wills, submission to the divine will. R3341:1

Our faithfulness in cross-bearing consists in our willingness to stand up for the truth, no matter what the cost of friendships broken or enmities enkindled. R3237:3

The shame of the Cross, the ignominy of the Cross, the ordeal pictured by the Cross. NS622:3

Opposition of husband or wife engendered by faithfulness to the Lord, endurance of opposition by business competitors because of faithfulness to Christ are part of our cross-bearing. R5223:3

Jesus' cross-bearing was practiced continually throughout the three and a half years of his ministry. R2616:3

The Master's cross-bearing did not consist in fighting the weaknesses of the flesh, for he had none; nor are the weaknesses of the flesh our crosses. R3237:2

It is fortunate that in the outstart we cannot appreciate the full meaning of cross-bearing, or few of us would have the courage to make a consecration. R3536:5

If we were in heaven, in full accord with the divine will, we could have no crosses from the time we fully consecrated to the Lord. R3236:4

It is remarkable that the cross, which symbolized the most ignominious form of capital punishment under the Roman Empire, should be the symbol of Christianity. NS622:2

And follow me -- Walk as he walked; in the same way, the same direction. R3237:5

Patiently continuing to bear the cross. CR347:4

In the footsteps of Jesus, in the sacrifice of human life and restitution rights. R5596:6, 3237:6; OV251:3, 123:3

"Walk not after the flesh but after the Spirit." (Rom. 8:1,4) R3237:5

In direct opposition to the world-current. R2616:5, 1790:5

It would be better not to take up the cross unless we have the determination to go unto the end. R5223:2

Matthew 16:25

Whosoever -- Of Christ's disciples. R5806:6, 5425:6

Will save his life -- Greek, psuche, soul, being. E335

Many professing Christianity have never become Christians according to these conditions. R5425:3

Save present social and ecclesiastical life, including reputation. R591:6

Be solicitous of maintaining his rights and holding on to the present life. R5120:3

Amounting to a question as to whether we love the present or future life. R3341:1

Refusing to sacrifice it after having made the consecration. R2615:5

If we, consecrated believers, turn back again to live after the flesh, we shall die; for us to be carnally minded is death, to be spiritually minded is life and peace. R5806:6, 1748:3

Shall lose it -- No question of torment, but of life or no life, of being or not being, of existence or non-existence, of eternal life or destruction in the second death. R2288:5

The disposition to preserve the present life and its comforts at any cost is the disposition which will be deprived of eternal life. R2288:2

Entirely--losing all hope of a future life. R2615:5

One must either gain the spiritual life they have started out for, or lose all life. R2615:5

Lose the great prize of the divine nature. R5120:3

Discipleship meant the very reverse of what the apostles had naturally expected. R3790:3

Will lose his life -- Greek, psuche, soul, being. E335

Sacrifice every earthly hope, aim, object and to lay down life. R5426:2

It is a case of losing our earthly lives and gaining the heavenly. R3790:4
Only through much tribulation would they enter the Kingdom. R5426:1
Such devotion will necessarily mean the severing of many earthly ties.
R5426:2

Shall find it -- Only those willing to comply with such terms, demonstrating their love and loyalty, could be entrusted with the great power, glory and honor granted the Kingdom class. R5426:1
Will gain the reward of life on the spirit plane. R5120:3

Matthew 16:26

Is a man profited -- Men labor for wealth, to gain as much as possible of the whole world, only to find when they are rich that wealth has come at the expense of health. R276:6, 205:2; E258

Gain the whole world -- If they selfishly seek for the whole world, the selfishness thus developed will make them unfit for eternal life. R5120:3

Lose his own soul -- Utterly perish. R2288:4

Become a cast-away as respects the eternal promises within his grasp through Christ. NS265:5

As a result of that selfish will which is opposed to the divine will and its law of love. R3341:2

For his soul -- Being, existence, his most valuable possession. E258

The word "soul" in this verse, psuche, is the same Greek word rendered
"life" in the preceding verse. R2658:6, 2288:2, 248:6; E335

His future existence. R2615:6

Matthew 16:27

The Son of man -- It is proper to think of our Lord as the seed of David, and equally proper to think of him as the seed of Adam, through
Eve. E152

Shall come -- At his second coming. R4645:6, 4142:5*, 2288:5

With his angels -- Messengers. R4645:6

And then -- During the Millennial age. R2304:2

The full reward is not given to the Church until Christ comes. A103

Assuring them that they would not get the Kingdom inheritance until some period in the future. R3790:5

The rewards of Christ's discipleship were not to be expected in the present life. All that we may now have in the way of compensation will be the peace and blessing of the Lord in our hearts with glorious hopes for the future. NS602:4

Full recompenses, either rewards or punishments, are not to be expected before the resurrection. R1881:4

Therefore those who have "fallen asleep" have not already "gone to their reward." HG347:4

Reward every man -- Including the unjust, for "the Lord knoweth how to reserve the unjust unto the day of judgment to be punished." (2 Pet. 2:9) A103

According to his works -- Whereas it is now, "according to thy faith be it unto thee." (Matt. 9:29) R2304:2

Whosoever now gives even a cup of cold water to one of the Lord's disciples, because he is such, shall have a reward. R1469:6

Matthew 16:28

Verily I say -- This verse is separated from its connection by the starting of a new chapter. The Revised Version corrects this difficulty. R2288:5

There be some -- Peter, James and John: the three apostles most advanced in faith and zeal. R2659:1

Till they see -- On the mount of transfiguration. Q797:2

Son of man -- The three disciples had seen the Son of Man in his Kingdom glory in vision. The reality has not yet come to pass. R4649:6

In his kingdom -- Properly rendered "Royal Majesty." Q797:2
As explained in the first nine verses of chapter 17. R3790:5

Matthew 17

Matthew 17:1

And after six days -- Just about enough time to permit them to discuss and digest the meaning of our Lord's words concerning his coming death. R3345:5

During the six days following the announcement of the Master's coming suffering, ignominy and death, we may assume that the apostles were sad-hearted and bewildered. R5121:2

Jesus taketh -- Seeking to draw their minds gradually to a realization that his death would not mean a repudiation of the promises of the Kingdom and its glory. R5121:1

Intending to assure the apostles respecting the certainty of the Kingdom, notwithstanding the apparent failure of all Kingdom hopes in our Lord's crucifixion. R2659:2

The object of the vision was probably two-fold: the comfort and strengthening of the Lord and the enlightenment of his chosen witnesses. R1761:4

Peter, James and John -- Those most advanced in faith and zeal. R2659:1, 3345:5, 2289:2

Three of his favorites. R4649:3

An high mountain -- Supposedly Mount Tabor. R4650:1

Presumed to be Mt. Hermon. R3345:2

Apart -- Luke tells us that he went there to pray, and we may reasonably suppose that the three apostles joined with him in prayer. R3345:2, 2659:2, 2289:2

So all those who seek God in prayer may, to a large extent, with the eye of faith realize this same blessed vision of the Kingdom. R2660:1

Matthew 17:2

Transfigured before them -- That is to say, his appearance changed.

R4649:3, 558:3

Not an actual change from human to divine, but a vision or picture of it.

R3793:6, 2659:5

An illustration of the Kingdom. PD64/74; R2288:6, 3345:6, 1761:2

It was a vision of Christ's dignity and glory in the Kingdom. The central figure was Jesus himself. Moses and Elias were merely accessories to fill out the picture. R3793:5, 2659:2

As the sun -- Representing him as no longer the man Christ Jesus, but the risen, glorified Son of the Highest, a spirit being. R2659:4, 2288:6

White as the light -- Representing the "glory to follow," when the sufferings are all complete. B20

His garments put on a shining appearance and became part of the vision.

Q713:2

After the manner of angels. R5121:2

Matthew 17:3

Appeared unto them -- It was only an appearance, because Christ was the firstborn from the dead; and neither Moses nor Elias is as yet made perfect. F676; Q761:3, 713:1; R2288:6

Radiant, but less so than Jesus. R5121:2, 3345:2

There was glory and honor attached to the Jewish dispensation and to the Gospel dispensation, but a still greater glory was manifested in the presence of Jesus, who represented the Millennial dispensation. R3345:6

The figure was glorious; the reality excelleth in glory. R1323:2*

Moses -- A figure of Moses, representing the Mosaic or Law dispensation; or the overcomers of the Jewish age. B255, 20; F677; R5772:4, 5121:4, 3794:3, 3790:6, 3345:5, 2659:4, 2289:1, 2288:6, 1761:2

Identified, either because Jesus used their names in talking with them; or by Jesus informing the apostles on the way down from the mountain. Q807:2

Moses spoke of the sufferings of Christ in all the arrangements of the Law and its sacrifices. R2659:3

He was the mediator, or representative of Israel, and would very properly represent them in this tableau. Q260:1

And Elias -- A figure of Elijah, representing the Gospel or Christian dispensation; or the overcomers of the Gospel age, the Church. B255, 20; F677; R5772:4, 5121:4, 3345:5, 2289:1

Representing the prophets, who declared not only the coming glories, but also the sufferings which must precede them. R2659:3

Both Moses and Elijah had fasted 40 days, as had Jesus, showing that they were one with him in remarkable devotion to the heavenly Father. R3794:3

Both Moses and Elijah passed from earth's scene under peculiar circumstances; yet we are assured that both died. (Deut. 34:5; Heb. 11:13) Q761:3

Neither Moses nor Elias went to heaven. R5333:5

Moses and Elijah represented two classes that will participate with Jesus in his Messianic glory in the Kingdom. R5333:5

Talking with him -- Both dispensations speak of the sacrifices and sufferings of Christ and the glory to follow. B255

The conversation of the vision corroborated his statements that he would suffer a martyr's death at Jerusalem. R3345:5, 2659:3, 2289:1

Probably while the disciples were asleep (Luke 9:32); and doubtless, therefore, specially for his own comfort. R1761:5

It was a vision of the heavenly Kingdom, Moses representing one class, Elijah another, and Jesus himself representing the other. HG205:4

Moses and Elijah represented the two classes associated with the Lord in the glory of his Kingdom who will constitute the earthly and heavenly phases of the Kingdom--Moses the earthly, Elijah the heavenly. R1761:2, 559:4

The glorified Jesus stood between the Moses class, called previously, and the Elijah class, which had just begun to be called. R5121:5

Matthew 17:4

Three tabernacles -- How many, like Peter, want to rear earthly tabernacles, failing to understand the real vision of the Kingdom. R3795:1
We cannot build tabernacles on the mountain heights of faith and hope and expect to remain there in enraptured vision, but must remember that present duties and conflicts are essential to our development and part of our covenant. R2660:1,4

Matthew 17:5

A bright cloud -- Representing the cloud of trouble into which the apostles were plunged by the death of the Redeemer. R3794:5

The cloud of trouble and opposition is permitted to keep us humble, to listen to the voice from heaven. R3794:5

A misty cloud of light saying to the disciples and to us that his glory will be obscured for a time, observed only with the eye of faith, but which, though more or less cloudy, will nevertheless be bright to those who look unto him. R2659:6

Behold a voice -- "And this voice which came from heaven we heard when we were with him in the holy mount." (2 Pet. 1:18) B255

Out of the cloud -- Similarly at his birth, heavenly angels announced him; and at his baptism, the voice from heaven declared him the acceptable Son of God. R1761:5

Hence God twice burst heaven open to exclaim, "This is my beloved Son"; but this was the only time in the history of our race that God's silence was thus broken. R84:2*

This is my beloved Son -- In the sense of being begotten by him, Christ called God his Father, and God acknowledged him as his Son. R944:4*; HG297:1

Their faith was corroborated: what they had previously believed, God here testified himself. R5121:3

Hear ye him -- All through the Gospel age, while the misty cloud surrounds his glory, we shall have great need to continually hearken to the Word of the Lord. R2659:6

"Let every man be swift to hear, slow to speak." (Jas. 1:19) R2289:4

Seeming to say, Be still! Hearken rather to the words of my beloved Son. Not a few need to learn this lesson of quietness--to hear and learn, to be taught of God. R2289:3

"My sheep hear my voice." (John 10:27) R3346:5

The essence of the entire vision was to impress upon the minds of the apostles the fact that Jesus was the Messiah. R3794:5

Matthew 17:6

Heard it -- Not many have heard, understood, appreciated or obeyed the Gospel invitation; but in the Millennial age it will be the will of God that all shall hear. R3345:6

Were sore afraid -- Received a needed lesson in reverence. R2289:4

And touched them -- It required our Lord's kind words and touch to relieve the apostles of their fright. R4649:3

Be not afraid -- With the fear engendered in the reproof of the voice from heaven which said, "Hear ye him." R2289:4

As we realize our unworthiness, fears are likely to grasp us and torture us. The more we learn of him, the more does the love of God cast out fear from our hearts. R4650:1

He who created us is sympathetic towards all who are striving for righteousness. He is a great God, not a little one. R4650:1

The vision -- Of the coming Millennial Kingdom. B255; R5333:5, 5121:6; Q713:2

Not an actuality, but a vision, such as seen by John the Revelator.

R5772:3, 5121:4

Greek, horama, occurs twelve times in the New Testament, and on every occasion the context shows that the thing is not real, but is a vision.

R4142:4*

Moses could have been resurrected by God's power, but nothing in the narrative demands it. If Jesus called it a vision, why should we call it a reality? R201:1

A vision was just as useful to the purpose as a reality could have been.

R2659:5

Visions are not realities, though they symbolically represent them.

R2826:1, 2288:3

Just as the trumpets, beasts, etc., of Revelation are not realities, but visions. R5333:5, 5772:4, 5121:4, 3354:3, 2659:5, 2288:3, 559:1; Q259:7, 713:2, 761:3

Special visions and revelations of the holy Spirit were granted to the apostles to instruct them concerning things to come. R1525:6

A vivid and refreshing symbolic view of the Kingdom; but without the "sure word of prophecy" (2 Pet. 1:19), it would have been unintelligible. R1761:4

Frequently the blessings received are mental visions of the glorious things which the Lord hath in reservation for them that love him. R3345:2

Matthew 17:11

Elias -- The glorified Christ. B20, 254; Q259:4

A woman is the figure used when the Church alone is referred to; but here a man, Elijah, is used because the work prefigured is not the work of the Church separate from her Lord, but the one work of both. B255

Truly shall first come -- Oldest manuscripts omit the word "first." B254

To prepare the way of Messiah by performing a reformation work in preaching repentance and baptism for the remission of sins and declaring the Kingdom of heaven at hand. Q772:4

The coming of Elijah must precede the day of the Lord (Mal. 4:4,5); but his work belongs to that day. HG68:3

Restore all things -- In the times of restitution of all things. (Acts 3:19-21) B254 John did do a work of reformation amongst the Lord's people at the first advent, the work of introducing Messiah. R3292:6

Christ here speaks of restitution, and he is a prophet. (Acts 3:21) HG56:2

The restitution of all things does not begin until the return of Christ.

Hence the work of Elijah does not begin until after the personal advent of Christ. HG68:3

Elias is come -- Not reincarnation, for that theory is nowhere taught in the Scripture. Q772:4, 817:2

Jesus was calling to mind the prophecy of Mal. 4:5,6. Q772:4

We know positively that John was not Elijah, for we have his own testimony, "And they asked him, What then? Art thou Elijah? And he saith, I am not." (John 1:21) Q772:4, 817:2

John the Baptist, a type of the Elijah class, forerunner of the Church in the flesh, as the Church is the forerunner of the Christ in glory. B253, 252; R3346:4, 3292:6, 557:1

Elijah was a type of the Church, and John a continuation of the same; while at the same time a shadowy fulfillment of it. B254, 253, 257

However, John did not do all that is to be done by Elijah, and hence a greater Elijah is to be expected. (Matt. 11:14) R2838:6

See also comments on Matt. 14:3.

Knew him not -- Though they for a short time recognized him as a sincere man, a servant and a prophet of God. (John 5:35) R968:5; B260

Whatsoever they listed -- But to the antitypical Elijah they shall not do as they list. HG69:2

Matthew 17:14

When they were come -- At the same time this vision was taking place, the other disciples at the foot of the mountain were contending with the adversary, even as are the Lord's people of the present time. R2659:4

Matthew 17:15

He is a lunatick -- The Revised Version speaks of the sufferer as an epileptic. We prefer the narrative as it reads--that Jesus rebuked the "devil" and cast him out of the boy. R4650:2

Matthew 17:16

Could not cure him -- Thus the Lord's people are still in the valley of conflict with the will of the flesh and the devil, while with the eye of faith they behold at the top of the mountain their glorious Lord, soon to share with them the glories of his Kingdom. R2659:4

Matthew 17:20

Your unbelief -- Faith, to be successful, must be backed by spiritual power. R4650:4

If ye have faith -- Not imagination or blind credulity. Q774:3; R1967:3

Say -- The request must be in harmony with the divine will. Q774:2; R1967:3

Unto this mountain -- Regarding the mountain as difficulties and obstructions in our Christian course, or in the course of God's work, we know that "miracles" are wrought for those who exercise faith. R1967:5; Q774:3

Remove hence -- God gave no such command in respect to literal mountains. R5446:4, 1967:5

It shall remove -- If they had proper faith in the power of God and should receive a command from him. R5446:4, 4650:4

We are not to suppose that our Lord meant that his followers should try to remove mountains as a diversion, nor as a proof of their faith. R4650:4

Matthew 17:21

Prayer -- The lesson to the apostles was that their greatest power would result from their living very near to God; living lives of self-denial and prayer. R4650:4; NS153:2

Matthew 17:27

Give unto them -- This example of submission to the authority thus represented that they were all respectful and law-abiding. R1555:6

For me and thee -- Yet Christ refused to miraculously provide for his own needs at the time of his temptation. F650, 651

Matthew 18

Matthew 18:1

At the same time -- Apparently after the journey back to Capernaum from the Mount of Transfiguration. R2660:3

Shortly after the vision on the mount of transfiguration. Our highest views of heavenly things are quickly followed by earthly trials and difficulties, which serve to test and prove us. R3795:3

Came the disciples -- The colporteurs and all public representatives of the truth also are fallible and subjects of special temptations. R1537:1

Who is the greatest -- Perhaps the fact that Peter, James and John had been favored more led to this query. R5130:2

Who would be the most influential, the Lord's prime minister. R5361:6, 5130:2

Probably the disciples who were not with the Lord on the Mount of Transfiguration felt a little envious of those who had seen the vision and who subsequently told them. R3796:1, 2660:3, 1766:3

The Master invariably encouraged their hopes and ambitions. His reproofs were merely against their strifes as to which would be greatest. R1415:3

Matthew 18:2

And Jesus -- Avoiding personalities, as it is always wise to do when possible. R3796:2

A little child -- Unsophisticated, guileless, asks questions, seeks instruction, does not profess and boast of wisdom, is candid, truthful. R5130:2

With heart purity, simplicity, trustfulness. Q787:2

What a charm there is in childhood's simplicity. It confidently takes your hand to be led where you please and you may write upon its blank pages whatever you will. R657:1*

Afterwards, says Luke, he took it in his arms. R3796:3

Matthew 18:3

Verily, I say -- The manner is impressive and solemn; as though he would say, I want you to take this lesson to heart and ponder it well. R1766:6

Except ye be converted -- "Except ye turn"--Revised Version. R2660:5

Turned about, changed from your present attitude of mind in respect to ambition for place and honor in the Kingdom. R5224:3, 5130:2, 3797:1, 2660:5, 1766:6

From the spirit of the world to the spirit of Christ. R5557:5, 4767:4, 3647:4

Because the simplicity and meekness of childhood have been displaced by the art (the selfishness and the proud, haughty spirit) which despises instruction. R657:1*

As little children -- In meekness and teachableness. R5557:5, 4767:4, 3152:5

Simple of heart, meek, truthful, free from ambition and rivalry, faithful, trusting, loving, obedient, teachable, without guile, indifferent to social distinctions and popular notions. R1766:6, 3796:4

Confessing their littleness and ignorance, and going humbly to the Lord for the necessary instruction. R5130:3

Not that little children are members of Christ's Kingdom class. The Lord is seeking mature men and women who have a childlikeness of mind. R5130:3, 3796:3, 2660:2

The emphasis lies upon the word "as," in the sense of "like." Only the child-like and trustful disciples can experience God's highest favor--a share in the Kingdom. Q787:2

As natural, unlearned men, the disciples had no doubt been aiming as far as possible from childlike simplicity to assume the dignity of mind they considered appropriate to their future high positions. R2660:4

How beautiful the thought, "children of God!" R521:3

"Brethren, be not children in understanding; howbeit in malice be ye children, but in understanding be ye men." (1 Cor. 14:20) R2660:2, 521:3
Shall not enter -- Much less be greatest in. R1766:6
The kingdom of heaven -- The Lord is not discussing the world. R3796:4

Matthew 18:4

Shall humble himself -- Those chosen to the place of eldership and prominence in the Church should be amongst the most humble of mind and of conduct in the whole company. R3796:5

As this little child -- Become a child of God and be taught of God.
R5130:3

"As newborn babes, desire the sincere milk of the word, that ye may grow thereby." (1 Pet. 2:2) R2660:3

Indicating that the person is not overestimating himself and that he has a tender consideration and love for others which cannot vaunt self. R1767:1

The effect which God designs is that we should realize our own insignificance and unworthiness of such great honors. R3797:1

While this meek and teachable spirit is commended to all, it is not the will of God that they should always remain babes. R3622:1, 1568:1

The same is greatest -- Will be most honored. Humility and child-likeness among the Lord's people now should be esteemed a mark of true greatness from the Lord's standpoint. R3796:5

Not by any arbitrary law of retribution, but on the philosophical principle that humility leads to greatness. R1767:2

Rank and honor in the Kingdom will be proportionate to humility and service here. R309:4*

The maintenance of the child-like spirit--after the world's hopes, ambitions, etc., have been brought within the mental grasp of the man--is evidence of that self-control and self-discipline which invariably bespeak a noble character. R1766:6

Shall receive -- Recognize and show kindness to. R1767:4

One such little child -- One such disciple as has this child-like character. R3797:2

Privileged to be God's little child, and thus Jesus' younger brother.
R5130:5

In my name -- Because he is mine. R1767:4

Receiveth me -- They shall be considered and rewarded as though they had received the Master himself. R3797:2

Matthew 18:6

Whoso shall offend -- Greek, skandalon, scandalize, stumble, entrap, injure, hurt spiritually, thus perhaps subjecting himself to losses beyond the present life. R3797:3, 5130:5, 2661:1

"Ensnare"--Diaglott. R3622:1

Sowing seeds of discord and planting roots of bitterness which are sure to bring forth evil fruitage. R4502:2

It is not only a serious crime against the law of love to cause one of the Lord's brethren to stumble, but even to stumble others, hinder them from becoming brethren and members of the household of faith. R3145:6

A sin in no way covered by Christ's sacrifice, a sin against a measure of light and knowledge. The chiefest of these are those against God's people. R5463:5

Ensnare, beguile, lead astray--from the truth or holiness of life. R1767:4

These little ones -- Those that are little or humble-minded, meek and loyal of heart. R3797:3

No matter how poor, weak, ignorant they may be, the very least of the consecrated are supervised, and injury to them is punishable. SM221:3

New creatures who have only started in the new way of full consecration to God's will. R5445:2

"Like as a father pitieth his children, so the Lord pitieth his little ones that love him." (Psa. 103:13) R657:1*

Believe in me -- Showing that Jesus did not refer to infants. R5445:2

Better for him -- Because such a calamity could not in any way affect his future life. R3797:3, 5445:3; SM221:3

But one who injures the Lord's little ones will be held responsible for his deeds, even in the next life, in proportion as he realized what he was doing. R5130:5

Hanged about his neck -- A special reprobation for those who do injury to the Church. R4502:2

He were drowned -- Some drastic punishment, but not eternal torment. SM222:T

Woe unto the world -- Particularly in the time of trouble. R1767:4

Because of offences -- Greek, skandalon. Much of the world's troubles arises because of these very snares, traps and injurious misrepresentations. R3797:4

Willful offenses against sufficient light to avoid them. R1767:4, 5130:6

Including secular organizations. The same word is that translated "things that offend" in Matt. 13:41. R1285:1*

It must needs be -- Necessary because it is the divine will that all the elect Church shall be thoroughly tested and developed in character. R2661:1

That the faithful overcomers may be developed as well as separated from all others; and that, by their exaltation, the new Millennial age may commence. R745:1

That offences come -- And divisions. R1279:5

Because men's hearts are not right. R1767:4

Stumblings, ensnarements. R5445:2

That he should be crucified. R4908:2

Woe to that man -- That willful sinner. R1767:4

Who would deliberately attempt to deceive, ensnare, entrap, or discourage his followers. R5445:3

However necessary, this does not lighten the responsibility of those who lend themselves to the adversary's influence in placing these stumbling-blocks before the feet of the saints. R2661:1

Many today do not realize that they place stumbling-blocks before the Lord's "little ones" to lead them from the narrow path of full consecration and self-sacrifice. R2661:2

As the spirit of selfishness undermined the loyalty of Judas to his Master, so a similar spirit of selfishness may today undermine loyalty to the Lord, his truth and his work. R3885:1, 2468:1

Matthew 18:8

If thy hand -- Any comfort, pleasure or taste as dear as a hand.

R2603:1, 5130:6, 3797:5, 2602:1

The offending hand would represent the doing of things that would be contrary to our highest spiritual interests. R2661:4

Or thy foot -- Anything serviceable as a foot. R2603:1

The offending foot would represent the going into forbidden paths of sin or self-gratification. R2661:4

A quality of character that would seem as close and precious to us as a right hand or a foot. R3797:4

Offend thee -- By their gratification would forfeit the life to come.

R2603:1

Cause you to stumble. R5130:6

Cause thee to maintain an injurious character, a tendency to scandalize others. R3797:5

Cut them off -- Remember that Jesus spoke to the people in parables, and never without a parable. R5130:6 Cast them from thee -- If we do not put away such practices we cannot enter the Kingdom. R3797:5

It is better -- Would be far better than possessing these privileges, only to be ultimately destroyed in Gehenna fire. R3797:5, 2602:1, 2603:1 Better than to retain your members and lose all in Gehenna. R2603:1

To enter into life -- Everlasting life, which is the opposite of the destruction symbolized by Gehenna. R2602:5

Everlasting fire -- Everlasting destruction, the second death, symbolized by the continual fires kept burning in the Valley of Gehenna, where the garbage of Jerusalem was destroyed. R2602:3,6, 2603:2, 2601:2, 3797:6
Equally symbolical with the other parts of the figure. R2661:5

If thine eye -- Anything in your make-up as dear as an eye. R5130:6, 2602:1, 2603:1
The offending eye represents besetments which appeal as beautiful to our natural tastes and likely to charm and attract us to earthly things. R2661:4
Offend thee -- Cause thee to stumble. R5130:6
Pluck it out -- Cut off that tendency, no matter what it costs. R5130:6
The Lord's commands against sin and evil are to be executed, no matter if the sin is as dear as a right hand or eye. R5648:5
Hell fire -- Greek, gehenna fire, everlasting destruction, second death. R3797:6, 2602:3,6, 2603:2

Matthew 18:10

Ye despise not -- Do not hate, or in any way persecute. R1767:4
Or do anything demeaning toward them. R3797:6
They may seem humble and insignificant, but they are God's friends--yea, God's children, for whom he cares, and whose every injury is an insult to him. R2661:5
Those yet in the nominal church are despised and unnoticed by the proud professors of Christianity who occupy the prominent positions in Babylon. R657:4*
These little ones -- These humble-minded children of God. R2661:5, 3797:3,6
God pays careful attention to all the affairs of the weakest and most ignorant of his children. Q270:3
"Little" in malice, pride and in the world's estimate. R2063:4
Their angels -- Each son of God has a special angel to care for his interests. CR472:6; F76; R5606:1, 5387:5, 5257:3, 5131:4, 4926:6, 3798:1, 3441:2, 2661:5; Q270:4
"The angel of the Lord encampeth round about them" (Psa. 34:7) that are his. "Are they not all ministering spirits?" (Heb. 1:14) F76; R5606:1
As illustrated by the vision granted to Elisha's servant. R3441:1
They are under a very special divine supervision and protection. NS337:4
Perhaps one guardian angel to each saint, perhaps more than one. R2350:4
In hours of danger and affliction, their services are needed and freely tendered. Our Savior himself, in His earthly life, needed and received the help of angels. R75:1*

Whether it is a living spirit being that interposes for us and guards us, or whether influences or powers of God, it makes no difference to you or me. Q270:4

The word angel might include all the powers of God, both animate and inanimate, by which he could take knowledge of and render assistance to those who are his. R3798:2

It is erroneous to presume that every human being has a guardian angel. The Lord does not anywhere indicate such special guardianship on the world's behalf. R3798:1

Do always -- These, and only these, may know that their prayers are always heard. HG622:3; Q270:4

We are to get the thought that there is no delay in the bringing of any and everything which pertains to their welfare and interest before the attention of the great King. R2661:5, 2350:4

Behold the face -- Have access to the presence of. R5634:3, 5257:3, 4926:6, 3441:2; CR472:6

Have immediate communication with. R5387:5

Spirit beings can and do see God, "Whom no man hath seen nor can see." (1 Tim. 6:16) B132 Of my Father -- He is always ready to give attention to their messages. Q270:4; R5387:5

Matthew 18:11

For the Son -- This verse is omitted from the Revised Version and is not found in the oldest manuscripts, good authority for omitting it. These words do occur in Luke 19:10 and represent an eternal truth. R3798:2

To save -- Recover. R5427:4, 4398:2

During the Millennium. R4398:2

By restitution. (Acts 3:19-21) E456, 457

That which was lost -- An earthly paradise and an earthly existence. A177; E457; F669

Earthly perfection and dominion. A177; E457; OV251:2; NS266:6

Eden, harmony and communion with God, human perfection, and everlasting life, were lost and will be restored. CR173:1

The spirit of the Lord, the relationship of sons. R5623:5

Not spiritual or divine nature. CR472:1

Men, by disobedience, had lost the right to eternal life and all the privileges, blessings and opportunities pertaining to that great boon. NS3:1

Man did not lose heaven, for he never possessed it. He lost earthly life, an Eden home, human perfection. R4941:6; HG131:2

All that our race lost through Adam's disobedience. R4398:1, 3825:2, 1256:5; OV291:2

In contrast with evolution, which tells us that nothing was lost. HG492:6

An hundred sheep -- All the Little Flock. R3798:4

Applied in a different manner than the parable of the lost sheep in Luke 15:3-7. R3798:4

And seeketh that -- He that recovers a sinner from the error of his ways saves a soul from death and hides a multitude of sins. (Jas. 5:20) R3798:5

Matthew 18:14

Even so -- All who are in harmony with the Lord should have the same interest in one another; they should be willing to spend and be spent in the recovery of a brother from the snare of the adversary. R3798:4

These little ones -- All the Lord's true followers, subject to special divine supervision. R5131:4

The babes in Christ, because of their very feebleness and inexperience, have much special care bestowed upon them. R1568:1

How careful the Lord's people should be not to stumble one another. R5131:1

Matthew 18:15

Moreover -- There are no exceptions to the rule here laid down. R4984:2
We must not only scrutinize our motives; but, after finding good motives, we must scrutinize our methods and square them all with the Word of the Lord. R4218:4

If thy brother -- This instruction is given only to the brethren, the Church. R5782:5, 5445:5, 5134:2, 4984:3

Those not brethren, not children of light, but children of darkness associating with the brethren, must be dealt with along the divine direction here laid down. R5229:6, 5782:5

In respect to dealings with those who are without, the same spirit will apply. But if the unbelieving has attempted a fraud willfully, he should be delivered to the world's courts. R2666:5

These instructions given only to the Church; but whoever learns to apply this rule to the brethren will find that it commends itself as a wise course of conduct in all the affairs of life. R4984:3

Shall trespass -- We should put on love (Col. 3:14) and overlook much of what others do. R4984:2

Or have anything unpleasant to say, or any criticism to offer concerning the private life of another. R5123:2

The true Christian will cultivate the disposition to think charitably of the works and actions of others, and to suppose that their intentions are good, until he has positive evidence to the contrary. R5123:1

Against thee -- Not what he does against some one else, but against "thee." R5529:4

If someone tells us a trouble concerning another, we should ask that he state it in such a way that the name is not given nor a description by which we might recognize the other party. R5409:1

If a brother find another discriminating against him and more appreciative of another than himself, he should not take offense. R4984:3

Go -- This law should be understood in the smallest details and followed without any modification. NS566:2

These principles are practically illustrated in the following citations. R4282:4, 4283:1, 3594:5; F415

Tell him his fault -- Without judging or condemning him beforehand. F415

Not to make him ashamed or to berate him, but to secure cessation of the wrong and, if possible, some recompense for injuries received. F291

Have a clear understanding; to do so would result favorably in nearly every case. R4984:3

Not the trivial matters, evil surmisings, rumors, fancied insults, but positive wrongs done us. R5885:4, 4978:2

Not in a dictatorial way to show him there is something wrong, but in a kindly way, to be reconciled. R4984:6

You have no authority to punish him; that belongs to God. R5409:1, 3744:6

To help him; not to twit, anger, tease or entrap him. R4985:1

If the matter is too small to mention, it should be forgotten. R4984:2

So long as the outward conduct of any brother or sister is reasonable and fair, both justice and love say that you should not meddle with them.

R5274:6

If one chooses to overlook the brother's fault, it is not necessary to follow all these regulations. R3744:3

Thee and him alone -- Privately, without previous conference or talking with anyone. F291

Thus did our Lord guard against the insidious sin of slander, which stops growth in the truth and its spirit of love. R4803:2

The probability is that misunderstanding is all that there is of it. R5134:3, 4803:2

Even with positive evidence, go to the offender alone. R5123:1

Meeting with candor as "brethren" to discuss the matter. R4803:1, 3594:5

Disobedience to this command results in roots of bitterness, misunderstandings, anger, malice, hatred, strife. R5123:2

The one and only proper manner of rebuke given by our Lord; the one and only way of adjusting a grievance. R4978:2

It is a well-established principle of government that wrong-doers can be treated to better advantage alone than in the presence of an audience.

R3801:2

If the matter is a trespass against yourself; if it is something against the Church or outwardly immoral, the elders would be the better able to judge, and know better how to approach the matter. R4598:5, 4459:2

The adversary will use every means to turn us aside from the plainly stated rule of love; he will endeavor to make us think that it cannot be applicable to the difficulty which troubles us. R4208:6

The usual sophistry by which the "old man" sets aside this divine rule is to conclude that it is not applicable in this instance, or to be persuaded that he does not know how to apply it in this case and must ask counsel of others, the very thing here forbidden. R4191:3

To have a desire to tell of the weaknesses or faults of another is an intimation of lovelessness on our own part. NS566:2

Not even to ask advice should the matter be told. We have the Lord's advice, and we should follow it. F292

And not so much as mentioned to others, unless offenders refuse to hear, refuse to correct the fault. R3035:5

In a family matter it might be proper to go to the head of the family; in an institution where the offender is merely a representative, it would be proper to go to the head of the society. R4984:2

If he shall hear thee -- The Lord did not say anything about his apology. But if he recognizes that he is wrong and fails to apologize, he is doing himself injury. R4985:1

Gained thy brother -- Recovered him. R3744:6

The matter is settled, peace prevails, the threatened break has been averted and no one is the wiser. R4803:2, 3594:5

Seek to win thy brother and not cast him off nor excommunicate him. R4209:1

Back to fellowship, righteousness, harmony with the Lord. R2666:3

Gained him for righteousness, for salvation, for a Christian life, and probably as a friend. R3801:2

Matthew 18:16

If he will not hear -- Unless the trouble is serious, the matter ought to stop with the personal appeal to the erring one, whether he hears or forbears to hear, to yield. F292

Alone, privately. F291

Then take with thee -- Make sure the matter is of sufficient importance. R4985:1

Only after deliberate thought and prayer. R4985:1

If occasion require, take the subsequent steps. R5123:1

One or two more -- Unprejudiced brethren, not necessarily elders. F289
Preferably one of the two being an elder. They should go primarily to the elders, and an elder would be the proper one to bring the matter before the Church. R5409:2

Those called in should be "wise" (1 Cor. 6:5); such as both the accuser and the accused would recognize, and whose judgment they would respect and follow. R2431:6

Without any explanation whatever to them before they meet together with the accused. F292; R5134:3; Q704:2

Fair-minded, honorable people in the Church; friends of the brother injuring us. R4985:1

Be established -- If the witnesses disagree with you, you should acknowledge that you have erred. R5134:3

If we are in error, we should be more anxious to be corrected ourselves than to have the other corrected. R4985:1

If these give their verdict against the accuser, that should settle the matter; the accuser should recognize his error. Not do so would imply that he was not seeking to ascertain the truth, but that he had judged his brother personally. R2431:6

If he shall neglect to hear -- But not sooner. F289; Q104:2 The advice of these brethren should be followed by both. R5134:3; F289

If the injurious actions continue. R4985:2, 5134:3

In the event of the concurrence of the brethren that the wrong is being done and of the refusal of the wrong-doer to desist. R5782:5

Even if the witnesses agree with us and the wrong-doer is not corrected, we are still not at liberty to make mention of the case to others. R3030:3

Tell it -- The elders might constitute themselves into a Board or Committee and get one of their number to look into the case and see if the wrong could not be stopped or adjusted. Q479:4

Facts, evil deeds or evil doctrines, and not evil surmisings nor rumors, are the basis of Scriptural disfellowship. R3035:5

Unto the church -- The consecrated. R2666:3

To patiently hear definite, positive charges of sufficient importance. R4985:4

Not to be punished but, as a last resort, for reproof and correction. R3744:6

In the presence of the accused. F415; R4985:4, 4281:5

If it is considered of sufficient importance as concerns himself, or the Church, or the truth. F291, 292, 415 In the case that the matter had gone beyond the individual, and had somehow involved the whole congregation. Q479:4

There must be brought evidence to show that there is really a matter to come before the Church, and that it is not merely a case of busybodying. R4985:3

Up to this time, the case should not be discussed outside of these witnesses. R5409:2

In proportion as they are saints they will desire to say no more to anyone respecting the weaknesses or sins of anybody. F292

First certifying the facts to the elders. F289

The two witnesses should say to the elders of the Church that they have a case to present for a hearing, but they should not make charges. R4985:2

The elders should call a special meeting to inform the Church of the case, and the Church should decide when to call a meeting to consider it. R4985:2

For the one to state his trouble and the other to answer. R4985:4

At no stage of the proceedings should unkind words be permitted. R4985:4

It will be reasonable to expect that the voice of the Church in such a matter will be supernaturally guided, that truth and righteousness may triumph. R2666:4

The Church's decision of the question is to be final, binding upon both. R5134:3, 4985:3

Neglect to hear the church -- By not repenting and reforming. F290

This is the highest tribunal. Brother should not go to law with brother in the worldly courts, however much he may feel himself aggrieved. R2666:4

If either still have doubts as to the justice of the matter, he will surely obtain a blessing by giving full and hearty consent to the Lord's arrangements. R2666:4

The vote of the Church should be unanimous, if possible, ignoring all partisanship. R4985:4

The administration of discipline is not the function of the elders only, but of the entire Church. F289; Q479:3

Their advice must not carry with it any penalty whatever. R4985:4; F290

Let him be unto thee -- In carrying out the findings of the Church court, the matter rests with each individual; each must discern the justice of the decision for himself. F292

As an heathen -- In that we can no longer have Christian fellowship with such. R1663:5*

We would treat a heathen with justice and kindness and the love of pity, but not with the love of affection due to a brother in Christ. R1255:4

Outside of your religious and social company, but not outside of your love, care and desire to help. (Rom. 12:19,20) R3801:3

Not forbid attendance at meetings. The most would be to withdraw fellowship, refuse to visit their homes or to invite to our homes, and not appoint to any office in the class. R5954:3

Lest our continued fellowshiping cause our influence to oppose the truth and favor the error, and thus make us sharers in the evil being done.

R1255:1

His punishment is not the object, but to secure repentance and reform. F290

And a publican -- He is a brother still, but not in the best standing.

R4985:5

Deprived of any and all manifestations of brotherhood. F290

Not appointing him to any position or honor in the Church. R5782:5, 5134:3, 4985:5

Not to be asked to offer prayer. R4985:5

To be debarred from participation in the Lord's Supper. F474

Treated in the kindly, courteous way in which we would treat any publican or Gentile, withholding the special rights, greetings or voting opportunities that belong to the Church. R3745:4

Not to be harshly spoken of even after the separation, just as we are not to berate or rail against heathen men and publicans. F290

In that we could no longer respect such as we would an honorable man of the world. R1663:5*

But not injured or treated unkindly in any way. F303; R5134:3, 4985:5

Disfellowshipped until he recognizes his wrong and makes amends to the extent of his ability. F293

Taking heed to "speak evil of no man." (Titus 3:2) F290

We are to distinguish between avoidance and appointment to honorable positions in the Church and the still different matter of disfellowship and cutting off from the body of Christ, the Church. R4318:4

A complete separation from the Church. Until he has made a complete reform he should be thoroughly disowned by the Church. R5275:1

Whatsoever -- Showing the apostles' complete inspiration and infallibility--not even wrong "only once." R1793:6

Ye shall bind -- The inspired Apostle bound the question of a purely vegetarian diet, and settled it--see 1 Tim. 4:1-4. R3098:3

Ye shall loose -- They would declare not binding upon the followers of Jesus only such things as in God's sight would not be binding. R5002:2

Loosed in heaven -- Thus guaranteeing divine supervision of the apostles' decisions respecting what is obligatory or optional. F220; R5588:1, 4827:1, 3124:4; SM463:T

We are thus assured of the infallibility of the teachings of Jesus and the apostles. OV160:1; R5002:2

This applies to the apostles, and none others. R5002:2; OV395:6

Applies to all the apostles, and not just Peter. R4645:4, 3789:6, 2658:1; HG736:4; SM462:2

Applies to the Apostle Paul as well as the other apostles. R4826:6

Two or three -- It is a mistake to feel that no meeting must be held except as appointed by the ecclesia and conducted by one of the elected elders; but it is unwise to entirely ignore the class in the matter of holding meetings. R4010:2, 5122:2,1

Are gathered together -- "Then they that feared the Lord spake often one to another, and the Lord hearkened and heard it." (Mal. 3:16) F309

For mutual advancement in spiritual things. R309

For encouragement, mutual fellowship, mutual helpfulness and regular association. R4854:5

This is our charter-right and we must concede an equal right to all of God's people who may choose to meet in his name at any place and at any time. R5501:3

Even two or three in fellowship are a body of Christ. R4965:9, 4592:6

"Not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together." (Heb. 10:25) F309; R4306:5

Not in elaborate church buildings, but where two or three are met together, that is the house of God, and there his glory is seen and felt.

R2010:5

There am I -- The Lord will be specially present to grant a blessing.

R4854:5

The holy Spirit represented Christ; comforting those who came seeking his blessing. R531:3

Those who realize the Lord's presence among them when they meet will be very careful of their words, actions and the very thoughts of their heart.

In the midst -- Illustrated on the walk to Emmaus. R1823:2

Matthew 18:21

How oft -- Imperfect ourselves and surrounded by others who are imperfect, we continually have need to exercise mercy, benevolence and forgiveness. R4650:2

Shall my brother sin -- The Lord is not laying down any rule by which we may deal with the world, but merely the rule which would govern amongst his followers. R3801:3

It is the new creature and not the old creature that is the brother of Christ. If a brother trespass, the wrong is not by the brother, the new creature, but by his mortal flesh. R2666:3

In another account of the same matter, it is implied that before forgiveness is granted, it be at least desired, if not sought. (Luke 17:4)

R4650:3

If he trespass seventy times seven he should be rebuked as often, either by word, conduct, or both, and should repent in words and turn in conduct just as often; and as soon as we believe him sincere, we must be prompt and hearty in our forgiveness. R1694:2,5

Till seven times -- Peter no doubt had in mind the thought that seven was the symbol of perfection, and that this might mark the reasonable limit of mercy and forgiveness. R3801:4

Matthew 18:22

Jesus saith -- This is not merely advice, it is a command. R3801:5

Until seventy times seven -- No limit. R5134:3, 2666:1

How it tells us of the loving mercy and forgiveness of him with whom we have to do. R4650:3

"If thy brother trespass against thee seven times in a day, and seven times a day shall say, I repent, thou shalt forgive him." (Luke 17:4)

R4650:3

It is as much the Lord's command that we do not forgive until he turns again and repents as it is his command that we do forgive when he does turn and repent. R1694:2

Forgiveness is obligatory when asked for. R5134:5

Even though fully forgiven, we may not put such a one into the same place of responsibility previously held until we see a stronger and truer character developed in him. R1694:5

This does not imply, however, that there may be no penalties attached with the forgiveness. R2666:1

Evidently to imply that forgiveness should be granted as often as it is sought with any manifestation whatever of sincerity. R3801:5

We may not decide that any transgression against us is unforgivable. Our imperfect knowledge, as well as our imperfect judgment, forbids such a decision. R1694:2

To return evil for good is devilish, to return good for good is human, to return good for evil is Godlike. R3802:1*

Matthew 18:23

Therefore -- This parable does not refer to divine forgiveness of original Adamic sin, but to subsequent sins. R5135:4, 528:3

Kingdom of heaven -- The Church in the present embryotic condition. R5134:6, 4650:6, 3802:2, 2666:6

Of his servants -- Tax-collectors: representing the justified and consecrated children of God, entrusted with the stewardship of the Lord's goods. R3802:1,2, 5135:4

This parable does not relate to dealings between God and the world of sinners; but between God and his covenanted children, called here, as elsewhere, "bond-servants." R528:3

The world, as sinners, are not God's servants, but aliens. The only ones God recognizes as servants are such as come back into relationship with him through Jesus. R5135:4, 4650:5, 3802:2, 2667:1, 2295:3

Matthew 18:24

Owed him -- This can be understood in two ways--either the debt resting against the whole human family, the death penalty; or the obligations of the covenant of a new creature. R2667:4

Ten thousand talents -- Representing in value about $20 million, fitly representing our great obligations to God as a race and our utter inability to meet these obligations. R2295:3
Estimated to represent $9 million. R3802:1

Matthew 18:26

Worshipped him -- Asking, as members of the Body of Christ, in the name of their Head. R528:6 Lord, have patience -- God does not forgive our sins until we acknowledge them and ask his forgiveness. R2295:6

Matthew 18:27

Then -- As soon as the debtor asked for mercy. R2295:6
Moved with compassion -- Mercy is an element of love, and love is the fulfilling of the whole law of God. R3802:5
Forgave him -- Not referring to divine forgiveness of original sin, but entirely to subsequent sins. The sin of Adam is not forgiven simply because we cry for mercy. R5135:4, 4650:6, 3802:2

Matthew 18:28

The same servant -- Representing the Great Company; or, possibly, those who sin the sin unto death. R3802:6, 4079:5*, 2667:4
Fellowservants -- Other brethren. R5135:4
An hundred pence -- A small debt, probably representing not more than a hundred dollars proportionately to our money and time. R3802:3
About $16. R3503:3, 2295:6
A very insignificant sum in comparison to the one which he had owed his master. R5134:6
Took him by the throat -- Just as some professed followers of Christ apply the law to their fellow disciples. R151:6*
The harsh and unsympathetic will be likewise treated. R5135:1

Matthew 18:30

Pay the debt -- If our standard in dealing with others be one of exact justice--requiring others to measure up to our standard by some sort of penance before we forgive them--we may expect no mercy at the Lord's hands. R2667:5

Matthew 18:32

Wicked servant -- He who cannot render perfect justice cannot rightfully require it of others. R5266:3

Matthew 18:33

Compassion -- The trespasses of others against us are trifling indeed in comparison to our obligations to the Lord. R5135:1

I had pity on thee -- As we remember and appreciate our own weaknesses and blemishes, it will make us sympathetic with the brethren and with all mankind. R5135:2

Matthew 18:34

To the tormentors -- The jailers of Oriental countries were accustomed to torment their prisoners. These doubtless represent Satan, to whom will be turned over for the destruction of the flesh all true servants of the Lord who fail to come willingly into accord with his spirit. R3802:5

Illustrating earthly disciplines. This might mean financial difficulties or losses, or physical ailments, disease or what-not. R2295:6

To trouble and distress in the present life, sufficient to make them sympathetic with the weak and erring. R528:6

The Great Company must wash in the blood of the lamb, in the "great tribulation." These tribulations correspond to the tormentors of the parable. (Rev. 7:14) R3802:6

Not that the Lord had sympathy with those barbarous customs, but that he was speaking to the people from the standpoint of customs which they would understand. R3802:5

All that was due -- The full consecration promised. R3802:4, 2667:4

It might represent the original debt resting upon the human family--from which the Lord redeemed all; hence the unmerciful servant's penalty would signify second death. R2667:4

Or if the debt represents the obligations of his covenant as a new creature, he would be required to comply to his vow by going into the great time of trouble. R2667:4

We are inclined to think that the uttermost farthing signifies a hopeless case--second death--in the case of the Lord's people who fail to exercise forgiveness toward the brethren. R2667:4

Matthew 18:35

So likewise -- What I am seeking in you, my servant, is perfection in my character-likeness. R4651:4

My heavenly Father -- We are too inclined to look at the justice of his character and copy it, and deal severely with our debtors. He wishes to make clear that the grandest elements of his character are love, sympathy, kindness and forbearance. R4651:4

Do also unto you -- Whatever our faith and works, they amount to nothing if we do not have love which is merciful, generous, long-suffering, patient toward those who injure us. R3802:5

Not that he wishes to retaliate, but to prepare us for a special service; he desires that we learn the lesson of forgiveness and mercy. R4651:1, 2667:6

If we are harsh, unsympathetic, unforgiving toward our brethren, the heavenly Father will so deal with us and not forgive us our trespasses. R5135:1, 3803:1

From your hearts -- Not merely from our lips. R2296:1, 3604:4, 2295:5
If at heart we treasure up resentment against others, our heavenly Father will not forgive us. R5123:3, 5135:5, 2444:6

Not only forgive; but forgive gladly, freely, heartily. R3604:4
Heart forgiveness leaves no sting, no animosity, no grudge. R2296:1
We should harbor no other feeling than that of forgiveness and good will toward all, no matter how seriously they may have transgressed against us. R2296:4

Not a lip-forgiveness and a heart-hatred. R1694:5

Forgive not -- God will be no more generous to you and your imperfections than you are toward your brethren in their imperfections. R4651:4

Let every Christian, in approaching the throne of grace daily, inquire of his own heart whether or not he has forgiven those who are indebted to him. R2253:4

Matthew 19:6

Joined together -- As a type of the lasting union of Christ and the Church. R1554:5

Put away his wife -- Secure a divorce. F505

Except it be -- Adultery, or the re-marriage of a divorced person, releases the wronged one from the obligation to the marriage tie. R5954:3
Separations for other grounds, while sometimes justifiable, do not give one liberty to remarry. R3089:4; F505

Marry another -- Marriage is not cancelled by any earthly court to such an extent as to permit marriage to another, except upon the one case specified. F516

Committeth adultery -- The new creature's marriage contract is similar to that of Christ and the Church, perpetual. F516

Be so -- If the marriage covenant is so binding and indissoluble. R1554:5

All men cannot receive this -- The advice to remain unmarried is not imperative upon the saints. R1554:3

Matthew 19:12

Made themselves eunuchs -- Figuratively, by determining not to marry, but to live celibate lives. F509 A privilege, a sacrifice in order to render the better service to the Lord; not a command, not an obligation. OV369:1

To both facilitate individual progress and the progress of the work in general of the Lord. R1554:3, 901:4

It is for each one of the Church to consider his consecration and to remember the example of Jesus who, by the power of his consecrated will, became a eunuch for the Kingdom of heaven's sake. R3922:5; OV369:1

Thus it is proper for an unmarried man to be an elder. R1892:1

None should make the mistake, however, of supposing that the responsibilities of a family already incurred can be ignored or set aside. R901:4

After the marriage it is too late for one to decide for himself whether or not he prefers to live a celibate life. F512

Contrary to Mormon teaching that man's future glory will depend upon marriage and offspring. HG732:1

He that is able -- Both from his own disposition and from his circumstances. R1555:1

Matthew 19:13

Rebuked -- Feeling that the Lord's time was too valuable to be thus used. R5362:1

Matthew 19:14

Suffer -- Permit, allow. R5362:1

Little children -- The Great Teacher was a lover of children, even though he did not generally give his time to them. R5362:1

Of such is the kingdom -- Those who will be of the Kingdom of God must be like little children: simple-hearted, true, teachable, obedient, honest and trustful of their heavenly Father. R4658:1, 4853:4, 5362:2

The Kingdom of heaven will not be literally composed of little children. R4658:1

Matthew 19:15

Laid his hands on them -- Merely signified his sympathy and love and appreciation of the purity and innocence of childhood. R4658:1

Matthew 19:16

Behold, one -- It has been supposed by some to have been Lazarus, whom Jesus later awoke from the dead. R3529:1

Came and said unto him -- Notwithstanding the persecuting spirit of the rulers and teachers in Israel against the Lord and all who believed in the validity of his claim, he came to him openly. R1774:3

That I may have -- He perceived that even the best men of his nation had failed to gain eternal life under this covenant; that all had died. R2727:3, 1774:3

Eternal life -- He had the right idea, that eternal life is the grand hope of all hopes before the human family. R4658:2

Why callest thou me good -- Our Lord parried the question to draw out the young man. R4658:2

Why do you acknowledge me as a good teacher? I am either the Messiah, as I claim, or an impostor and far from good. Do you accept my Messiahship? If you do not, how can you call me good? R4658:2

Unless you believe from the heart that I am the Son of God and not a falsifier, hypocrite and blasphemer. R2727:6, 4658:2

If you really believe me to be good, you must believe in me as a teacher sent of God, the All-Good. More than this, that I proceeded forth from God, that I am the Son of God. R2727:6

One, that is, God -- And the "one sent of God." R2727:6

Everything that is really good is of God and in accordance with God. R5465:2

Keep the commandments -- The only way to everlasting life then open. R2728:1, 823:1

The Law Covenant was still in force. It had not yet been "nailed to the cross." (Col. 2:14) R3843:2

Matthew 19:18

Do no murder -- Ignoring the commandments relating to Jehovah, realizing that the young man was seeking to know and do the will of the true God. R2727:1

Matthew 19:19

Love thy neighbor -- Delivered to Israel as a part of the Law (Lev. 19:18), the teachings of which, however, were never understood until Jesus expounded them by his example and teachings. R2419:3

Our interests justly balanced with the interests of others. SM156:2

Who can love his neighbor as himself and see that neighbor suffer while he has enough and to spare? R823:2

He loved self more than God or neighbor. R1774:6, 823:2

The young ruler evidently neglected to attach to these words their full import. He was thinking of the more specific definitions of the law, neglecting this more comprehensive statement. R3843:4

As thyself -- Which, in the present age, implies self-sacrifice and daily cross-bearing in imitation of Christ. R1774:6

It does not say, "better than thyself." Christ's course of self-sacrifice in our behalf went beyond this requirement. R3804:6, 3805:1

Matthew 19:20

Have I kept -- He was keeping the Jewish law to the extent of his knowledge and ability. He was merely doing his duty. No one has a right to live a bad life. R4658:3, 5438:6, 5464:2

He thought that he was loving his neighbor as himself. R4658:3

What lack I yet? -- He was anxious for a perfect conformity to the will of God; and so anxious that he manifested his willingness to bear reproach for it in thus coming to Jesus. R1774:6

Let this be the sincere inquiry of every child of God. R1775:4

There is none so perfect that he lacks nothing. R1775:4

Matthew 19:21

Wilt be perfect -- Reckoned of God as perfect and as having kept the commandments. R823:3

You have been getting the outside shell of the divine commandment but have entirely overlooked the kernel--love to God supremely and love toward your fellow man as toward yourself. R2728:2

To keep the Law perfectly in this age requires sacrifice. To keep the Law in the next age will not require sacrifice because of changed conditions. R823:2

Sell that thou hast -- Use earthly things with great moderation and self-denial. Q149:4

You must do more than merely avoid sin; God is now calling for sacrificers. R5438:6

All thy possessions, all thy time, all thy reputation, all that hitherto has been dear to thee. R1775:1

The poor man must give up the idols of his imagination and ambition, his covetousness; the rich man must sacrifice, not only what he possessed, but all for which he hoped. F575

He might have been kept busy for many years disposing of his goods. The selling of that which he had would go on proportionately as he could find use for the money. R855:4; F576

Dispose of your natural abilities and talents, wisely of course, for the benefit of yourself, your family, and all who have need of such services. R1656:3

Give to the poor -- Wisely, however, as becometh God's steward. F576; R1775:1

Reckon yourself God's steward, commissioned by him to use all those goods, as well as your personal talents, to his glory in serving those about you. R855:1

Not necessarily with the bread that perisheth; but first, rather, to feed the spiritually hungry with the bread of life. R1775:2

A consecration of our all to the Lord does not mean that all of our possessions should be used exclusively in religious work. We have family mortgages. F576

"Love is the fulfilling of the Law." (Rom. 13:10) R2728:2

Had he waited for Jesus to ask him for some of it he would have waited and have kept the money and never have obtained the Kingdom. R855:4

Treasure in heaven -- Instead of on earth. R4658:3

Joint-heirship with Christ in the Messianic Kingdom; glory, honor and immortality, the divine nature. R5438:6

More than the Law promised. R823:3

Reserved for all those who, like Jesus, keep the law in this age, when its requirements amount to and imply a sacrifice even unto death. R823:3

And follow me -- Sacrifice also your earthly reputation and become my follower. R4658:3

Taking up the cross of self-denial thus involved. R2728:2

Matthew 19:22

Went away sorrowful -- Evidently convinced that he yet fell short of the requirement of the law. R823:2

He was content to be very rich while some of his neighbors, whom he thought he loved as he loved himself, were very poor. R4658:4

He saw himself as never before. It became a new test with him. R4658:4

No doubt the heart of Jesus was sad also, when he saw the blight of selfishness and self-will attacking that promising half-blown rose of character. R1774:6

For centuries this has been called "The Great Refusal." R2727:3

His loss of the Kingdom was a sufficient penalty without suffering eternal torment in the future. Such as he will doubtless make rapid progress to perfection in the Millennium. R4658:4

Matthew 19:23

That a rich man -- With any kind of riches: honor of men, political influence, many and large talents or abilities, social standing, fine education, material wealth, mental endowment. R2728:5, 2761:2,3
The rich have temptations in the good things of this present life which tend to attract their hearts and become their idols and treasures. F575
When one who is rich does present himself to the Lord, it implies a greater sacrifice than if he were poorer, and the exercise of greater opportunities in the Lord's service. R2729:1

Shall hardly -- With difficulty. R2761:2, 4658:5, 5465:6; D304
Because riches are less favorable to the development of faith, are more likely to develop pride, bring with them worldly friends and associates, and are proportionately more to sacrifice. R2729:1

It was hard for the Scribes and Pharisees, rich in titles and honors; for the Jewish nation, proud of being Abraham's seed; for the Greeks, proud of their worldly wisdom; for the Romans, proud of their prestige and power; hard today for religionists, proud of their sects; for those who boast in human philosophy and science and those who reverence the opinions of men. R1920:2

In a word, no rich man can get into the Kingdom. He must give up everything to the Lord or else be barred from a place in the Kingdom. The terms of acceptance are the same for the rich as for the poor. R4658:5
Though difficult, it is not impossible. R1775:2

Enter into -- Equally invited, but less likely than others who are poorer to accept the Lord's invitation and present themselves according to the terms of the Kingdom call. R2728:6

Kingdom of heaven -- Certainly not the nominal church, for rich men find little difficulty getting into it. R2761:3

In verse 24, "kingdom of God," proof that Matthew uses the expressions interchangeably. R397:1

Matthew 19:24

The eye of a needle -- A small gateway of ancient cities, used at night; camels could pass through unloaded, and on their knees only. D304; F574; R4658:5, 5466:1; PD66/78

Rich man to enter -- The needle's eye illustrated how the rich must unload their wealth if they would share the Kingdom. PD66/78; R4658:5, 5004:2

A rich man could enter the Kingdom of God only by renouncing his burdens, giving up all to the Lord. R5466:1

The rich are disadvantaged because their wealth preserves them from many trials to which the poor are subjected. R5004:2

Into the kingdom -- Become a joint-heir with Christ in his Messianic Kingdom. R5004:2

Exceedingly amazed -- Because they knew that the majority of the religionists belonged to the wealthy class. R4658:5

Who then can be saved -- Since the rich seemingly had all the opportunities of time, influence and money to serve the Lord. R5466:2

Matthew 19:26

With men -- Men would say that God would find no one for the Kingdom if he rejected the rich. R4658:5

Are possible -- If the rich man's heart be pleasing to the Lord, the Lord would know how to show him his will in respect to using his riches. R5466:2

God knows how to overrule all things for good to those who love him with all their heart, mind, soul and strength. R5466:4

God has made provision for the trial of the wealthy, and for all, in the Millennial age. R3844:6

Behold, we -- The twelve, especially. R1735:2

Forsaken all -- We need to watch that there is not a measure of selfishness connected with our consecration. R4906:3,4

What shall we have -- If it had been wrong for them to have the promises of Kingdom honors in mind, it would have been wrong for the Lord to have given them these promises. R5376:1

Our thought of a share in the Kingdom should be secondary. Our merit should be of a higher order than merely a desire for reward for service. R4906:3

Matthew 19:28

That ye -- The Church, Head and Body, will be the judges. R2426:4

Which have followed me -- In the narrow way of self-sacrifice in the present life. OV380:1

"To him that overcometh will I give to sit with me in my throne." (Rev. 3:21) R531:6

In the regeneration -- Greek, palingenesia, restitution, restoration, renovation. R2574:4

Literally translated: "a new birth day." R1096:6*

The expression signifies to "give life again," but in no way implies that it will be given in the same way as now. R1388:2; NS102:4

When the world is born from the dead. E142; CR472:2

The general regeneration of the Millennial age. E138; R4556:3; Q208:T; OV380:1; PD9/16

A thousand years. OV380:5; NS844:5

That glorious moral, social, political, religious and physical change which will be introduced by the Messiah. Q822:3

The same time which St. Peter styles the "times of restitution," the Millennium, the times of "resurrection by judgment" (Acts 3:19-21; John 5:29, R.V.). R4556:3

The coming forth from the tomb will be merely the beginning of the work of regeneration. OV381:7

The creating of man was a momentary act; but the re-creating, the re-generation, the re-newing, the re-storing of his heart, will be a gradual work. R1374:4

The regeneration of the world in the Millennium is separate and distinct from that now possible to the Church. OV378:2; Q822:3; E138

This is the age of generation, the one to follow is the age of re-generation. R351:1*, 342:2*

After the Church has experienced the new birth. Q822:3; NS102:3

He waits for his bride. The world cannot be regenerated until the Redeemer first applies his merit, his ransom-price "for all the people." R4556:4; E142

Son of man shall sit -- Rest securely. "His rest shall be glorious." (Isa. 11:10) R1283:5*

Not in "masterly inactivity," but the very opposite. He is very active, and his strength is equal to his activity. R1283:6*

During his Millennial reign. OV380:1

Figurative, indicating that the position of the Son of Man, invested with all executive authority and power, has been established; and not merely established, but permanently established. R1283:5*

In the throne -- A throne is the seat of a priest or king, and it is often used as the emblem or symbol of sacerdotal or regal authority. R1283:1*

Not merely first in executive authority, but first in executive power also, in the accomplishment of the divine purpose regarding the salvation of man. R1283:5*

Of his glory -- The glory of the divine nature. R1283:3*

The glory of our blessed Lord is of the same kind as that of the Most High himself. R1283:4*

Ye also -- The Church glorified will be the judge. HG684:6

As Eve was associated with Adam in sin and disobedience, so the elect Church, when completed, glorified, will be Christ's associate in the regeneration. PD9/16

The glory which is peculiar to the divine nature, as well as judicial, sacerdotal and regal authority, are to be jointly participated in, not only by Jesus and his Apostles, but by all overcomers. R1284:4*

Sit upon twelve thrones -- Participate in the rulership. R1283:6*

The apostles shall be associates with him in judging and ruling the world. R4990:4; OV379:5

Implying that they which have passed to that life would be in the condition of the enthroned. R5684:1

Only twelve apostolic thrones, no more. OV410:1; SM670:1

This gives every apostle a throne. Not that the number of thrones is restricted to twelve, or that he who is to occupy a throne must be of necessity an apostle. Luke speaks of "thrones" without restricting them to twelve or any definite number. (Luke 22:28-30) R1283:6*

All the Lord's faithful followers will have a share. "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne." (Rev. 3:21) OV379:5

Judging -- Greek, krino, judgment or trial. R2430:1, 2426:4

Ruling. NS795:1

The whole world shall be judged, not again representatively, but individually. R699:5

Matthew 19:29

Hath forsaken houses -- We are not to get the mistaken idea from this that the Lord wishes us to sacrifice others. It would be wrong to deprive our families of necessary comforts and temporal provisions; but having provided these, the remainder is the Lord's. R3845:6

An hundredfold -- A reward a hundred times greater than that which we lose. The greater our present losses, the greater our reward both now and hereafter. Those who sacrifice nothing need expect no reward. Those who receive little of the Lord in the present life and have small hope of a share in the Kingdom are those who have sacrificed little for his sake. R3845:2,3

Matthew 19:30

First shall be last -- In order of development, it was first the natural or earthly, afterward the heavenly rulers; but in order of grandeur of position and time of installation, it will be first the spiritual, afterward the natural. A293; B206

Last shall be first -- In point of time, God called fleshly Israel first; but in point of favor, and in time of realization, spiritual Israel comes first. B206; A293

And also first in grandeur of position. A293; B206

The merit of Jesus' death was utilized first on behalf of the spiritual elect. R5576:4

Some who have not been favored during this Gospel age will be granted the chief favors during the coming age. F118 When the Kingdom is ushered in, God's special favor will pass again to natural Israel. F118, 119
Adam and Eve will probably be the last to be awakened. The last to die will probably be the first to be awakened. R4499:1, 5531:6; D641; SM441:T

Matthew 20

Matthew 20:1

The kingdom of heaven -- Hence we know that it applies to the experiences of the Church during this Gospel age. R5473:2

We think it applies entirely to the present-life experiences of the Kingdom class, especially to those living at the close of this age. R5473:3; Q258:2

Is like unto -- This parable is difficult to interpret in such a way as to make all of its facts find fulfillment. R5473:2; Q531:T, 258:3

We do not expect that every little feature will find a correspondency. Some merely round out the story or call attention to some particular feature. Q530:1

Early in the morning -- Some might say the call began in the days of Jesus and the apostles, and that the various calls relate throughout the Gospel age. Q258:2

To hire laborers -- Earnest, consecrated children of God throughout this Gospel age. C223

To tend the vine, look out for the injurious pests, keep the soil in good condition, and assist every way in the production of "much fruit" and of fine quality. R4666:2

Into his vineyard -- To faithfully spend their time and energy in his service. C223

The Church is God's vineyard. R214:2

Matthew 20:2

When he had agreed -- The promise of the Kingdom was clearly understood by the early Church, but was afterward lost sight of. C223

A penny a day -- The Roman standard of the time; as the lira, mark, franc, shilling and dollar are today's Italian, German, French, English and American standards. R4666:4

In one of the old English cathedrals, records show that the chisel work cost "a penny a day and a bag of meal for each laborer." R4666:4

From the Greek denarius, a silver coin of about 17 cents value. R4666:3, 3535:1

This giving of the penny seems to be on this side the veil. Q531:T

This parable is evidently intended to teach that God will give all that he has agreed to all who labor. and more than he has stipulated. R4666:4
The Kingdom honors. C223

What the penny will be, I am not sure. Q258:3

Might be understood to refer to everlasting life, merely. Q530:1, 500:5

Would seem to be something of the joys, blessings, honors and privileges of God's people in the present life at the close of this age. R4666:5

May be connected with the great work of smiting Jordan which, I think, is the thing before us. Q531:T

Perhaps the reward the Lord would give those who are his, not only those who are of the Little Flock, but also of the Great Company. Q500:3

As applied to the Jewish harvest, it represents the privilege of entering the Kingdom of heaven, the privilege of discipleship. R5473:5

Matthew 20:3

The marketplace -- Greek, agora, root word of the word agorazo, to purchase in the open market, translated redeemed. E429

Matthew 20:4

Go ye also -- During the Gospel age, our Lord has continually, through his mouthpieces in the Church, invited all believers to enter into his service. C224

Whatsoever is right -- The exact, clear understanding of what the wages should be was mentioned only at the beginning. C223

The promise of the Kingdom was clearly understood by the early Church, but afterward was in the main lost sight of and not clearly enunciated. C223

Matthew 20:6

The eleventh hour -- The last hour. C223

The very closing time of this Gospel age. Q258:2

5 p.m., only one hour before the labor of the day would cease. We are now just at the close of the Gospel day. R214:2

We are even now (1889) in the eleventh hour. R1111:5

Apparently no others were admitted during the twelfth hour. Q74:4

And found others -- Perhaps 20,000 to 30,000 of the consecrated in 1881 did not prove faithful to their covenant of sacrifice and were replaced.

This process will continue until the last crown is everlastingly apportioned. F95; R4304:1

Partly applicable, in the Jewish harvest, to some publicans and sinners who had previously neglected God's service and labors in the vineyard. R5473:5

Standing idle -- Waiting for an opportunity to enter the vineyard. R4303:5; Q258:2

Matthew 20:7

Hath hired us -- We were too late to get into the service under the call. C223, 224

Go ye also -- Some of the places in the work will be vacated by reason of some not continuing faithful. C225

All were hired. There is so great a variety of work that all may find employ. R214:3

Into the vineyard -- So long as the door of opportunity for service is open. C224

And whatsoever is right -- These words, to the end of the verse, are not in the old manuscripts. C224

I promise nothing. The general call is ended. The time is short. The time for labor is nearly ended. C224

Who can tell the blessings which may flow from one hour's service under God's direction? R214:3

Matthew 20:8

Call the laborers -- Only the faithful are represented by the laborers. C223

Matthew 20:9

Penny -- Something of the joys, blessings, honors and privileges of God's people in the present life at the close of this age. R4666:5
Eternal life, the reward of those who labored throughout the whole day, or only an hour; to the Little Flock and to the Great Company. Q500:3

Matthew 20:10

Every man a penny -- Drawing attention to the fact that it was the same reward to all--the prominent feature of the parable. Q530:1

Perhaps the only significance is to call attention to that fact and the reason for the murmuring. Q530:1

It -- The penny, representing eternal life. Q500:1,5

They murmured -- Whatever it shall signify will be something that will yet be in the Church before we pass beyond the veil, because surely no one would murmur on the other side. Q258:3, 531:T

Anyone who would be inclined to murmur against the Giver of all Good would not be accounted worthy of a share in the Kingdom. R4666:5; Q530:1, 500:6, 259:T

It will mean that they were looking for the reward merely, and not appreciating the privilege of being laborers with Christ and with the Father. R4666:5

A warning to those long in the truth, with great privileges of service. R4666:5

All who are servants should be praying to the Master to send other laborers into the vineyard. They should not be feeling jealous of any others who might come. R5474:1

Matthew 20:12

But one hour -- Similarly today some Christian people stumble over the fact that the time is near at hand when God will pour out his spirit upon all flesh. R4666:6

Made them equal -- The Scribes and Pharisees thought that, if publicans and sinners were to be privileged to have discipleship with Messiah, some still higher favor should come to themselves. R5473:5

Of the day -- This Gospel age. C223

Matthew 20:13

I do thee no wrong -- All who appreciate that God is just, generous and bountiful, will rejoice in the blessings which overflow upon others. R4666:5

Whatever God has to offer is a gift. R5473:6

Matthew 20:15

To do what I will -- In matters of grace or favor. R5069:4

Is thine eye evil -- A special test upon them as respects their loyalty and their motives. R4666:6

Last shall be first -- Some last and least found opportunity for receiving the divine blessing sooner and more effectively. R5473:6

The first last -- Some first to respond to the call may be the last to receive special blessings, testing their loyalty and motives. R4666:5, 5473:6

See comments on Matt. 19:30.

Many be called -- To the divine nature through opportunity to sacrifice. R682:2

Not many are called in proportion to the whole, but many are called in proportion to the number chosen, the few, the elect. R2508:1; HG746:1, 744:3

More are called and drawn by God's providences and the preaching of the message than he designs to save in the present salvation. NS769:6

But few -- The approved. R779:3*

The terms and conditions of the present salvation are extremely difficult. NS769:6

Not only was the Jewish nation a small nation amongst the others, but the "very elect" out of that nation, the ancient worthies, was a very small proportion of the whole. NS369:6

Chosen -- This does not make God partial. He was under no kind of obligation to make any of the race immortal rulers. R779:3*

Matthew 20:18

They shall condemn him -- The priestly Sadducees, not the people, were interested in having Jesus brought to trial for his open attack on the priestly misrule, and they feared lest the Romans might hold them responsible. R2420:1*

Matthew 20:20

With her sons -- James and John, supposed to have been Jesus' full cousins. R3362:2

Matthew 20:21

Grant that these -- If it had been wrong for them to have the promise in mind, it would have been wrong for the Lord to have given the promise. R5376:1

On thy right hand -- And on the left, the two positions of chiefest favor. R3362:2

Others might not care so much where they were placed, but James and John would like to be close to the Master. R5091:1

Evidently thinking less of the glories of the Kingdom than of nearness to the Master. R4487:3

The disciples were afflicted with a common ailment: love of honor of men and also of honor of the Lord. R5375:6

It is possible that one of these positions is reserved for the Apostle Paul. R3362:6

In thy kingdom -- There was no doubt in their minds that the Kingdom was near. R5090:6

Matthew 20:22

Jesus answered -- From the few recorded words, we gather the drift of the more extended conversation. R2072:2*

Ye know not -- At that time they could form no idea of the blessedness of being joined with Christ in his Kingdom and glory, to sit with him in his throne as his Bride and joint-heir. R2072:2*

What ye ask -- Jesus did not condemn them for this desire. R5786:4
You can form no idea of the blessedness of being joined with Christ in his Kingdom and glory. R2072:2*

They little realized what this high privilege of sitting with him in the Millennial throne would cost. NS755:4

When we consecrate ourselves we agree to do the Lord's will, but we do not know what it means. R5081:5

Are ye able to drink -- Are ye willing to participate, to drink? 5599:2, 5538:5, 4547:2, R3362:3; Q188:T

The word "able," while it contains the thought of force, nevertheless expresses willingness. It refers to the will. Not, Are ye physically able?--but, Are ye mentally able? R5599:2

Of the cup -- Of shame, ignominy, suffering and reproach. R5599:3, 5421:3, 4669:1, 2292:4

Of self-denial and self-sacrifice with Jesus, participating in his sacrifice. R4456:4, 5421:3-5, 5192:6, 4547:2,5, 4429:4; CR47:5

The earthly experiences of the Lord. R5538:6, 5599:5

Showing not only our interest in his sacrifice, but also expressing our own covenant to be dead with him and to drink of his cup. R325:5

We are called to share the cup with him, thus partaking in symbol of his death. R721:4

Does not symbolize justification, but only the justified may drink of it. R4547:4

It is our individual cup, and yet it is our Savior's cup. R5538:5

"The cup which my Father hath given me, shall I not drink it?" (John 18:11) R3362:3, 5599:5

If we drink our Savior's cup of death with him, then we shall participate with him in the future cup of joy. R4547:2, 5538:6; CR307:2

Our cup is supervised by our Savior, although it is the cup poured by the Father; for it is the Father's program. We shall not be alone. R5422:1, 5538:5, 4547:2

Symbolizes the means of our sanctification, by which we exchange our justified earthly rights for the heavenly inheritance and joint-heirship. R4547:4

To lay down your lives completely, even though it shall mean injustice to you. R5421:3

While this wine of sacrifice exhausts the human nature, it invigorates and makes strong the spiritual nature. R588:3

I shall drink of -- Jesus was to drink of the cup which belonged to the sinner, that he might redeem man. R5421:6

He drank the bitter cup to its dregs, thankfully. R5422:1, 5538:5

That cup was a terrible draft to him--not the dying, but the cross. R5599:5, 5422:1

About to be poured for him. R5421:2

The same cup. He did not drink of one cup and we of another. R4475:2, 4547:2, 212:2*

Neither James nor John nor anyone else can sit on Christ's throne unless he drinks of this cup. R4547:2, 4475:2

With the baptism -- The baptism of death. F438, 442; R4547:5, 4669:1, 5599:3, 1543:1; PD66/78

Into his sacrificial death. R4547:5

Signifying the complete surrender of self to God at any cost or privation or suffering, even unto death. R2072:2*

I am baptized with -- Now, during the three and a half years of his ministry. R5421:1

The sacrifice of all earthly interests. R4669:1

We are able -- We are willing. We will sacrifice everything to follow in your footsteps. R3362:4, 5421:3,4, 5599:2, 5786:4

Let us make such a decision promptly, and think of it daily. R5607:3

They did not, of course, yet know the full import of the word "baptism" or the word "cup." R5421:4

And we can do no more. If left to ourselves, undoubtedly the contract would be more than we would be sufficient for, but our sufficiency is of God's providence. NS755:4

Our Lord was evidently gratified with their promptness to make the consecration, declaring themselves willing to endure the cross to win the crown. R2292:4

They had counted the cost and promptly responded as to their willingness. R4669:2

They were ready for anything, with the Master's help. PD66/78

Not a boast on their part, but a simple declaration of their decision to obey and follow the Lord's footsteps in whatever circumstances might arise. R5607:3

And so with us. Our wills are made up. There is not a doubt--nothing to interfere. R5599:3

Matthew 20:23

Ye shall drink -- The apostles could not actually drink of the Redeemer's cup until he, as their Advocate, should appear in the presence of God for them. R4547:5

Jesus guaranteed that, being willing, they should have these experiences; continuing willing, continuing to suffer with him here, they should reign with him in his throne. R5421:4, 4669:2, 2292:5

Those who drink will share with him in the glories of the future. R5607:3

Jesus, in turn, pledged that they should indeed be able to carry it out. R2292:4

He assured them and us that he will furnish trials and assistances, and that, if faithful to the end, we shall have a crown of life. PD66/78

There is no doubt--if we follow in the footsteps of Jesus, a life of obedience, we shall suffer. R212:1*

It is hard that our good should be evil spoken of, that we should be declared to be poisonous to every religious sentiment. This is a part of our experience. R5599:5

My cup -- Styled the blood of the New Covenant, New Testament, New Will. R4436:2

Of suffering or ignominy. R5607:3, 4555:5, 2292:4

Share with him in his sacrifice--not a different cup, not a different sacrifice. R4475:2

The merit of Jesus is the only merit which cancels the sins of the whole world; but it is applied indirectly through the Church. This is the favor he specially offers them. R648:6

The same cup represented in the Communion service. R5421:3, 4555:5

Also signifies a share in his glories, honors and immortality, the new wine with him in the Kingdom. R5192:6

Those who drink of his cup are specially loved of the Father. R5607:3

And be baptized -- If we have indicated our willingness, we have his promise that the ability will be supplied. R445:1

Sit on my right hand -- Be associated thus intimately with me on my throne. R2072:2

Not mine to give -- Will not be given according to favor, but according to justice. R5786:4; PD66/78

Positions in the Kingdom of heaven will be awarded according to the degree of development of the fruits of the holy Spirit. This means a love which will lead to zeal in the Lord's service. Q121:3

Be given to them -- Possibly Paul and John. F726

For whom it is prepared -- Reserved for overcomers. At that time it yet remained to be proved whether these would be faithful to their covenant. R2072:2*

Of my Father -- According to the standards which the Father has prepared and established. R4669:2

Matthew 20:25

Jesus called them -- In answering the ten, he did not reprove the two specifically, but indirectly. R4669:2

Exercise dominion -- The Gentiles exercise authority over their people at the expense of the ruled. R5375:6

With men, the aggressive and powerful hold the lordship and dominion over others, but in the divine arrangement the order is reversed. R4669:4

The great success of Papacy's rise to power, accomplished by cunning, trickery and political intrigue, was wholly foreign to the spirit of true Christianity. R1093:5

Exercise authority -- The Church of Christ has probably suffered more from pride and ambition for leadership than from any other one cause. R1883:6

Many have lorded it over God's heritage; our Lord had this class in mind. R5375:6

Matthew 20:26

Not be so among you -- With the followers of Christ there is not to be a spirit to dominate, to rule others, but a spirit of love, which seeks to serve others. Q119:6

There should be no rulership, lordship or masteries amongst those whom the one Master, even Christ, has put upon a common level. R1883:6

But it has been so in the Papacy. F230; R1523:5

Be your minister -- Greek, diakonos, deacon, servant. F253

The highest position in Christ's Church was to be servant, and he declared himself to be the chief servant or minister of the Church. R1883:6

Matthew 20:27

Whosoever -- Of his disciples, the Lord's people. R5793:1

Will be chief -- Teachers, instructors of the flock. R5321:3

Someone is bound to be chief. An absolute equality is not possible.

R5793:1, 5322:4; Q119:7

We should leave to God's attendance the matter of honor, and be content merely to be a servant to the brethren. R5793:2

Our Lord had been pointing out to his disciples a certain weakness on their part. R5793:1,2

A person without any ambition never amounts to anything. R5793:2, 5321:3; Q120:3

A certain kind of ambition, to please God and have his rewards, is encouraged by the exceeding great and precious promises of God's Word. R4668:3

Nevertheless, the ambitions awakened by these promises, we are warned, might become our snares. R4669:1

To guide the Church. R5793:2

The Apostle Paul says that those who desire the office of a bishop are desiring a good thing. (1 Tim. 3:1) Q120:5

The Lord does not raise up rulers in the body of Christ, but he does raise up faithful leaders, to whom heed should be given, whose faith and example should be imitated. R1559:4

God made Jesus a chief. He passed by Satan, who was self-seeking. After Jesus proved his humility, then the Father gave him the high exaltation. R5322:5

We are not to help one who aspires to the chief place into that position. This would do injury both to him and the cause. R5322:4

Be your servant -- He who renders the greatest amount of service and brings the greatest spiritual blessing, consider him your chief. R5793:2
The chief honor amongst the Lord's brethren is to be servant. The one most faithful should be given opportunity to serve. In that sense, he would be your chief. R5322:5
Honor those most in the Church who serve the Church, not those who demand service, honors and exaltation. R4669:4
A bishop at that time was a humble, untitled servant of the Church, caring for the interests of the sheep. Q120:5
We are to lay aside any desire to be chief so far as ambition for personal glory is concerned. R5793:3; Q120:4
Not of a spirit to dominate, to rule others. R5793:1
Serving in any way, in the most capable manner possible. R5793:2
This does not mean that we have no aspirations. The controlling impulse is to serve the Church. R5322:4
Let the Lord take care of your place of service; let him open the way. R5322:2

Matthew 20:28

Even as -- Pointing to his own course as an illustration. R4669:4
The Son of man -- No longer on the spirit plane, but on the human plane. R5786:1; Q368:2
The requirement was that he become a man in order to ransom mankind. He could ransom man only by becoming man. R5786:1, 3088:2
Came not -- Before coming into the world, our Lord had perceived that mankind was in need of a Savior. No doubt this had to do with his accepting the divine arrangement. R5375:2
To be ministered unto -- Not that our Lord refused to have anyone serve him, but he came to render a service. R5375:3
Not to be served, honored or titled. R1711:1
He did not come into the world to have servants and get all that he could. R5375:3
The difference between himself and other kings. R5785:3
He did not try to use his power, his intelligence, selfishly for his own comfort; but he laid down his life unselfishly. R5375:2
But to minister -- The true meaning of the word "minister" is one who serves. R5785:3, 5375:2
To serve others. E426; F230; R5375:2,3, 5785:3
In the service of his Church, which is his body. R5250:3
Because it was helpful service, and was the Father's will. R5375:5
Illustrating the spirit of meekness, of service, which must characterize the hearts and, in some degree, control the lives of all his true disciples. R4669:5
The privilege of serving the fallen race as their Redeemer and Restorer was one of the rewards the Father set before His Son. NS751:3

Lord of all, yet servant of all. R1063:2*

He set himself forth as an example: all disciples must manifest so great loyalty to the principles of God's government, and so great humility of spirit, that they would be glad to render service to anyone in need.

R5376:1

The spirit of Christ will be the spirit of service: a zeal, a warmth, an energy, prompting us to serve in the Church. R5250:2

Our ministry begins at the time of our consecration. We are not authorized to minister in holy things until we have entered upon the way the Lord pointed out to us. R5785:6

And to give -- The object in becoming a man was to redeem men, to taste death for every man. R507:1, 145:1*

He came not to preach and write books. Others, under inspiration, could do those things. But he alone had an unforfeited life to give for the life of the world. R3234:3

The serving of Jesus' ministry and the example of obedience and self-denial, though blessed to those of his day and to others since, was not all there was to Jesus' life. R851:6

Becoming a man did not pay our ransom price. E426

The human existence of Jesus, our ransom, our substitute, was surrendered to everlasting death; but he lives as a divine being to restore purchased mankind. R823:5

Otherwise his death would have been contrary to God's will, a suicide and a sin. R1213:3*

He could not rise from the dead as a human being, as flesh, his flesh being given once for all and forever for the life of the world. NS3:6

His life -- Greek, psuche, soul, being. E335; R851:6, 62:1*

The death of Christ secures for Adam and all of his race one full opportunity for salvation. R4594:4

His being or existence in the condition he then possessed it, life or existence as a human being. The human Jesus gave himself, his life, a ransom for all. R823:4, 726:3*, 53:4*; NS3:6

His life to secure life for condemned sinners. R1086:3

Not his pre-human life, for he did not die to become man, but he said, "Before Abraham was, I am." (John 8:58) R1298:6*

A ransom -- Greek, lutron-anti, a price to correspond. E428; R5925:1, 5622:6, 4426:1, 4352:2, 3088:2, 1256:2, 387:3; SM269:1

Greek, lutron, a price. R408:1*

A substitute. R1256:2, 965:4

Exchange. R432:4

Not only the English words "ransom, bought, redeem" mean "the giving of one thing instead of, or as a substitute for another," but also the Greek words which these are used to translate. R432:4

The word "ransom" is used in respect to the purchase-price of humanity and also in connection with the deliverance of mankind after having been purchased by that price. R4818:3

The word occurs but three times in the Greek (here and in Mark 10:45 and 1 Tim. 2:6) and signifies to recover by paying a price; intensified in Timothy to signify a corresponding price. R867:3, 145:1*

His death was the ransom which justifies all mankind to life, not the sufferings of Gethsemane, nor the weariness of his three-and-a-half year ministry. R392:6 Corroborating the declaration that man was under a sentence of death and needed to be ransomed from it. R5465:1

Jesus was the only one who could be the corresponding price for Adam. R5622:6

None other than the man Jesus. PT386:3*

Our Lord's first statement of the philosophy of the divine plan by which, as Abraham's seed, he would bring the promised blessing. R4352:2

His death was a free-will sacrifice. He could have sustained life as a perfect man forever. R463:6

The word here used also indicates the deliverance of mankind after purchase: "I will ransom them from the power of the grave." (Hos. 13:14) R4818:3, 726:3*

Without the ransom there could be no resurrection of the dead. R5465:1

The ransom-price that Jesus gives has been a progressive matter and is not yet completed. R5622:3

To view our Lord as merely an example for proper living would be an absurdity. SM269:1

The work of ransoming Adam and his race is much more than merely providing the ransom-price. It includes their delivery from the power of sin and death. R5873:2, 4818:6

Prefigured and elaborated upon in the types and shadows of the Law to Israel. R4352:2

The Master tells how he gained the right to loose the prisoners of sin and death from the tomb, and to offer life, restitution, to all for whom life, and everything, had been lost. R866:4

For many -- For all. SM269:1

The principal meaning of the word "for" is "instead of," as a substitute or representative stands for, or "instead of," those whom he represents. R588:5

Matthew 20:30

Two blind men -- Bartimeus was one of the two. (Mark 10:46) R2729:3

Thou son of David -- "The Lord shall give him the throne of his father David." (Luke 1:32) C257

The long-promised king of David's line, the Messiah. PD65/77; C257; E130; SM210:2

Matthew 20:31

Rebuked them -- When the spiritually blind cry for help, there are sure to be some, even amongst the Lord's friends, to rebuke instead of encourage them. R2730:4

Matthew 20:32

Called them -- Giving those about him an opportunity to share in the work of blessing. R2729:3

What will ye -- Many today, when asked this question, do not choose as wisely, but request riches, honor of men and temporal blessings. R3848:4

Matthew 20:34

Received sight -- Only the Great Physician is able to open the eyes of the understanding. R2730:4

It is not in our power to open the eyes of the physically blind, but it is in our power to help many into a clearer insight into the things of God, which the natural eye hath not seen. R4669:5

Matthew 21

Matthew 21:1

And when -- Just five days before his crucifixion, on the exact day when he should have been received as the Lamb of God so that they might be passed over as a nation and become the antitypical Levites, from whom would come the antitypical priests. R4669:2, 839:2, 465:5; NS74:5, 630:6

Bethpage -- A little village on the Mount of Olives. R3850:2

Matthew 21:2

Over against you -- Another village close by. R3850:2

Ye shall find -- Manifesting his superhuman power by designating where and how the animals would be found. R2745:3

An ass -- Probably a white one, for it is reputed to have been the custom of the kings of Israel to ride upon white asses. R4669:5, 3850:2, 2745:3; SM400:2; NS629:6

And a colt -- Its little colt. R4669:3, 3850:2

Bring them -- The owner of the animals may have been acquainted with Jesus and, if so, would also have been acquainted with his disciples. R3850:2

Has no bearing on the question of the rights of private property. All things belong to God and have their legitimate and illegitimate uses. R1695:6

Matthew 21:4

Might be fulfilled -- It was necessary that our Lord should do literally what the prophets had foretold, so that Israel might be without excuse in their rejection of him. R3850:6, 2296:3; B225

By the prophet -- Fulfilling two prophecies: Isa. 62:11 and Zech. 9:9. R3850:5

Matthew 21:5

Thy King cometh -- "He is Lord of lords and King of kings." (Rev. 17:14) B238

He also presented himself to them as Bridegroom (John 3:29) and Reaper (John 4:35,36), the same three characters which he presents now to the Christian house. B238

The entry was viewed from three standpoints: for the disciples and multitude, full of Messianic expectation, it was a grand occasion and a real triumph; from the standpoint of Herod, Pilate and the authorities, it was merely the parade of a fanatical leader; from the standpoint of the Lord, the angels and ourselves, it foreshadowed his coming glory and triumphal entry upon his return from the far country of heaven. R2745:5
The formal presentation and rejection was so that God's judgment would not only be just, but its justice would be apparent to his creatures. R2296:5; NS630:3

Though he knew the result, this action was performed as a part of that great system of types which foreshadowed good things to come. R1795:2
In the parallel of time, he must offer himself to spiritual Israel, at the appointed time, as their King of Glory. NS632:2

"Even today do I declare that I will render double unto thee." (Zech. 9:12) B225

Natural Israel waited 1845 years for the Lord to come; the corresponding date for spiritual Israel is 1878 AD. R3851:3, 2746:5, 1795:2; C233, 234
This exercise of kingly power and authority in the spring of AD 33 typified the raising of the sleeping saints in AD 1878. C233

As a King, he is now taking possession of his Kingdom--first, as with the Jews, offering himself to his professed people--but now, as then, finding only a remnant. R2297:2

This message has proven to be the test to both the fleshly and the spiritual houses of Israel. C136

Meek -- Whereas he was meek and lowly of heart, they were proud and boastful; whereas he was pure and unselfish, they were impure and self-seeking. R3850:6

Upon an ass -- After the manner of Israel's kings. PD66/77
See comments on verse 2.

Matthew 21:7

Put on them -- As a saddle. R3537:6
Set him thereon -- A lesson for spiritual Israel at the end of this age, because the history of natural Israel was typical of spiritual Israel's experiences. R3851:2

Matthew 21:8

Great multitude -- A million or more Jews in Jerusalem hailed him as King. R5331:3
Not only from every quarter of Palestine, but from Babylon, Egypt, Greece and Spain. R3537:3
We cannot suppose that they were all saints, though doubtless many of them were sympathizers with Jesus. R3851:1
Thus selecting its Paschal Lamb on the 10th of Nisan. F461
Spread their garments -- A custom amongst various peoples for long centuries to thus treat their honored rulers. R3851:1, 2745:3; NS629:2
As marks of honor to the great King whom they imperfectly, indistinctly, recognized, not realizing the still greater glory of his later revealing at the end of this age. R4669:6, 3538:1, 2296:2
Garments of praise. R3538:6
Their hearts were right; they had not been spoiled by doubts. So with the Lord's people today, in the simplicity of our hearts we see his promises and are ready to believe them. R3538:2
Cut down branches -- From nearby date palm trees, fernlike in shape and sometimes ten feet long, symbols of rejoicing and honor. R3538:1
Implying that the best of earth was not too good for one so great. PD65/77
Branches of such victories as can be gained on behalf of the Truth in conflict with the world, the flesh and the devil. R3538:6
Strawed them -- After our Lord's beast had walked over them, they went ahead with these and strewed them afresh, in every way seeking to honor the one whom God had so signally recognized. R3538:1

Matthew 21:9

And that followed -- Two multitudes--one who had come with him from Jericho and lodged in Bethany over the Sabbath, and another from Jerusalem who had come forth to see him and Lazarus. R2745:3
Hosanna -- An acclaim of praise, confidence and expectancy, very closely resembling the word Hallelujah. R3538:2

Their unstable and fickle minds, swayed by false teachers and unwilling to act upon convictions in the face of opposition, would, only a few days later, cry, Crucify him! Crucify him! R1795:2, 1696:4; NS630:3

The son of David -- The King of the royal line, probably being deterred from using the word "king" lest they should bring upon themselves charges of treason against Herod and the Roman Empire. R2745:3

The long-promised king of David's line, the Messiah. PD65/77; SM210:2; E130; C257; NS631:6

"The Lord will give him the throne of his father David." (Luke 1:32) C257

So we, today, hail him Messiah and proclaim ourselves believers in him.

This is justification by faith. Hence, Palm Sunday may be considered as symbolizing the attainment of justification by those who recognize Jesus. NS631:6

Blessed is he -- As truly and as necessarily as there was shouting and rejoicing then, so there is and must be now. R1795:5

Name of the Lord -- Jehovah. PD65/77

Matthew 21:11

The multitude -- Josephus tells us that sometimes the population of Jerusalem, on such an occasion, was swelled to the number of two millions. R4122:6, 3537:3

Nazareth of Galilee -- Not highly esteemed among men and in religious circles; thought to be rather peculiar at very best. R3538:6

Matthew 21:12

Into the temple -- Not to Herod's palace or to Pilate's palace; but, as the representative of God, the Messiah, he went appropriately to the Father's house or palace, the Temple. R2746:3

The temple, built by Herod, was only a type of the Church of the living God, either in future glory or in present humiliation. R3851:5

Typifying the cleansing of the consecrated Temple class since 1878; every selfish, carnal thought, and all worldliness, must be cast out, that the Temple may be clean, the dwelling-place of God's holy Spirit. B239; R4123:2, 2746:6, 1696:1

And cast out -- As any Law-abiding Jew was privileged to do. R2746:4, 3851:4, 4123:2

Beginning to exercise power, as befitting a spiritual king, by reproving those who were violating the holy Temple and its precincts. R2746:3, 1695:6

It is assumed, we believe without sufficient authority, that there were two cleansings. R4122:3, 2332:1; 1695:3

He had visited the Temple time and again as a Jew and had witnessed these same scenes, but had not interfered, a proof that the occurrence took place but once--after our Lord had assumed the office of King. R4123:2

It is but reasonable to suppose that the use of force in cleansing the Temple followed, and did not precede, the assertion of regal authority shown in the triumphal entry. R2332:1

The last verse of John's account, like the other Gospels, shows the hostile attitude of numerous opponents which did not appear in the beginning of his ministry. R1695:3

Fulfilling the prophecy, "The zeal of thine house hath consumed me." (Psa. 69:9) R4670:4, 4123:2

As a typical act, indicating that, in the end of this age, judgment begins with the professed house of God. (1 Pet. 4:17) R1795:5

In the end of the Gospel age, God purposes a cleansing of his sanctuary, the Temple-- Christendom. (Dan. 8:14) R3851:5

Those associated with the Lord's work for selfish reasons must be driven out. R3851:6

Necessary before the Temple shall be ready to be filled with the glory of God and become the place of prayer for all nations. R2297:4

All them that sold -- The antitypical cleansing, now in progress, mainly affects those who make merchandise of holy things. R3851:6

In the temple -- They had no right within its hallowed precincts. R4760:4

Not in the Temple proper, but in its outer courts, the whole of which was designated the Temple or house of God. R4123:1

The tables of -- Not only stopping their usurious exchange business, but keeping them busy looking after their coins. R4123:2

The moneychangers -- Typifying those who rob the people by accepting money for that which is not food. R3851:6

Reaping a profitable harvest from the worshippers who had traveled from a distance, whose money, not being Jewish, could not be accepted at the Temple. R2746:3

A certain Temple tax must be paid in the "shekel of the sanctuary" which was last coined in BC 140, hence quite scarce in our Lord's day and sold at a premium. R4122:6

Today in the nominal temple some make merchandise of their privileges, opportunities and knowledge. Catholics are led to believe they can present nothing acceptable except through the priests; Protestants have regular collection plates and frequent strong appeals for money. R4123:3

The seats of them -- He did not set at liberty the doves, which could not easily have been recovered, but permitted their owners to take them away. R4123:2

That sold doves -- Multitudes of strangers from afar rarely brought with them the doves, pigeons or lambs which they presented in sacrifice. R4122:6

Matthew 21:13

House of prayer -- The channel through which all mankind may, during the Millennial age, find access to God. R2297:5

A den of thieves -- Taking advantage of the necessities of the people. R4123:1

The thief usually poses as an honorable man; the same is the case with many Christian ministers, teachers and elders. R3852:1

Robbing God by detracting from his honor; robbing the people by taking from them money and honors while selling them bread which is not spiritually satisfying. R3852:2

Of this class are evolutionists, who rob God and receive the money of the people under false pretense. R3852:1

Matthew 21:14

The blind and the lame -- He cast out the wrong-doers and received the poor outcasts of society. R2296:5

Everywhere we find that earthly wisdom is apt to misinterpret divine promises. Frequently, therefore, the Lord makes use of the weak, poor and ignorant instead. R3852:5

He healed them -- Continuing the healing and teaching for several days, but without any further demonstration as a King. R2746:4

Typifying the opening of the blind eyes and the healing of the spiritually lame, particularly since 1878. R2746:6, 1795:5

Matthew 21:15

And the children -- Little, uninstructed children. R3538:6

Little children and those who, in simplicity of heart and meekness, become as little children, become the instruments the Lord uses in shouting his praises. R2746:4

Typifying the Lord's little ones in the present harvest whose praises will fill the true Temple of God. R2746:4, 3852:4,5

Crying in the temple -- Doubtless without any particular meaning. R3852:4

Were sore displeased -- Typifying the displeasure of the clergy at the present time because of the harvest message now being proclaimed. R2746:6

Babes and sucklings -- Out of the mouths of the common people. R1796:6

Matthew 21:17

Into Bethany -- Throughout the week he made Bethany his home, going daily to the city and returning at night. Bethany was about two miles distant from the Temple. R3850:2, 2746:4

Matthew 21:19

A fig tree -- The Jewish nation. "Now learn a parable of the fig tree."

D602, 604; R750:3, 127:1*

For ever -- "To the age." (Diaglott) R127:1*

"Cursed to the age"--during the Gospel age, as a nation, they have borne no fruit, but when the Bride is taken out from the Gentiles, they will receive favor. (Acts 15:14,16) R127:3*

Matthew 21:21

If ye have faith -- Absolute confidence in the Word of God. R5446:4

Unto this mountain -- Symbol of difficulties and obstructions in our Christian course. R1967:5; Q774:3

A mountain-moving faith would count for nothing without love as a basis. R2203:3

Be thou removed -- God gave no such command in respect to the literal mountains. R5446:4

Since there is no basis of evidence that the will of God is to remove literal mountains, a genuine faith in his willingness to do it is an impossibility. R1967:5

Cast into the sea -- Swallowed up in anarchy. D596

It shall be done -- If they had faith in the power of God, and received a command from him to move the mountain. R5446:4

See also comments on Matt. 17:20.

Matthew 21:22

Ye shall ask -- God's children are cautioned to ask only such things as he has promised in his word. R2005:4

Ye shall receive -- It must be understood that all petitions would be subjected to divine wisdom. Therefore, the answers, though always sure, might not always be in the way expected. R1866:1

Matthew 21:23

By what authority -- The apostles' authority was questioned by the same class. Should persecution rise again, let all continue to preach as did the early Church, asking no other authority than the command of the Lord. R992:6

"He that hath my Word, let him speak my Word." (Luke 23:28) OV158:4

This authority -- Authority to teach and do good. OV158:3

Matthew 21:24

I also will ask -- Mark the wisdom of his replies when they sought to entrap him in his words. R575:2

Matthew 21:28

First -- Represents the class of Israelites who made no pretense of serving God, and were branded publicans, sinners, and harlots. R4678:3

Matthew 21:29

I will not -- They made no pretense of serving God. R4678:3 Repented, and went -- Through John's message and the teachings of Jesus and the apostles, the publicans, sinners and harlots were the ones ready to receive him. R4678:3, 2755:6

Matthew 21:30

Second -- Represents the outwardly religious and pious, the Scribes and Pharisees. R4678:2, 2755:6
Corresponding to the "elder son" of the parable of the prodigal son. (Luke 15:11-32) R1958:3
Do not really seek the divine service, but rather serve their own sects, personal aims, honor, etc. R4678:2

Matthew 21:31

Go into the kingdom -- Poor, self-righteous Pharisees! To this day, they are jealous and will not "go in." (Matt. 23:13) R1460:4, 1035:5
Before you -- The "elder son" class who had cultivated a spirit of pride and boastfulness. R1958:3
"The common people [who knew not the Law and had not heretofore heard the invitation] heard him gladly" (Mark 12:37); but those first invited were rejected. R342:6

Matthew 21:33

Another parable -- Forming a part of the Lord's discourse on the last day of his public ministry. R1982:2
Apparently our Lord had in mind the parable of the vineyard of Isa. 5:1-7 when he gave this parable. R2904:1, 1982:3, 1896:2, 1795:3
Nearly all parables related to the Kingdom; some directly, others, as this one, indirectly. R5504:3
A certain householder -- Jehovah. R1982:3, 4678:3, 5504:6, 2755:6, 1795:3

Planted a vineyard -- "For the vineyard of the Lord of hosts is the house of Israel." (Isa. 5:7) R1982:3

The Jewish nation, typifying Christendom. R1982:3, 1983:1, 4678:3,5, 5504:3, 1795:3

Since nominal fleshly Israel was a prototype of nominal Christendom, we may look for somewhat similar conditions and dealings in the harvest of this Christian age. R4678:2

In all respects well-appointed and furnished for his purpose. R4678:3

The vineyard represents the Jewish polity, and the vine represents the people, especially such as were in influence and power--the leaders. R2904:1

With a root of promise, a hope, the promise made to Abraham. R5504:3

And hedged it -- With the divine Law, the prophecies, and special supervision and guardianship. R1795:3

With the divine promise that as long as Israel would be faithful and loyal to God, they would be thoroughly protected against their enemies. R5504:3

Digged a winepress -- Including the trough in which the grapes were pressed, and the vat for the reception of the juice pressed from them. R1795:3

The various advantages conferred upon Israel, such as the worship of the sanctuary, the leadings of Jehovah, and the teachings of the prophets, all of which should have caused the vine to yield a large increase. R1795:6

Built a tower -- A watch tower, representing the prophets. R1795:6

The watchmen were the prophets who cried aloud and warned the people from time to time in respect to any and every breaking down of the wall or partition. R5504:3

The Lord declared himself to be Israel's High Tower. R5504:3

To the husbandmen -- The scribes and Pharisees, who sat in Moses' seat. R2756:1, 5504:6, 4678:3, 1982:3

Whose duty it was to care for the vines and fruitage, and render an account. R4678:3

Whose duty it was to instruct and lead in the way of the Lord. R1795:6

Into a far country -- Implies that the arrangement was intended to stand for a long time. R5504:5

To receive title to his Kingdom, and to return to take possession of it. (Matt. 25:14,31) SM693:2; NS855:6

Matthew 21:34

Time of the fruit -- Which the Lord had a right to expect from Israel.

R1796:1, 5504:6

The appointed harvest time in which those addressed were then living. R1795:6

These husbandmen had this stewardship from the time of the exodus down to the time of the coming of Messiah, a period of nearly nineteen centuries.

R1982:3

Sent his servants -- Prophets and teachers. R4678:3, 1982:5, 5504:6, 1796:1

These servants (the prophets) and their messages became tests as respected the love, devotion and loyalty of the vine-dressers, and tests also of the character-development of the people of Israel. R5504:6

To the husbandmen -- The rulers in Israel, because of their influence and power, were held specially responsible for the course of the nation, though this did not relieve the individuals of their responsibility. R1796:1

The fruits of it -- Gratitude, love, obedience, meekness, teachableness. R1795:6, 4678:4

Expecting that, through their inability to keep the Law, they would become stronger in character, more reverential and loyal to God, more desirous for the real Kingdom. R5504:6

"He looked for judgment, but behold oppression; for righteousness, but behold a cry." (Isa. 5:7) R1982:3

Matthew 21:35

Husbandmen took -- Today also we see some high in official positions as representatives of God who use their positions to entrench themselves, hold power over the people, and carry out their own schemes. R4678:6

His servants -- The scribes' and Pharisees' pride prompted the mistreatment of the Owner's special representatives, the prophets. R4678:5, 5505:1

Beat one -- Reasoning that to acknowledge these servants and their reproofs would mean to acknowledge that they themselves were merely vine-dressers and not the owners. R5505:1

Killed another -- Today they behead in the sense of ostracism, and shoot out the arrows of bitter words and slanders. R4678:6

The prophets were stoned, beaten, murdered, sawn asunder, became wanderers, and dwelt in dens and caves. (Heb. 11:36-38) R4678:4

His son -- Our Lord Jesus. R1982:5, 5505:1, 1796:1

His claim to be the Owner's son was backed by numerous signs which the people were disposed to recognize. R5505:2

They will reverence -- Though God knew it would be otherwise, it is so expressed to show the reasonableness of such expectations. R1796:1, 5505:1

Matthew 21:38

The husbandmen -- The chief priests and rulers. R1796:1, 5504:5

Among themselves -- Privately and deceitfully. R1796:1

This is the heir -- This man claims to be the Messiah. R1796:1

Let us kill him -- His death was necessary for the success of their theories and plans, because his theories and teachings were so different from theirs. R5505:3

Seize on his inheritance -- Retain our prestige and power. R1796:1, 1982:6

Lord it over God's heritage. R4678:5

Acting as though they were the real owners and not merely the Owner's servants. R5504:6

Not realizing that this course was the very one which would lead to the destruction of that typical kingdom, that typical vineyard. R5505:3

Matthew 21:39

Cast him out -- Whatever the reasons for thinking the other prophets deceivers, none of these arguments would hold against the Owner's son, whose credentials were manifest in his holiness. R5505:2

Slew him -- Thus Jesus foretold his own violent death. R5505:3

Matthew 21:41

Miserably destroy -- God's judgments came upon the Jewish nation, with the result that it was entirely overthrown in the year 70 AD. R5505:4

His vineyard -- Putting into it only the true vine, inspired with faith and loyalty toward God. "I am the true vine and ye are the branches." (John 15:1,2) R5505:5 Other vineyards have been started. The Bible speaks of two--"the vine of my Father's right-hand planting" (Isa. 60:21), and "the vine of the earth" (Rev. 14:18). R5505:5

Other husbandmen -- Jesus and the apostles, and other teachers of the Gospel Church. R1982:6, 2756:1, 5505:4, 4678:5

Dispossessing the scribes and Pharisees. R4678:5

Matthew 21:42

The stone -- The top stone, Christ Jesus, the head stone of God's building, pattern for the whole, a stone of stumbling and rock of offense. C329, 330; R1982:6, 4678:6, 5505:6

The builders -- The priests and Pharisees. C329

Rejected -- By the Jews. R5505:6

Fleshly Israel failed to accept Christ as their headstone, and hence were rejected from being the special house of God. C329

Is become -- Though rejected by them, that would not hinder its exaltation in God's due time as the chief stone in the glorious spiritual Temple of God. R1982:6

Head of the corner -- The building of God being referred to as a pyramid, of which the top stone is the chief corner stone. (Psa. 118:22; Zech. 4:7) R1982:6; C329

Matthew 21:43

The kingdom of God -- The Kingdom privileges or opportunities, first offered to natural Israel, were transferred to spiritual Israel. R4593:6, 5505:6; B119

The Kingdom dignity pictured by the purple raiment of the rich man. (Luke 16:19) NS819:1

Taken from you -- "Israel hath not obtained that which he seeketh for." (Rom. 11:7) B119

Taken from them as a nation, not as individuals. NS513:5, 606:5, 631:1
Their typical righteousness ceased, and the promise of royalty ceased to be theirs. R2604:3, 1000:4, 284:2; HG386:1

Israel was not ready to be used of God in the blessing of other nations; only a remnant was found worthy. R4593:6

Given to a nation -- Spiritual Israel, whose existence began at Pentecost. R4593:6

"An holy nation, a peculiar people." (1 Pet. 2:9) R2604:3, 2125:5; NS630:5

Separate and distinct from all others, gathered out from Jews and Gentiles, bond and free, from every nation and denomination. R5505:6

Not to some other nation. God proposed to organize a holy nation, composed of the holy Jews and others of a similar class among all nations. NS513:5

A class they esteemed less than the publicans and sinners, the Gentiles, whom they esteemed as "dogs," and from among whom the Bride of Christ is being selected. R1460:4; HG153:5

Represented by "Lazarus" in the Parable of the Rich Man and Lazarus. R1087:1, 2604:3, 1000:4, 802:3*, 284:2; HG386:1

Matthew 21:44

And whosoever -- The Jewish church in the harvest of the Jewish age, and the nominal Christian church in the harvest of the Gospel age. R1983:1

"And he shall be for a stone of stumbling and for a rock of offense to both the houses of Israel." (Isa. 8:14) R1983:1

Shall fall on -- A number of prophetic statements which met a fulfillment in Jesus were so mixed up with others not specially applicable to him, that one might readily stumble over them, not applying them to Messiah, had not the holy Spirit brought them to the attention of the apostles. R435:3

This stone -- Our Lord was a stone of stumbling to natural Israel in their harvest, and similarly to spiritual Israel in the present harvest; especially his presence and his work. R5817:1

Messiah. R4678:6

The doctrine of the ransom. R448:2

Connected with the stone that strikes Nebuchadnezzar's image. (Dan. 2:34) R3359:4*

Shall be broken -- By stumbling over Jesus they injure themselves.
R5505:6, 4678:6

In stumbling over Christ at his first advent, the Jewish nation was indeed broken to pieces. R1982:6

In stumbling, the nominal gospel church will, as natural Israel, be broken. The whole institution will be disintegrated. R1983:4

But on whomsoever -- When the Kingdom is established. R1983:4

It shall fall -- After it has been raised to glory and power. R1983:4

In the sense of condemning them. R5505:6

By stumbling over him, they injure themselves; but if he falls on, or condemns them, it signifies their utter destruction, their cutting off in the second death. R5505:6, 4678:6

Grind him to powder -- When the Church is glorified, upon whomsoever this stone falls, it will utterly destroy. "Every soul that will not hear that prophet shall be destroyed from among the people." (Acts 3:22,23)
R1983:4

In and by the great time of trouble, all opposition shall be thoroughly broken down. NS435:1

Matthew 21:46

Lay hands on him -- Thus fulfilling the final prediction of the parable (verse 39). R1795:3

As the chief priests, the clergy, do today against those whose blindness and lameness the Lord has healed. R1795:5

Matthew 22

Matthew 22:2

Kingdom of heaven -- Not an earthly kingdom, but a heavenly one; whose ruler, the glorified Christ, will not be an earthly king, but a heavenly being of the highest rank. R5510:2

The parables of Jesus about the Kingdom of Heaven seem always to refer to the Church militant--the living, mortal phase of the Church. R58:2*

Like unto -- Actually we are not called to be guests at the marriage supper of the Lamb; but we are called to be the Bride, though in some respects we must be like these guests. C198 A certain king -- Jehovah. R5510:3, 4679:2; C198

Made a marriage -- As Messiah is to be the great King of earth, during the period of his Mediatorial reign, it is the Father's good pleasure that he should have a Bride. R4679:2

For his son -- Our Lord Jesus. R5679:2, 5510:3; C198

Matthew 22:3

Sent forth -- During the three-and-a-half years of our Lord's ministry.

R2301:1

Nowhere is Jesus represented as calling his own Bride. R4679:2

Servants -- John the Baptist and his disciples. R5510:5

To call them -- This parable shows three divisions, or parts, in the one call which gathers the guests. R2300:3

The Jewish people, the first invitation. R2301:1, 4679:2, 343:2

The Jews had been invited to this high honor from the time of the giving of the Law Covenant at Sinai. R4679:2

The call first reached the priests, scribes, Pharisees and the Doctors of the Law who sat in Moses' seat. (Matt. 23:2) R342:6

That were bidden -- The Jews had the first opportunity for joint-heirship with Messiah in his Kingdom. PD59/70

During the Jewish age God had, through the Law and the prophets, informed Israel, his friends, of his intention to have such a feast. NS317:5

They would not come -- To the first call none seem to have responded, save the servants only who bore the message. R2301:2

"He came to his own and his own received him not." (John 1:11) R51:5

Matthew 22:4

Again -- During the three and a half years following the crucifixion.

R2301:1 The second invitation, after their house or nation was left desolate.

R2301:1

Other servants -- Jesus and his disciples. R5510:5

The disciples at first were simply justified men; but on and after Pentecost, they were new creatures, begotten of God. (1 Pet. 1:3) R343:2

Which are bidden -- Previously bidden, who had, during the three-and-a-half years of our Lord's ministry, refused to come. R2301:1

The second call is not to the righteous and prominent among the Jews, but to the morally and mentally poor, blind and naked. R2301:2, 342:6

Prepared my dinner -- The good things pertaining to the spiritual phase of the Kingdom of God. R1957:3

"O taste and see that the Lord is good." (Psa. 34:8) R1957:5

He came in the flesh to a fleshly typical bride; the marriage feast was prepared. R70:1*

This comprehensive statement of readiness could not be made in the first invitation, before our Lord's death. R2301:2

Fatlings are killed -- The ransom price has been paid. Our Lord himself was the bullock slain. R2301:1

Come unto the marriage -- Only by consecration could anyone have the right to be at the banquet, as a member either of the Bride or of the Great Company. R4525:5

Matthew 22:5

One to his farm -- Coming to this feast involves the leaving or sacrificing of earthly aims and pleasures. R343:4

To his merchandise -- The cares of this life: business, politics and religious schemes of their own concern. R4679:3

Matthew 22:6

Entreated them spitefully -- Imprisoning the King's messengers, the apostles, and slew some of them. R2301:3

Slew them -- Jesus was slain; his followers were evilly treated and slain. R5510:6

Matthew 22:7

He was wroth -- Indignant. R3833:6

His armies -- The Roman armies. R4679:4, 5510:6

Those murderers -- The refuse, chaff, of the Jewish nation. R2301:3

Burned up -- Utterly destroyed in the end of the Jewish harvest. R2301:3

Their city -- Government, nation. R2301:3, 4679:4
Jerusalem, in AD 70. R4679:4, 5510:6, 343:3

Matthew 22:9

Go ye -- The servant, the Body of Christ. R343:1

Into the highways -- Among the nations, the Gentiles, outside of Israel; the third invitation. R2301:4, 4679:4, 5510:6, 343:3; PD59/70; NS317:6

As many as -- The parable does not teach that all heard the invitation to the feast. History demonstrates that it was only a comparatively small proportion of humanity. NS317:6

Ye shall find -- Not to intercept all the people in the highways, but merely to urge upon those they met the great privilege of the open door to the wedding feast. R5511:1 Bid to the marriage -- The third division, the call of the Gentiles. R2301:4

"Going in to the wedding" is not the translation of the living into immortality, but coming into a position of expectation which may be lost on account of lacking certain qualifications. R58:5*

Matthew 22:10

Gathered together -- The servants gather, but the king sifts out those unfit for the Kingdom. R58:5* Both bad and good -- Suitable and unsuitable. "Gathered the good into vessels, but cast the bad away." (Matt. 13:48) R2301:4

The call has attracted some naturally very fallen, as well as some better favored by nature. R4679:5

Not all saintly: "Not many wise, mighty, noble: but God hath chosen the foolish, weak, base, despised, things which are not." (1 Cor. 1:26-28)

R5511:1

The wedding -- To the ante-chamber of special preparation, into the light of present truth where we feast already on the prospect before us, in the brilliant light of the clear unfolding of truth now due. C199

Here is food to satisfy every longing, more and better than we could ask or think, a spiritual feast of future good things, joys and pleasures in the presence of the Lord. R343:1

Imagine the provisions for their entertainment, the reception rooms, the brilliant illumination, corresponding to the blessings received now by the living members of the consecrated Church. The light has been turned on since 1874. R2303:3; NS319:1

Furnished with guests -- a definitely fixed number; every place filled.

R5511:1

The number of guests was limited. It was the same number originally intended when the offer was made to the Jews alone, 144,000. NS318:2

This number of guests had been found before the King came in to make the inspection. R2301:5

The filling up of the elect, predetermined number which shall constitute the joint-heirs in the Kingdom by becoming the bride, the Lamb's wife.

R2301:4

To be in the light while the wedding process is due is the privilege of the living generation, and because of this they are called guests. R58:4*

There would be no room for any to enter since 1878 were it not for casting out those not worthy. R2302:6

Matthew 22:11

And when -- In 1878 and since. C204; R2301:5, 41:1*

As the parable relates the history of the living phase of the gospel church, this closing scene must refer to the condition of those who are "alive and remain." (1 Thess. 4:15) R49:2*

We should expect, especially since 1878, various no-ransom theories--"denying the Lord that bought them." (2 Pet. 2:1) R2302:5

The king -- Jehovah himself, through the exhibition of divine justice in some manner. R5511:2

Or, Christ, for at his coming he is invested with kingly authority by the heavenly Father (as indicated in the parables of the Pounds and Talents).

R5511:2

Here our Lord Jesus at his second advent. NS318:3

We believe our Lord assumed the office of King in April, 1878. R2301:5, 343:5

Came in -- The parallel in time to our Lord's typical assumption of the office of King of the Jews. C204

Just before the feast. C204

Now present to gather out of his Kingdom "all things that offend" (Matt. 13:41) and to gather unto himself his jewels, his bride. (Mal. 3:17)

R1937:1

The invisible, but present, King. C202

Just prior to the marriage, pointing to the exact time in which we are living, the harvest of the Gospel age, just preceding the marriage of the Lamb. R954:5*

To see the guests -- This parable shows the character of the readiness required, and also the individual inspection which rejects some and accepts others. C198

An inspection just prior to the feast. R5511:2

The inspection of the guests is the last thing prior to our change. R180:5*

A testing among those who have heard and recognized the harvest message. C197

"Judgment must begin at the house of God." (1 Pet. 4:17) R2301:6

Showing a trial, shaking, inspection and casting out of some after the Bridegroom comes. R40:3*

At his second advent, Christ will himself inspect all those who pose as his faithful servants. R5511:2

After the King comes and inspection is due, we should not be surprised if there is a sifting out instead of a gathering in. R58:6*, 41:5*

As none could enter without a wedding garment, an acknowledgment of the merit of Christ's sacrifice, so none could remain without maintaining their standing of confidence in Christ. R4679:5

This thought of inspection at the end of the Gospel age is also in the parables of the drag net, the wheat and tares, the wise and foolish virgins and the pounds and talents. NS318:3

The Body of Christ is represented as wise virgins, as servants waiting for their Lord's return from the wedding, as guests to a wedding, and as a bride--distinct and separate illustrations which must not be blended. C197

He saw -- God, through the exhibition of divine justice in some manner; or Christ, now invested with kingly authority by the heavenly Father. R5511:2

There -- We need not look for him amongst those who are in the outer darkness and who have not seen the inner light of the feast. NS319:1

A man -- A class, rejecting the wedding garment. R5511:3, 4525:3; C204
A small class. R343:6

A very limited class, all of whom once appreciated the ransom and, under its favor, entered into the special light of the harvest time. C204

A class which, because of headiness and lax consecration, are led eventually to deny the ransom--the necessity, value or merit of the atoning sacrifice of Calvary--and appear at the feast in the filthy rags of self-righteousness.

Which had not -- Repudiated his contract to be dead with Christ, to drink of his cup, to go to him without the camp, bearing his reproach.

Repudiation of the sacrificial work of Christ. R4548:4

Repudiation of the nuptial contract, to suffer with him. Q734:3

Rejected Jesus as Savior, Redeemer, Atoner for their sins. R5511:4

God takes note of anyone professing loyalty, yet disregarding the merit of Christ's death. R5511:2

Such seem to lose sight of their personal unworthiness, as well as of the Lord's unblemished perfection. C200

All who attend this wedding must have on the wedding garment, must be covered with the merit of Christ's righteousness. R5511:1

For anyone to appear at the wedding without the robe would imply that he had taken it off; for no one was admitted without the robe. R5511:2

Indicating that, though the robe was given him, he preferred his own clothing and considered it better than that provided. R954:4*

All Christians who cast away their confidence in the sacrifice of Christ and accept Evolution theories and Higher Criticism take off the wedding garment. R4679:5

Professed ministers of Christ, as well as agnostics, declare that, while they accept Jesus as a teacher, they totally reject the covering of his robe of merit. NS318:5

This rejection of Christ's ransom-sacrifice first made its appearance amongst those in the light of present truth in the summer of 1878. C202

Contrary to the rules of such a feast. NS318:4

A shameful impropriety, significant of pride and of disrespect for his entertainer. C198

A wedding garment -- The imputed righteousness of Christ, justification.

It was the Jewish custom to provide white linen robes for all the guests.

C198; R4525:3, 4998:4, 5197:6, 2301:6; Q490:2, 507:6; NS318:4

At a Jewish wedding, we cannot imagine the offering of robes to passers-by who merely have knowledge that a wedding is in prospect. Q734:1

Clean and white, representing the absolute purity and spotlessness of our Lord's holiness; each is to "keep his garments unspotted from the world." (Jas. 1:27) R2160:2

Covering his own garments. Thus all at the wedding were on an equal footing as respects dignity because they were the guests of the host.

R5511:2, 2301:6, 343:3; NS121:4, 318:4

Covers all the blemishes of the most imperfect as well as those of the least imperfect. R4679:5

The robe does not cover sins of the new mind. If the new mind were disloyal to God, it would cease to be a new mind. R4842:4

New creatures in Christ Jesus are all on a common footing because of Christ's robe. There is no difference respecting previous conditions, bond or free, male or female. (Gal. 3:28) R2301:6

The robe of justification which becomes ours at the time of consecration. Given, not to the old creature, but to the new, to cover the blemishes of its imperfect body. R4842:1, 5855:3, 4525:5, 5902:3; Q507:6

Represents more than justification--consecration, sanctification, to suffer with Christ, to drink of his cup, to be baptized into his death. R4525:5

An acknowledgment of the merit of Christ's sacrifice. R4679:5

To make one suitable, no matter how mean, degraded, ignoble by nature. R5511:1

Given only to those who accepted the invitation and entered in through the door. R4525:4

The acceptance and putting on of the garment symbolized consecration and its acceptance. R4525:5

Represents a faith relationship with God through Christ's merit. PD59/70

Signifies our entrance into the family of God, as members of the Church. R5960:4

Also beautifully pictured as the bridal robe. (Psa. 45:13,14) R5197:6

"Fine linen, clean and white" with which the Bride is clothed. (Rev. 19:8)

It is not limited to theology, but must include character. R50:2*

Do not let anyone think that theology is a garment; we must be clothed with righteousness. R50:4*, 41:5*

Each may embroider his own with good works. C199

Matthew 22:12

Friend -- Comrade. C202

How camest thou in -- A gentle but forcible reminder that the wearing of the robe was the very condition of admission to the favors enjoyed, and that he had been provided one gratis. C202

Wedding garment -- Christ's merit, the covering he provides for his own. Q732:2

Inferring that he had taken it off. Q732:2

Symbolizing a repudiation of the sacrificial work of Christ, or a repudiation of our nuptial contract, to suffer with him. Q734:2

He was speechless -- For he did not come in without it. C203; R5511:4, 2302:1; Q732:2

No one ever came to a knowledge of Christ's presence and other deep things now due who did not have on the robe at the time. C203, 202

He could make no defence, he was guilty. NS318:5

Matthew 22:13

Said to the king -- Let none be in haste to judge his brethren; the Lord is judge, and he will decide who is or is not possessed of the wedding garment. R58:6*

Bind him -- By the presentation of the truth in contradistinction to the error, the influence of the truth being the restraining influence circumventing the error--a duty of all who see the truth. R2302:4
Restrain his influence by thoroughly answering his arguments. R1453:5
Making an example of such before the company of the consecrated. C203
By putting others on their guard, thus restraining their influence on the Church. R954:6*

Restrain him from making further progress toward the feast. C201

Hand and foot -- Take away all his influence. C203

It would not be optional; the Lord would force such a one out of the light. Q199:4

Implies that such may desire to resist and have a preference for the light, but that none will be permitted to enjoy it except those appreciating the robe of Christ's righteousness and wearing it. NS319:2

Take him away -- He cannot occupy any place in the Kingdom, whatever other blessings he may or may not get at the hands of the great King to whose grace he does despite. NS318:6

Since some would be cast out after the full number was chosen, and since the elect number must be complete, there must be a way of bringing in others to replace those cast out. R2676:5

For each one of those cast out of the light and the privilege of the feast, there is an opening, an opportunity, for another to take his place and crown. R2302:6

These stand condemned of "counting the blood of the covenant wherewith they were sanctified" and accepted as a common or ordinary thing. (Heb. 10:29) C201

Cast him -- Reject such a one from any fellowship which would mark him or her as a brother or sister in Christ. R1453:5, 954:5*

As manifestly unfit to be a member of the Bride of Christ. R5511:4; PD59/70

Into outer darkness -- From which he originally came in. R1698:4

Out of the light of present truth entirely, to share in the anguish and vexation of the great time of trouble. C201, 203; PD59/70; Q732:2

Expelled from the privileges enjoyed and the light and blessings afforded to this favored class, into the outer darkness of the world, and of nominal Christianity; in confusion, in bewilderment. R4679:5, 5511:5, 5949:1, 2302:4; Q199:4, 732:2; NS319:1

Such must first have been in the light of harvest truth, and consequently have a greater responsibility and penalty than those who never enjoyed such favor. C203

Taking away the knowledge and joys represented by the wedding-chamber light. R5511:5

Prefigures the fate of all who reject the efficacy of the sacrifice of Christ. PD59/70

When their lamps went out, the foolish virgins were in this darkness. R88:5

Even that which they have is taken from them. (Matt. 25:28) R41:5*

The darkness of human reasoning, undirected by God's Word and unsquared by his revealed plan of ransom and restitution. C203

We are not to waste sympathy on those who depart. When the Lord has put any out of the light, we cannot hope to bring them back. R5949:1, 1860:6

Darkness: not the interior of a blazing hell. R2302:4; Q199:4, 732:2

Not eternal torment or hell-fire; outer darkness and inner fire would be opposite thoughts. R2302:4, 5511:4; Q199:4

There shall be -- Shortly. R2302:4

Weeping -- They thought they were ready for the marriage and were bitterly disappointed. R49:3*

By and by they will realize with chagrin their loss of the Kingdom. PD59/70

Gnashing of teeth -- Great disappointment, sorrow, pain, trouble and anguish throughout Christendom. R3771:4, 5511:5; CR253:3; PD59/70; Q732:2

Signifying chagrin, disappointment, savage animosity; as in the case of Stephen, "They gnashed on him with their teeth." (Acts 7:54) R4329:1; PD59/70; Q732:2; NS317:3

Representing the great time of trouble. R4679:5, 2302:5; Q732:2; NS319:3

The expression "weeping and gnashing of teeth" occurs altogether seven times in the New Testament. NS317:2

See comments on Matt. 13:42.

Matthew 22:14

Many are called -- Not all have been called. R2302:5

With the heavenly calling, after being justified. R4078:2; CR131:6

To the high calling of joint-heirship with the Redeemer. CR131:6

The Jewish nation was called, or invited, to the wedding and failed, except the few "Israelites indeed." R5511:5, 5435:3, 2302:5

But not so many respond to the call. NS654:5

But only those who have the ear to hear. NS331:4

Merely many in proportion to the few who will constitute the elect; not many as respects the whole number of our race; but, on the contrary, few.

HG746:1; NS373:6

The call has reached millions during the last 18 centuries, but comparatively few have cared to accept the invitation. R2302:5

They may rejoice with the few but, refraining from a full consecration of themselves, they can not be of them. NS294:3

But few -- Few prove worthy of the favor to which they have been called. C214

Because few of the justified ones make the necessary consecration. R4078:2

Because only the few will have the characteristics demanded by the Lord's call and selection. NS294:3

Thus all of the called ones should be deeply interested in ascertaining the conditions which determine their acceptance with the Lord as his chosen. NS372:1

Unlike the Millennial feast, this dinner is not for all people, but for the few selected from among the many invited in the present age. R342:3

Because nothing connected with the call is compulsory. R4138:6
Are chosen -- Begotten of the holy Spirit and adopted as spirit-begotten sons of God. R4078:3

We have been invited, we have accepted, our names have been enrolled and we have been given the white garment that we may enter in. CR301:2

Of the few elect, there will still be a class not properly appreciative which will be cast away. R5511:5

The "called" who fulfill their consecration become the "chosen." R1151:5*

Of those who accept, the Lord makes the choice. He rejects all who do not accept the invitation and all its privileges as a grace, a favor. R2302:6

Elected is from the same Greek word. R3586:3

This does not mean that all the remainder will be eternally tortured. R5511:5

Matthew 22:15

The Pharisees -- Who secretly taught, in a general way, that the Jews, as the people of God, ought never to pay taxes to other rulers. R3852:6
Worldly-wise and spirit-blind. R5512:3

Who opposed Jesus because he did not acknowledge them. They did not like him to criticize them for the hypocrisy of their claims to be perfect, or for their lack of sympathy with the poor. R4687:1; Q273:3

The triumphal entry awakened fear in the minds of the Pharisees. R4687:1

Might entangle him -- Either for counselling sedition for declaring taxes illegal or, if he declared tribute lawful, alienating the sympathy of the multitudes. R4687:1, 5512:3, 3461:1; Q273:6

They strove to turn away the sympathy of the people from the Great Teacher by catching him in his words. R4687:1, 5512:3; Q274:1

With the Herodians -- Ishmaelites, not Jews at all. R2756:2

Who took sides with Herod and stood firmly and publicly for the suzerainty of the Roman Empire. R3853:1

Thou art true -- They artfully endeavored to ensnare the Master by complimenting him. R4687:2

All of the complimentary remarks stood to his credit in the minds of the common people. Q274:1

Matthew 22:17

Tell us -- The most contrary theorists are ready to cooperate with each other in opposition to the truth. R2756:2

Is it lawful -- According to the Law of Moses. R3853:2

Tribute -- The Jews held the idea that they, as God's Kingdom, must not pay tithes to any earthly government. R4687:1

Why tempt ye -- Why do you try to entrap me? R3853:2

Me -- It was utter folly for imperfect men to seek to entrap the perfect one. R104:2

Ye hypocrites -- Why do you veil your base designs under guise of speaking for the truth? R4687:2; Q274:1

Matthew 22:19

Tribute money -- Literally, the census coin in which the tax was to be paid. R4687:2; Q274:1

A denarius, the usual wage for the day laborer, corresponding in value to about seventeen of our cents. Q274:1; R4687:2

Matthew 22:21

Unto Caesar -- Jesus and the apostles taught the Church to obey laws and to respect those in authority because of their office, even if they are not personally worthy of esteem. A266

In all matters that do not conflict with our own personal liberties and conscience we are to recognize the official position of those who are governing the world. R3778:2

But when his laws conflict with the divine requirements, Christians are left no alternative. R5929:2

The Master's followers were instructed not to be seditious, but thankful, holy, happy and subject to the powers that be, recognizing them as ordained of God and not merely of men. R5512:6

In Jesus' case, all earthly authority was exercised by his personal inferiors, even though they were his legal superiors; yet he was loyal and faithful to them. R4809:2, 1114:4

Showing the falsity of the charge before Pilate that he prohibited the payment of tribute. (Luke 23:2) R1810:1

Which are Caesar's -- "Tribute to whom tribute is due." (Rom. 13:7) A266

The affairs of the world may be safely left with the world. R3853:3

If Rome ruled, Rome needed to be supported; and the method of support was, properly enough, through taxation. R5513:1

We must not render unto Caesar the things of God. R5513:4

That are God's -- Every talent and power we possess ought, by right, to be used in the service of our Creator and for his praise. R5513:1

A lesson to the Lord's people to keep religious affairs separate and distinct from worldly politics. R2756:3

If we have changed our allegiance from this world to heaven, we are aliens and not citizens of this country, and should claim and use only such favors as are accorded to aliens. We should not vote or hold public office. R424:3

Matthew 22:22

They marvelled -- Mark the wisdom of Jesus' replies when they sought to entrap him in his words. R575:2

Matthew 22:23

Sadducees -- Agnostics, practically unbelievers, of the wealthier, more respectable class. R4687:3, 4986:3, 3854:1, 5079:5; Q273:3, 594:3

Who opposed Jesus because, from their standpoint of unbelief, he was a fraud and was gaining influence with the people, which they feared would disturb the peace with the Roman Empire. R4687:1; Q273:4

The triumphal entry produced fear in the Sadducees. They worried that the common people should become so aroused as to involve their nation in some strife with the empire. R4687:1

Resurrection -- Here without the Greek article, showing no emphasis, indicating no peculiarity. R1512:1

And asked him -- One of their stock questions. R4687:3; Q594:3

Matthew 22:28

In the resurrection -- Not in heaven or purgatory or eternal torture.

Neither Jesus nor the Jews held any such teaching. R5079:5, 4687:3

Probably referring to the anastasis of the future in contrast and distinction from any temporary awakening of the present time. R3461:4

With the Greek article, showing emphasis and indicating that the first, or special resurrection, is surely meant. R1512:2, 734:5, 92:6

The Greek article occurs before the word resurrection, but this would be no positive proof that a special resurrection was meant unless two resurrections were referred to in contrast. R3461:3

Matthew 22:29

Not knowing -- You do not know the Scripture teaching concerning such questions. R4687:4, 5079:6; Q588:3, 594:4

The power of God -- Which will straighten out all such difficulties.

R4687:4, 5079:6; Q588:3, 594:4

As we understand the Scriptures more fully, and appreciate the power of God, we rejoice. CR50:2

Matthew 22:30

In the resurrection -- Greek, anastasis, raising up, restoring; being lifted fully and completely out of death. R1510:4; F712, 713

A gradual process. R5079:6; Q594:4

The raising up proceeds from the time of the awakening of the individual until he shall have attained to the full perfection of manhood--that will constitute his resurrection. R3461:4

Some will be awakened who will not be accounted worthy to attain a full lifting up to perfection, a resurrection. R3461:5

The Lord does not say what will be the intermediate conditions during the Millennium; leaving us to infer that mankind will be awakened with the same sexual distinctions as at present. R3461:5

Neither marry -- The propagation of the human race is intended to proceed only until the earth shall be filled. SM37:3; Q852:T

Adam combined masculine and feminine qualities. When Eve was formed for the purposes of propagation the feminine qualities were incorporated in her personality. Members of both sexes will again become as Adam was before Eve was formed. Q852:T; NS297:4

True, the glorified Church will not marry, but there is no reference here to the Church class. R3461:3

For man will no longer be alone, as he was at first, to need a companion. R3461:6

Are as the angels -- Sexless, restored to the condition represented in Adam before Eve was separated from him. T100, 101

Sex conditions will gradually pass away. During the first 1000 years after the fall, births were less frequent than now; during the Millennium, sex functions will gradually diminish, reaching a full stop toward the close of that age. R3461:6; NS297:4

We believe a similar communication will be established between perfect men and the heavenly courts that was in vogue before the first disobedience and the penalty came in. R3462:5

In their proper habitation, angels do not possess powers of reproduction.

As they materialized as human beings, they exercised the powers of mankind, thus bringing children into the world of the fleshly nature. Q744:3

As the angels do not die, neither will the perfected human beings die. R3461:6

Matthew 22:31

Of the dead -- Jesus defended the doctrine of the resurrection. PD32/44; CR374:2

It is the dead who need a resurrection. The Lord did not say, "As touching the resurrection of the living." R3854:5

Matthew 22:32

I am the God -- This surely meant that Abraham, Isaac and Jacob were to be resurrected. PD32/44

Not the God of the dead -- He would not thus refer to beings whom he had forever blotted out. E352

God would not declare himself to be the God of those who are out of existence. NS282:1

But -- He is the God. R2198:1

Of the living -- All "live unto God" (Gal. 2:19) in the sense that in Christ he has provided for the reawakening of all. PD32/44; E353

From his standpoint, they only sleep. E353

Implying the right, authority and power to give life; and, secondly, that the dead are so completely dead as to need another Father to regenerate them. R810:2

Matthew 22:33

They were astonished -- The supposedly unanswerable question of the Sadducees fell flat, and their ignorance was exposed. Q594:4

Matthew 22:36

In the law -- God has only one law for his intelligent creatures--angels, men or new creatures. It is based on justice, and there is no higher law, and there could be none. R5072:2

According to the spirit, you are under the law, and you are obliged to live up to everything in the spirit that the Jew was commanded to do in the flesh. Q449:3

Matthew 22:37

Thou shalt love -- This is God's law, and it will never be put to an end. Q431:5

No one will ever be acceptable to the Father except they come up to the standard of that law. Q438:6

The spirit of God's law is love. R614:6

Every one who will ever get eternal life on any plane will have to come to the mark of perfect love. Q449:3; A136

Love for the Lord would prompt one to be obedient to his just commands, and love for the neighbor would induce one to do good unto all men as opportunities were presented. Q799:T

Failure to keep this law is the direct cause of the time of trouble. A309

"Love is the fulfilling of the law." (Rom. 13:10) A246, 136; Q799:T

The Lord -- Jehovah. E41

It is not in conflict with this that we should also love our Lord Jesus, for the Apostle declares, "Every one that loveth him that begat loveth him that is begotten of him." (1 John 5:1) R4052:2

With all thy heart -- Such love does not wait for commands, but appeals for service. F124

Obedience to the Siniatic Law enabled Christ to fulfill the Law Covenant and to become heir of the Abrahamic Covenant at the same time that he redeemed Adam and his race. F356, 357

Love to God would lead us to all those things which are inculcated in his Word. R5359:6

To love God thus is to subject every other thing and interest to his pleasure. R543:2

The sum of our hearts, the center of our affections. CR6:1

Giving all our heart to God does not mean that we shall not love our families and our brethren. CR6:1

After confessing that the divine Law is holy, just and good, we find that we are unable to obey it to the full. R4820:6

If your heart is not all of that, you will not be of the Little Flock or Great Company. All must come up to this standard in their hearts, or they will all die the second death. Q449:3

With all thy soul -- Being. R205:2, 276:3

None but a perfect man could fully live up to this requirement. SM69:2

Any division of the heart or mind or soul violates this commandment. R5286:3

The Lord thus epitomized the Ten Commandments, which are, in themselves, a brief epitome of the whole Law. A45

Ultimately, obedience to this law will be required of all who shall have life on any plane. A136

Matthew 22:38

The first and great -- The chief, primary. R4687:4; E41

Dividing the Ten Commandments into two parts, this summarizes the first part, relating to duty and obligations toward God. R5699:3, 4687:4

Matthew 22:39

The second -- Dividing the Ten Commandments into two parts, this summarizes the duty and obligation to fellowmen, toward the neighbor. R5699:3, 5359:6, 4687:4

Like unto it -- Grows out of it. R1117:5*

In sympathy with it, in harmony with the same principle. Q704:1

Love thy neighbor -- If we appreciate the concept of a true neighbor which our Lord gave, then let us observe the Golden Rule. R5699:6

To our brethren we are not merely to observe the Golden Rule, but be ready to do toward these as Jesus did, to lay down life for them. R5700:4

The Golden Rule would measure the demands of justice; but the law of God demands not only justice, but also love -- love supreme to God and love to our fellow-men. R5643:6

Fulfill all your obligations toward him. R5359:6

We are to express this love by being thoughtful and considerate of our neighbor's welfare and interests, and helpful as far as in our power, other obligations being considered. R5700:1 To love a neighbor would thus insure that you would neither kill him, nor steal from him, nor covet his goods. R543:2

Jesus declared that in the Samaritan of the parable (Luke 10:29-35), they had an example of one who was a real neighbor. R5699:6

As thyself -- It does not say, Better than thyself. Christ's course of self-sacrifice in our behalf was beyond this requirement. R3804:6, 3805:1 Signifies justice. Those who really love that principle are not easily stumbled. Q529:T

We have agreed to do more, to lay down our lives for the brethren. R5072:3; Q449:4

This is more important than the giving of tithes. R5094:4

Relating to mankind, you must treat him as you would want him to treat you. Q449:4

Be kind, generous, unselfish, fair-dealing. R5947:3

It would not be reasonable to demand that one do more for another than for himself. To do so may be invited, but never commanded. This is the difference between justice and love. R5072:2

Our love for many of our neighbors must necessarily be along the lines of their characters, hopes and plans. R3804:6

Matthew 22:40

Two commandments -- The first tablet of the Law contained the laws relating to man's obligations to his Creator; the other set forth the duties of man toward his fellow-men. Q757:T, 133:11, 704:1

Each to love other as much as self, and to love God even more. R1462:5 Surely none but a perfect man could fully live up to these requirements. SM69:3

Christians are not under the law of the Ten Commandments, but every Christian, and angels too, are under these two commandments. Q134:3

But the Church has been given a third commandment. Jesus said: "A new commandment I give unto you that ye love one another as I have loved you." (John 13:34) Q134:4

All the law -- God has only one law for his intelligent creatures, based on justice. R5072:2

The very essence of truth. E41; Q757:T

The Law given at Sinai has served as the basis in the formulating of all laws since; and this succinct statement is still the standard of all law amongst the wisest and best peoples of earth. SM380:T

That law is the Father's law. It existed before Jesus came. It still exists. It will always be in existence. Jesus did not put it to an end and never will put it to an end. Q431:5

The only contingency for man's continued dominion of earth is that man's rulership must be always exercised in harmony with the Supreme ruler of the Universe and this one law, love. A246

It is because the depraved, carnal mind is opposed to this law of God and not subject to it that, as a natural consequence, the trouble will come, as reaping after sowing. A309

"Love is the fulfilling of the law" (Rom. 13:10). Love was the only law given in Eden, love supreme to God, and then love to each other, measured only by the love of self. R1462:5

And the prophets -- The faithful servants and teachers of the Law. Q757:T

Matthew 22:42

Son of David -- In the days of his flesh he was the Son of David, but in his glorification he is David's Lord. Q365:5; R809:6

He was not the Son of David before he left the higher nature and became a man--a branch out of the roots of Jesse. (Isa. 11:11) R809:6

He became David's offspring in Bethlehem; he became David's Lord by virtue of his death. R810:1

The first Adam was the original "root"; hence our Lord Jesus in the flesh, son of Mary, son of David, son of Abraham, was in the same sense a shoot or branch out of Adam. E139

The name David signifies "beloved," and Jesus himself was proclaimed as the real David--"This is my beloved Son in whom I am well pleased." (Matt. 3:17) R2551:4

Relates, not to his pre-human existence, but to his relationship to the human family, his genealogy being traceable to David both through Mary and through Joseph. (Luke 3:31; Matt. 1:6,16) E129

Matthew 22:43

David in spirit -- By inspiration, prophetically. E129, 136; Q365:4; R4687:5, 808:3

Lord -- David will receive from him, not only resurrection, but also the blessings of participation in the Messianic Kingdom. Q365:5

"I am the root of David" (Rev. 22:16); that is, the father, or progenitor of David. R809:5; E136

Not by reason of anything before he was made flesh, but by reason of the great work which he accomplished as the Mediator of the Atonement. E134

The Logos might properly have been styled a Lord, a high one in authority; but there was a particular and different sense in which our Lord Jesus became a Lord or Master by virtue of his death and resurrection. E134, 135

Jesus becomes the root, Lord, life-giver, by virtue of his death and resurrection; hence, in this sense, he was not David's root or Lord before his death. R809:6; E135

By virtue of his having bought the race he has, in the eyes of justice, become its owner, its master, Lord of all. E135

"To this end Christ both died and revived, that he might be Lord, both of the dead and living." (Rom. 14:9) E134; R810:1

Matthew 22:44

The Lord -- Jehovah. E129; R808:6, 296:5

Said unto my Lord -- Greek, adon, master, ruler, the resurrected Christ. E49, 129; R296:5

"The affirmation of Jehovah to my Lord." (Psa. 110:1, Young's Translation) R296:5

The reference is not to the sacrificing one, but to the victor Jesus. E136

On my right hand -- In the position of favor and power. A92; R808:1, 2935:2, 256:1

He hath given him authority above every other, next to the Father. R256:1

Till -- He will be on the right hand when coming, and remain on the right hand during the Millennial age. R256:1

Jehovah would not and could not justly give him the dominion and subdue it under him until it had been released from the curse, bought with a price.

R810:5

Matthew 22:45

Then call him Lord -- Greek, adon, master. E129

Our Lord Jesus could be both the Root and Offspring of David, both David's Son and David's Father, David's Lord. E144, 145

How is he his son? -- The father of Messiah in the flesh will become the son of the Messiah of glory. R4687:5; Q365:5

Matthew 23

Matthew 23:2

The scribes -- Writers. E351

Sit in Moses' seat -- The Pharisees were the principal sect of the Jews, and our Lord declares them the successors and representatives of the Mosaic Law. E351

Our Lord recognized the scribes and Pharisees as the legitimate instructors of the people, even though he often upbraided them as hypocrites who deceived the people. C152

Until the casting off of the Jewish house in AD 33; antitypically, the synods, conferences, etc., did likewise until 1878 when Babylon was cast off. C152

God had committed to them special responsibilities, blessings, privileges and knowledge. R5749:3 As representatives of God and the Law. R2969:2 As the husbandmen, or caretakers, of the Lord's vineyard, Israel. R5504:6, 4678:3

Thus they were acquainted with the Law and the Prophets. R342:5 Representing "orthodoxy" so-called. R559:3

Moses still had his seat as Mediator of the Law Covenant, and he was represented by those who came afterwards. Q498:3

To settle disputes, etc., as The Christ will do during the Millennial age. B182

Ecclesiastical powers of today are professedly sitting in the seat of Christ. R5750:1

Matthew 23:3

Observe and do -- Yet Christ came "preaching the Gospel." Hence it is not surprising if the Gospel age and the age of restitution also lap a little. HG55:5

The Jews properly follow the guidance of their leaders in setting the date of the Passover, instead of each trying to fix the date according to his personal knowledge. R4127:6 Say, and do not -- They were unjust in their dealings with the people. R5749:3

So filled with a misconception of their proper attitude toward God that they merely banded themselves together to enjoy the divine promises and gave up the remainder of their nation as publicans and sinners. R3332:6 If any man does not submit his own heart to the leading and teaching of the Lord, he has no authority from him to teach others to do so. R1922:1

For they bind -- The Roman Catholic clergy use such cords as the confessional, holy candles, holy water, holy burial grounds. R1137:3

Heavy burdens -- Exaggerating the Law, making it burdensome. Q725:7 The scribes and Pharisees had added to the Law a mass of forms and ceremonies so complex and bewildering that those who attempted a strict observance of them found them extremely burdensome--a yoke of bondage. R1540:2

Matthew 23:5

Do for to be seen -- As far as outward conditions of morality were concerned, they were shining examples of righteousness. Q756:4

Broad their phylacteries -- Put on a brassy front. R2716:3

Matthew 23:7

Rabbi, Rabbi -- Gradually coming to regard their position as an office rather than a service, and seeking each other's companionship in councils as clergymen. R1135:1

Roman Catholics are expected to address their clergy, "Your Reverence," and treat them as superiors in every respect, as holy men, whom to offend might jeopardize eternity. R1136:6

When Protestant denominations began, they were so full of the spirit of Christ they claimed no high-sounding titles, but were merely John Knox, Martin Luther, etc. R321:6, 65:2

A prominent characteristic of the Beast, copied by the Image, is the honoring of the special class, the clergy, with special titles and honors. R321:6, 65:2

Be not ye -- Those in position as elders in the Church. R1895:1

We have no evidence that the early Church ever regarded the apostles as lords in the Church, or that the apostles ever assumed such authority and dignity. R1523:5; F230

Called Rabbi -- Doctor, Reverend, etc. These hinder some even of God's true servants from faithfulness. D61; F203; R1487:4

A great man or master. R1895:1

In the voluntary association of the consecrated, there is no imperial authority, and no lording over God's heritage should be permitted. R1574:2

It was flattery of the leaders of the Reformation that stayed the progress of that good work and caused many of them of understanding to fall. (Dan. 11:34,35) R1895:2

One is your master -- Teacher, Schoolmaster, Director, Supervisor, Caretaker, Instructor. R4380:5

One is your truly reverend Lord and Instructor, even Christ. R1487:4

We should not follow man, nor man-made creeds or systems. Individual study of the Bible seems indispensable, but we must not ignore the aids to Bible study which God has providentially furnished. Q844:2,3

All ye are brethren -- Without official titles or peculiar garb; not lords of God's heritage. F211; R5765:3; OV126:1, 160:5

Comrades, fellows, associates; not clergy and laity. CR316:2; OV126:1; R5765:3

Members in particular of the Body of Christ. SM15:T

The apostles were more important brethren than we are; still we are brethren. R5670:4

Of like passions and all subject to infirmities. R1895:2

Each royal priest is the peer of each other in authority and dignity of priesthood, though in talent and intelligence, and therefore in fitness, they are not all equals R1137:4

A clerical class is entirely ignored as respects any superiority. NS63:5, 615:3

The one who serves belongs to no higher class than his brethren who chose him to thus minister or serve. R1137:3

In proportion as the Lord's spirit of love pervades our hearts, it overrides and obliterates all division of country, race, sex, and language. R4105:2

Awake to the principles of the Reformation, to a recognition of the right of individual judgment upon religious questions. R1136:4

All ye are ministers, servants of Christ; all ye are preachers, declarers of the good tidings; all ye are priests, not of human ordination, but by divine acceptance as members of the body of our Great High Priest. R1101:1

All the brethren were to exhort one another, all were to seek ability to prophesy or teach publicly, and all were surely to be living epistles of God. R984:4

One body, one spirit, one hope, one Lord, one faith, one baptism, one God and Father of all. (Eph. 4:1-6) R1278:1-6

Call no man your father -- Papacy violates this command directly. D160 Spoken to the congregation of his people. R1895:2

We have already done so, to some extent, in refusing to own as our masters the various heads of the great nominal church. R1487:5

The foundation of the great Apostasy, Papacy, was laid in the separation of a class, called the clergy, from the believers in general, the laity.

R1134:6 The object of Rome in establishing a clerical class, as separate from what she terms the laity, was to gain and hold full control of the people. R1136:5, 359:6*

Those who applied this to protest the establishment of Papacy were commended, in the Pergamos period of the Church, under the symbol of "Antipas, my faithful martyr" (Rev. 2:13). In the Greek, anti means against and Papas signifies father. R5993:2, 491:3*

One is your Father -- A very emphatic statement of our dear and close relationship to God. R297:2

It is far from honoring the Master, as many appear to think they do, when they contradict his direct teaching, affirming that the Father and Son are one and the same being, equal in all respects. R369:6

Matthew 23:10

Called masters -- Neither give nor receive titles of any kind. R1895:1
No marks or badges of distinction or flattering homage of any kind may be tolerated in the body of Christ. R1895:2
Papacy exalts a man-ordained priestly class to rulership in the church, in opposition to this teaching. D160
One is your Master -- No matter what may be the relative importance of some, only the one Lord and Head is to be recognized. F229

Matthew 23:11

He that is greatest -- The character and faithfulness of the servant should mark the degree of honor and esteem that should be rendered to any in the ecclesia of the new creation. F253
Rank and honor in the Kingdom will be proportionate to humility and service here. R309:4*
Be your servant -- Greek, diakonos, deacon, minister. F253
Even the apostles and prophets who were elders in the Church were all deacons, or servants. F252
Unpretentious, like Jesus and the apostles, they were intent on serving God and therefore became the servants of the Church. R321:6
The extent to which we enter into our future mission is measurable by our present efforts to prosecute the work to the extent of our present ability. R875:5*

Matthew 23:12

Shall exalt himself -- Pride is selfishness gone to seed. R1486:3
To aspire to advancement for self-glory or self-gratification, to desire personal preferment above others, is contrary to the spirit of God's plan, which is love. R875:4*
It was to ambition that Satan tempted Eve, saying, "God doth know that in the day that ye eat thereof, your eyes shall be opened and ye shall be as gods." (Gen. 3:5) R875:1*
In the days of Constantine, the church sought influence with the civil power, and that successfully, though to her injury and apostasy. R1093:4
Shall be abased -- As illustrated by Satan. A189; R1686:3, 875:1*
Inflated values must at some time come down to a solid basis. R1486:6
What degradation can await such self-exaltation, as is shown in the utterances of Papacy. B313
He assures us that he who exalts himself shall be brought low in due time. Our attention is called to the great Adversary. R2585:5
Not only a warning to the individual seeking preferment in the church, but also an instruction to the Church to accept as its servants only such as he here describes. R875:4*

The warnings go forth, and convictions of duty and privilege fasten upon many minds; but, alas! all is of no avail; they go unheeded. D60; HG715:3
Here, as in other instances, the Lord shows us that his ways are not man's ways, but higher, as the heavens are higher than the earth. R2585:5
Humble himself -- As Christ did to become man's Redeemer. E425 Humility is the essential of all who would be of the Lord's family. R5704:4
By facing popular opposition and enduring popular reproach. R1487:2
Humility is the underlying principle of the divine government. R3537:2
Jesus was a perfect illustration: humbling himself, first, to become a man; and then, when a man, becoming obedient unto death, even the death of a cross. R875:1*

We have no intimation that either Jesus or any of the angels that kept their first estate ever aspired to anything beyond the sphere to which divine wisdom had appointed them. R875:1*

The man who underrates his worth comes much nearer to the truth than the man who overrates. R1487:1

Especially important for a person who has naturally little of reverence for God and holy things and who is naturally coarser and more self-centered and self-satisfied. R3987:4

Shall be exalted -- He that humbleth himself shall be exalted, in due time, as illustrated by Jesus, our dear Redeemer. R2585:5, 1686:3, 875:1*
But not necessarily to the highest position. A189

The Church should follow this general rule in selecting elders. F296
It would be the very height of presumption on the part of any human being to aspire to the divine nature if he were not invited to that position by God himself. R875:2*

The exaltation of any individual or class is always for the purpose of blessing others who are not exalted. R1487:4, 422:4
"Humble yourself therefore under the mighty hand of God, that he may exalt you in due time." (1 Pet. 5:6) R3079:2

The work of redemption was given to Jesus as a mark of special confidence and because of the honors which, according to divine law, must attach to so great obedience, humility and self-sacrifice. E424

Matthew 23:13

Woe unto you -- True love was the cause of the anger--love for truth, love for God and love for the people who were being deceived by the error. R439:2

Jesus was full of the love of God, but he spoke most emphatically against evil-doers. How differently the Lord's rebukes affected his loving disciples and the proud Pharisees. R664:1*, 416:1*

It is as much the duty of the Body of Christ now to point out present hindrances to growth--the teachings, theories and influences of the nominal church--as it was for Jesus to do so. R559:6

And Pharisees -- Jesus called out no one of them by name, but merely denounced them as a class. R5679:4

The word means "God's holy people." R3552:2

Hypocrites! -- It is much the same today: an outward veneer; a drawing near with the lips while the heart is far from him; busy with fashion, dress, pleasure and money-making idolatries, if not with grosser sins.

R3552:2, 2872:5

Ye neither go in -- The elder son would not go in (Luke 15:28) to greet the returned prodigal. "The publicans and sinners shall go into the kingdom before you." (Matt. 21:31) R1460:2

The news was so new to them and so good that the Pharisees and religious leaders could not believe it to be true. R241:3

By their course of action they say, Bring us no new unfoldings of truth, however beautiful. R1136:3

Let us spend less time and effort on sectarian-blinded ministers, and more upon the weary and heavy-laden common people, among whom are still some Israelites indeed. R1035:5, 1001:6

Neither suffer ye them -- Objecting to his telling the poor prodigals anything about the love of God and his willingness to forgive them and to welcome them back home again. R1460:2

Seeking by every means in their power to obstruct and counteract the Lord's teaching. R1735:6

Seeking to prevent the Lord's sheep from recognizing the Shepherd. R2441:1

Ministers of all denominations are much less amenable to the truth than their consecrated sheep; not only so, but they are the greatest enemies of the truth. R2640:2

By false teachings and misrepresentations, putting darkness for light and light for darkness. R2693:4

Matthew 23:14

Woe unto you -- This verse added by unknown parties somewhere between the fifth and tenth centuries. R1536:6

Devour widows' houses -- By taking advantage of circumstances to buy them cheaply at forced sale. R3316:2

By some technicality of the Law; and because they had no natural protection. R5338:6, 5470:5, 5389:3, 5094:5, 4795:2, 3552:2

The sin of selfishness, avarice, indicates a lack of the Spirit of the Lord. R4795:2

So today, some scheme to eat the substance of their neighbor, being cannibals in spirit. R5094:5

Make long prayer -- Merely an outward, perfunctory observance. R5470:5

Matthew 23:15

Pharisees -- The "holiness" people of that time and nation. F641

Hypocrites -- Their hypocrisy consisted in pretending to do for God's glory what was really for their own honor among men. R559:3 Few will deny that donations, labors and sacrifices are more for their sect than for God's Church. R559:5

Ye compass sea and land -- With your missionary activity. F641
They had sent missionaries throughout all the civilized world, and had missions in all the principal cities of the earth. R559:3

Judaism was not without success, for the whole civilized world was beginning to respect it; and to its holy feasts came devout men yearly out of every nation. (Acts 2:9) R964:3

The fault lay not in the zeal, but in the false ideas by which the zeal was inspired, which evidently was, in great measure, sectarian pride rather than love. R1071:3

Make one proselyte -- One convert to your false and, therefore, injurious, doctrines. F641

A convert to Judaism. NS169:6

There is a great zeal shown for the traditions of men, for the propaganda of men's theories, for the advancement of denominational interests. R5631:1

We are in close sympathy with the missionary spirit, but not with the missionary effort as at present operated by the nominal church. R559:5

Twofold more -- Would they not be two-fold more fit for destruction than they were in their original heathen superstition? C178

The Jewish proselyte is far worse than before they touched him. R5631:1

In many instances those brought to a measure of repentance and then fall away are in a worse condition, more difficult to be reached by the Truth, than if they had not had their conversion experience. Jesus referred to the first-advent counterpart of these in Matt. 23:15. NS169:6

The few reached will have the more to unlearn when the times of restitution begin. F641

Less likely to receive Christ as their Redeemer than if left in heathen darkness. R1071:6

The poor heathen will be better off to hear nothing in this age and wait for the age to come to spread true knowledge of God, than to be confused and prejudiced against God by the usual misrepresentation of his character and plans. R559:6

The evil consisted in the false ideas which they spread among the Gentiles, teaching that circumcision and the keeping of Moses' Law justified to life, thus missing the main point of the Law, to point to Christ. R1071:3

Their teaching was not of a nature to greatly improve the morals: the Pharisees believing in the immortal soul and eternal suffering, and the Sadducees not believing in the resurrection. R432:6*

The majority of heathen who bare the name of Christ have evidently neither part nor lot in the matter. R1851:2

So now, it is far better to let the world alone than to get them into sects which will only blind them to the truth and misrepresent to them God's character and plan. R983:1

The child of hell -- Greek, gehenna, destruction, the second death. F641; R2603:3, 2601:1

Than yourselves -- The effect of the preaching of the bungling arguments of sectarianism in India has been to abolish all religious faith and to make the people infidels. C178, 177

Ye blind guides -- This was not retaliation against something they had said to him. R5679:1

Matthew 23:18

Swear by the altar -- Type of the ransom sacrifice. T22

Matthew 23:19

The altar that sanctifieth -- Therefore the Ancient Worthies could not be presented before God as a sin offering, nor as a sacrifice at all, before the altar (Christ) had been set up. R1872:4

Matthew 23:23

Hypocrites! -- The Lord passed by the criminality of murderers and thieves as insignificant compared with the hypocrisy of this class. CR473:6

Ye pay tithes -- The Law which says "Love thy neighbor as thyself" (Matt. 22:39) is more important than the giving of tithes. R5094:4
They were great sticklers for the various features of the letter of the law. Q756:4

Of mint and anise -- The very smallest of seeds, for an outward show. R2485:5, 5389:3

Have omitted -- To ignore the claims of human brotherhood is meanly selfish and inhuman. R1940:4

Matthew 23:24

Strain at a gnat -- As, carefulness to avoid things strangled. R5389:5
The observance of the mere letter of the Law. Q757:T; R5338:6

Swallow a camel -- Of hypocrisy and injustice. Q757:T
Being careful about the little things, but disregarding God's Law on the weightier matters. R5389:5, 5338:6

A strong hyperbole, a figure of speech, showing their inconsistency. R5389:5

Some are ready to find fault with everything that an elder may do, however faithful he may be. R4930:1

Matthew 23:25

Clean the outside -- The cleansing of our minds is far more important than the cleansing of our flesh. We might succeed measurably in cleansing the flesh while the mind might still be impure. R3986:1

Matthew 23:27

Whited sepulchres -- Outwardly clean, but inwardly full of death, corruption, uncleanness, unholiness. R5389:5, 2716:4
Today many are outwardly Christians, but inwardly skeptics; covetous, extortionate, unjust. R5389:6

Appear righteous -- Deceiving their own selves probably as much or more than they deceive others. R2716:3

Matthew 23:30

We would not -- Nevertheless our Lord and the apostles were treated worse by them than were the prophets by their fathers. OV59:3

Matthew 23:31

Ye are the children -- Thus do the Protestants who conciliate, imitate and cooperate with Papacy condemn themselves. D26
If Pilate, Herod and the Roman soldiers had some responsibility for Christ's death, the multitude who cried "Crucify him" had more, the better-enlightened Pharisees and priests yet more, and Judas the most. R4909:2, 1962:5

Matthew 23:32

The measure of your fathers -- You are actuated by the same animosity today toward those of the same faith and spirit with the prophets. NS135:4

Matthew 23:33

Ye serpents -- This was not retaliation against something they had said to him. R5679:1

Generation of vipers -- Greek, gennema, race. D603
Jesus did not condemn the Pharisees to the second death. HG617:1

How can ye escape -- Unless you change your course. R2603:3

Not the poor, degraded outcasts of society, but the most strict religionists, the most popular and refined theologians of their day--having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof. R521:6
He perceived in them so much dishonesty and hardness of heart that he prophesied that they would have a hard time to reform character, even under the favorable conditions of the Millennium. HG617:2

Not that they were already doomed to it, but rather that, from their present attitude and course, they were in great danger of it. R1557:6

When a course is adopted and persistently followed, when conscience is stifled, when reason and Scripture are perverted to selfish ends until the heart is deceived and judgment overcome--who can predict the repentance of such a one? R3674:1

Those who cultivate a spirit of opposition to righteousness are trifling with a dangerous propensity to evil which will render it next to impossible for them to turn back to righteousness and truth. R1424:5
Each violation of conscience weakens character. Character weakened, degraded, can be reconstructed only with proportionately great difficulty. HG616:6

Every step in the direction of willful blindness and opposition to the truth makes return more difficult, and the wrongdoer more and more of the character God abhors. R2603:3

Damnation of hell -- Judgment of Gehenna, destruction, second death.

R2601:2, 2603:3, 521:6

Not condemnation to torment. CR434:6

They were wickedly resisting God's grace and such a course, if pursued, must eventually end in condemnation to the second death, Gehenna. R2603:3

Matthew 23:35

Upon you may come -- The penalty for. R4015:6

Of that age, that generation, God would require expiation. R5462:5

Let us not confuse these national and generational judgments with individual judgments. R1702:1

In no way involves future retribution of the people of that generation.

Then they will not be judged nationally, nor as a generation, but be held individually responsible for their own conduct. R1702:1

Does not this put them in the attitude of the scapegoat, receiving the sins at the hands of the priests? R151:1*

The righteous blood -- To square accounts for the wrong deeds done by mankind not due to Adamic weakness. R5874:3, 4428:5; Q299:T

The "wrath to the uttermost" which came upon Jerusalem squared up the account so far as the past was concerned. R5874:3, 5390:4, 5256:2, 4651:6

A new beginning was made there, just as a new dispensation began. R4651:6

Similarly the remaining accounts of the world will be squared during the great time of trouble. R5874:4, 4428:5; Q299:T

The Lord keeps a very strict account of the world's affairs, and every injustice cries out for vengeance, retribution, penalty. R4428:5
Israel being a typical people, we expect similar things upon the closing generation of this Gospel age. R1702:4

All the blood of God's holy ones, from the beginning of the Gospel age, will be required of the present generation in the "great time of trouble such as never was." (Dan. 12:1) R5462:5, 5256:2, 4015:6

As a punishment equivalent to all past ones combined was exacted of the closing generation of typical Israel, so it will be with the closing generation of this Gospel age. R1702:4

When Babylon's fall is complete, after God's people have come out of her, then in her overthrow will be found "the blood of the prophets and of saints and of all that were slain upon the earth." (Rev. 18:24) R1702:5

These partially willful sins of the world are not fully covered by the sin-offerings. R5462:5

Righteous Abel -- Who typified Isaac, Jacob, spiritual Israel and the wheat class. R2778:2-5

Not that Cain will be excused from further responsibility after his children suffered, for it would be as unjust to let the real culprit go unpunished as it would be to punish him and his children for the same sin. R1701:3

Matthew 23:36

Verily I say -- Not Jehovah, but Jesus, Adonai, for the Father "hath committed all judgment unto the Son." (John 5:22,27) E48

Because the judgment is in my hands. E48

All these things -- The trouble at the end of the Jewish dispensation was a type, a parallel, of the great trouble coming at the end of this dispensation. R5469:5; D49

For sins other than those of heredity, willful sins, there will be satisfaction rendered in the great time of trouble. R5240:2

Come -- Greek, heko, signifying "to have come, be here", not future tense, but present. R591:4*

Upon this generation -- Greek, genea, people living contemporaneously. D603

The one in which our Lord lived. R1701:6

Fulfilled about 37 years later when civil strife and hostile invaders accomplished the fearful recompense. D48

The generation addressed by our Lord had much advantage every way over its predecessors, and failed to profit thereby. OV59:3

As it had more advantages than all previous generations combined, so its punishment is equivalent to the punishment visited upon past transgressions all combined. R1702:1

The present generation has much advantage every way. All the accumulated wisdom and experience of the past are added to its own, but the great moral lessons have been very generally disregarded. D50
Because the chief light of each age comes at its close, and sinners against such light are worthy of more severe judgment. R5462:6, 4016:1
As a legitimate effect from preceding causes. D47, 50, 51
The Great Company will be allowed to suffer for the partly willful sins of the world. R5462:5

Matthew 23:37

Jerusalem, Jerusalem -- The ancient city of Jerusalem suffered 32 wars in all, was stormed and taken seven times, and was twice totally despoiled. R1297:1*

How often -- For three and a half years he had been declaring that the Kingdom of God was at hand; and six months in advance, John the Baptist had similarly preached. NS780:1

Even as -- Greek, hon tropon, in like manner. R341:1*

Under her wings -- For safety. R4669:6

And ye would not -- Having stumbled through unbelief. R2518:6

Unworthy! Unappreciative! NS779:6

It is not for us to mourn that they were not ready, but rather it is for us to realize that the plan of God was not thwarted or hindered by their unreadiness. R3538:6

Matthew 23:38

Your house -- The Jewish nation. B70

The house of servants. R5470:3

Up to this time the Lord had blessed and more or less used the priests, Levites, Doctors of the Law and the Pharisees. R3883:6

The nominal church: rejected in 1878 as, in the shadow, in 33 AD. R224:6

It must be an individual matter. Neither sects nor parties will be acknowledged in this testing time, only the "Israelites indeed, in whom is no guile." (John 1:47) NS633:1

Unto you desolate -- The favor which has been exclusively yours is now withdrawn. B70; A72, 223; R5470:3, 2746:5

"Even today do I declare that I will render double unto thee." (Zech. 9:12) B225; NS695:5

Ending the 1845 years of Israel's national life and favor. B213, 226; OV74:19; NS695:5

The Jewish age ended with the death of Christ, when he gave them up, weeping over them. R532:4, 271:6; A223; OV28:T

There, at Jesus' death, a new age began--the Christian age or Gospel dispensation. A72; HG540:1

The Kingdom privileges first offered to natural Israel were transferred to spiritual Israel. R4593:6

Instead of showering the blessing of restitution upon natural Israel at that time. R4463:6; CR58:4

The nation was adjudged unworthy of any further trial. OV38:1

Abandoned by the Lord during this Gospel age. R2746:2

The utter destruction of that nation as a people, as a result of their rejecting and crucifying the King. R1373:3

Being found wanting, it was cast aside. R3539:2

As soon as spiritual Israel was begun, the earthly was set aside; yet the first opportunity for membership in spiritual Israel was given to that people. R4781:5, 3105:6, 2620:5; A223; NS606:5

Before that time, they were God's people, as distinguished from all other peoples or nations, the household of faith; yet among them were only a few Israelites indeed. R821:2*; NS268:1

Now, too, the command, "Come out of her" (Rev. 18:4) is not given until after the announcement, "Babylon is fallen." (Rev. 18:2) R457:4*

Not set aside forever, but merely until spiritual Israel had been selected. R4781:5; CR58:4

It was three and a half years after the death of Jesus before the individual favor to the Jews terminated. Q195:2; B70; R5454:2, 2931:2, 271:6, 224:3

Rejected at the time of the crucifixion, but all the period from then down to their utter destruction in AD 70 was the period of testing to that people. R3105:6

A prediction given five days before Jesus' death. OV74:19; R805:4, 465:5, 224:3

Symbolized when the veil of the Temple was rent in twain from top to bottom. R5163:3

These words, our Lord's first act on assuming office as King of the Jews, AD 33, typified the rejection of nominal spiritual Israel at the corresponding point of time, AD 1878. B246; C151; R5772:5

All the laws and regulations given to that people governing their exercise of God's vengeance were here abrogated and made null and void. R3609:3

When Israel's typical sacrifices were repudiated by the Father. R5967:1; Q721:2

The rich man (Luke 16:22), the Jewish nation, took sick; and the dying process began. For 37 years they gradually died to all the privileges and blessings which had been theirs as God's peculiar people. HG428:6; NS819:3; PD60/72

Ever since, like the blighted fig tree (Mark 11:13,14), Israel has been desolate as a nation. But there is a promise that this blighted fig tree shall live again, become a living tree, a living nation. R5920:6

That day has not yet come. NS780:1

Showing that the desolation was not everlasting. HG161:3

Shall be the sign -- Indication. B160; R710:3

They suspected that he might be present, yet unrecognized by the world, and possibly by even his saints, unless some expected sign should indicate his presence. R710:3

As clouds are a sign of storm and smoke of fire, so the specially appointed works of his presence in progress will, to those who can appreciate them, be a sign of his presence. R710:3

There will be no sign for the worldly masses; they will not know of my presence and of the new dispensational changes. Only the few will know. B162

What sign would be needed of Christ's presence, if he were visible. R555:1*

Of thy coming -- Greek, parousia, a being alongside, presence. B160; D565; R2978:6, 1693:1, 591:4*; HG24:4, 26:6

The Greek word parousia invariably signifies "personal presence," as having come, arrived. It never signifies to "be on the way," as we use the word "coming." R580:5, 348:2, 223:2*, 20:4

Whedon's Commentary, page 277, says: "The word parousia never, in the whole New Testament, signifies anything else than presence." Liddell and Scott and Young's Concordance concur. R223:2*

The parousia began in 1874. R5565:6

The sign of the presence is the sign of the time of harvest, one sign for two things. The worker and the work are related to each other. R236:3*

Matthew 24:4

Jesus answered -- Verses 1 to 14 cover the entire Gospel age; verses 15 to 22 have a double application, literally to the close of the Jewish age and figuratively to the end of the Gospel age of which the Jewish age was a shadow; verses 23 to 26 contain words of warning against false Christs and, in verse 27, our Lord reaches their question regarding his parousia. B160

The Master traces various experiences of his people down to the consummation of the Gospel age. R5522:2

Matthew 24:5

Come in my name -- "Many will assume my name." (Diaglott) R710:5

Saying, I am Christ -- Evidently refers to pseudo-Christ's who have arisen during the Gospel age, but before the closing part of the age. R5865:6*

Not Sabbathai Levi of Smyrna, with his 400 prophets, is here meant, but whoever claims headship of the church, as Pope, Czar, Synod, and especially the coming Image of the Beast. (Rev. 13:15) D565, 580 Gamaliel mentions two of these false Christ's in his speech referred to in Acts 5:36,37. F565

They say, We are Christ's vicegerents, his representatives; our Church is the body of Christ and his rightful and promised representative to rule and conquer the world. R710:5

Not only have false Christ systems, antichrists, arisen, flourished and deceived many, but many individual false teachers have also arisen. R767:1
Deceive many -- By unrestrained fallen angels, with power to counterfeit and personate humanity. SM199:T

Matthew 24:6

Rumors of wars -- Threats, intrigues of wars. D566

Wars, which have continued all through the age, are not the particular thing the Master had in mind when he referred to the great time of trouble. R5526:1; NS57:2

Must come to pass -- The physical convulsions are as needful and as proper as the moral and social upheavals. R879:5

War is not the disease, but merely a symptom of the disease in the body politic. So long as the disease, sin, continues, its outward manifestation, war, is bound to continue. SM452:3

As long as Satan rules the world, strife, war, and confusion must reign. R605:4

End is not yet -- The mere fact of war should prove nothing to the Lord's people respecting the consummation of the age. We are otherwise guided. R3327:1, 605:3

Matthew 24:7

Shall be famines -- Famines, pestilences and earthquakes are not to be regarded specially as signs of the end. R605:5

It will be a test for those who love Christ, as to whether they will partake of the worldly spirit. R5118:2
The love of many -- Speaking to the Church. R5856:2
The many; the majority of the professed followers of Christ. R5857:4
Shall wax cold -- Will allow their love to grow cold, lacking faith and zeal. R5118:2
Become lukewarm. (Rev. 3:16) R710:6
When not persecuted, it has been because there was so much of the world, so much of the "cold love" toward the Lord and the truth, that they were not worthy of persecution. D567
The Lord seems afar off, incomprehensible and almost unknown. R767:4
A cooling of our love toward God will mean a loss of our desire to please him, which will include a cooling of our love for his service in spreading the Gospel message. R4253:3

If we have an unjust twist in our mind, it will interfere with our communion with God. R5857:2

Melancholy and sorrowful as the sight is, if we did not see it, we should think that the Bible was not true. R2798:3*

Patient endurance to the close of the race is needful for all running for the prize held out in this Gospel age. R710:3

Matthew 24:14

This gospel -- We make a distinction between the Gospel of the Kingdom and the Kingdom. The Gospel is the announcement beforehand that the Kingdom is coming. SM678:3; R5010:1

Announcing the second coming of the Messiah to rule, heal and instruct all the families of the earth. R5010:1

Of the kingdom -- The word gospel here is emphatic in the Greek, and so is the word kingdom. It is not any and every good message, but a special one--this good message of the Kingdom. R1349:3

Shall be preached -- He did not say that it would be received. A91; D567; R516:6*

The object is to prepare for this coming Kingdom. SM678:2

The real purpose of this Gospel age. D169

The entire work of this Gospel age was to be the preaching of the Kingdom. R2139:1*

To everyone who has an ear to hear. SM679:1; CR437:2

We ask whether this has yet been done by Christendom, and reply, No! (1892) R1349:3

This witness has already been given; the Word of the Lord, the gospel of the Kingdom, has been published in every nation of the earth. D568; SM685:3

In all the world -- By 1861, the Gospel had been published in every language of the earth. A91; R603:4*

Even though the traditions of men, which tend to make it null and meaningless, are permitted to accompany it. R1077:3

"In the whole inhabited earth." (NEW Version) R531:3

The Bible, which is the Gospel message, has been translated into all the national tongues of the world; and thus every nation, representatively, has been made acquainted with the letter of God's message at least. R2518:5

The preaching of the Gospel during this age will serve as a witness in the coming age. R517:1*

Later on the elect, as the Kingdom, will bless the nations, opening their deaf ears to the Gospel. D568

Unto all nations -- "Go ye therefore and teach all nations." (Matt. 28:19) C215

But witnessing to nations is not witnessing to individuals. R603:4*

Shall the end come -- The end has come: "The harvest is the end of the age." (Matt. 13:39) D568; R603:4*, 342:5*

The end of this age or harvest. R2157:2*, 2139:1*

Not the end of the world, but the end of the preaching of the gospel. SM678:2

Before this age shall have fully ended. R710:6

The Greek heko signifies "to have come, to be here," not future tense, but present. R591:4*, 555:4*, 342:5*

The remarks of the Master up to here are in place and needful, but only a preface to the answer of the question asked. R710:6

Matthew 24:15

When ye -- When Satan's power begins to fall because the stronger than he begins to spoil his house, then this system will be revealed and recognized in its true character. R711:1

Shall see -- The Mass was not seen to be the abomination, even by the Reformers. D572

The setting up of the abomination is not the sign, but its recognition as an abomination and its improper place is a sign of greatly increased light (Dan. 12:4) R710:6

When the mask shall be pulled off, and you shall be enabled to see "The Mystery of Iniquity" (2 Thess. 2:7) as such, your knowledge shall be the sign. R711:2

The abomination -- That Wicked One, the Man of Sin, the Mystery of Iniquity, the Antichrist, the Son of perdition, the Beast, the Little Horn, the Papacy. B271, 277; C95

The false system of systems, including not only the mother system, Papacy, but the daughters as well, for she is the mother of abominations. (Rev. 17:4) R711:1

So called because of the disastrous influence it has had upon the faith and practice of the Lord's people. R5641:5

In another parallelism, fleshly Israel's rejection of the true sacrifice for sins, and their retention of the typical sacrifices which were no longer acceptable to God, were abominations. D572

Spoken of by Daniel -- Distinctly referring to Daniel, calling him by name and quoting a part of his prophecy, giving us the assurance that it would be fulfilled in the future--not yet come, but near, even at the door. R3630:3

It will be a special time of sorrow for the false religious systems in that day, "those who are with child." Q842:5

That are with child -- With illegitimate spiritual children, not begotten by the Word of Truth, but by error, and therefore "bastards, and not sons." (Heb. 12:8) D575, 576

Symbolic of Christian people seeking to convert the world and teach beginners. R5456:4

And to them -- Ministers, Sunday-school teachers, and others. D577; R1379:6, 230:1

Look after spiritual children, proselytes to the church. R591:5*

That give out the milk of the Word, often diluted and adulterated, to keep the spurious children alive, and starve, stunt and poison the true spiritual babes. D577 They will fear to flee in this day, realizing that but few of the "babes" would be able or willing to join in the flight; and indeed only the spiritual will be able to endure the ordeal. D577

Matthew 24:20

Not in the winter -- When the winter-time of Babylon's trouble has begun, in the burning of the tares. D578

This winter time coming is the time of Zion's travail when the great majority of her children will be brought forth. (Isa. 66:7) R230:6

"The harvest is past, the summer is ended [winter has come], and we are not saved." (Jer. 8:20) D578

On the sabbath day -- The Millennium. The further we get into it, the harder it is to abandon Babylon, when she pleads for help in her hour of need. D579

The Jewish Law placed restrictions upon the people on the Sabbath and hindered them from journeying as much as they might desire. R230:2

If some now attempt to obey, they will find such laws in force in Zion as will make it difficult to get out quickly, unless those man-made laws are disregarded. R230:2

So destructive in character that it will result in the dissolution of the present evil, selfish, social structure preparatory to the establishment of the "new earth." Q771:4

Upon the ashes of that time of trouble, Messiah's Kingdom will be established with full power and glory. PD92/107; NS22:4

The beginning of Messiah's reign will mean the greatest revolution the world has ever seen. Kings and princes will hold on to power and advantage to the last, and as a result all will be dashed in pieces. R1385:5

It will be a battle between giants--on the one side financial giants, trusts, etc.; on the other side gigantic labor organizations. PD92/107; NS218:4

Not for the world's destruction; but that, as a plowshare, it may break up the fallow ground and prepare the hearts of mankind. NS664:6

The beginning of his glorious reign of 1000 years, a very dark hour. HG676:1

R1352:2

We are not to think of wars as being the particular thing the Master had in mind when he referred to this great trouble with which this age will close. R5526:1

Resulting from the winds of strife and trouble being let loose after the sealing work shall have been accomplished. SM188:T

This trouble we do not expect (1910) before October 1914. R4671:4

An allusion to Armageddon. Diii; OV269:2

Armageddon is still future (1914)--perhaps next spring. R5527:4 The present war (1914) is not the great time of trouble in the fullest sense, but the forerunner; the great time of trouble will be brought on by anarchy. R5526:3

The present (1914) will drain the world of blood and treasure. Then the nations, sick, weak and faint, will fall a prey to Socialism which will become anarchy. R5526:4, 4955:5; HG499:4, 518:1; OV186:4; SM162:1

The great time of revolution and anarchy which the Bible predicts will follow this (1915) war. R5767:4

R5462:6, 5240:2

The awful lessons then learned by humanity will be sufficient for all time. SM188:T; PD92/107

See also comments on Matt. 23:35.

Such as was not -- A ferocity never seen in the past. R5469:3

Because present day conditions render each member of the social structure more dependent than ever before. D540

The end of all such troublous times. SM717:1; NS22:4

The great final trouble of this world's history in which, during a period of anarchy unparalleled, all human hopes and ambitions will utterly fail. SM266:1

The effect of this trouble will be so overruled by divine providence in the establishment of the Kingdom of righteousness that such a tribulation will never again be possible. HG417:3

If a great time of trouble must come, it is comforting to know that it will be the last of its kind. PD92/107

Be cut short. The work of destruction will be a short work. D558, 578

Instead of allowing the time of trouble to run its course and practically exterminate the race in the reign of anarchy, the Lord declares that in the midst of the trouble he will establish his Kingdom. NS218:5; R3587:1

Messiah's Kingdom not only dashes the nations to pieces, but also stops the anarchy when it shall have demonstrated the fact that nothing that man can do will be able to help the race. R5567:2

When men shall have learned the great lesson of what the outcome of selfishness would be without divine intervention. R5767:4

We infer that the time of trouble will be sharp and short. HG612:2

Because worldly men cannot say, Lo here, or Lo there; they do not realize his presence at all. R1692:6

False Christs -- False Messiahs. R4872:6

Deceptions. R113:6

Not a personal Antichrist, nor that Satan will materialize as a man and misrepresent the Lord. R5867:4

Each church claims to be the body of Christ with an executive or committee as head, as Christ's representative in his Body. These are the false Christs, false bodies of Christ with false heads, or governments, not authorized by the Word. R5867:1,4, 3458:6, 766:6, 143:3; NS44:2

The greatest of the false Christs must be yet to come. R5866:1*

We should recognize a difference between false Christs (Greek, pseudo-kristos) and anti-Christis (Greek, anti-kristos). R143:3

False prophets -- In addition to the false Christs, false systems, and apparently to some extent outside of them, will be false teachers. NS44:4
Teachers of error. R143:3, 113:6

Large and prosperous denominations deceiving themselves and millions of others. R4872:6

Theosophy, Christian Science, New Thought movements are all false teachers outside of the Church of Christ because in no sense do they profess the essence of Christian doctrines. NS44:5

Even after coming out of Antichrist systems, there are many false prophets who assume authority to direct the consecrated, teaching theories subversive of the truth and perverting Scriptures to support them. R767:5

Signs and wonders -- Doing many wonderful works is one of the old tricks of Satan and his evil hosts. R5801:6, 1644:3

"Strong delusions" (2 Thess. 2:11) from the wicked spirits, more than even Spiritists have dreamed of. R2189:3, 4379:3

As Satan's kingdom is about to be overthrown, in his efforts to support it. R5802:1

Healings, etc. R1736:4

Including "tongues." SM566:2, 567:2

Miracles to deceive, yet professing a pious intention. R617:6*

We now see them multiplying all around us in Christian Science, Spiritism, Theosophy and other such delusions. R1736:4

Evidences that Satan's kingdom is being hard pressed by the truth and is nearing its end. R1736:4

Back of, and underneath all, is an occult power, a hypnotic power, wrought by the Adversary himself as an angel of light. R2770:5

If it were possible -- But it will not be possible; these alone are promised grace, wisdom and aid sufficient. F192; R4925:6, 3760:6; Q465:1; SM289:1

Implying a great falling away from the truth, from the Bible, and from the Lord himself. NS539:3

The shaking and sifting will be thorough; for it is the Lord that is back of it, wishing to thoroughly separate the little handful of wheat from the vast quantity of tares. R2704:5

It is of paramount importance that we put on not only the intellectual covering, the helmet of salvation, but also the heart covering, love of righteousness and truth. R2353:6

But this will not be possible, for the Lord has promised them the assistance needful, and they will be in the attitude of heart and mind to seek assistance and use it. SM289:1; NS95:4, 129:4

Nothing shall be able to deceive the very elect because the Lord will give his messengers a charge, a message, in their interest, that they may bear them up in their hands, lest they should be stumbled in this time. R3719:2

The "very elect" will be preserved, not through their own wisdom or superiority, but through the power of God. R4379:3

If they were not divinely aided. The only safeguard for the Lord's people now is the Present Truth. R2875:5

They shall deceive -- By suggesting the abandonment of God's plan and cooperation in humanitarian schemes. E115, 116

Every feature of Present Truth sent by God is promptly counterfeited. R5800:5

Lead astray from the truth and from the faith. NS44:2

Seduce, lead into confusion and error. R113:6

The Lord will permit Satan to have special power now for the purpose of sifting and separating and approving the faithful and the unfaithful in the nominal church. NS539:3

Owing to the hundreds of conflicting creeds and doctrinal systems, the many "isms" and the strong delusions and multiplied errors. Q775:2

Implying that the trials and testings will be intensified toward the close of this Gospel age. F192

The Lord did not overstate the terrible battle between truth and error when he foretold that a thousand would fall to one who would stand, upheld by God's truth and its messengers. (Psa. 91:4,11,12) R867:6

God has so arranged the outward evidence respecting the Bible that one can find plenty to stumble over; only from the inside can the Word and plan be seen in their true beauty and strength. R2875:5

Evil spirits will testify occasionally to the truth, comment on Millennial Dawn, etc. Their deceptions will become bold and be apparently backed by advanced truth. R2187:2

Christ will be more and more exhibited in his followers, but the spirit of Satan will be more manifest in the remainder of the world. R5867:5

If fallen angels will soon be able to materialize, what a strong deception it will be. SM199:T

The very elect -- Such of the elect as do not lose their crown; those who "make their calling and election sure." (2 Pet. 1:10) F165; R4872:6

Those who put on the whole armor of God, shielded by the truth. R3490:4, 4351:2

All spirit-begotten ones are elect, and if faithful are the very elect. R4872:6

They are his followers, his betrothed, his members, his Body, his joint-heirs. R3761:1, 4474:5

How searching will be the tests to prove our love and loyalty to the Lord. R3760:6

Those who follow closely in the Master's footsteps and who, instead of leaning to their own understandings and to Satan's sophistries, have faith in the superior wisdom of Jehovah. E116

None of the fully consecrated are suffered to be fully ensnared. R2178:4

All but the "very elect" will be stumbled by the errors and worldliness of our day. R5801:6

The Great Company class are, for a time, a part of the nominal elect.
R4078:5

The Great Company, although in a grand position, are far inferior to the very elect. NS359:2, 371:6

The saints; represented by the family of Aaron. Q465:1; OV387:2

Matthew 24:25

I have told you before -- To be forewarned is to be forearmed if we heed the warning. R766:3, 113:6

Matthew 24:26

If they -- The false teachers. R113:6

Those who claim that Jesus is to appear shortly in the wilderness of Judea, Palestine. R113:6; B157

Is in the desert -- Of Palestine, as many now believe. B157

Our Lord's revelation at his second presence will not be to a community in a wilderness or desert; nor even to one nation, as at the first advent.
D583

In the singular, as if to teach us there would be but one occurrence of this sort; no more. R5866:1*

He is in -- We do not expect to see him until we shall be like him.
R103:5*

The secret chambers -- Of spiritualistic seances. B158; D582;
R5866:1*, 2188:6, 555:1*

In the plural, as though pointing out a deception oft-repeated. R5866:1*

Believe it not -- Because the signs or evidences of his presence would not be secret ones, but would be manifest to all, as is the light of the morning sun. R2302:6

Matthew 24:27

For as the lightning -- Greek, astrape, not lightning, because lightning rarely flashes from east to west. The same word as in "The bright shining of a candle doth give thee light." (Luke 11:36) B155, 156

The bright-shiner, the sun. D583

We translate the Greek noun astrape as "shining" instead of "lightning" for evidently it refers to the sun, which rises in the east and sets in the west. R5455:5

It is the electric fluid that lighteneth or causes the flash; then let us read, "As the electric fluid which causes flashes of light." R348:5, 264:4, 189:2, 153:1, 114:4

The electric current or fluid, unseen, yet powerful, its presence widely manifested by the light which it causes. R711:3

As the lightning is discernible only by its shining and power, so will I, in my day, be recognizable to my waiting bride by the light of truth, and afterward to the world, in the light of events and "the flaming fire" of the day of trouble. R189:2

We recognize his presence by the lightning flashes of truth. R629:6
Spiritual light is divine truth. Hence a great and wonderful unfolding of truth is all that the Bible gives us a right to expect during the presence of the Son of Man. R98:5*

Spiritual bodies are represented as shining as the lightning. (Luke 10:18; Matt. 28:3; Dan. 10:6; 1 Cor. 15:8) HG25:5

Its effect is different in different places. It shines in the heavens, to the church; but sometimes it is a very destructive agent on earth, to the world. R114:5

The first flashes bring terror and dismay to the world, but shortly the full glory, the bright shining of his presence, will be recognized by all and bring healing and blessing. R547:4

Man can see, by the destruction it leaves, where the lightning has been; so, in the day of the Lord, men will come to recognize, by the national trouble and overturning, that the great day of wrath is come. R598:2

Cometh -- Becomes present instantly, yet is first discerned by those first awake. B160

Out of the east -- And can be confined neither to a solitary place nor to a private room. D583

And shineth -- Everywhere. D583

Gradually bringing to light the truth on every subject. B156

Even unto the west -- Even unto the remote West. D583

So shall also the coming -- Greek, parousia, presence. B156, 159, 160; D583; R2978:6, 1693:1

Not that he will come like lightning, but that he will be like the lightning after he has arrived and is present. R348:5

Of the Son of man -- Christ, who became son (in law) of Adam. E150, 152

A title of high honor because it is a perpetual reminder of his great victory by which he secured the title to his present and prospective honor and glory, and the divine nature. E151

The carcase -- The body, the food. D610; R1890:2

The real food, a satisfying portion. R513:6

The Lord gives us something special to eat when we are in fellowship, even if only two or three are gathered together. CR32:3

The eagles -- Those of keen vision and appetite. D610; R1890:2, 629:6

Be gathered together -- Brought together by the mutual apprehension of the truth, as eagles would be drawn to their food. R711:3; D610

A general "rounding up" of Israelites indeed to the feast of fat things. R4937:3

Not one saint in all the world shall fail to come into contact with Present Truth. R4937:3

Matthew 24:29

The tribulation -- The tribulation referred to is that of verse 9 and not that of verse 21 and Dan. 12:1. R711:3

Of those days -- The 1260 years of Papal persecution. D584; R711:3; HG95:3

The tribulation "of those days" should be clearly distinguished from the tribulation at the end of those days. D583

Shall the sun -- Symbolically, the Gospel light, the truth, and thus, Christ Jesus. D590

Be darkened -- Literally, in the dark day of May 19, 1780, which extended over 320,000 square miles. D85; HG95:4; R711:3

Though we recognize a literal fulfillment of Jesus' words, it is far from our opinion that this was their complete and only fulfillment, or even the most important one. R711:3

The true gospel sunlight is already darkened. R1305:2; HG418:3

Symbolically, by denial that we were bought with the precious blood, and by substituting the theory of Evolution. D592; R712:1

And the moon -- Symbolically, the light of the Mosaic Law. D590; R1305:2

Not give her light -- "Shall be turned into blood" (Joel 2:31) by claims that the typical sacrifices were bloody and barbaric. D592; HG418:5

And the stars -- Symbolically, the false stars, wandering stars, pulpit stars, vainly aspiring to be considered of equal authority with the "twelve stars" (Rev. 12:1), the inspired apostles. D591, 594; R1305:2; HG418:5

Fall from heaven -- Literally, the meteoric shower of Nov. 13, 1833, covering the United States, and a part of Mexico and the West India islands, 11,000,000 square miles. D588, 589, 590; R711:5; HG95:4

Symbolically, the pulpit stars make a great display in coming down from spiritual things to Christian-citizenship-politics level. D595, 596

The teachings of the God-ordained twelve stars of the Church, the apostles, will also fade from view, cease to be recognized as guides or lights. D593; HG418:5

Powers of the heavens -- Ecclesiastical powers. R1947:6
Sectarian creeds and systems. D597, 595

Earth shall be shaken as well as the heavens. (Heb. 12:26) R712:2 Shall be shaken -- Literally, we have had violent shakings of the heavens, or wind storms and cyclones in our own day. R711:6 He will shake to pieces every evil system which hinders, binds, oppresses, or blinds the people whom he comes to bless--all of earth's families. R748:4

Until they are destroyed. R529:2* Signifying the "removing of those things that are shaken as of things" that are imperfect and of human construction. (Heb. 12:27) R712:2, 754:5*

He shakes and sifts because he would separate the many who have assumed the name of Christ but who are not truly his people. R1307:6

The shaking will be the means of God for the liberating of some now chained by superstition. R1308:4

The trouble upon the earth, society, will not reach its intensity until the shaking of the heavens, ecclesiasticism, has broken the fetters of superstition and plunged the masses into skepticism and open infidelity. R1308:4

And then -- At that time. D597

Appear the sign -- Greek, seemion, evidence, proof of the Lord's presence, at his second advent. D598; R712:2

Not a sign that he is soon to come, but a sign of his presence. R555:1*

The thought might properly be that something will occur indicative of the presence of the Son of man, that he has taken to himself his great power and begun his reign. SM420:4

The wonderful inventions and progress in the world. R5373:5

Reaping of the wheat, the fig tree of the Jewish nation putting forth leaves, worldliness in the church systems, the beginning of the smiting of the nations. R5697:2

Since he is to be revealed in flaming fire, the sign must be some sign of vengeance, some indication of righteous indignation against wrong. (Isa. 59:17,18) SM420:4

It is a sign to the world, not to the saints; they have all had evidence of the Lord's presence long before. R712:2

The shakings in the church nominal and the raising up of new heavens become a sign to the peoples of earth that their course of injustice is drawing to a close. R712:2

Some will see the divine plan of the ages and recognize it as one of the signs. The judgment of Christendom, social and ecclesiastical, is another sign that the Judge has come. D599

The aggregate sayings and doings of the scoffers (2 Pet. 3:3,4) are the fulfillment of prophecy, and we think constitute the sign of the Son of man in heaven. R555:5*

Not his parousia. On the contrary, the parousia of Christ will not be known to the tribes, or families, of the earth in general. SM420:3

In heaven -- The symbolic heaven, the professedly spiritual class, Churchianity. D598; SM421:1

The sign appearing in the heavens signifies that the beginning of Christ's judgments will fall upon the ecclesiastical systems of our day. SM421:1

In the new heavens, new spiritual powers then coming into control and supplanting the old shaking and falling spiritual powers. R712:2

And then -- Still farther on. R555:2*

All the tribes -- The tribes of earth will not see the sign or proof of the Lord's presence given only among the "heavens," the at least nominally spiritual, the churches. D599

Of the earth mourn -- A general mourning of all, incident to the great time of trouble. D600

The troublous times cause them to mourn. R555:2*

If the world has mourned in the past, how much more shall we expect it to do when the trouble will be general. R5269:5

And they shall see -- With the eyes of their understanding. D600

The root word in the Greek is horao, to discern; that is, to apprehend, to recognize, the fact that he is indeed present. R555:2*

When their eyes begin to see out of obscurity, there will not be anything that they can see with the natural sight. R5269:5

They discover that sin is the cause of all the trouble, and this will lead them to investigate, and thus finally they are led to desire, as well as to recognize him. R555:2*

Son of man coming -- Drawing nearer and nearer in judgment; and they will recognize that they, too, must shortly be involved. Hence there will be mourning because of him (Rev. 1:7). SM421:2

In the clouds -- Of the time of trouble. B153

The tribes of earth will see the clouds of trouble and confusion incident to the shaking of the "heavens," and realize it to be a storm which will shake the "earth" also. (Heb. 12:26) D600

Well representing the confusion in general. R5269:5

Of heaven -- Primary sign of Christ's righteous judgments upon the ecclesiastical systems. SM421:2,1

And great glory -- The glory of power and justice. B153

Matthew 24:31

Send his angels -- His messengers, such as he has used in the carrying of the Gospel message throughout the age; those begotten of his holy Spirit. D601; R885:3, 711:3

A great sound -- Sinaitic and Syriac manuscripts omit "sound." R907:6

Trumpet -- The seventh trumpet, the last trump, the trump of God, the jubilee trumpet of knowledge and liberty, which sound symbolically from October, 1874 to the end of the Millennium. The words "sound of a" are omitted by the Sinaitic manuscript. B145; D600, 601; A316; R3471:6, 907:3, 711:3

The truth now proclaimed by the saints, the messengers or angels of God. R885:4

Gather together -- Not physically, but spiritually; their minds, hearts, affections, gathered together, centered, in the secret place of the Most High; protected in time of strife and trouble. R4379:4

Bring together into sympathy and harmony with the truths then due. F274

Preparatory to the setting up of his Kingdom in power and great glory.
R1745:6

The first work of the Lord in both harvests was the rejection of the nominal house, so that he may gather out of it his elect. R2982:1
Not into another denomination, but gathered to Christ, into oneness with him, in fellowship of the spirit through the knowledge of his Word.
R2751:4, 1877:6

"Gather my saints together unto me." (Psa. 50:5) B164

"Make up my jewels." (Mal. 3:17) B164; D601

"Gather the wheat into my barn." (Matt. 13:30) B164; D600 "Come out of her my people." (Rev. 18:4) D601

The harvest began in 1874. R4842:3; D604; Q150:5

His elect -- The bride of Christ, to be gathered out of the world, of all nations and classes. R4998:3

Consecrated runners for the prize, for whom crowns have been reserved. F165

We believe every saint will be brought into contact with the truth. While confident that no tares will be gathered, let us have confidence also in the Chief Reaper that not a grain of ripe wheat will be left ungarnered.
R888:5

From the four winds -- From every direction, from all denominations.
R711:3

From every quarter of the field. R1333:4; D601

End of heaven -- The nominal church. D600; R3431:6, 2982:1, 2751:3, 2490:4, 1877:6, 1333:4, 845:2, 711:3

Of the fig tree -- The Jewish nation. D604; R5503:2

Put forth leaves -- Giving signs of life. R4788:5, 5503:2, 4705:6

Begins to plan for national restoration in Palestine. D604

Indicating that the blight time of Israel and of the world is at an end.
R5503:2

We see the Jews looking back to Jerusalem. We thus see the fig tree putting forth its leaves, giving signs of life, looking forward to the re-establishment of the Jewish nation. R4788:5

These buds will thrive, but will bear no perfect fruit before October, 1914, the full end of the "Gentile Times." D604

Summer is nigh -- The Hebrews divided their year into two seasons, summer and winter. D602

Matthew 24:33

Know that it -- "Know ye that the Kingdom of God is nigh at hand." (Luke 21:31) D602; R127:5

When the time should come, such watching ones would know it. R593:6

Matthew 24:34

This generation -- Greek, genea, people living contemporaneously, not a race. D603; R531:4

Not the generation he was talking to, but the generation that would see these signs when they would be fulfilled. Q636:4; D603; HG95:4

Might be reckoned as a century, practically the present limit, from 1780, the date of the first sign, to 1880. To our understanding, every item predicted had begun its fulfillment by that date. D604

Those who are walking in the light of Present Truth are not looking for things to come which are already here, but are waiting for the consummation of matters already in progress. D604

It would not be inconsistent to reckon the generation from 1878 to 1914, 36-1/2 years, about the average of human life today. D605

The generation which witnesses the putting forth of the green leaves of hope by Israel will see to the full the accomplishment of the change of dispensation so long foretold. R4706:1

In distinction from the word regeneration; in other words, he would be present before the regeneration, before the people of this age should pass away. R342:4*

"This generation of vipers" (Matt. 23:33); this kind, or class. R539:1*

Matthew 24:35

Heaven and earth -- The present ecclesiastical and social order. D602

Pass away -- In the great time of trouble with which this age will end. R4706:1

My words -- Plans or purposes. R421:2, 338:1

Matthew 24:36

That day and hour -- When the Kingdom shall be set up. E36

The divine plan which God purposed in himself from before the foundation of the world, and represented in the sealed scroll of Rev. 5. R4451:1

Knoweth no man -- At the time the Lord was speaking. B18; D605; R4641:5; CR95:5

Not the angels -- Not that the angels would be in ignorance up to the last minute. R4706:2, 2972:6

Sinaitic manuscript adds "nor the Son." D605

But my Father only -- It does not say that none but the Father will ever know. B18; D605; R5055:1, 2972:6, 1796:3; OV6:3; NS7:1, 33:1

It does not mean that those living at the time for the establishment of the Kingdom would not know. R4706:2

Certain features of the plan were kept secret from our Master until he had finished his course. CR95:5; R4706:2, 4641:5

Matthew 24:37

But as the days -- Not the coming, but the "presence," after arrival.

B160, 161

As the days of Noah were not days before Noah's time, neither are the days of the Son of man days before the Son of man's presence. R2974:5, 580:5

Of Noe -- Before the flood. B161; R349:1, 342:4*, 237:5*; NS200:4

Doubtless much of the immorality and sensuality which marked the days of Noah and of Lot will prevail in the world in the closing days of the present age, though that is not the lesson here. R4706:3; B161; D606; HG611:5

Everything will continue as ordinarily. R4706:3

Noah was informed respecting the coming change of dispensation; likewise, the Church of Christ is forewarned. R4706:2

As the giants were in control in the days of Noah, so giant trusts are getting more and more control of the situation now. R4797:5

So shall also -- Before the hot fire of trouble. B161

The coming -- Greek, parousia, presence. B159; D296, 606; R4797:2, 4706:4, 2978:6, 1874:1*, 513:4, 188:4

Of the Son of man -- The days of the Son of man are the days of his parousia or presence, invisible and unknown to the world, known only to the watchers, and seen by them only with the eye of faith. R2974:6

See comments on Matt. 24:27.

Matthew 24:38

They -- The world in general. D606

Were eating -- Pursuing the ordinary, proper affairs of life; ignorant of the impending catastrophe. D606; R5455:6, 3355:6, 2974:6, 2957:1

Does not imply that there is anything wrong in so doing. R4797:2; B161; NS7:6, 33:6

Showing that there will be no outward sign to indicate to the world the time of the second presence. R5455:6

The world's affairs will not be interrupted by the Lord's presence. NS200:3

These things are not signs of wickedness, but mentioned to show us that there will be no outward sign to indicate to the world the time of the second presence of Christ. R5455:6, 4797:2, 580:5, 20:4

The world's whole attention given to fleshly desires, not understanding nor caring for the spiritual. R327:1*

Into the ark -- Type of Christ and the power in him which will replenish and reorganize society. A318

Matthew 24:39

And knew not -- Were ignorant of the coming storm and disbelieved Noah's testimony. B161

So, in the early part of the Day of the Lord, the world will have no faith in the announcement of his presence and of the impending trouble. B143

Similarly, at the end of this age, only the Lord's people will know of Christ's presence and the time of trouble impending. D606; R5590:6

There was apparently nothing to indicate that anything unusual was about to happen. R4797:2

They read not the signs of the speedy and great changes just at hand; they are too busy to consider the testimony carefully, and only continue to scoff. B167

The world will never be completely converted to Christianity by any existing agency before the end of this dispensation. R2798:2*

The signs of the times will not be in the outward condition of the world. R5455:6

"Where is the promise of his presence, while all things continue as they were from the beginning." (2 Pet. 3:4) R2957:1

How then shall the Church be aware of his presence, except by a sign. R98:2*

First, in witnessing, we should present the doctrine of restitution, the work of the presence; then, the manner; and lastly, the time, telling it to none unless they show that they have an ear to hear. R216:3,6

Until the flood came -- Contrary to the teachings of many modern theologians. A61

Though there shall never be another flood to destroy the earth (Gen. 9:11), it is written that the whole earth shall be devoured with the fire of God's jealousy (Zeph. 3:8). B162

Marking the close of the first dispensation; as a great cataclysm of trouble, anarchy, symbolically called "fire," will mark the termination of the present dispensation. R2842:6

Likewise in his second presence, until disturbed by the commotion and trouble of the epiphania, the apokalupsis of the King in the pouring out of the seven last plagues. R2957:1

They did know when the flood came; and they will now know when every eye shall behold him. HG24:6

Took them all away -- The Deluge was merely a quick means of executing against the race the death sentence already expressed 16 centuries before. SM62:1

By drowning all the people except Noah's family; in the antitype, by burning all except the family of God in the symbolic fire--the great trouble of the Day of the Lord. B162

Intimating that a great catastrophe, corresponding to the flood, is to occur in the end of the Gospel age. R3934:6

The threatened catastrophe will be anarchy. R2842:6

So shall also -- Equally unrecognized and unbelieved. B161

From these statements we see that the world will be far from being converted to Christ at his coming, and they will have little regard for the teachings of the Master. Q816:4, 852:2

Again the doctors of the law and doctors of divinity, professing faithfulness and praying continually, are blind to the fact that we are now living "in the days of the Son of man." R3538:6

The coming -- Greek, parousia, presence; as of one who has already come. B161; R4706:3, 2978:6

Be in the field -- In the world, outside the nominal house. D609; R4706:4
Who previously had not been justified. Q151:2 The Lord will gather some of his jewels from the field. R4706:4; D609

Not all "come-outers" will be gathered, but the jewels will be sought wherever they may be. D609

One shall be taken -- To the food of Present Truth which the Lord would supply. R2302:6, 513:6

Matthew 24:41

Grinding at the mill -- The place where food is prepared; the theological schools and the ministry. D609; R4706:4
Grinding the husks of human tradition. R513:6

Matthew 24:42

Watch -- The signs of the times in the light of God's Word, for the second advent of the Lord, the establishment of his Kingdom, the transformation of the Church to the divine likeness. R2973:1-3, 4706:5, 2303:1

Watch yourselves and also the word of prophecy. B22; R4706:6, 2303:2

Watch your words and thoughts and doings. R4706:6

So that when the due time comes you may be one of the wise ones. B19; D606

This will serve as an antidote to worldly influences. R2303:1

The watchers keep separate the two thoughts of the presence and its manifestation. R2974:3

Watching intently, earnestly, interestedly, because they know of the good things God hath in reservation. R2973:5

Watching implies hoping, and it also implies waiting. R2973:2

That the early Church lived in joyful anticipation of this longed-for event is manifest from many Scriptures. (See 1 John 2:18; 2 Tim. 2:18; 2 Thess. 2:1-5) R1796:2

Implies not only some advantage in watching, but also that the manner of the event might be so contrary to general expectation as to require some discernment on the part of the watchers. R1796:5

In reply to your question, When?, I merely tell you to watch and be ready. When I am present I will communicate the fact to all who are watching and faithful. B163

Therefore -- That ye may be gathered or separated from the world and theological relationships and from earthly church relationships to the Master himself. R4706:5

An intimation that the manner of the second advent would be contrary to the general expectation. R1796:5

Unobserved, unknown to the world. R4706:3

For ye know not -- It is not a matter that is left in such a form as to be speculated upon in advance. His knock will be the first intimation of his presence. R3355:5

Implies that when the event does take place the watching ones will know it. Watch, because ye know not, in order that, at the proper time, ye may know. R2972:2 D606

What hour -- "The day" according to the oldest Greek manuscripts. R2972:2,3

Your Lord doth come -- This cannot refer to our Lord coming to receive a dying one at death, as is often taught, because death is an enemy. R2303:1 Greek, erchomai, arrive. B163

Matthew 24:43

But know this -- Understand the reason why the time is so secreted under symbols and parables. D611

If the goodman -- The householder, the devil. D611; SM102:2

Of the house -- Master of present institutions, of the present evil world. SM102:2; Q621:2; R4706:5, 2303:2

Had known -- Although Satan has long known the Bible, he has understood but little of it, for the same reason that man has not understood it--he does not possess the holy Spirit. D611

Thief would come -- The Lord's second presence is likened to the presence of a thief in a house, unknown to its master. R4706:6, 3784:5, 842:1

If he comes as a thief, it is not to sound a trumpet before him, calling the world's attention to his work. R1742:6

He comes as a thief and snare upon the world. R1693:1, 326:6*

To take, first, his "jewels," his saints; and then to utterly spoil and overthrow the affairs of this present time, that on its ruins he might set his Kingdom. R3784:6, 4706:6

He would have watched -- Satan was taken unawares by the Lord's parousia in 1874 and the harvest work then begun. D612

Would not have suffered -- Whatever knowledge Satan has of the divine times and seasons and arrangements, he is prompt to use in opposing the divine plan. D611

In what way Satan would have managed his affairs differently if he had known sooner more about the divine plan we can only surmise. D612

To be broken up -- Had Satan understood the divine plan he would have tried to make it very difficult for it to be carried out. Q621:2; D612

His "house," present institutions, will suffer complete collapse. D612

There would not be such a breaking up in earth's affairs as is now impending; the Kingdom would be established, but not in the way in which God designed. R4706:6

Slowly and surely the "strong man" is bound in his own house by the stronger one now present. R842:1

Matthew 24:44

Therefore -- Now that you know prophetically that Satan will be caught unawares. D612

Be always watchful for the evidences of my parousia, because the time will come when it will be very important to know that fact. B19, 163

Ye also -- Believers, the Lord's faithful. D612

Ready -- Not in a literal ascension robe, but in a figurative ascension robe--a condition of heart and life ready to welcome the Lord and his scrutiny of our hearts and conduct. R2303:2

As ye think not -- The time of our Lord's presence could not be known beforehand, even by the saints; nor was the fact recognized until nearly a year after October, 1874. D612; R149:5*

Who then -- In the harvest. B163

Few would be found giving to the household of faith meat in due season at his presence. R718:4

Faithful and wise servant -- Faithful to the "Master" and to "his fellow-servants" and "the household." D613

God's grace will probably come through a human channel, through the helpfulness of the fellow-members of the body of Christ, whom the Lord will make use of in serving the meat to the household of faith. R2383:4

Ever since the Church has had an existence, God has raised up some from its midst as special servants of the body, some who had special teaching ability. R1206:4

God in his own time raises up suitable servants or expounders to dispense his meat in due season. A319

Servants who are anxious, not only about the amount of service, but also that it be in exact cooperation with God. R1797:1

Merely a steward, liable to be removed at any moment should he fail to fully and duly acknowledge the Master in every particular. D613

One channel dispensing the meat in due season, though other channels or fellow-servants will be used in bringing the food to the household. D613

A special messenger to the Church at this time. R6023:3*

Some one servant (animate or inanimate) whom the Lord would specially use in the present time to dispense the present truth. R1994:3

Originally applied to Pastor Russell by one who became his bitter enemy.

He avoided the discussion which followed, except for references in Volume 4 and when the passage occurred in the International Sunday School Lessons. R4482:1, 4473:3, 3811:2

Thousands of readers of Pastor Russell's writings believe that he filled the office of "that servant." His modesty precluded him from claiming this title. OV447:6*; R6011:2*, 4482:1, 2489:4* While this exhortation in general seems to apply to one particular servant, we can see the same principle would apply to each servant in turn as he would receive either food or stewardship. R3356:5

Whether you like to call it a class or individual, whatever it be. Q355:5

Let each reach his own conclusions and act accordingly. R4483:3, 1946:2; Q644:4

The whole body of Christ, faithfully carrying out their consecration vows. R291:6, 149:5*

The Lord has used the Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society as his channel or servant in forwarding the harvest message in a most remarkable degree. R4483:1, 4562:4*

Hath made ruler -- The Lord promised that, at the time of his presence, he would bring forth from the storehouse things "new and old," and that he would select one special channel through which those blessings would be brought to the household of faith. R4482:4, 2693:6

Has placed over. D613

Sinaitic and Vatican manuscripts read "shall make." B163

It would be very remarkable if the Lord should change his channel of sending the truth at this late date. R4483:3

In the interest of the household and for its comfort, joy and blessing, the Master, at an appropriate time, would furnish to some one of his servants a key to the precious things of his Word. R2694:4

No suggestion here of either the inspiration or infallibility of "that servant." This distinction belongs only to the Lord, the apostles and the prophets. R1994:3; D613

The Lord, as the overseer of his work, may today, as in every period, use some special instruments for the service of the Church as a whole. F274

The Revised Version is preferable: "set over his household to give them meat" as a "steward," not as a lord or master--rather a general servant, or servant of all. R1946:6

Over his household -- His faithful people in general; but not nominal Christian professors in general. R1946:2 The household of faith. R327:1*, 291:6

In this context we have "that servant," "fellow-servants" and the "household." The Lord is indicating a chief servant of the truth and fellow-servants, assisting in serving meat in due season to the household of faith. R3811:3*, 1994:2, 1946:2

If neither the "household" nor "fellow-servants" were mentioned, it might be questionable whether the expression "that servant" referred to one or to all faithful servants. R1946:2

Each one of the household is to prove all things he accepts as spiritual food, whether he gets it from the Bible himself or from that servant or from fellow-servants. R1994:4

To give them -- When and as they are able to receive it. R806:2

Merely a channel for distributing the truth. His business is not to make truth, but to circulate it. R1994:3

The fact that the messenger has been gathered into the kingdom should not affect the message, which remains with the Church to be handed out to others until all have been gathered. R6023:3*

Freely we received, let us freely give to others the heavenly food--manna. R548:1

Meat in due season -- Spiritual food. OV356:2; R5651:5, 5566:2

Truth as it becomes due, dispensed by the holy Spirit to the household of faith. B165; A349; OV6:1; SM404:1

Hidden things would be gradually revealed. OV6:T; Q554:4; R5055:1

For strengthening, upbuilding and preparing for a share in the Kingdom. R5615:4, 4671:6

The deep things pertaining to the Messianic age formerly closed up, sealed. R5055:1

To whomsoever has "an ear to hear." Q554:4 The Lord's bountifully spread table of good things from the Bible. R4744:5

Dispensed in a manner and to a degree never before enjoyed by his saints. R5651:5

Can we suppose the Lord would commend anyone who, by teachings or silence, supports the eternal torment theory? R2599:1

The message of the Kingdom to the Church, given at the time the Lord intended it should be given. R6023:3*

The stewardship mentioned is not a stewardship of talents and opportunities, but a stewardship of spiritual food. R2694:1

Showing that the revelation of the "mystery" was to be a gradual one. OV5:4

God's Word is a great treasure house in which he has hid in past time all knowledge needful to his children in all ages. R318:2

We are living in a peculiar time when some of the special features of the Gospel are properly made more prominent than others. R500:6

The harvest is the richest season of the year, when the buds of prophecy and promise have developed and are now bringing forth their golden fruit, and the table of the Lord fairly groans under its bounty. R1899:2, 1890:1
It would be meat in due season in Noah's time to know about the flood; but that information would not be meat in due season today. R5055:4
For those who are weaned from the milk. R230:5; OV356:3
Things to come, as they become due to be fulfilled, become meat in due season for the household of faith. A319
Which, of course, would be the declaring of his presence. R189:2, 149:5*, 123:5

Matthew 24:46

Blessed is that servant -- A steward, the one channel selected by our Lord for dispensing food to the "household"; faithful both to the "Master," his "fellow-servants" and "the household." D613
Humble and unassuming, not claiming authorship or ownership of the truth, but dispensing it zealously. D613
A certain servant which the Lord would use at the end of this age. Q355:5
The one whom our Savior has chosen as our pastor. R5828:4*
If the service be shown to have been performed, the title of servant is an appropriate one. R4483:2
But it is a place of special danger as well as of special privilege. R1946:4
And no less blessed is the faithful household who search the Scriptures daily to see if these things be so, who prove all things and hold fast to that which is good. R1206:4
Lord when he cometh -- Greek, erchomai, arrives. B163
Greek, ethlon, has come. R141:5
Especially when he is present. R845:4
Shall find so doing -- Shall find thus employed. D613; R2303:5
Faithfully utilizing every available talent in his service. R601:4*

Matthew 24:47

He -- While the Lord will be the real Provider and Servant, yet the food will be dispensed through a steward to fellow-servants and the household in general. R1946:6
Shall make him ruler -- Will appoint him over. D613
He will be exalted and given fuller stewardship over the storehouse of truth, with increased ability to bring it forth to the household. B164
Over all his goods -- The whole storehouse of divine truth shall be open to such to be ministered by them to others in the household of faith. R1797:1; B163, 165 D613

Matthew 24:48

But and if -- It implies that when the Lord selects a servant, it is upon condition that he remain in the Lord's favor and in harmony with him; and if he does not, then thus and so shall follow. Q355:5

If the servant's heart is not right. B163

A solemn warning to those who are blessed with being servants against a possible falling away from even such a blessed condition. R1797:2

That evil servant -- Shall become wicked and, losing faith. D614; R2303:5

That one previously spoken of. R149:5*

While these are servants, they are not faithful servants, but are engaged in revelry, eating and drinking with the world. R593:5

Delayeth his coming -- Has not arrived. B163; Q355:5

Not denying that he will come sometime, but that he has come. B164

This would not be likely to be said until some one had said he had come, nor would it delay until after he was due to come. R555:4*, 237:5*, 149:5*

Evidently the presence is one not recognized by the natural eye, but by the eye of faith, else there could be no disagreement between the servants as to the fact of his presence R123:5

His coming in the glory of his Kingdom, his personal coming being already recognized. R1797:4

Matthew 24:49

Begin to smite -- Oppose and contradict. B163

It does not say that it will be so, but "And if he should." Q355:5

A disposition to tyrannize the household, arrogance. R2694:1, 2303:5, 1797:4

Because they declare his presence. R555:4*, 189:2

We love fellow-servants too much to wish to smite them, and we trust that we are too wise to allow the Adversary to draw us aside to squabble with the enemies of the truth and thus hinder the more important work of scattering the truth. R4194:3

His fellowservants -- Those who are faithfully declaring that the Lord is present. B163

Co-laborers. R4482:1

It is not the special servant alone that will have to do with the dispensing of the food for the household. R2694:1

The ones smitten evidently are taking the opposite ground, namely, that the Bridegroom does not delay, but is present. R123:5

Service is their only commission, not lordship or self-appointment.

R1994:4 Eat and drink -- Imbibe more and more of the spirit of the world, the spirit of selfishness, and become intoxicated with it. R1797:4, 292:1

With the drunken -- Become intoxicated with false doctrine. D614; B164
Become intemperate in words and deeds. R2303:5

Matthew 24:50

Shall come -- Greek, heko, will have arrived, be here. "Will have come"--Rotherham. B164; R555:4*, 591:4*

Looketh not for him -- Is not aware. B164

Matthew 24:51

Cut him asunder -- Cut him off from being one of the servants privileged to hand meat in due season to the household. B164; D613, 614

Separate him from the real Body. R920:5

Be gradually separated and drawn into closer and closer sympathy with the mere professors or hypocrites. B164

It is inferable that such an one, being deposed from stewardship, another would take his place, subject to similar terms and conditions as to faithfulness. R2694:1, 1946:4; D613

His portion -- Share with the world the great time of trouble which will follow the gathering together of the Lord's elect. R2303:5, 1797:5

With the hypocrites -- Though not a hypocrite, he must, because unfaithful and overcharged, have his portion with the hypocrites. B164; R2303:5, 983:6, 920:5

The Great Company are not hypocrites, but since the time of trouble is properly for hypocrites, they will have their portion with them. R4655:1, 1470:2, 593:5, 173:1

Those who are not faithful enough to get into the Little Flock will come into this condemnation with the world. R5256:4

Have a severe experience with the unbelievers in the time of trouble. R2694:1

Weeping and gnashing -- Sorrow and disappointment. CR253:3

The perplexity and trouble coming upon Babylon. B164

Matthew 25

Matthew 25:1

Then -- Indicating that it was not applicable at once, in the Lord's day, but sometime in the future. C91; HG94:3

Following the sign of the falling stars. D588, 590

Down at the close of this age. CR252:6; R5522:3, 5137:4, 3867:3

Shortly before the establishment of the Kingdom. R5150:2

At the time of the Millerite movement in 1844, typified by the visit of the wise men to Bethlehem, and since. (Matt. 2:1-16) B247; C91; R5522:6, 288:3; NS10:2, 36:3

This parable is not applicable at all times and under all conditions. R5522:3, 4692:3, 3867:3

The subject of this parable is the continuation of the subject of Matt. 24, the divisions of the chapter being only the work of the printer. HG95:2
Taken in connection with the preceding chapter, it is fixed as belonging to the last generation of the church living when the Lord comes. R87:5; HG95:5

Emphatic by position. R5866:1*

Kingdom of heaven -- In its embryotic condition. C91

The Church--the entire ten virgins. R4654:5, 87:5

Be likened unto -- This parable shows that in the end of this age is a separation or division in the true Church of Christ. R5522:3, 2541:6
The object of this parable is twofold: first, the necessity for alertness; second, to show that it is not sufficient to hope and pray for the Kingdom, but the wisest possible preparations must be made for it. R3868:2

Ten virgins -- Pure ones, "holy people," lovers of the Bridegroom, longing to meet him. C91; CR348:1; R4692:3, 87:5

Separate from the world, uncontaminated. R5522:6

Only those who have been justified by faith and consecration, because by nature none are pure, none are virgins. R4692:3, 5522:3, 5865:3

Applies only to the true Church, the virgin class, not even to the nominal church. R4692:3, 3868:1, 2763:2

For a time these will be all together, unseparated. R4692:3

No mention is made of the bride, but all of the wise virgins are mentioned as those for whom the Bridegroom comes. C191

While there have been virgins all through the age, this parable refers only to the virgins at the close of this age. R110:3; R58:2*

Took their lamps -- The Bible. "Thy Word is a lamp unto my feet." (Psa. 119:105) R5523:2, 87:5; C92, 191; HG95:5

All the virgins had the Bible and some light therefrom. R5523:2 R3868:1

Not until the nineteenth century has the lamp been in the hands of the virgins. Prior to 1798 it was clothed in the sackcloth of a dead language. R87:5

Went forth -- Many of all denominations believed in the message that the second coming of Christ was at hand and went forth to meet him. R5522:6
For some 14 years prior to 1844 a cry had gone forth throughout the Church that the time of the second coming of Christ was at hand. R5522:6
Corresponds exactly to the Miller movement, which is still (1890) in progress. C91; HG95:5

A movement in the same geographical area, New England and the Middle States, where the literal "sign" of the "dark day" (Matt. 24:29) occurred on May 19, 1780. D588

Aroused, in part, by the great Meteorite Shower of Nov. 13, 1883, as applied to Matt. 24:29. D590

This movement, the Adventist movement, was to end in the bitterness of disappointment; the other, the "midnight cry" movement of verse 6, was to end in success. HG79:3, 95:1

The movement is a representative one. Not all the church went forth, but it was an important movement in the church, and ended in the disappointment of 1844. R39:4*; HG70:1

In going, they walked by faith and not by sight. R88:1

The bridegroom -- Jesus, personally, is the Bridegroom, and not Jesus and the overcomers. R398:4

Christ, who is "afar off," and is now entering into a covenant with those who would be members of his bride class. R5522:3

Matthew 25:2

Five of them were wise -- The little flock, the fully consecrated. C93, 94; F75

In addition to purity, watchfulness and zeal are essential. R5522:6

They will understand features of the divine plan previously kept secret. R5150:2

The wise were those who heard and obeyed the cry. R40:5*

Full of faith, fervent love and the spirit of prompt obedience. C190

The fifth chapter of the Song of Solomon gives even fuller suggestions respecting these two classes. R4249:3*

The numbers are not significant, neither are the proportions. C91

Five were foolish -- The Great Company class. C94; R5656:2

Lacking love and zeal, they are overcharged with the cares and plans of the present life. R5656:2, 4078:5, 1952:1; C194

In that they permitted the things of the present life to balance against the things of the life to come. R5865:3

Allowing their first love and fervency of spirit to cool, and their faith and promptness of obedience consequently to abate. C190

Probably in very large number all around us. R5134:4

In that they lived carelessly. F75

Have been in the household of faith, but not overcomers. R1952:4

Not all the virgins will be acceptable as members of the bride. R5522:6

In addition to purity, a certain amount of watchful zeal will be required. R5522:6

The foolish were those who heard the cry and, for want of sufficient light, could not obey the cry. R40:5*

Some were actuated by excitement and carried along with the occasion. R88:1

Their cause of failure--idleness. R4079:4*

In the end of this age a division will take place in the true Church.

R5522:3

They will wash their soiled robes during the great tribulation. R5545:1

But they are still virgins in the parable, not corrupt or lovers of sin.

R4078:5

Matthew 25:3

Took no oil -- The spirit of the truth. C92

The wisdom, the understanding of the divine Word. R4693:1

One class had the spirit in their hearts as well as light in the Word, oil in their vessels and in their lamps; others had only the light of the Word, oil in the lamp. R288:3

Matthew 25:4

But the wise -- "None of the wicked shall understand; but the wise shall understand." (Dan. 12:10) OV268:3

Took oil -- The holy Spirit of truth, of consecration and obedience. C94, 194, 191; R5523:2, 4693:5, 4654:6; CR253:3

In their vessels -- In themselves, in their hearts. C92, 191; R5523:2
Only those having a good supply of the spirit of truth will be able to hold out. R5523:2

Matthew 25:5

Bridegroom tarried -- Seemed to the expectant ones to tarry. C92

The Millerite movement culminated in a disappointment in 1844. R5522:6

The Church is betrothed to the Bridegroom, Christ, when "afar off" during this Gospel age. R5522:3

The 30 years of tarrying between 1844 and 1874 was the exact parallel to the 30 years of tarrying at the first advent, from the visit of the wise men until Jesus was anointed at Jordan. R289:4, 88:2, 38:2*

The delay of the Bridegroom serves as a test to the virgins invited to go in to the marriage, proving who are the wise and who are the foolish. R3868:3

Slumbered and slept -- Many of them dreamed strange, unreasonable things. C92; CR253:2; R5522:6, 3868:3, 88:1

A general stupor, uncertainty and drowsiness came over all. R5522:6, 3868:3

During which time the lamps were measurably neglected. R3868:3

Were in darkness. HG95:6

Corresponding to Elijah's sleep under the juniper tree (1 Kings 19:5,6); covering the period of 1844 to 1874. R4211:6*

Matthew 25:6

At midnight -- At a fixed hour the Bridegroom set out for the bride; at midnight the Bridegroom came. C191; R5522:6

When the knock of prophecy was heard announcing the Lord's presence in the autumn of 1874, almost immediately it began to be recognized. C190, 93

Or, during the night. The Greek word is not definite like ours. R88:1

The call was made before morning. R88:1

His presence makes it morning. The cry, made at midnight in the parable, points to the morning of the parable. R39:5*

Very early in the morning of the new age; but it was the midnight hour so far as the deep slumbering of the virgins was concerned. C93

The movement, proving that Christ was due in 1874, began 15 years after 1844, the mid-point between 1844 and 1874. HG96:2

There was a cry -- Which sounded forth in 1874, just 30 years after the Miller disappointment. R5522:6, 3868:3

This cry still goes forth and will continue until all the consecrated virgin class have heard and have had their faith and loyalty tested by it. C191

So loud that all of the virgins will hear it, even though the world will have no knowledge of it. R4693:4, 3869:5

As there was a proclamation of Jesus in the flesh as King, so there must be correspondingly a proclamation of Jesus, the new creature, as King of glory. R2645:3

Implying that something from the prophetic word at the appropriate time will call the attention of all the virgin class to the presence of Messiah. R4692:6

Appropriately, the monthly paper, "The Midnight Cry," attracted general attention with a circulation of up to 15,000. This was more than the combined total of all the other papers devoted to the subject of the Second Advent. R88:2

The name "Midnight Cry" then disappeared from the publication because, as stated at the time, it had done its work. R39:6*

As long as the cry goes forth there will be opportunity to hear it. All of the virgin class must hear it. R5523:2, 4692:6

Behold the bridegroom -- Not cometh; but behold, he is present, he has come. CR253:2; Q73:2; R5523:2, 3869:4, 149:1*

Not in the flesh; he is never to come in the flesh again. R5522:6

Christ came in the character of a Bridegroom in 1874. R39:6*

All the virgins will hear this message. R5523:2

This message of the Bridegroom's presence will cause the separation which will test and prove each individual of the virgin class. C192

The revelation of Christ to the world will be subsequent to his revelation of himself to the wise virgin class. R5523:1

And the further announcement, "Thy God reigneth." (Isa. 52:7) R2645:3

Cometh -- Omit, not in the oldest Greek manuscripts. C93

Go ye out -- Taking their lamps and following the Bridegroom, representing leaving all else to follow Christ in this time of his presence; equivalent to leaving Babylon, where the virgins had mainly been. C194

This movement finds exact parallels with Elijah's movements from leaving Gilgal until he crosses Jordan. (2 Kings 2:1-8) HG69:6

Matthew 25:7

All those virgins -- Not the world nor the nominal church in general.

C192

While all will be aroused, only those will be led out who have the spirit of the truth in their hearts as well as a knowledge of the Bible--a trimmed lamp. C92

Arose -- All the virgins were to be aware of his presence after he had come. Even the foolish virgins know of the Bridegroom's presence. R5523:5

It is but a kindness on the part of the virgins who are awake that they shake and otherwise attempt to arouse the sleeping virgins. R2763:6

Trimmed their lamps -- Searched the Scriptures. C92; R5523:2, 3869:4; PD92/107

Trim away every vestige of error as fast as it becomes apparent to us so that the pure light of truth may shine out through the medium of a clear and transparent character. R3243:3

Our work in the present time is not only to proclaim the Bridegroom's presence, but to assist those who have the oil in their vessels to trim their lamps. R3869:5

Have clearer enlightenments from the Word of God. R4654:6

Matthew 25:8

The foolish said -- The parable is a progressive one. One might fall out from the wise and become foolish. Q230:1

The foolish were the first to know and confess their lack. R116:2

Give us of your oil -- Your spirit of consecration. C94

There is only one way to get the holy Spirit, that is from the Lord and on his own terms. We need to look well to our covenant with the Lord and our zeal for him and the truth. R5523:2

We wish we could be as earnest at Bible study as you are. R5523:2

Tell us how you know these things, why you feel so sure about them. R3868:6

Lamps are gone out -- We are not able to appreciate and apply the Scriptural prophecies relative to Christ's second coming. R5523:2; C93

They fail to get clear light on the subject of the Bridegroom's presence. C194; R4693:1

Though all the virgin class trim their lamps, all cannot see. Only those who have oil, the fully consecrated, can get the light from their lamps and appreciate the facts. C93

The disappointment of 1844 cast reproach on the subject of time; and the prudent reached the worldly-wise conclusion that, having been disappointed once, they would be more prudent in the future and not expose themselves to contempt. R289:1

"None of the wicked shall understand, but the wise shall understand."

(Dan. 12:10) Cii; HG316:4

Matthew 25:9

But the wise -- They will not be in darkness that that day shall overtake them as a thief. (2 Thess. 5:4) Q230:1

Saying, Not so -- The spirit of consecration, and its attendant light, cannot be communicated from one virgin to another. C94

One person could no more consecrate himself for another person than he could transfer either his natural or his spiritual life to another person. HG733:3

Not enough for us -- None can secure too great a supply of the holy Spirit. R3868:5

Not an ungenerous spirit; it was just that they had none too much themselves. R5523:4

Go ye rather -- We can do no more than tell them how and where the oil, the light, must be obtained. We must go on in our personal preparations. R3868:6

To them that sell -- To the market of experience in the great time of trouble. C94; R1952:1

Go to God who "giveth liberally." (Jas. 1:5) R5523:4

Buy for yourselves -- Each virgin must buy for herself. R88:4; C94
The fruits and graces of the holy Spirit cannot be had for the asking; they must be bought in the market place of experience. R3868:5

There is only one way to obtain the light, and that is through a patient, persevering study of the divine Word under the guidance of the holy Spirit. R3868:6

In order to receive a fresh supply of oil we need to look well to our covenant with the Lord and to our zeal for him and the truth. R5523:3

It will cost some of them considerable self- sacrifice and humiliation to learn their lessons. R4693:1; C94

This costs something of time and study, and of neglect of the things of this life. R5523:4

The waking up of the Great Company to go out and purchase the oil is the latter part of the harvest work. R5761:2

Matthew 25:10

They went to buy -- If it is not already too late to go to buy the oil, it soon will be. R3869:5

Bridegroom came -- Any who did not know of the presence would lack evidence that he belonged to the bride class. R5523:5

All the virgins were to be aware of his presence after he had come. R5523:5

Went in -- The entering in to the marriage began in 1878 and still continues. R3868:6

One after another, passing beyond the veil. R5523:4, 3868:6

The dead by resurrection, and the living by translation or change. R181:2*

Braving opposition, hostility and darkness of night, through which they must pass to go with their beloved Bridegroom to his house and enter in. R4654:5

A going in to a condition rather than a place; implying a withdrawing from the world and a coming into a condition of special preparation for the marriage. R88:4

As the "going forth" (verse 1) and the "going out" (verse 6) were not literal, but acts of faith; so also the "going in"--the virgins are guests by faith, by being in light at a certain stage of development. R40:1*

The going in, like all other features of the parable, is a work of time, which we understand has been in progress since 1874. R289:5

Beautifully illustrated by the happy bridal procession which escorted the Jewish bride to her husband's home with music, lighted lamps and every demonstration of joy. C196

After the going in comes the inspection of the guests, followed by a casting out of one at least who has not "the wedding garment." (Matt. 22:1-14) R40:5*

To the marriage -- "To the nuptial feasts." (Diaglott). R87:1; C191

And the door -- To the marriage feast; not the door of mercy, but the door to the high calling. C195; R4693:1, 4654:5; NS319:6

All opportunity to become of the wise virgin class by engaging in the harvest work. C210, 213, 221; R1952:1

The door to the Bride class. Q738:2

The door through which the Bride class shall enter and the door to service should be kept separate. Q75:1

Not the door of hope, either to the foolish virgins of Christendom, nor to the heathen world. NS295:4

Though the call has ceased, the door is not yet shut. The call and the door are distinct and separate. R1112:2

Was shut -- The closing of the narrow way of this Gospel age. NS195:4

"I am he that shutteth and no man openeth." (Rev. 3:7) C195

We should lose no time dreaming that the door is shut. R5633:5

Evidently the door is not yet shut, but who can say how soon. Cii; R5068:6

Not yet closed, but stands ajar to permit replacement of lost crowns.

Q150:6; R1113:1

Will be forever closed when the full predestinated number of the Bride of Christ has been found faithful. R1951:6, 5523:4, 1112:6; Q73:2; C210, 221, 195; NS319:6, 804:1

The door will close because the full number elected will have attained the necessary character-likeness to Christ and will have stood the necessary testings. R4693:2, 3869:1; Q73:2, 230:1

Marking the full end of all opportunity for even the called ones thereafter to attain the prize of the high calling. C213

The choicest blessings of all time will soon be won or lost. SM258:2

No one else will ever be of the Bride class. CR253:3

Not merely is the world shut out, but the foolish virgins also. R4654:5

After the door is shut there will be no more begetting to the spirit nature. R5761:4

When that time comes there will be a corresponding suppression of truth by the nominal church. R3532:4, 1448:4

The door merely shuts in the Kingdom class, the Little Flock; God has other blessings for those outside. R5523:4 This does not mean that the foolish virgins will be consigned to eternal torment. F75; R5523:4

The deliverance of the last member of the Body will follow shortly after this. C231; R5776:6

It is not ours to say which, individually, are shut out; but we believe that none were shut out who, up to that time, had made an entire consecration to God. R289:6

Matthew 25:11

Afterward -- After they get the oil and recognize that the end of the age has come. R5523:5, 1952:1

After the door is shut, but apparently before the marriage takes place. R290:4

Christ harvests the earth before he makes open manifestation of his presence. HG25:3

Came also -- They had gotten the experience, development, knowledge and the light, and they came. Q74:T

Having gotten a clearer enlightenment from the Word of God. R4654:6

Their knowledge of the presence of the Lord came not from the light shining from the light of prophecy, but rather from the judgments upon the nominal church. R290:4

The other virgins -- Although foolish, still virgins, not impure. CR348:1; R4693:2, 4078:5

Made wise by getting the oil they previously lacked. NS320:1

Saying, Lord, Lord -- Knocking at the door in prayer. R5523:5

Open to us -- We desire also to be of the Bride class. R4654:6

Matthew 25:12

I know you not -- As the Bride class; but they all belong to the company of virgins, the Bride's companions who follow after her. R5865:4

I do not recognize you; my Bride is complete. R5383:6, 5523:5, 4693:4, 4654:6, 3869:1; Q739:T

They lost the great prize. R4693:5

They will then realize they have failed to make their calling and election sure. R1952:1

All outsiders are treated as strangers, as unknown. R1951:6

There is nothing in the parable to indicate that the foolish virgins will be aware of their foolishness until the opportunity of going into the feast has passed by. C194

Matthew 25:13

Watch therefore -- How absurd it would be to tell them to watch for a thing, and in the same breath assure them that the watching would be useless because none would ever know! R2763:5

The virgins alone, not the world, are called upon to watch and wait for the Lord from heaven, the Bridegroom. R2763:6

Because, if watching faithfully, they will know of his second coming. It will be distinctly announced. R2763:6

The watching suggested by our Lord refers to the time prior to the presence. R3869:5

Ye know neither -- Although the time of the Master's coming could not be known in the past, nevertheless it would be known to all the virgin class in due time. R4693:4

Wherein the Son -- These words, to the end of the verse, are not in any of the oldest Greek manuscripts. R3869:2

Matthew 25:14

Kingdom of heaven -- The Revised Version notes that these words are not found in the ancient manuscripts, but it is the kingdom of heaven in embryo, the church, that is discussed. R2764:2

Is as -- We are not to confound the parable of the pounds with the parable of the talents. They teach different lessons. R5492:2, 2764:1

The parable of the pounds and the parable of the talents are companion parables, illustrating from different standpoints the responsibilities of the stewardship of God's people. R1972:3

A talent is sixty times as valuable as a pound. In the parable of the pounds, each got one pound; but in this parable the number given varied. R4693:3, 3869:3; HG665:2

This parable illustrates the fruits of labor. The ratio of increase is the same with both of the faithful servants, and the same approval is expressed to each. R1973:4

Illustrating the different abilities of God's people, their accountability according to ability, and that the same results are not required of all, but simply faithfulness by each in the use of what he possesses. R2764:1, 1973:4

A man -- The Lord Jesus. R4693:3, 2764:2, 5386:1 Into a far country -- Heaven itself. R2764:2, 5018:3, 4693:3; CR306:5; SM508:2

For investiture in authority to be the great King of earth. HG439:1; Q91:4; SM693:2; NS678:2

To appear in the presence of God to present on behalf of mankind the sacrifice for sins and, incidentally, to be crowned, highly exalted and honored. R2764:2

Gives the thought of a considerable time to elapse between the Master's leaving and his return. R2764:2, 1972:6

His own servants -- Not the world in general, only the consecrated; not even the general household of faith. R2764:3, 4693:5, 3870:1, 3696:1, 1281:5; F662; SM508:2

All who would become his disciples throughout the Gospel age down to his second advent. R4659:3; R5386:1; SM629:2, 508:2

They had all engaged to serve him, and he had a right to expect of them a sincere and faithful interest in the work. R3696:1, 1281:5

Addressing those who will be alive at his second advent, and speaking as if they were the representatives of all his faithful followers throughout the Gospel age. SM629:2

A number of servants is implied, yet only a sample illustration of three is given as representative of the whole. R2764:2

Unto them his goods -- Upon consecration, he appoints us his stewards over the things we have--our all--time, influence, talents. R5386:1; SM508:2; PD59/70

Certain blessings, privileges, opportunities. R4693:3

All of his interests and affairs. R2764:3

Entrusting various stewardships of wealth, influence, talent and opportunity. F419

In the day of reckoning the Lord will ignore the affairs of our lives which preceded our consecration, and merely judge us according to our use or misuse of our consecrated time, influence, talents, etc. R3870:2

Matthew 25:15

And unto one -- Each is a steward and should individually, not collectively, as a commune, manage his own affairs and render his own account. D480; R1862:5

Gave five talents -- Can be viewed from two standpoints, both true: our natural talents or our spiritual qualities; or the two views can be combined. R3870:4-6

What are these talents? The very talents which we possessed before consecration, and which, in consecration, we laid down at the Lord's feet. SM510:1

All those things and opportunities which are over and above what we need for the necessary and reasonable maintenance of ourselves or our families. R3696:4, 1282:2

Natural gifts, consecrated to the Lord and accepted by him as being owned by the man's new nature. R2764:5

Represents our opportunities for service according to our several abilities. R5386:2, 5932:1, 4660:4, 4659:6; Q536:3; SM629:2

Some might have a talent for private conversation, another for public service, another for writing. Q536:3

Wealth, influence, intellectual power, education, public utterance, time, opportunities. SM509:1, 509:1; R3870:4, 4660:1

About $6000, a talent being equivalent to $1200. SM509:1

There are not many five-talented people in the world; the world, the flesh and the devil bid so high for their services that most of those who become the Lord's people are of the lower classes. R2764:5

In some respects all God's people have one common footing, as represented by the pound. In another respect their opportunities, privileges and advantages vary, as represented by the talents. R4693:3

"The manifestation of the Spirit [a portion, at least one talent] is given to every man [in this consecrated Church] to profit withal." (1 Cor. 12:7) R2764:3

The more talents possessed, the greater the responsibility. R4660:4

The man with the five talents would have more difficulty in keeping them fully employed, fully devoted and fully separated from worldly ambitions than would the man who had fewer. R4660:4

The man of five talents would have the danger of being puffed up, heady and high-minded. R4660:1

If we assume that Adam, as a perfect man, had ten talents, it would be quite appropriate to say that not one of his posterity today has more than five talents, and the majority much less--two talents or one. R3870:3

A talent represented 3000 shekels of silver. There were great shekels and small. In our money, $1000 or $2000. R3870:3

To another two -- Would have a natural advantage, he would be neither so likely to be discouraged nor to be puffed up. R4660:1

Those consecrated with no families and a reasonable degree of health have at least two talents--time and health. R3696:3, 1282:1

"Give me neither poverty nor riches." (Prov. 30:8) R4660:1

To another one -- Many of small talents increase them by use and become quite proficient in the truth. R4659:6

The man with the one talent has, in some ways, a better opportunity for making his calling and election sure. R4660:1

The majority of the consecrated have possessed only one talent. SM510:2; R2764:5

To every man -- Every one in the Body of Christ has some talent, some ability and opportunity for service. R4659:3, 3696:1, 1281:5

Some fear that they have no talents useful and needful to the service of the body; and some, possessing several talents, use and seek to cultivate the lowest of these rather than the highest. R733:4

His several ability -- "God hath set the members in the body." (1 Cor. 12:18) F295

Our varied conditions of mind, body and opportunity. Q536:3

"If there be first a willing mind it is accepted according to what a man hath, and not according to what he hath not." (2 Cor. 8:12) R1973:4

Opportunities for the service of God along the lines of such abilities as we possess--education, influence, money, good health, time, tact or genius. R1972:6

The duty and privilege of every member of the body is to soberly and honestly judge of his abilities, neither in pride overrating them, nor in false humility underrating them. R733:4

Some in one service and some in another. F295

Some who are not platform speakers are excellent otherwise, "apt to teach," and should be appreciated and used in Bible class talks. R1848:2

We, today, have special opportunities and privileges for ministering the truth to others. Our responsibility is correspondingly large, and our faith, love and zeal should be correspondingly shown. R2141:6

Communism is not the Lord's arrangement. D480

Matthew 25:16

The five talents -- Seeking to use every one of these as fully, as thoroughly and as constantly as possible. R2764:6

And traded -- Used them in preaching, teaching, etc. R4693:3

Possessions or personal qualifications are to be released from the service of worldly ambition, not for aimless inactivity, but to be utilized in an opposite direction, in the service of God. R1281:4

Left free to exercise his best abilities. So, too, we are not specially hampered by directions as to how we shall use our consecrated talents and opportunities. R3870:4

It is a steward's place to seek and find places where he can dispose of the talents and moneys consecrated to the Lord, to find best advantage, as his sanctified judgment, under the guidance of the Lord's Word, may dictate. R855:4

It is a part of our privilege and duty to study how we may best invest our talents in order to secure the largest results; just as necessary in investing for the Lord as in investing money for financial profit. R935:2*

With the same -- With all his talents, not part of them. As a rule, people are either hot or cold in spiritual things. R2765:5

Some with five talents may use three faithfully and bury the other two in business, but we question the probability of this happening. R2765:4

Made them other five -- He expected no more than they were severally able to accomplish, rightly expecting larger returns from the one who had five talents than from those who had one or two talents. R3696:1, 1281:5

Five-talent people amongst the Lord's servants are not to measure themselves with others and to say, I have done enough. R2764:5

The servant who has five talents and uses them faithfully, and doubles them, accomplishes a greater work than the servant who, having one talent, uses it faithfully and doubles it. R2729:1

But proportionately as many of the two-talented and five-talented dig in the earth and hide their talents as those who possess only one. R2765:1

Matthew 25:17

Gained other two -- While this parable should be a check on the five-talented to not be slothful, it is an encouragement to the two-talented, showing that the Lord will not expect as much from them. R2764:6

Matthew 25:18

That had received one -- Not that one-talented people are more likely to neglect and misuse the talents, but to show the responsibility to those who have least that they, too, must be faithful. R2764:6

In the earth -- The opportunities and abilities consecrated to the Lord are being buried in earthly interests, earthly affairs. SM512:2

In the service of self and mammon. R1973:5

Or in a billiard parlor, or in business, or in pride and show. R1942:5

Burying the talents in business, pleasure or sloth; thus showing lack of love and appreciation, and consequently unworthiness of the Kingdom. F419

Are your money or business talents largely swallowed up in a superabundance of the good things of this life for either self or family?

R1282:2

And hid -- Perhaps under cares and responsibilities. R4693:3

By wasting consecrated time upon science, philosophy, music or art; or upon business, politics or pleasure; or in pampering pride or appetite.

R1282:5

Had the servant with the one talent been as faithful as the others, he would have received the very same commendation. R1281:5

Matthew 25:19

After a long time -- In the end of the Gospel age, at the Lord's second advent. SM511:2; F419; R5386:1, 4693:3, 4659:3

They were not to expect him to return in a very few days, a few months or a few years. R2765:1

It was doubtless best every way that the exact time for the ending of the Gospel age and the beginning of the Millennial age not be made known until the time of the reckoning. R3870:6

The lord -- We are not to be judged by human judgment, but by him who called us and drew us to himself. CR132:4

Of those servants -- Christendom: social and ecclesiastical. D599

The Church. Q313:2

Cometh -- At our Lord's second advent. SM511:2

To take possession of his Kingdom. SM693:2

Manifestly prior to any outward manifestation of the King in his glory, because the worthy ones are to share with the Master in his glorious manifestation. R4693:6

Reckoneth with them -- Even before his enemies are conquered. C133; F419, 662

During the harvest period the Lord has been judging amongst his people. R5566:4

His first work is with the Church: "Judgment must begin with the house of God." (1 Pet. 4:17) SM511:2; R5566:4, 3870:2, 1973:1; C133; D599; F419, 662; Q91:4

We, the Church, "must all appear before the judgment seat [tribunal] of Christ." (2 Cor. 5:10) F418

He will judge us according to the spirit, our minds, our intentions, our efforts. CR132:4

This period of reckoning began in 1878 with the raising of the sleeping saints, and still continues. R3871:1, 2765:3

The reckoning was to begin with those servants who had fallen asleep. R2765:2

In the "harvest" or reckoning time. R1078:3

As individuals, and not by groups or classes. R1973:1

This work of judging the servants is totally distinct from the judging of the world. R2765:3

There is no intimation that the disciples would die and go to their Lord to be reckoned with and rewarded. R2765:2

God, who is no respecter of persons, requires faithfulness on the part of female as well as male stewards in the use of all their talents. R1549:4, 1105:5*

Matthew 25:20

I have gained -- Not all who have five talents use them wisely and effectively. R3871:1

Matthew 25:21

His lord said -- In the first resurrection. NS137:1

Unto him -- He who had been faithful with five talents was to have a special commendation, while the other faithful ones, who had a lesser number of talents, were to be dealt with proportionately. F725

Well done -- The verdict if you overcome. R5108:6, 2461:3

Approval suggests the thought of having measured up to some standard. Here, the standard is the Word, the standard of the Lord's own character, which is right and true and good. R4242:1*

Let each keep patiently and perseveringly on in the way of self-denial until his course is finished. R2474:6

Faithful servant -- Those who at heart are overcomers. CR132:4; SM512:1

Hast been faithful -- Gladly spent themselves zealously in the service of the Lord; faithful unto death. R5492:6, 5914:4

In proportion as one confesses his faith, that same faith grows, and the blessings and privileges connected with it grow. R3768:6

In no case have we seen one drift from the truth into the snares of these perilous times who was very active and fully enlisted in the Lord's work. R1282:5

Over a few things -- The Lord's method is to advance only him whose zeal, faithfulness and patient perseverance in well doing has shown itself in little things. F296; SM284:2

Faithful to the covenant of self-sacrifice. NS327:3

Not very many; it is all trifling from God's standpoint, but he looks at the spirit. CR395:5, 309:4, 300:4; Q533:2

Our talents and opportunities of the present time are few and small. HG658:5

There is plenty of room at the bottom of the ladder of honor. F296

You have used the favorable opportunities which showed the intentions of your heart. CR300:5

Make thee ruler -- Sharing the great honor with the Master of ruling the world. Q533:2; CR292:3, 255:1

This giving of the dominion to his faithful servants signified their sharing with him in his kingdom at the time of its establishment at his second coming. HG439:2; NS678:2

His assistants in the great Millennial work of teaching and helping the world in their great fight. NS618:5

With the end of the Millennium, the time for all such ruling will be at an end; hence the parable is a strong lesson in support of the pre-Millennial coming of our Lord. R2765:6

Ruler over what? Some say everything is to be destroyed. Not so! The world will be to rule over, to be brought into harmony with God. HG147:2

Over many things -- Faithfulness in using the few talents of the present will bring great opportunities for blessing the world in the next age.

PD59/70; OV190:2; Q533:2; CR292:3, 254:6; R3871:2

The service of the present life is but an insignificant one in comparison to the glorious service which awaits the Lord's faithful people in the future. R4693:6

How abundantly the Lord rewards all of our little efforts in the service of truth and righteousness, whatever our talents, few or many. R3871:2

Such noble characters as Peter, Paul, John and others, zealous in the service of the Lord, will have the highest rewards. R5492:6

Enter thou into -- Each one, as soon as examined, is caused to "enter into the joys of his Lord," before he receives the dominion promised. C133

The joy of thy Lord -- A clear view of the coming Kingdom and glory and the great work of the Millennial day. C134

The Kingdom joys. R5396:6

The first resurrection change. CR254:6; R3871:2, 3788:6
A share in his favor. R3871:2
Not merely enter into joys, but shall share the joys of his Lord. R795:6
The throne of his glory. NS180:1
The joys of the Kingdom and its work of blessing and uplifting the lost race in Adam. NS343:4
The reward was the same in each case, meaning that the cup of joy to each will be full. R2765:5

Matthew 25:23

Well done -- All faithful ones will receive a blessing; nevertheless, those who have been most earnest, most zealous, most devoted, will be the nearer to the Master in his throne. NS608:5

Some have less ability and some more, but the Lord's approval will be in proportion as we have endeavored to accomplish his will. SM257:1

Faithful servant -- This was said of both the five-talented and the two-talented. CR254:5; R3871:2; Q500:4

Over a few things -- Only a few things are committed to any of us, and the Lord is seeking merely to note our disposition and to reward us accordingly. CR17:5

From the Lord's standpoint, all of the affairs of this present life are little in comparison with the future things. R2494:1

General faithfulness to principle, even in small things, gives evidence of the disposition and character which may be entrusted with the great responsibilities of the Kingdom. R2494:1

Make thee ruler -- Everyone who is faithful would get the same general reward. Q536:3

Joy of thy Lord -- These have an equally good opportunity of entering into the joys of the Lord as they that had five or ten talents. R2765:6

Matthew 25:24

Received the one -- Having become a consecrated believer in the Lord, he had received a talent of privilege or opportunity in the Master's service which he neglected to use. SM508:T

Not only the great talents, large abilities, opportunities or means, are noted by the Lord, but also the small things are never overlooked by him. R2157:5

Applicable to the larger proportion of his people, for not many wise, learned, rich or noble according to the course of this world, but rather the poor, rich in faith, hath God chosen. (1 Cor. 1:26-28) SM511:1

It is possible for the person having the one talent to be faithful, and equally possible for those having two or more talents to be unfaithful. SM510:2

I knew thee -- Cause of failure--presumptuousness. R4079:5*

Thou art an hard man -- The failure of the wicked servant was due to his lack of love. R2766:1

Those who know God and his plan of the ages cannot be afraid of the Lord, nor believe him unjust. R21:5*

His heart was filled with fear instead of love for the Lord; for he thought of his Lord as unjust, hard, unmerciful, unloving, exacting. He had a bad theology. SM512:2; R633:3*

Many, who having taken upon themselves the vows of consecration and subsequently failing to perform them, are disposed to blame the Lord rather than blame themselves. R2766:1

Matthew 25:25

I was afraid -- One difficulty with many of us in the past has been fear of the Master. R4694:1

Hid thy talent -- Representing those who violate their consecration vow, to do and serve, to use, to spend and be spent in the Master's service. R3871:3

If one fails to use his opportunities and privileges, they will be given to another. Q537:1

Would you recommend a man of means to dispose of his business and go colporteur, living on his interest, or perhaps on his principal? Why not? R3148:5

In the earth -- A talent which is unused is soon buried by the tide of life. R3871:5

Buried under a weight of worldly cares or encumbrances which might be avoided or set aside; or under worldly ambitions for either self or family. R3696:6, 1282:5

In banks, store-houses and investment securities, to enrich and cultivate the spirit of pride in friends or children and for them to quarrel over after you are dead. R3696:3, 3148:5, 1282:2

That is thine -- He evidently wanted to be considered a servant still, and probably thought he was worthy of commendation and reward for not perverting the Lord's money to other uses. R1281:6

Not wicked, simply an idler; willing to draw a servant's approval and compensation, but lacking any real, active interest in his master's business. R3696:2, 1281:3

Strictly honest; he had not wasted his talent in ministering to the flesh or riotous living of any kind. He had kept it safe. R3871:3, 3696:2

While faithful in that he did not squander it or repudiate his Master, he did not have the higher faithfulness of earnest, self-sacrificing zeal in the Master's cause. R3871:4

Wicked and slothful -- As a faithless, slothful servant, he was really a covenant-breaker, and therefore wicked. R1281:6

It is required of stewards that they be found faithful. (1 Cor. 4:1,2)
R819:5

If the one-talented man, misusing his, was disapproved, it goes without saying that the two- or five-talented would be even more reprehensible in the sight of the Lord. R3871:2

A man's condemnation corresponds with his misuse of his talents. R3074:4

Matthew 25:27

Thou oughtest therefore -- The very object of the parable is to arouse us to a sense of our shortcomings and recover us from our lethargy by reminding us of our responsibilities. R1282:1

Diligence in seeking and finding ways and means to dispose of our consecrated talents to God's glory and to the advancement of the truth is essential to faithful stewardship; any other course is a violation of covenant. R819:5

To have put my money -- Some get the mistaken idea that a steward is not expected to spend that committed to his care unless circumstances demand it of him. R819:5

At my coming -- Evidently a master would not expect a settlement until he had come, not while on the journey coming. We should therefore translate the Greek erkomai as "on my arrival." R144:1

Mine own with usury -- Interest on a business loan is quite proper. F568; R3871:6 The words interest and usury once had the same meaning; now interest is a just payment and usury is an unjust and extortionate charge. R3871:6

Take therefore -- These gifts are not inalienable; by neglect to use them, or by their abuse, they may be lost. If we fail to use, or fail to use for the Lord's glory, or use for self-glory, our place can readily be filled by another. R733:6

The talent from him -- Implies that he can have neither part nor lot in the Kingdom. SM513:3

He deserved to be punished because he did not use that which his Lord had entrusted to him. R5386:2

The loss of the opportunity and privilege of service as a co-laborer with the Lord. SM513:3

Not because he never was a real servant; but because, being really a servant, he proved unfaithful. R1698:5

There is nothing in this parable to indicate eternal torment for this class of unfaithful servants. SM513:2; R5386:2, 2766:1

Give it unto him -- Their neglected opportunities for more abundant service will go as a reward to those who are already earnest and active. R1282:3

Illustrated in St. Paul's experience; if there was any brother who was short in any way, that was another opportunity for Paul to come in and do that much more. Q537:1

That hath -- Through use of his talents. R5419:3, 3696:5, 1282:2

Shall be given -- Following this just principle, the Logos, who had always proved faithful in all things, was offered the headship of the new creation. F64, 65

Hath not -- Hath not increased. Q843:2

From neglect of his talents. R5419:3, 3696:5, 1282:2

Shall be taken -- The opportunity will be taken from him. He will have it no more; neither will he have any share in the reward given to the overcomers. R2766:4

That which he hath -- Losing the Lord's approval and the light they once enjoyed. Q843:2

Matthew 25:30

Cast ye -- Not a case of being liable to get into outer darkness, into error; it is a case of must. The Master's orders are peremptory and decisive. R3696:6, 1282:5

Not because of murder, theft or blasphemy; not through immoralities; but because of neglected opportunities of service. SM508:T

None can be of the anointed body except they be preachers to the extent of their ability and talent. R812:3*

Unprofitable servant -- The Great Company class. R3871:4, 4694:1

The Lord does not deny that he is a servant, nor does he charge him with being an enemy. R4078:5, 4693:6; SM507:3

A Christian, not a worldling, stranger, alien, foreigner to the divine promises. SM507:4

The Lord will have a blessing for the unfaithful servant. He was a servant all the time. He did not lose it. But he did not use it properly. R4693:6

Into outer darkness -- The darkness common to, and resting upon, the whole world of mankind; not flaming fire of eternal torment. R2766:1,4, 4872:5, 4398:6, 3033:5

Not death. SM507:2

It is possible to lose what light, privilege and appreciation of spiritual matters had been previously enjoyed. SM514:1; R4398:6, 2766:4

Emphasizing the responsibility of even those with the smallest natural ability, whose consecrated powers are the most insignificant. R3871:1
The darkness of error and ignorance concerning God's plans and ways envelops the world in general. R1282:3
Flames of fire would surely make the place light. R2766:1; SM507:3
In contrast with the inner light of the holy place of favor and communion and instruction from God, symbolized in the Tabernacle. R3696:5, 1282:3
There shall be -- In the time of trouble with which this age will close. R3871:3

Weeping -- Grief is indeed implied, but not one word about an eternity of grief and pain. HG303:2

Gnashing of teeth -- Sorrow, disappointment and chagrin in every sense. R3871:3, 4694:1; CR253:3

In the great time of trouble with which this age will close. R4694:1, 4473:2, 3871:3, 2766:4; SM514:1

They shall "come up out of great tribulation, having washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb." (Rev. 7:14) R3871:4

Matthew 25:31

When -- The Parable of the Sheep and the Goats is the only one of Jesus' parables which furnishes a clear outline of the Millennial age. R769:6
This parable tells of the Kingdom from another standpoint, explaining the work of the Kingdom after it has been set up. R4694:3

The Son of man -- Christ, the Seed of Adam through Eve, in the same sense that he was the seed of David; while his life proceeded forth from God. E150, 152

A title of high honor, showing his obedience unto death, by which he secured the title to all his prospective honor and glory. E151

Not in the sense of simply being a man, but the son of the man David, with whom Jehovah had made an everlasting covenant--that the throne of Israel should belong to him and his seed forever. R944:1*

Come in his glory -- Descriptive of Messiah's Kingdom following his parousia and his epiphania. R5530:3, 4784:6, 4694:3; OV165:3; PD63/73
Not another coming, but another step or development during the same coming or presence. R2303:6

The Savior has not yet appeared in his glory. R4784:6; OV165:4
Applies not to this age, but the coming age of Messiah's reign. R4694:3, 4986:2, 4784:6; OV165:3

Not yet. He is waiting for the development of the Church, his saintly Bride class, which is to sit with him in his throne and share his glory. OV165:4; NS179:2

The first event of the second advent is not the manifestation of glory, but the thief-like gathering of the Church, unknown to the world. R2303:3
The elect Church shall share his throne and glory. E479; F419; OV165:4; R4694:3; HG149:3

"Then shall ye also appear with him in glory." (Col. 3:4) R4784:6, 4694:3, 2303:6; SM224:2

"The woman is the glory of the man" (1 Cor. 11:7); hence, the Church is the glory of Christ. R2303:6

And have established his Kingdom, his Church, in power and great glory. R704:4

In the glory of the Father. NS556:6

Conclusive proof that the world's judgment is not yet in progress. Q795:T

This parable applies entirely to the world, the nations. R5530:3,2, 2606:2

Angels with him -- Jesus with the Church. R4986:2

The saints, his holy messengers. "The Lord cometh with ten thousand of his saints." (Jude 14) C302; R4644:4

"When Christ who is our life shall appear, then shall ye [the Church, the sheep of the present age] also appear with him in glory." (Col. 3:4)

R4784:6, 4694:3, 4693:1, 2303:6

The salvation of the Church will be finished before the salvation of the world will begin. R4694:3

Then -- In the Millennial age. R4644:4, 5530:3, 2606:2; E479; OV42:1

After the Church is completed and sits with Christ in his throne. R5406:3, 654:4; E479

Here begins the world's probation, the world's great judgment day, a thousand years. R2606:4

Sit upon the throne -- This parable corresponds exactly to the picture of Rev. 20:11, "I saw a great white throne and him that sat on it."

OV42:1; A345; R5530:5; CR324:3

All the faithful shall sit with him in this very throne. R5530:6, 2606:3, 486:6*; OV42:3

"To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne." (Rev. 3:21) R2606:3, 5530:6

Of justice, mercy and love. R5530:5

The Lord's consecrated people recognize him as their king; but he is not yet the king of the world, "King of kings and Lord of lords." (Rev. 19:16)

HG663:5

Christ will not reign over his glorified Church, nor they reign over each other; but the Church complete will reign over all nations, dead and living. HG336:5; NS179:6

A trial can in no case proceed until the judge is on the bench and the court is in session at the appointed time. A345

Matthew 25:32

Before him -- During the thousand years, the world's judgment. SM225:T; R5530:3; NS678:3

After the time of trouble. R2606:2, 654:4

The world will be before the judgment-seat of Christ in the sense that the Church is now on judgment or on trial. HG223:5

Under his observation. HG149:3

If Adam was judged by a trial of his will without God's interference, so the judgment of the whole race will be, similarly, a judgment or trial of their wills without God's interference. R1221:6

Gathered all nations -- Including those now asleep in death. F19; PD63/73; R5530:6

First the living nations, then the dead. R2606:3, 654:3; NS182:1

Not all the 20 billion of the dead in one 24-hour day. NS179:3

Not in a 24-hour day, but in a 1000-year day. (2 Pet. 3:8) HG273:2; NS180:1

Not including the Church, already judged. F418; SM224:2; R5530:3,5

The gathering of the world will be the result of knowledge. The time of trouble will lead to great enlightenment. R5530:6

After the time of trouble, when the nations shall have been subdued, Satan bound (Rev. 20:1,2) and the authority of Christ's Kingdom established. R2606:3

The gathering to judgment will be a gradual one, not all at the same moment, not all on the same day, not all in the same year. NS182:1

Not to receive an immediate sentence, but to receive a fair and impartial individual trial. (Ezek. 18:2-4,19,20) R2606:3, 654:4

Sometimes called Gentiles, meaning those not in covenant relationship with God. SM224:3

As the Jews thought of themselves as God's nation and all others as heathens, so with spiritual Israel, they are the holy nation and all the remainder of mankind can be properly described as "the nations," "the Gentiles." R5530:3

Shall separate them -- This separating and judging will occupy the entire Millennial age. E479; R5406:4, 4644:4, 3528:4, 2736:6, 2606:4, 1086:4, 655:1; NS182:2

The whole world will be granted the opportunity of making their choice as to whether they will be sheep or goats. R5694:1, 5530:6; SM225:T,1; PD63/73

The final, complete separation, taking place in the harvest of the Millennial age. D644

All are brought to a clear knowledge of the truth for the purpose of testing them, that those who choose the law of God, Love, may be clearly manifested and separated from those who choose ungodliness, selfishness. R1235:4

God's truth, as a two-edged sword, will be quietly, but surely as now, doing the separating work. R269:4

One from another -- It is an individual separation. SM225:T; R5531:2

Sheep from the goats -- The judge will make manifest to all ultimately the heart difference of the two classes. R5531:2,3, 5406:5

The loving, sympathetic characters from those wayward and unsubmitive. R4694:6 Inferring that a majority will obtain everlasting life, as sheep are more numerous than goats. R1227:6, 1057:4; Q639:3

Those sheep and goats will not include the Church. R4694:3

The final test must be applied in the end of the thousand years, when Christ has completed the work of restitution. R1234:1
Outwardly they will have much the same appearance and demeanor, except the Judge will see the real heart-difference between the two classes. R5531:2
The harvest of the Jewish age was likened to the separation of wheat from chaff; the harvest of this age to the separation of wheat from tares; and the harvest of the Millennial age to the separation of sheep from goats. R2606:2, 654:3, 267:6, 34:2*; D644

Shall set the sheep -- Those who will have the Lord's spirit. SM227:3
Who are meek, teachable, willing to be led in the pastures of truth. R2606:4, 2304:3
Such as receive instruction and come into accord with Messiah. OV165:4
Co-laborers with God in the work for which Christ died. R5531:6
"Other sheep have I which are not of this fold; them also I must bring."
(John 10:16) NS181:5; R2606:6
On his right hand -- Place of favor. R4986:2, 5046:5, 2606:4; OV165:4; SM225:1
But the goats -- With the goat character of waywardness and unsubmitiveness. R4694:6
The wayward, those not developing the graces of character under instruction; those not interested in accomplishing the work for which Christ died. OV165:4; R5531:6, 2304:3; PD63/73
Self-willed, stubborn, climbing to places of prominence, feeding on miserable refuse. R2606:4
Those found unworthy of everlasting life. R5973:2, 4785:1
Outwardly having much the same appearance as the sheep. R5531:2
On the left -- Place of disfavor. R4986:2, 4785:4, 2606:5; OV165:4; SM225:1; PD63/73
As subjects of condemnation. R2606:4
Both classes will have been on trial for a thousand years, receiving blessings from the Kingdom. R5531:2, 4694:3
These two classes will not be aware that they are going to the right or to the left until the conclusion of the trial. SM225:1
Not for Adam's sin, nor for the sins of their own weakness and ignorance while yet blind and deaf. NS181:2
We have no assurance that the sheep will outnumber the goats. In Palestine the numbers are about equal. R1984:6, 5694:1

Matthew 25:34

Then shall -- At the end of the Millennial age. R5973:2, 2606:6

The decision of some individual cases will be reached long before the end of the age (Isa. 65:20), but in each age there is a harvest or general separating time at the end of the age. R2606:3

By the close of the Millennium, two classes will have been completely separated; those in harmony with the letter and spirit of God's law, and those out of harmony with it. A144; R2606:5; HG149:3, 223:6; PD63/73

All will be subjected to a final test of loyalty to God after the thousand years. R2051:5

The two classes will not be aware they are going to the right or to the left. Not until the conclusion of the trial do they find out where they stand. SM225:1

On his right hand -- Those who, during the Millennial age, will have attained the position of favor by harmony and obedience. A305

The reverse order of Rev. 20:7-10 which seems to indicate that the goat class will be dealt with first. R2304:4

Who have been perfected through the processes of the restitution. R2304:4

Come ye -- You who are about to enter into everlasting life. A144; D644; OV165:4

Those in harmony with God. Q446:2

But only those who pass the test of the "little season" when Satan is loosed (Rev. 20:3,7-9) will be worthy of continued life. R1234:1,2

Those who will have developed the God-like character. R5531:3

All who develop the spirit of obedience. R4785:1

Blessed of my Father -- Approved ones. F50

The kind that my Father is pleased to bless and to grant everlasting life! R5531:3

Perfect works only will be rewarded. R4695:1

Whom my Father designs thus to bless. A305

Enter fully into the blessings of the second life. R892:6

Inherit the kingdom -- The World-Republic, in which every man will be a king. F50; R5636:6, 2606:6, 2304:5, 655:3

The kingdom of earth. R1057:1, 852:4

"Have dominion over the earth." (Gen. 1:28) R2606:6

The dominion of the renewed earth will be handed over to the rule of its redeemed and restored rulers, humanity. R2304:5

These will be invited to become the kings of earth under divine supervision, even as was Adam, in his original perfection, crowned with glory and honor and set over the earthly creation. (Psa. 8:3-5) R4694:6, 3572:2

Be installed as the subordinate rulers of the earth for future ages. R2606:6

"They shall reign forever and ever." (Rev. 22:5) R3572:1

The kingdom of earth is sure to man after he has learned that the heavens do rule. (Dan. 4:17-26) R196:4

The dominion now exercised by Satan, who uses fallen man as his tool. R860:5

Even the obedient of mankind will not be fit to be entrusted with the kingdom of the world until absolute perfection shall have been reached. NS182:5

We may reasonably suppose that even perfect man will require some form of government. R2304:4

Not a rule independent of divine law and supremacy. God intends man to rule under, or in harmony with, his supreme law. R2607:5

They are not invited to inherit the kingdom prepared for us, the heavenly kingdom; but they shall inherit the earth, the purchased possession. R2833:5, 2606:6, 2304:5, 269:4; OV42:2

Not the same kingdom as the Messianic kingdom; but the kingdom which God gave to Adam, which Adam lost and Christ redeemed. R5531:3, 4695:1, 2833:5, 2606:6, 860:5; SM229:5; NS182:3, 482:5

Not a dominion of some of the race over others, but a joint dominion, every man a king, with equal rights and privileges in appropriating and enjoying every earthly good. R2606:6, 655:2

By the end of the Millennial Age, the kingdom will be a grand republic, whose stability will be assured by the perfection of every member; whereas the Millennial Kingdom over which the saints shall reign will be a theocracy which will rule the world without regard to the subjects' consent or approval. R655:3

Theirs will be a dominion under the whole heaven, and not a heavenly dominion. It will be restitution to perfection. HG223:6

Eden restored, the kingdom which was prepared for man from the foundation of the race. NS482:5

When Christ restores all things, man and earth, to the original design of the Father, illustrated in Adam and his dominion. (Gen. 1:28) R860:6

Restored to earthly likeness lost by Adam, the image of God in clay, "very good" and very grand. (Gen. 1:31) R852:4

Restitution will not be quite complete until the great mass of mankind is reinvested with the dominion of earth as possessed by Adam before sin entered. R655:2

The eternal conditions beyond the Millennial age. R3531:1

When Christ delivers up the dominion of earth to the Father, he will do so by delivering it up to mankind, the Father's representatives, who were designed from the first to have this honor. A305; F50; R5973:2, 5531:3; SM229:1; OV42:2

The mediatorial Millennial kingdom of Christ having accomplished its purpose and being withdrawn, the dominion will be handed over to humanity. R2304:5

With this transfer of the earthly control to the perfect man of that time, Christ's millennial or mediatorial kingdom will end. NS182:5

Man's dominion under God is illustrated well by the government of this country--each state having dominion over its own territory, but all subject to the government of the United States. R196:1

Prepared for you -- The place for man, the earth. R4966:2

The earthly kingdom or dominion was intended and prepared for human, earthly beings. R269:4

When God laid the foundation of the earth and planned its human habitation, it was his design to give it to you. R5531:3

And, though forfeited by man on account of disobedience, it will be restored, as taught by all God's holy prophets. (Acts 3:21) R632:5*

Six thousand years under the dominion of evil, to learn its consequences, in contrast with the seventh-thousand year period under the reign of Christ. R2607:1, 655:2

For the perfected and worthy ones at the close of the Millennium. R2607:1

The blessings intended for them. R5406:5

From the foundation -- Not "before the foundation," as in the case of the Church. A305; R2607:1, 2304:5; SM229:1

Of the world -- Mundane creation. F50

The earth having been made to be the everlasting home and kingdom of perfect men. R2607:1

As expressed to Father Adam: "Have dominion over the earth." (Gen. 1:28) R2606:6

From Genesis to Malachi, every promise to the natural man is earthly. R4966:2

I was -- The Redeemer counts redeemed mankind as representing himself. R5532:1

An hungred -- The world is starved now, for lack of spiritual food. R5531:5

There will be abundant opportunity for mutual helpfulness, sympathy, instruction and encouragement. R2607:4

This sheep class will manifest God's character of love to each other in the time of sorest need. R2606:5

All will awaken from the tomb without possessions of any kind. R2607:2, 655:4

Ye gave -- All in harmony will have the privilege of helping others. R5531:5

Illustrated in the case of Lazarus; Jesus only awakened him from death. His rejoicing friends were left to loose him from his grave clothes and clothe and feed him. R2607:2, 655:4

Good works indicative of sympathy, love, compassion. R2304:6

In that time, knowledge will have practically supplanted faith; hence, faith will have no special rewards, but works will have the rewards.

R4694:6

The Millennial location of the parable is fixed by the rule or judgment prescribed, works. The judgment of the Church during the Gospel age is not works, but faith. R700:3; HG106:5

Works were the basis of the Law Covenant. Obedience, works, is to be the basis of the antitypical covenant, the "New." R700:6

No great deeds are assigned for this honor and favor. Restored mankind will have simply come into harmony with God's law, Love. R195:6

Love and its fruit, good works, will be the ground upon which the sheep of that age will be rewarded. R701:1

We would not desire to have one get here and find that there was no place for him to eat, sleep or live; so we would make provision for him. SM227:1

Those who have the spirit of God, of love, will be glad to carry the message of reconciliation to all humanity--to apply the eye-salve to the blind, to unstop the ears of the deaf, and help the sin-sick back into harmony with God. R5531:5

As a lesson for the Church, the Lord does not say that we must entirely transform our flesh; but he does say that we must transform our mind, will. SM229:3

Matthew 25:36

Clothed me -- Helped them to cover their nakedness with the merit of Christ. R5531:5

The sheep class will be feeding, clothing and helping those whom they have gotten out of the prison-house of death. SM227:3

I was sick -- Sin-sick, neither actually dead nor actually perfect. R5531:5, 2607:4, 655:6

I was in prison -- Prison-house of death, where the majority of mankind are. R5531:6; SM225:3

Prayers will go out continually for those in this prison. SM227:3

Under watch and ward until made physically, mentally and morally perfect. R655:5, 2607:4

Ye came unto me -- Praying for and preparing for those who are in the great prison-house of death. R5531:6

Our thought is that man will come back in answer to prayer, very much the same as did Lazarus. SM226:2

When saw we thee -- Surprised at what the King declared to be the basis of his judgment. R5531:4

Not realizing that they were developing a noble, Christlike character. SM228:2

These two classes will not be aware that they are going to the right or to the left until the conclusion of the trial. SM225:1

Matthew 25:38

When saw we thee -- You did not know it, but I was watching you. SM228:3

Matthew 25:40

Ye have done -- Helped the sin-sick back into harmony with God. R5531:5
Made preparation to assist men when they would come back to life. SM227:2
The judgment of the world in the future age will be very similar to the judgment of the Church in this age, so far as matters of judgment are concerned. NS181:4

With us in this age the test is faith; but with them, the test will be works. R486:6*

The least of these -- Since mankind will not all be raised at once but in separate ranks or orders (1 Cor. 15:23) during the thousand years, each new rank will find an army of helpers who will have preceded them. R655:5

My brethren -- Those who will need assistance. R5531:5

Human sons of God. R2607:2

The body of Christ. R2744:4, 2448:5, 412:1

Children of God, though they will be of the human nature, while he is of the divine. All of God's sons, whether on the human, angelic or divine plane, are brethren. R2606:5, 2607:2, 655:4, 195:3 They will be brethren to all who are the Lord's on any plane of existence--to the Church, and also to all the angelic hosts. R3528:4

Have done it unto me -- Whoever serves any whom the Lord classes as his brethren is really serving him. R5371:5, 5180:5

Does not now apply to the world, but it does apply to the Church. R5819:1

All through the period of their sufferings, the Church could be comforted with the assurance that when they suffered, he, the sympathizing friend, suffered with them. R92:5

Would not true loyalty and devotion count the injury or the blessing done to a friend as done unto us? R1588:6

Matthew 25:41

Then shall he -- Even though all the while they have been receiving the blessings of the Millennial kingdom and outwardly rendering obedience to its laws, not until the conclusion of the Millennium will the decision of the Judge be manifested. R5531:3

On the left hand -- Those who have the goat-like disposition of wilfulness remaining after enjoying the "times of restitution." R2304:4, 5925:4

Those who fail to develop the characteristics of the Lord's sheep: gentleness, meekness, love. R4785:1, 4694:6

Depart from me -- At heart you have not come into harmony with God. He cannot recognize you as his sheep. R5531:3

His guarantee is that sin and sinners and those who sympathize with evil shall not go beyond the Millennium to endanger the happiness, peace and blessings of the great eternity beyond. D644

Ye cursed -- Condemned. NS183:2

Condemned as unfit vessels for the glory and honor of life. R2607:5

Doomed ones. R5531:3

Signifies the very opposite of blessing, a curse in the usual sense of the English. Webster defines it: Deserving a curse, execrable, hateful, detestable, abominable. R701:5

Counted enemies against God and against the law of the empire, and no longer coerced, but destroyed. R1057:2

Redeemed by Christ from Adamic curse once; but now condemned or cursed, as worthy of the second death, by the one who redeemed them from the first curse. R1040:3

Some, after being fully enlightened in the Millennial age, will reject the favor in the way it is offered. We believe the number will be small. R883:4

Not a member of the race shall be "cut off" whom it is possible to recover; but not one member which divine wisdom finds impossible to renew shall remain to spread his baneful, poisonous influence to others. R872:2

Failing the test of the "little season" (Rev. 20:3,7-9), they are cursed a second time, having previously been released from the Adamic curse.

R893:3,5

Everlasting fire -- The lake of fire, the second death, everlasting destruction, symbolized by Gehenna. E30, 480; R5973:2, 5531:4, 4694:6, 2607:5,6, 2304:6, 2051:5, 1180:1, 1040:3; OV165:4, 166:3; PD63/73

Fire is a symbol of destruction, not preservation. CR293:1; R5532:4, 4694:6, 4644:5, 1086:4, 1040:1, 926:1; OV166:1; SM230:3; NS183:3

We must infer that the fire here is as symbolic as the goats which go into it. R1086:4, 1040:1, 926:1, 487:1*; OV42:4, 166:1; NS183:3

The eternal fire is the fire of God's jealousy or anger, destroying everything antagonistic to his righteousness. (Zeph. 1:18; 3:8) R5532:4; SM231:T

They "shall be destroyed from among the people." (Acts 3:23) OV166:T

Illustrated by the fires of the Valley of Hinnom in which the garbage of Jerusalem was destroyed. PD63/73; R2051:5

An everlasting fire is one not quenched, one which burns until it shall have accomplished its purpose of complete destruction. OV42:4

Everlasting death, a death that will last through all eternity. R4785:4

A lasting or perpetual destruction, extinction. R1086:4, 1040:3

Matter is indestructible, but man is more than a body. The intelligent will, thought, constitutes a human soul, and the soul can be destroyed.

Death everlasting, not life in torment everlasting. R926:1

God, under the Law, never permitted Israel to torture any creature; but he frequently commanded dead carcasses to be burned with fire as a symbol of utter destruction. R701:2

Everlasting, because there will be no further provisions made for your redemption or your resurrection from the second death. R5531:4, 5406:5, 4807:1, 4785:4, 926:1, 655:6; A144

"Fire will come from God out of heaven and consume them." (Rev. 20:9)
R1040:4

Prepared -- To cut off the wilfully wicked, and them only, was God's plan from the beginning. R697:4

The fate already determined for them. R4695:1, 3084:1

Stated in so many words in 1 John 3:8 and Heb. 2:14. R701:3

For the devil -- Whose very existence is now denied by many. F609;
R3165:6

"That he might destroy him that hath the power of death, that is, the devil." (Heb. 2:14) F619; R2608:6, 2607:5

Satan has become inseparably connected with sin, and his destruction is plainly declared in the Scriptures, as is also that of those who have so imbibed his spirit as to make it impossible to renew them again to repentance. R5896:2

In the end of the Millennial age, when good can no longer be served through his permitted existence, Satan is to be totally and forever destroyed. R725:3

And his angels -- All who follow his leading and his course. F619;
R1648:4

Those who pattern after his character and partake willingly of his spirit. R5896:2, 5301:3, 1180:1; OV42:3; SM231:1

His messengers or servants. R2608:3, 2609:3, 4695:1

And for no others. R1040:3, 769:6, 701:4

Satan has some assistants, "the angels that kept not their first estate." (Jude 6) SM231:T

All who do unrighteousness or have pleasure therein, spirits or men, are reckoned on Satan's side. R697:4; HG329:5, 728:4

Those, who during the Millennial age will not become willing and obedient servants of the Lord, are reckoned his adversaries, accomplices of Satan. R701:4

Those of men affected similarly to Satan by knowledge and experience are reckoned his messengers and co-workers, and share with him the final destruction. R872:3

All who intelligently and willfully are co-workers with him in his rebellion against divine love and justice. R2842:4, 891:4, 769:6

All who serve sin are his servants or messengers. R3084:2

The goat class, messengers of Satan, who love unrighteousness and, during the Millennium, pass to the left hand of the great king and judge.

R4292:3, 2935:2, 2736:6, 1107:5; NS183:1

Called the servants, angels, of Satan and children of the devil (1 John 3:10) and such like names, because they pattern after his character and partake willingly of his spirit. R1180:1; OV42:3

None will then be servants of Satan ignorantly or unwillingly. R1040:3

Not only the fallen angels now associated with Satan. R701:3; HG329:2
They will be destroyed with Satan as described in Rev. 20:9,10. R3433:3

Matthew 25:42

Ye gave me no meat -- They will not be forced to help the dead. That work will be one of charity, of love. But, unless they attain the spirit of love, they will not be fit for the kingdom, for God is love. SM230:2
Careless in respect to their vow, and merely enjoying the Millennial blessings for themselves. R5531:5

Intimating the absence of good motives and tender, loving sentiments. R2304:6

You have more or less of the selfish spirit which is the spirit of Satan. R5532:4

Not murderers, thieves and liars in the present-day acceptance of these terms, but those who lack evidence of the possession of the spirit of love. R2304:6; NS183:1

Under Satanic delusion and the relaxed iron rule during the little season, those who, at heart, are not loyal to God, and who thus far have been controlled principally by the force and rigor of law, will manifest their real disposition. R1234:2

Sick, and in prison -- Imperfect and under ward. R2607:4, 2609:3

Matthew 25:44

When saw we thee -- Surprised at what the King declared to be the basis of his judgment. R5531:4

Matthew 25:45

Ye did it not -- Your interest was not in the things of God, but personal, selfish. R5532:1

You have failed utterly to appreciate the goodness of God and copy his character. R5531:4

Failed to develop gentleness, meekness, love. R4785:1, 4695:1

Even in the Millennium, with fullest knowledge, some will not learn to love righteousness. R1219:6

Their condemnation is because they lacked the spirit of love. R2606:5

God does not purpose that any who are selfish shall have everlasting life.

Selfishness came in as a result of sin. SM228:T

Matthew 25:46

And these -- Only the incorrigible. A291; R5537:6

The Bible intimates a considerable number of goats. R5925:5

Everlasting -- Greek, aiōnios, lasting. R2607:6, 1039:3*

Used sometimes to represent an unlimited or everlasting time. R701:4, 699:6

The word does not always mean never ending, but rather a space or epoch of time upon which no limit has been placed. R719:4, 699:4

Continuous, that is, uninterrupted. R719:5, 487:1*

The punishment will be as lasting as the reward. Both will be everlasting.

Everlasting cutting off from life. E480, 30; R4785:4, 1344:4*

Not everlasting torture, but everlasting death. R4785:4; SM766:1,2, 230:1

Death from which there will be no release, no resurrection. R345:3;

HG334:6; OV42:4; NS557:1

The punishment, in this sense, will be different from the blight of death which, for the past 6000 years, has rested upon the whole human family.

SM767:T

The first death can and will be destroyed, while the second everlastingly blots out of existence and thus everlastingly punishes all who go into it.

R769:5; CR293:5

Punishment -- Greek, kolasin, cutting off, pruning or lopping off

(Diaglott footnote). R2608:1, 5694:2, 4695:4, 1298:4*, 1040:1,2, 367:4;

CR293:4; SM230:2

"Pruning, restraining, restraint." (Young's Analytical Concordance)

R2608:1, 1040:2, 367:4

Occurs in 1 John 4:18 where it is improperly rendered "torment." It should read, "Fear hath restraint." Also found in various forms in Acts 4:21 and

2 Pet. 2:9. R2608:1, 1040:2

Liddell and Scott say it means "pruning." R367:4

According to the Greek lexicon, restraint; used in the expression, for instance, "The charioteer restrains his fiery steeds." HG133:5

To restrain by cutting off. SM230:2; R2608:1

It may mean more or less of restraint. In this case it signifies complete restraint, the restraint of death. NS183:6

Restraint, not pain; the everlasting restraining into which the wicked will go is the second death. HG224:2

Everlasting cutting off from life, from the Lord, and from all hope of life. CR293:4; PD63/73

If torment were meant, the Greek word basinos would have been used. R1086:5

It does not here state what the nature of the punishment will be. But it is elsewhere stated that the "wages [punishment] of sin is death." (Rom.

6:23) R1026:4, 926:1, 769:6, 345:3; HG224:1

"Shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord and the glory of his power." (2 Thess. 1:9) R2608:2; NS183:4

Because of individual, willful sin. R5925:5

Death, the final sentence against sinners. R4986:2

Destruction, symbolized by the fires in the Valley of Hinnom, in which the garbage of Jerusalem was destroyed. PD63/73

The righteous -- The one ultimate standard of admission to blessedness in the future is character. The righteous go into life eternal. R800:5

Into life eternal -- Greek, aionios, lasting. R2607:6

Life in perpetuity, so long as one remains in accord with the spirit and laws of the Creator. Not based on an immortal quality, but on the principle that there is no penalty to any intelligent creature except upon condition of sin. R3387:6

On condition of absolute obedience to the law of love, not merely a perfunctory obedience, but an obedience from the heart. R3605:2

The same lasting life which father Adam had--human life unimpaired either by sentence or disease. R3387:3

The English word "everlasting" is stronger than any word in Greek or Hebrew; the strongest Greek or Hebrew word would properly be translated "lasting." R3387:3

The antithesis of "everlastingly cut off from life." R1040:2, 4695:4, 2608:2, 1086:5, 487:1*

The exact antithesis of the everlasting punishment designed for the goats. R2608:2

At the end of the age Messiah will bless all the sheep class. R4986:4

The trial continues until each individual has been either rewarded or punished. R4986:5

Matthew 26

Matthew 26:4

By subtilty -- Hesitating only lest it should cause tumult. R4702:2

And kill him -- Anger, envy, hatred, united in branding him as an imposter and in sending him to death "for the good of the cause." R4702:2

So far as Caiaphas was concerned, his mind was already made up in respect to Jesus, and he merely sought opportunity to carry it into effect, to kill him. R2780:3

Matthew 26:5

Not on the feast day -- But our Lord eluded them and returned only at the time of the Feast of the Passover. R2312:3

Matthew 26:6

Now when -- Maybe on the night before his betrayal two days before the feast of the Passover; but the consensus of opinion seems to be that it occurred on the Sabbath evening preceding the triumphal ride to Jerusalem. R4702:2, 3877:1

Supposedly about a year and a half after a similar entertainment and anointing in the home of another Simon. (Luke 7:36-50) R2625:3

In the house -- One of the Evangelists says that Lazarus sat at the feast, Martha was one of those who served, but the story deals especially with the work of Mary. R3877:2

Simon the leper -- Not mentioned in the narrative; probably already dead. He is conjectured to be either the father of Lazarus, Mary and Martha; or that Martha was his widow, and that Lazarus and Mary were younger than she. R2743:3

Quite possibly he had been healed by the Lord, and this may have been the beginning of the intimate acquaintance with the family of Lazarus, Martha and Mary. R3877:2

We ourselves also had the leprosy of sin, condemnation, and were children of wrath even as others; but our sins have been graciously covered by the Redeemer, the leprosy has been cleansed. R3878:4

A woman -- Mary, sister of Martha and Lazarus. R3877:2, 4702:2

Let the Marthas serve the Lord in one way and the Marys pour out their most precious spikenard perfume, assured that neither service will be forgotten. R2744:4

An alabaster box -- Our alabaster boxes are our hearts, which should be full of the sweetest perfumes of good wishes, kindness and love toward all, but especially toward Christ, head and body. R2744:3

Our hearts are receptacles for the holy Spirit, the spirit of love, the choicest perfume, most precious to the Lord and to men. R2744:3

The flowers you mean to send for the coffin, send to brighten and sweeten your friends' homes before they leave them. R3878:3*

Precious ointment -- Equivalent to a year's wages. R3535:1, 3877:2
400,000 full-grown roses are required to make one ounce of this perfume. R2448:2

Mary's love was so intense that it knew no economy. R2743:6

Our Lord wished that all who should know the good tidings should know also of his appreciation of such devotion to him, and that the more it costs us, the more he appreciates it. R2744:5

Expensive because it cannot be gathered rapidly. It requires patient perseverance in well-doing to be "filled with all the fullness of God." (Eph. 3:19) R2744:3

And -- While Christ was still alive. A week later and it would have been too late. Do not keep the alabaster boxes of your love and tenderness sealed up until your friends are dead. Flowers on the coffin cast no fragrance backward on the weary road. R3878:3

Poured it -- The twelve apostles were too cold, calculating and business-like; Mary made up for this deficiency in the warmth of her loving devotion. R3877:5

She was not a woman's rights advocate; she found no fault with her Lord that he had not chosen her and Martha to be members of the company of apostles. R3877:3

These climaxes of character are not reached suddenly. Mary's love had been growing from the first. R2745:4

It behooves us to anoint the brethren with kindly words, loving sympathies, tender expressions, while they are still in the valley of conflict, before they have reached the end of the journey. R3878:1

On his head -- The perfume of her act of love, kindness and adoration has come down through the ages, filling the entire church with its sweet odor of devotion, and illustrating the noblest and truest qualities of the feminine heart. R3877:4

Indignation -- Instigated by Judas. R4702:3, 4487:6, 3877:2

The one who made the greatest ado on behalf of the poor, and who objected most to the expression of Mary's devotion, was the thief and murderer, Judas. R2744:5

To what purpose -- We may sympathize with the apostles, for they were all poor men, unused to such luxury and extravagance. R3877:2

This waste -- Considered in the light of the odor, blessing and refreshment which it has shed upon all the Lord's people throughout this Gospel age, Mary's alabaster jar of perfume, very costly, has proved to be extremely cheap. R3535:3

The Lord's followers are to be prudent and economical, but not parsimonious, miserly, stingy or hoarders of wealth. R3877:6

Similarly, we were once inclined to consider conventions of the Lord's people entirely too expensive, but do so no more. R3877:6

If we should err on either side, would it not be safest and best that we should err on the side of too great generosity rather than on the reverse? R3878:6

Matthew 26:9

Might have been sold -- Mary may have prepared the perfume herself, for the objection is not to its having been purchased for a large sum, but that it might have been sold for 300 pence. (Mark 14:5) R2744:1

Given to the poor -- It is a mistake to suppose that time or money spent in the Lord's service or in the study of his plan means that so much less will be given to the poor. R3877:5

Fellow-disciples tell us that we should not be seeking to anoint the saints with the sweet perfume of his present truth, but should, on the contrary, be going to the outcasts of society in slum-work or foreign missions. R2744:6

A good -- How appreciative was the Great Teacher of everything done for him! R4702:3

Our Lord appreciated the matter fully; the sweet odor of the heart which prompted the act still more than the sweet odor which filled the entire house. R2743:6

Money is not the only thing of which people are sorely in need. R2448:3

Matthew 26:11

Ye have the poor -- Yet we have no evidence whatever that the Lord or the apostles attempted to break the chains of the "slavery of labor." NS730:3

Always with you -- Until the end of the reign of sin and death, the poor will be here. R4702:6

By and by there will be no poor; for, under the kingdom conditions, love will be the ruling principle instead of selfishness. R4702:6

Me ye have not -- So the body of Christ will not always be here to be ministered unto. Whatever we can do now for our fellow- members of the body of Christ, the Head will reckon as done unto him. R567:6, 4702:6

Matthew 26:12

On my body -- The feet members of the body of Christ are still with us, and it is still possible to anoint them with the precious spikenard perfume. R3878:5

For my burial -- Which occurred later the same week. NS779:2

Probably Mary had no thought of perfuming the Lord's body for burial. R2744:2

Matthew 26:13

A memorial of her -- The person who is economical and penurious in his dealings with the Lord is sure to be the loser thereby. "The liberal soul shall be made fat." (Prov. 11:25) R3535:4

Memorials to their praise, testimonies of their love. R2744:4

It was not merely Mary that our Lord wished to memorialize, but especially her deed. R2744:5

Matthew 26:14

Then -- No doubt reasoning that, since Jesus was about to die, he might as well sell the Lord and get what he could out of the transaction. R3878:6

Judas Iscariot -- The very one who had objected to Mary's act of love and devotion. R2744:5, 3878:4

Representing some who, for earthly advantage for themselves, are willing to deliver other members of the Lord's Body up to tribulation, adversity and reproach. R3366:6

Judas hailed from the south of Palestine, while the other eleven of Jesus' disciples were Galileans. R5552:1

It is inferred that, because of superior business qualities, Judas was made treasurer of the apostolic company. R5552:1

Critical of the Master and fault-finding. From his standpoint, Jesus was carrying on the campaign for the throne in an improper manner. R4487:5

Made acquainted with the heavenly gift and the powers of the age to come (Heb. 6:4,5) not by direct reception of the spirit, but by the indirect blessing which came upon the twelve through our Lord's special impartation to them. R4488:2; Q382:5, 639:1

He had justification through faith; he had accepted the Lord as the Messiah. Q639:1

We find no reason for believing that Judas was a bad man at the time of his selection by Jesus to be one of the twelve apostles. R5552:1, 3887:4

Matthew 26:15

I will deliver him -- It was not compulsion on Judas' part, not his duty. Q382:2

Covenanted with him -- It would appear from the Greek text and the Revised Version that Judas received the money for his work in advance. R2745:1

The murder of Jesus was plotted in advance. R5561:1

Thirty pieces of silver -- The price of a slave. "So they weighed for my price thirty pieces of silver." (Zech. 11:12) R2745:1

Those who teach for money that which they know is not the truth have the Judas spirit. R2779:4

Doubtless Judas reasoned that he could make the money out of the transaction without working any injury to the Lord. R4488:1

Which, on the basis of labor, amounted to between $200 and $300 in value. R5552:2

It was not merely the thirty pieces that influenced the ingrate. Rather, it was pride. He had thought to be associated with the Master in an earthly throne. R4708:4

No doubt others today, willing less directly to sell the Lord for earthly advantages or influence or money, find ways of excusing their perfidy. R2745:2

Matthew 26:16

To betray him -- While the Master himself cannot be betrayed today for pieces of silver, "his brethren" can be thus dealt with. R4488:2

Matthew 26:17

The first day -- The day before the Passover proper began, on the 14th day of Nisan. R2771:5, 1800:2

While holding that the Memorial supper was instituted on Thursday, we have no contention with those who suppose that these events took place on other days of the week. R3879:1, 4713:6, 3375:1

Of the feast -- Not the principal feast, which lasted a week; but the roast lamb supper, which preceded the general feast. R3879:2, 3363:1
It was not the Passover Feast, but the supper, that Jesus observed, and after which he instituted, as instead of it, a memorial of his death in the bread and wine. R833:3

Unleavened bread -- Typifying the world's proper condition during the Millennial age. R1800:3

For thee to eat -- Jesus was a Jew and, therefore, obligated to every feature of the Mosaic Law. R4703:1

The passover -- The type has, for more than 18 centuries, been in process of fulfillment. R4703:1

Matthew 26:18

Go -- Luke tells us that it was Peter and John who were sent on this mission. R3363:6

To such a man -- Probably the man was a believer, or there may have been some previous arrangement with him. R1800:3

At thy house -- During the passover week, hospitality was recognized as a duty in Jerusalem; hence the readiness with which the Lord's request for a room was granted. R1800:3

Matthew 26:19

They made ready -- In the sense of furnishing and preparing the lamb, the unleavened bread, bitter herbs and the fruit of the vine. R3363:6

Matthew 26:20

Even was come -- The killing of the lamb was on the evening of the fourteenth day, or more correctly, according to the original, between the evenings; that is, between the sun's declining and its setting, about 3 p.m. R2953:2*

Matthew 26:21

They did eat -- The time had come for the fulfillment of the antitype of the Passover. Jesus himself was to be the Passover lamb. R4703:3
One of you -- No ray of hope for Judas' restoration. The goodness of God only hardened his heart, and therefore there was no remedy. R1800:6

Matthew 26:22

Lord, Is it I? -- The Greek word would seem to indicate that the question signified, Lord, do you mean to accuse me? I am not the one, am I? R2772:1
They were not overconfident, but each seemed to fear his own stability. They had the spirit of self-examination. R1800:6
Each one asked, feeling it incumbent to thus prove his innocence of such a charge. R3879:2, 3364:3
It is well that each one ask himself this searching question, to see that he is not in any way sacrificing the truth. R4907:4

Matthew 26:23

He that dippeth -- It was not the attacks of the Scribes and Pharisees, but the defection of his closest friends, that most troubled his heart; wounded by professed friends. R3820:2
Shall betray me -- Despite the custom that to receive another's hospitality was, especially in the East, a pledge of friendship. R3879:3, 4907:1

Matthew 26:24

Goeth -- To death. R4909:3
Woe unto that man -- Upon Judas alone our Lord placed the full responsibility, the full guilt, of his death. R4909:3, 1962:5
Judas was a free moral agent; by entertaining selfish and evil thoughts he became the willing tool of Satan. R4487:2,3
We are not to consider that Judas was simply fulfilling a prophecy irrespective of his own responsibility. R4907:2, 3879:4, 3364:2
He sinned against great light; there is no hope for him in a future life. R4907:2, 4703:6, 5552:6

Betrayed -- Today some are willing to sell the Lord for the good things of this present life: salary and honor amongst men, etc. R4907:4

Had not been born -- Because the advantages of his useless, wasted life did not overbalance the sorrows and anguish which terminated in despair, suicide and the second death. R3879:4, 4907:3

This statement would not be true if Judas were to have an opportunity during the Millennial age. R5683:3, 4909:3, 1962:6; Q382:4, 639:1
Every suicide, by his act, confesses his wish that he had never been born. R3364:3, 5552:5, 4907:3

Judas had not been begotten again of the holy Spirit, for spirit-begetting was not possible until Pentecost; but this does not prove that he could not die the second death. R5683:2

Judas was one of the twelve upon whom Jesus had specially conferred a measure of his spirit, enabling him to perform miracles. This made him specially responsible. R4907:3

These words leave no question, we think, that Judas had already enjoyed his full share in the great atonement work, through his intimate opportunities and corresponding responsibilities. R3879:4, 3364:3

But if God has anything for Judas in the future, you will not find me making any objection. Q382:5

May the meaning not be that it would have been better for Judas if he were not born yet? This seems to be the meaning in the Diaglott translation. R2283:3*

Matthew 26:25

Judas -- Judas brazenly challenged the Master's knowledge of his deceitful course and said, Is it I? R4703:6

The Judas class are those whose hearts are not loyal, but selfish, and enter into the Adversary's schemes heartily. R4908:1, 4907:6

Master, is it I? -- If he did not also ask, it would imply his acknowledgment that he was the one. R3879:3, 2772:1

Such was his spirit of bravado. R3364:3

Thou hast said -- Yes, I refer to you. R3879:3, 4703:6

At this point, Judas left the room to consummate the betrayal. R2772:2

Probably Judas was not with the others when our Lord washed their feet and subsequently instituted the memorial; so only loyal, devoted disciples of Christ should meet to celebrate his death on its anniversary. R2772:2

Not a threat, not an imprecation, not a manifestation of bitterness, but merely an expression of sorrow and of pity. Our enemies, too, are to be pitied, not hated. R3364:3

The Master was gentle toward him to the very end, giving him every opportunity to relent and retrace his steps, down to the very last act. R5552:6

The testimony that Jesus knew in advance who would betray him does not prove that Jesus knew this at the time when he chose Judas. R5553:1

The divine program was carried out and the Scriptures were fulfilled; but the coincidence marks the divine foreknowledge, without implying that God in any manner instigated the treacherous conduct. R4703:6 It was not God's foreknowledge that injured Judas, but his own wrong course; and thus it is with all. R5553:1

Jesus took bread -- Some of the left-over unleavened bread. R3526:3
Instituting the antitype of the Jewish Passover. R2771:1; PD67/79; SM563:2
Subsequently, after the Passover supper, he instituted with the bread and the fruit of the vine his substitutionary memorial of himself. R4703:5
A commemoration, or memorial, of the antitype. NS75:6
When this cup and unleavened bread are used as a celebration of the Passover, it should, on every occasion, be considered a celebration, not of the type, but of the antitype. NS76:1
Instead of the lamb would be the unleavened bread, representing our Lord's flesh. SM563:3
Representing the sacrifice of Christ's humanity for our redemption. R1800:6
"I am the bread of life." (John 6:35) R2772:3
Unleavened, declaring that our Lord Jesus was free from sin, a lamb without spot or blemish. R5192:4
In partaking of the broken, unleavened bread, we memorialize the purity, the sinlessness, of him who gave himself to be the ransom-price for all mankind. R4591:2, 1636:6, 840:3
Bread stands for and symbolizes all food; indeed, wheat is said to contain every element of nutrition in its proper proportion. R3879:6
Soda biscuits are unleavened bread and will do very well. R3526:6
And brake it -- It must be "broken" in order to be appropriated; it was necessary also that Jesus be "broken" in death, sacrificed for our sins, ere we could appropriate his merit and enjoy everlasting life. R3526:4, 740:4
The Church as a whole must be broken by "laying down our lives on behalf of the brethren" as Christ laid down his life for all. R2772:5
And also our own breaking or dying as members of the Church. R4591:5
"The loaf which we break, is it not the communion (the common union, participation) of the body of Christ?" (1 Cor. 10:16) R4591:5
At the time Jesus was the only one who could break the loaf, all others being unjustified. R5341:5
And gave it -- In giving the bread and the cup, the Master pictorially offered them justification and sanctification. R4703:6
Take, eat -- In two senses: appropriating and feasting on the great work done for us by our Redeemer; and appreciating our privilege of joint-sacrificing with our Redeemer. R3526:5, 740:6 SM564:2
The rights and privileges which Christ surrendered voluntarily may be appropriated by all who accept him. R3879:6

Symbolically represents our partaking by faith of the fleshly perfection of the man Jesus. R4591:3

The partaking means to us, primarily, acceptance and appropriation to ourselves, by faith, of justification to human rights and privileges secured by our Lord's sacrifice of these. R2772:4; SM563:3

Eating and digesting the truth, especially this truth; appropriating by faith his righteousness to ourselves, we realize him as both the way and the life. R840:3, 5192:4

God's object in justifying by faith the church is for the very purpose of permitting them to present their bodies living sacrifices, and thus have a part with our Lord in his sacrifice, as members of his body. R2772:4

After we thus partake of him, become justified by appropriating his righteousness, we, by consecration, become associated with him as part of the one broken loaf--food for the world. (1 Cor. 10:16) R5192:5, 840:3

Partaking of the glorious elements of his character through eating his flesh and appropriating the merits of his sacrifice. NS632:1

Except we eat of his flesh (appropriate the merit of his sacrifice) and unless we drink his blood (join in sacrifice with him), we have no life in us--inherent life, immortality. (John 6:53) NS770:5

Eat and drink, O beloved, says the King to his spouse (Song of Solomon 5:1). Let us eat and drink reverently, devotedly, thoughtfully, prayerfully, tearfully perhaps. R1505:1

This is my body -- Represents the flesh of the antitypical Lamb. F464; R2772:3

This represents me, the antitypical Lamb. NS75:6

He could not have meant that it was actually his literal body, for he was still in the flesh. R3879:5, 3526:4, 3364:5, 2772:3

Not his prehuman existence as a spirit being, but his pure, spotless, human nature was laid down on behalf of sinners. R2772:3

Matthew 26:27

He took the cup -- A new feature. While all believers might partake of the bread, realize justification through the merit of his sacrifice, only a certain class of them were invited to partake of the blood, the cup representing death. SM563:4

Representing the crushing of the grapes, the blood of the grapes, the Master's blood, his life poured out, sacrificed, and their lives with him. R3880:3, 5081:2, 4591:4, 4453:4, 4331:3

The juice of the grapes not only speaks of the crushing of the grape till blood comes forth, but it also speaks of an after-refreshment. R1637:4

The cup of shame, of sorrow, of indignity, of self-denial on behalf of others. R4429:2, 5087:6

The cup of degradation, bitterness, distress, suffering and death. PT383:T*

It is the cup of sacrifice, even unto death. And not only is it the sacrifice of life, but of reputation and all that humanity holds dear.

R1898:3

While this wine of sacrifice exhausts the human nature, it invigorates and makes strong the spiritual nature. R588:3

Which symbolized our Lord's death, our Lord's sacrifice of his earthly rights, which was sufficient of itself to have sealed the New Covenant.

R4453:4

It was Jesus' cup of which he drank, which he gave to his disciples to finish. R4475:1

It is one cup, though it contains the juice of many grapes. The grapes cannot maintain themselves as grapes if they would constitute the life-giving spirit. R5341:3, 2772:6

The same cup as offered to James and John (Matt. 20:22) and as the "cup of salvation" (Psa. 116:13) and as that referred to in Psa. 23:5. R4555:5;

NS755:2

The antitype of the cup, in its highest sense, will be the new joys in the kingdom. R4703:6

Nowhere is this cup described as wine, though it may have been. R2772:6

We are not told that it was wine; therefore it is an open question whether it was fermented or unfermented. We may feel sure that unfermented grape juice will fulfill the terms of the injunction. R3879:6

Our recommendation is against a general use of wine as being possibly a temptation to some weak in the flesh. It might not be amiss to put a small amount of fermented wine into the unfermented grape or raisin juice.

R2773:4

If any one should feel himself endangered by tasting wine at the remembrance of the Lord's death, we would recommend that such a one use raisin juice instead which, though not wine, is certainly a "fruit of the vine." R509:5

Scientific men recognize quite a difference between alcoholic or vinous fermentation and a putrefactive fermentation. The result of the former is to cast out impurities and produce a sweet liquid, while the other process produces sourness and ultimately rottenness. R509:4

Gave thanks -- Indicative of a joyful acquiescence in all the sufferings which the breaking of the bread and the crushing of the grapes implied.

R2773:2

Gave it to them -- Only the Little Flock is invited to participate with the Lord. R4310:2; NS770:4

It is not for the world. R5342:3

Christ symbolically gave them the privilege of sharing in his sufferings.

R4436:4, 4475:1, 840:4; Q188:T

The shed blood was the ransom price for all; but his act of handing the cup to his disciples and asking them to drink of it was an invitation to them to become partakers of his sufferings. R5192:5

We need not only nourishment and strength from the bread, but we need the precious blood as our redemption to release us from the condemnation of justice. R3526:5

Drink ye all of it -- All of you drink all of it--leave none of the sufferings of Christ for the coming age. R3880:2, 4605:3, 4453:4, 4429:4

An invitation to participate with him in the sacrifice of earthly life, interests, hopes, aims, ambitions--everything. SM564:1; R3880:2

All who would sit with him in his throne must drink of this same cup that our Lord drank, of self-denial, of self-sacrifice; all must be immersed into his death. R4591:5, 5087:6, 5081:2, 4436:4, 226:1

There will be none of it left for others to drink afterwards. R4310:3

The privilege of drinking with our Lord in this cup of sacrifice belongs to this age only. None will be left for the future. NS722:6, 770:4

A double signification: first, it must all be drunk before the end of the Gospel age; and secondly, all who would be members of his body must drink of it. R5341:3, 4453:4

Virtually inviting us to drink into his death, to "be made conformable unto his death." (Phil. 3:10) R111:4

Jesus passed the cup along, passed the merit of his sacrifice through us, his followers. R4453:4, 4367:2

Participation in the blood of the New Covenant, in providing the wherewithal for sealing the New Covenant. CR47:5; Q188:T; R4456:4

He is still saying this to us. R4429:1

This cup must not be allowed to pass. PT389:1*

Showing not only interest in his sacrifice, but also expressing our own covenant to be dead with him and to drink of his cup. R325:5

Divide it amongst yourselves. R4475:1

All who accept this invitation thereby pledge their lives in the same service for which He gave his life, a thought entirely additional to anything in the Jewish Passover type. SM564:1

Also signifies our participation in his dishonor, our share in his sacrifice--the death of our humanity. R1637:2, 840:5

Memorializes the consecration to death of all the members of the body of Christ. R4980:5; NS632:1

The appropriation of this by us signifies primarily our acceptance of restitution rights and privileges which our Lord has thus, at his own cost, secured for us. R2772:4

There is a peculiar pleasure in drinking of this cup, the pleasure of fellowship in his sufferings (Phil. 3:10) and the associated hope of drinking with our Lord in his other cup--of joy, glory and blessings. NS755:3

Not the many who will be blessed by the New Covenant are invited to become partakers of the blood, but the few, the little flock. NS297:6

None are to be forbidden who profess faith in the precious blood and consecration to our Savior's service. R2773:5

Matthew 26:28

This is my blood -- His human life, his being, his soul, poured out unto death on our behalf. R2772:4, 2272:2, 1637:2

"The blood maketh atonement for the soul." (Lev. 17:11) R1293:2

Hence life; not life retained, but life shed or given, yielded up, sacrificed life. R2772:6, 5192:5, 4605:3, 840:4

Primarily the Lord's death; but, by divine arrangement, the death of his Church is also made necessary. R4310:3

Which seals. R4331:3

In which his members share. T33; NS297:5, 631:6

The blood which will seal it is now being used in the interest of the elect, spiritual Israel. NS722:6

Who will apply it? Jesus. Will it be his own blood? Yes, because you are members of his body. "Without me ye can do nothing." (John 15:5) Q188:T

The new testament -- The New Covenant. R4617:4, 4331:3

The New Covenant is the one that supersedes the Law Covenant. R3364:5

The blood with which the New Covenant would be sprinkled, sealed, made efficacious. R4331:6

Jesus sealed or ratified the New Covenant with his own blood, death, just as Moses had ratified the Law Covenant, which was a shadow of this, with the blood of a bullock and a goat. R111:1

His will or testament, bequeathing his earthly rights to the earthly seed of Abraham and to the world through them. R4429:4

Which he sealed, or made effective, with his own precious blood. R1604:1

The blood which seals, makes binding, ratifies, the New Covenant. R2859:1, 740:6

Before our Lord Jesus could become Mediator, he must seal the New Covenant with his own precious blood. E28

Not until the sacrifice of Christ and his church is complete, at the end of this age, will the blood of the New Covenant be ready to apply, to seal the New Covenant, to make it operative. Q188:T

The New Covenant cannot become operative until the cup of the Lord's sufferings, which was left behind, has been drained in death by the last members of his body. NS297:5,6, 4310:3

The merit of Christ passes through the Church for the sealing of the New Covenant. Q168:2

It takes the entire Gospel age to find the proper number of those who are thus invited to share in this cup. R4617:4

When the Church shall have finished using the blood and are glorified, that same merit will be applied for the sealing of the New Covenant.

R4513:6

When we drink of Christ's cup we become sharers with him in making the Covenant with Israel, and through Israel, with the world. R4625:4,5

The two oldest Greek manuscripts of the New Testament, the Sinaitic and the Vatican, omit the word "new." R3880:1

There was another covenant, the old covenant, the foundation covenant of all covenants, the Abrahamic covenant, which was sealed by our Lord's death. R3880:1

Which is shed -- The giving up of Christ's life provided the ransom price. R1335:6, 3526:5

Our Lord also indicated that the cup signified our participation in his dishonor, our share in his sacrifice, the death of our humanity. R5192:6

For many -- Not for the Church only, but for the sins of the whole world. R740:5

The world in general. R111:1

For all. R1363:3

Contradicting those who say his blood has nothing to do with forgiveness of sins; of those who say that all will be everlastingly saved; and of those who say only the "little flock" of this Gospel age shall be saved.

R1799:6

Remission of sins -- Through faith in Jesus' blood we have remission of sins. R4476:1, 1443:3

"Without the shedding of blood there is no remission of sins." (Heb. 9:22)
E442

We were redeemed, not with Jesus' example, but with the precious blood of Christ. (1 Pet. 1:19) R1810:4*

It was necessary that Christ should die for our sins. Our sins could never have been forgiven by divine justice except through the divine arrangement by which he paid our penalty. R3880:5

There is no other way to attain eternal life except through accepting the blood once shed as the ransom price for the sins of the whole world.

R2772:6

Matthew 26:29

Fruit of the vine -- The antitypical thing represented in the wine. R3365:1
Representing the sacrificed life of our Lord. R5192:5

Representing exhilaration, the joys of the Kingdom. R3365:1, 5538:6, 5643:2, 4703:6

Grape juice or raisin juice may be used as the symbol in the Memorial service. F476; R5194:5; Q486:4

Until that day -- The great seventh, Millennial day; day of his Kingdom. Q78:3

Until his second coming, in power and great glory, to receive the Church as his elect bride. R4703:5

Two great days are contrasted: the Gospel age of suffering and the Millennial age of glory. R5538:5, 5643:2

Drink it new -- The memorial which he instituted would find its fulfillment in the Kingdom. R2773:1

Not that he would drink literal wine in the Kingdom, but the antitypical thing represented in the wine. R3365:1

After he had drunk this cup faithfully he would be given a different cup, a different experience: glory, honor and immortality. R5538:6

If Jesus' followers suffer with him they will participate with him in his future cup of joy. R5643:4, 4703:6

To partake of the cup of the Lord in the present time signifies to share in his sufferings; but to partake of his cup in the coming age will mean to share in his glory and joy. R1695:2

Commemorative of the heroism of their faith and their fidelity to the divine purpose under the most crucial tests, and a rejoicing together in the victory of that faith. R1801:4

Implying a new wine under different conditions at some distant date. R3880:3

The new wine--new life and joy. R2436:3, 1504:5

The cup of joy and blessing, honor and glory, in the Kingdom. R3880:3, 5420:2, 5341:2, 4703:6

The new wine, the participation with the Master in uplifting the world of mankind. R3880:4

Symbolized by Jesus' first miracle of turning the water into wine. R1695:2

My Father's kingdom -- Beyond the veil, at his second coming in power and great glory. R4703:5, 5341:2, 3880:3

As usual our Lord had something to say about the kingdom. It seems to have been associated in his every discourse. R2773:1

As a result of the trials and sufferings symbolized, there will be a jubilation in the Kingdom. R2773:1

Kingdom glory is the end of the symbol. R5193:2, 2272:4, 1290:6

Primarily it is the Kingdom of the Father, but the Father has voluntarily proposed to place the dominion of the earth for 1000 years under the full charge of a Viceroy, Christ and his bride. D642

Matthew 26:30

Sung an hymn -- A hymn of praise, no doubt, thanksgiving to the Father that his course was so nearly finished and that he found thus far grace sufficient for every time of need. R2773:2

They went out -- Instead of dispersing, they went out together. R1801:4

Omitting our usual greetings, let us keep our thoughts with our Lord--beaten, condemned to death, carrying his own cross, crucified--for our sins. R3527:1

Let each go home with his heart full; thus we may prolong our communion and fellowship with the Master. R5195:2

Realizing he would be arrested, our Lord probably did not wish to bring commotion or trouble upon the friend who had so kindly permitted the use of the upper room. R2773:6

Into the mount -- To the Garden of Gethsemane and fresh trials; so every recurrence of the Memorial season brings fresh trials, fresh testings, fresh siftings upon the Lord's people. R3365:4

Ye shall be offended -- Disappointed, seeing him suddenly taken and ignominiously crucified as a felon. B111

Seeing the hopes of the kingdom going glimmering. R4487:6; B111

It was his doctrines that offended the people, not his personality; nevertheless; their resentment was against his personality rather than against the doctrines, which were too strong for them to attack. R4488:4

I will smite the shepherd -- God permitted the Adversary to smite him. R4487:4

In proportion as we follow closely to the Master's footsteps, our experiences will be similar to his. We, too, shall be hated. R4488:4

Flock shall be scattered -- Be desolate, aimless, perplexed. B111

"And they all forsook him and fled." (Mark 14:50) R4756:2, 3178:6

Only two followed him at the end: one, in terror, denied him; the other viewed him from afar. R4488:5

Being thus forewarned, no experience should move us from our constancy and faithfulness. R4488:5

Matthew 26:33

Peter -- The Peter class, the true-hearted, not sufficiently watching, praying or on guard, are at times taken unawares, and for a moment dishonor the Lord. R4907:6

We should strive to be not of the Peter class, but of the class represented by the Lord himself: of the watching, praying, faithful kind. R4908:4

Never be offended -- It is the specially loyal and ardent that the Adversary seeks most to entrap. R4712:2

Peter was still unconscious of his weakness and his need, though full of loving loyalty to the Lord. R1987:6

How little did this courageous man understand the nature of the trials and difficulties immediately before him, or realize the weak points of his own impulsive nature. R4712:2

He did not know how much weakness was in him; therefore, when the Lord was watching and praying that momentous night, St. Peter was one of the first to fall asleep. R5202:1

Matthew 26:34

Deny me thrice -- Perhaps the Lord allowed that to happen to Peter for our sakes, that we might realize that we need to be careful to put our confidence in the Lord. CR307:5

Matthew 26:36

Jesus with them -- Because he loved them and knew they loved him, he permitted them to accompany him to the place of prayer that they might watch and pray with him. R1801:2

Gethsemane -- Oil-press place. R2773:3, 4707:2

Not a wild woods nor a public garden, but an olive orchard; supposed to have been the home of the mother of Mark, reported to have been a wealthy widow, a friend of Jesus' cause. R3885:2

Tradition has it that this garden belonged to the family of which the apostles John and James were members. R4707:2

Sit ye here -- As a kind of outer guard. R3885:2, 2773:6, 1801:2

While I go and pray -- That he might find grace to help in time of need. R1801:1

Matthew 26:37

Peter and the two -- The same three whom he had specially honored on other occasions; the three most courageous, most zealous, most earnest, of his disciples. R2774:1, 3885:2, 1801:2

To be sorrowful -- Because of the coming shame of trial, conviction and execution as a blasphemer and seditious. The perfect man must have suffered far more than would have been possible for a fallen one. R3885:3
No doubt the thought of the extinguishment of life was an important factor in our Lord's sorrow. R2774:3

And very heavy -- Oppressed with the fear that in some manner he might have failed of perfection and that his death might mean extinction. R3886:1, 4804:2,3

None can read this account thoughtfully without realizing that there must be something wrong in the popular theory that our Lord Jesus was his own Heavenly Father. R2773:3

His was no coarse, stoical nature, insensitive to pain, shame and loss; nor was it a proud, self-centered nature, which stood aloof from human fellowship. R1801:2

Matthew 26:38

Unto them -- They were inclined to think that he was taking a pessimistic view of matters. R5090:3

My soul -- Being. R2502:2, 276:3

Exceeding sorrowful -- He was wondering whether or not he had done everything to the Father's pleasured. CR149:4; R5403:4, 5331:4, 2774:4
The disciples were at a loss to understand his sadness. R5090:3

He was greatly amazed and sore troubled. The Greek carries the thought of loneliness, home-sickness, friendlessness. R5551:1

Not only with the mental realization of death, but also the desolation of his disciples forsaking him, the sorrowful reflections on the irretrievable loss of Judas, the course of the Jewish nation, and the degradation of the whole guilty world. In addition to all this was his knowledge that every jot and tittle of the Law with reference to his sacrifice must be perfectly fulfilled. R1801:3

We are glad that Jesus was not one of those cold, stoical icebergs, but full of tender feelings and sensibilities, and consequently able to sympathize with those most tender and delicate. R2774:2

Even unto death -- I feel as if I would die now, without coming into that great crisis before me. R5551:1

The death of Jesus began at Jordan, merely culminating at Calvary. R5104:2
An agony which, of itself, would have worn him out shortly, an intense mental and nervous strain which caused him to sweat great drops of blood. R1801:2

Supposing 100 to represent perfect life, our Lord had the full 100 units to lay down while we, at most, have only the one-hundredth part to lay down. R2774:3

Matthew 26:39

A little farther -- Realizing the impossibility of even his dearest friends appreciating his sorrowful condition. R4707:3

"I have trodden the winepress alone, and of the people there was none with me" (Isa. 63:3). He was alone because he alone had been begotten of the holy Spirit. R4707:5, 3886:4, 2467:2

Having gone to the Father alone, his thoughts turned inward upon himself and his relationship to the Father, and outward upon the public shame of his trial. R3885:3

Fell on his face -- Upon his knees, with his face to the earth. The mental anguish seemed to come upon him here with a force of poignancy he had never before experienced. R2774:1

And prayed -- Even the perfect human nature was not equal to such an emergency without divine aid. R1801:4

O my Father -- No one can thoughtfully read these words without feeling there is something thoroughly incorrect in the prevalent idea that our Lord Jesus was his own Father, Jehovah. R2773:3

Let this cup -- Not the cup of death, which our Lord expected to drink, but the peculiar death of shame and ignominy. R3886:2, 5422:1, 5421:2-6, 1247:3

He questioned the necessity of the public scorn and contempt as a criminal. SM647:1

To his perfect mind the shame, disesteem and opprobrium added greatly to his anguish. R5421:6

The question was, Had he been absolutely loyal to God in every particular?

If not, death would mean to him an eternal extinction of being; not only the loss of heavenly glory, but the loss of everything. R4707:6, 3886:2

If he should fail in any part of the work, all would be lost, both for himself and for men. Though he was a perfect man, he realized that the flesh, however perfect, was unequal to the task. R1801:3

The same cup represented in the Communion service. R5421:3

Pass from me -- It is well to remember that his perfect organism was much more susceptible to the pains and sorrows of the hour than could be the feelings of others of the fallen race. R3885:3

Not as I will -- As a man. T54

I claim no rights nor attempt to follow my own ideas. SM647:1

The sacrifice of his will meant all that he had. CR453:5

He did not murmur nor rebel. R5422:1

Whatever is asked must, in propriety, include the thought and the expression, Thy will, not ours, O Lord, be done. R2140:3

A petition of all who are truly the Lord's in everything--in matters temporal, in matters spiritual. NS226:2

But as thou wilt -- As my heavenly Father. T54

Proving that his affirmation, "Lo, I come to do thy will, O God" (Heb. 10:7) was not empty words. R5421:3

He submitted himself to all the Father's will and thus proved his loyalty. R5421:6

Though at the time he evidently could not see the necessity for every feature of his test, he nevertheless knew that the love of God was too great to allow a needless pain, and therefore he trusted him where he could not at the time trace his inscrutable ways. R1808:4, 959:6

What our Lord did, and what he refrained from doing, we know was the Father's will. R2037:5

Matthew 26:40

Asleep -- Luke explains that their sleep was the result of sorrow.

R2774:4

Could ye not watch -- Peter did not realize the importance of the hour.

R3886:6

Gently, Jesus reproved them. R4804:5

Matthew 26:41

Watch and pray -- By faith draw very near to the Master, and be full of confidence in the divine plan. R4488:5

All true watchers must also be pray-ers [i.e. people who pray]; all fervent pray-ers will also be watchers. Prayer represents the faith; watching represents the works which must accompany it, so long as it is a living faith. R2692:2, 2528:4, 2526:2

The necessity for watching as well as praying lies in the fact that we have an adversary, an invisible foe, who seeks to seduce us, turn us aside from our vows of consecration. NS227:2

The devil is seeking whom he may devour. He knows your weak points and is ready to take advantage of them. R3179:4

To suppose that Christian life depends solely upon prayer, without earnest study of God's Word, is like supposing that a tree could flourish from its leaves only, without roots and soil. Both are needful. R4984:1, 799:2

What they would be praying for they would be striving for. The earnestness of the praying would help them in the watching. R5312:3

Our part is to watch and pray and do our best; God's part is to overrule, direct and supervise our affairs. R4660:2

Pray for guidance, wisdom and grace. R5331:5

The praying would signify that they were watching and that their own watching was not sufficient, but that they would need divine assistance. R5312:3

Some pray and neglect to watch, others watch and neglect to pray. Both errors are serious. R4984:1, 2775:5, 799:2

Not merely on my account. You need to be in a watching attitude on your own account. An hour of severe trial is upon us all. R2774:5

Our Lord watched and prayed; he got a blessing, was strengthened and came off victor. The disciples did not watch and pray; as a result we find them scattered and bewildered. R2775:2

Watching our words, thoughts and doings, seeing to it that we worship the Lord in the beauty of holiness, not idolizing either dead or living men or creeds. R4706:6

Watching our own weaknesses, failures and shortcomings, that we may protect ourselves along the lines of these weaknesses. NS228:3

Watching not only the Lord's betrayal, trial and crucifixion, but also their experiences of the subsequent days when the disciples met within closed doors. R5312:3

Watch to be on guard against the encroachments of the world, the flesh and the devil; watch for all the encouragements of the Lord's Word; watch for everything that will strengthen faith, hope, loyalty and love. R2775:5, 2692:2

Pray together as the Lord's people; pray in our homes as families; pray in secret, in private; have the spirit of prayer in all that we say and do. R2775:6

Although a necessity, nowhere is prayer defined as a duty, nor is a form of prayer furnished. R4984:4

The frequency and subject matter of prayer will be regulated by circumstances and the earnestness of one's service. R4984:4

There seems to be special need of this at the Passover season. R3178:3

Be active, alert, and co-labor with God and with Christ. R5332:1, 5312:3

That ye enter not -- Yield not. R5202:1

Not that we would not have temptations come to us, but that we would not fall into those temptations. R5312:5, 5331:5, 3759:3, 2774:4,

Those who neglect the Master's words will be sure to enter into temptation, and be tolerably sure to fall therein. R2775:5

Into temptation -- In this hour of trial, which is upon us all. R2774:4

The close of this age is "the hour of temptation" (Rev. 3:10) or testing.

It is the Gethsemane hour. R2775:4, 5312:5, 3886:6

"Abandon us not in temptation, but deliver us from the evil one." (Matt. 6:13) R3759:6

As they were then entering into a time of special temptation, so we in the end of this age are living in a time of special trial regarding all that which we have learned. R5312:5

We have noted for several years the peculiar force of temptations at the time of Passover every Spring. R3178:3

Spirit indeed is willing -- To them it merely meant that they were willing in spirit, in mind, in intention. R5312:5; NS228:5

Their intention was better than their ability to perform. R5312:6

Here, the new creature, the will. R3986:2

Flesh is weak -- Greek, astheneo, meaning without strength; from a, without; and sthenos, strength. R4099:2*

The old creature, mental and physical. R3986:2

Not up to the standard of righteousness, but we are strong in proportion as we overcome the natural tendencies. R5313:2

How impossible it would be for us in any measure or degree to carry out the good resolutions which we make when we accept Christ. NS228:6

Were we perfect, there would be little difficulty in ruling our minds and our bodies as soon as the will had been fixed for righteousness. R3986:1

Matthew 26:42

This cup -- He knew his death to be necessary, unavoidable, but it was the ignominious form of death, "even the death of the cross" (Phil. 2:8), that staggered him. R2775:2

To his perfect mind the shame and disesteem, the opprobrium, added greatly to the poignancy of his anguish. R5421:6

Representing the shame and ignominy of being executed as a blasphemer of the divine law. R5421:3,2

The same cup represented in the Communion service. R5421:3

See also comments on Matt. 26:39.

Pass away from me -- He felt a great shrinking from the coming humiliation and degradation. R5421:3

Thy will be done -- Having learned it was the Father's will for him, he was content to have it so. R5421:2

Matthew 26:43

And he came -- It was no sign of weakness that he thus craved human sympathy. R1801:2

Matthew 26:44

The same words -- That is to say, the same sentiments were expressed. R2774:5

Matthew 26:45

Sleep on now -- Not sarcasm; he wished that they get a little rest, refreshment, in view of the ordeals of the day approaching. R3887:2

The hour is at hand -- He was assured of the Father's favor, and could pass through any experience; he had gotten the victory. R5331:4

Matthew 26:47

Lo, Judas -- He either knew the garden as a spot frequented by Jesus and his disciples, or had learned at the supper where the company intended to go subsequently. R3887:2

A great multitude -- Not Roman soldiers, but a rabble of the curious with certain servants of the high priest, who was also a judge; an impromptu sheriff's posse. R3887:2

A number of men who served as policemen in the Temple and its precincts. These were servants of the high priest. R5561:1

The under-priests and under-officers of Caiaphas' court, his household of servants. R2780:6

And staves -- Maces. R5561:1

Matthew 26:48

Betrayed him -- There can be no excuse properly offered for treachery to God and his cause. R5552:4

Hail, master -- Some accompany a denial of the ransom with these words and a deceitful kiss. R4909:4

And kissed him -- In profession of love. C189

Representatives of the Judas spirit also betray with a kiss, professing great love and respect for the members of the body of Christ, which they secretly smite for personal gain. R3887:6

The mind and conscience must be perverted before each step of sin. R5552:5

All such should be an abhorrence to every one who possesses the true, noble, Christ-like spirit. R4909:4
The Greek indicates that he kissed the Lord repeatedly. R3887:2

Matthew 26:50

Friend -- Not the Greek word philos, beloved, or loving friend; but from hetaire, which signifies comrade or partner. R3887:3
Mark the calm, dignified fortitude as a result of his Gethsemane prayers. R1801:6

One of them -- Peter. R3887:6, 4711:3, 3367:4
Drew his sword -- Which was carried as proof that our Lord was not taken contrary to his own will. R3367:4, 5922:2
The having of the swords made possible the exhibition of the courage of the disciples and the willingness of Jesus to submit. R5922:4, 2468:4

Matthew 26:52

Put up again thy sword -- Never afterward do we hear of the disciples using force or violence in the service of the Lord. R3887:6
Never was there a time when this admonition was more needed by nominal Christendom than today. R2779:4
That take the sword -- The blending of carnal with spiritual warfare is impossible, and such a course is sure to cultivate, more and more, the carnal mind. R1954:1
Shall perish -- A general principle. R5922:4
With the sword -- He who prepares for warfare will be pretty sure to get plenty of it. R5922:4
We are never to use earthly power in seeking to promote the cause of the Master. The only sword we may use is "the sword of the Spirit." (Eph. 6:17) R3888:1

Matthew 26:53

Give me more -- His request would have been honored. Having violated no law, his life was not forfeited, and we believe could not have been taken from him. R2037:5, 5046:3
He who declined to ask for personal help was nevertheless perfectly at liberty to call upon these powers in the interests of his followers--in the feeding of the multitude, the stilling of the tempest and the providing of the taxes. F650
He could have escaped the awful experience, but he did not do so, but willingly gave himself a ransom for sinners. R959:6

Legions of angels -- If I were willing to use divine power for my personal comfort. F637, 650

Christ never prayed for deliverance from his natural troubles, but cheerfully endured them as part of his sacrifice, and so should we. F636
He did not exercise this power for his own defence. R2787:6, 3902:1

Matthew 26:54

But how then -- Likewise those who now tread the same narrow way refuse to ask to escape sacrifice for the same reason, that they may complete their covenant of sacrifice. R749:5

Our Lord does not indicate by his language that he could ask for angelic protection and yet retain the full measure of the Father's approval. R2037:5

Hence we are debarred from asking for restitution blessings and privileges. R2009:2

Thus it must be -- It would have been sin for him to have called on the divine power for his relief or protection from any part of the dying processes, because he had made a covenant of sacrifice. F636; R379:1
Those who consecrated to God, to be "conformed unto his death" (Phil. 3:10) must not only not keep back any part of the price, but see so clearly the dependence of their glory on suffering with him that they ask no physical healing for themselves. R379:1

He laid aside his own will and carried out the will of God, though it cost him privation at every step and finally a death most painful and ignominious. R1041:2

The temporal favors were withheld that the divine purpose might be accomplished in the sacrificial death of his beloved Son. R1689:6

Matthew 26:56

Forsook him -- Are we prepared for the time when there will possibly be a general scattering, as these "all forsook him and fled"? R3887:1

And fled -- Our Lord had said, "Let these go their way." (John 18:8)
R3888:1

Matthew 26:57

And they -- Their policy was to curry favor with the Roman Emperor and to seek to hold the common people in subjection to themselves. R4711:1

Led him away -- Our Lord surrendered voluntarily. R5922:2

At probably three o'clock in the morning. R5561:1

Probably about one o'clock in the morning. The examination and trial are supposed to have lasted until half past five in the morning. R2312:3

To Caiaphas -- Evidently the ringleader in the conspiracy against Jesus. R2780:6

Some of their highest offices were held by irreligionists. The Chief Priest was a Sadducee who wholly disbelieved in the promises of God to Israel. R4710:6 Amongst Christians there are D.D.'s who are unbelievers. R4711:1

We hearken to St. Peter's words respecting the transaction, "I wot that through ignorance ye did, as did also your rulers." (Acts 3:15-17) R4710:3

Were assembled -- Contrary to the Jewish Law, which forbade the trial of any man between sunset and sunrise. R3367:5, 4711:4, 3888:2, 2781:1

This, being the night of the paschal supper, made it still more objectionable. R1809:2

Carefully excluding, evidently, a few such men as Joseph of Arimathea, Nicodemus and probably a few others known to be favorably inclined toward the new teacher. R1809:2

Matthew 26:58

High priest's palace -- The house of Annas, a superannuated high priest, whose son-in-law Caiaphas officiated in his stead. R5561:1

Matthew

All the council -- The Sanhedrin, composed of seventy of the most influential Jews, an ecclesiastical court, whose voice properly had great influence with the Roman governor. R5561:2

The examination was merely a preliminary one to get together such evidence as could be rushed through rapidly at a prearranged session the following morning. R4711:5

Sought false witness -- They did not wish true witnesses who would tell what they knew about the Master. R3888:3

Everywhere there is a tendency to make excuse and depart from the laws and from the principles of justice, under the claim that the circumstances and the conditions of the case make necessary such a violation of law and just principles. R5560:3

Through bribery. R5561:2

Matthew 26:60

But found none -- They found many who willingly bore false witness against him, but none whose witness agreed together. R1809:3

It is to the credit of those connected with the court that they neither seriously misunderstood our Lord's teachings nor were willing to misrepresent them. R3888:3

Came two false witnesses -- Who falsified by slightly perverting our Lord's statements. R2312:5

The Jewish Law required at least two witnesses to any such trial. R2781:2

No attempt was made to bring any of those whom Jesus had relieved of various sicknesses. R5561:2

Matthew 26:61

I am able -- Nothing about this was false evidence. It was what the majority of those who heard probably understood our Lord to mean. R3888:3

Destroy the temple -- Not the Jewish Temple, "But this he spake of the temple of his body." (John 2:19) R638:3*

The true Church. T70

In three days -- The fifth, sixth and seventh thousand-year days. R3375:2

The Sanhedrin decided that he was a blasphemer for saying this. R5421:2

Matthew 26:62

The high priest arose -- To give the effect that very damaging testimony had been given. R2781:2

And said -- Caiaphas, not only high priest, but in this particular case, acting as prosecuting attorney. R5561:2

Answerest thou nothing? -- A different and illegal plan, to excite the prisoner so that he would make some incriminating confession. R2781:2

Matthew 26:63

Jesus held his peace -- He was not there to defend himself; and, if he had been, there was no need for defence. There was nothing criminal in what he had said respecting the Temple. R2781:2

Knowing that the truth was not desired and would avail nothing with these men who so warmly cherished murder in their hearts. R1809:5

I adjure thee -- I put thee under oath. R2781:2

The Son of God -- Not Jehovah himself. R2781:4,5

The charge of blasphemy was based upon his claim of being a Son of God, not the Father himself; that thus he was placing himself on a parity with God, as being of the same kind or nature. R2781:5

For Jesus to keep quiet would have been to deny this great truth and to have failed to give proper witness. R5561:4

Matthew 26:64

Jesus saith -- Our Lord was not bound to answer this question, which he well knew would be used to incriminate him as a blasphemer. R2781:3

To have remained silent would have been to deny himself, denying the truth, and denying the High Priest of the nation the knowledge and the corresponding responsibility of the hour. R3888:5

Thou hast said -- That is my name. R3888:5

That is, I assent to what you have said; or, I am the Messiah, the Son of God. R3888:5, 2781:3

Hereafter -- In the Millennial age, at his second coming. R3888:5, 5408:6

Ye shall see -- A declaration that those who there witnessed his humiliation and mock trial should in due time recognize him as the honored of God. R2781:3

Right hand of power -- Right hand signifies the chief place, position of excellence or favor, next to the chief ruler. A92

"Sit thou on my right hand until I make thine enemies thy footstool."

(Psa. 110:1) A92, 93

Seated at the Father's right hand in the sense of being given this permanent position of honor and dignity. R5408:6

Honored with a superior station, a position above all others. R2935:2

Jesus will be on the right hand when coming, and will remain on the right hand during the Millennial age and forever. A93

The power and glory of his Kingdom, which he had previously affirmed was not of this world but of the world to come, wherein dwelleth righteousness. R1809:5

In the testing of mankind, after the Mediatorial reign, Jesus will be the Father's representative. R4999:4

In the clouds -- The time of trouble. B138

Of heaven -- The powers of spiritual control. A318

Matthew 26:65

Rent his clothes -- Greek, simla, or upper garment. R2781:3

His very robes were symbolic of the blessed one who stood in their midst, fulfilling to the letter the predictions of the prophets. R1809:5

Implying to the Sanhedrin that, as a representative of God amongst them, he had heard something awful indeed. R5561:4

As an expression of his pretended righteous indignation. R3889:1

Spoken blasphemy -- No charges of treason or sedition were made. Such would have been out of order. Because Jews held their right to freedom from the Roman yoke, treason to Rome would have been loyalty to Judaism. R2312:6

Matthew 26:66

What think ye? -- Apparently only two refrained from this vote--Nicodemus and Joseph of Arimathea; both had great respect for Jesus. R5561:4

They answered -- As prearranged. R2781:3 Guilty of death -- Condemned by the high priest as a blasphemer and malefactor. R5561:5

The Jews, who caused the crucifixion of Jesus, certainly did so in much the same spirit which led St. Paul, then Saul of Tarsus, to cause the stoning of St. Stephen. R4710:6

Matthew 26:67

Then -- During the interim between the 3 a.m. examination and the 5 a.m. formal conviction of our Lord. R2470:5

Did they -- The servants, manifesting the same spirit as their masters. Their methods were ruder because they were more ignorant and coarse. R2470:4

Spit in his face -- "He shall see of the travail of his soul and shall be satisfied." (Isa. 53:11) E52

Low minds delight in the misfortunes of those whom they realize to be their superiors. R2470:5

How do we receive the buffetings, the trials, the "contradictions of sinners"? Are we similarly patient and long-suffering? R3889:4

Others smote him -- "I gave my back to the smiters and my cheeks to them that plucked off my hair; I hid not my face for shame and spitting" (Isa. 50:6) E52

"Consider him who endured such contradiction of sinners against himself." (Heb. 12:3) R2781:6

Matthew 26:69

Peter sat without -- St. John, because of an acquaintance with the high priest's family, penetrated further into the palace than St. Peter, who stood in the courtyard. R4712:4

In the palace -- Courageous enough to enter, even after having cut off the ear of one of the priest's servants. (John 18:15,16) R5202:2, 4711:4

Matthew 26:70

But he denied -- Peter had been too sure of his own stability, too confident of his loyalty. He was entrapped by the Adversary along the very line of his boasting. R4712:5

The weaknesses, faults and blemishes of his character were of his flesh and not of his real heart intention. R4711:6

Matthew 26:74

Then -- An illustration of God's Temple class upon those who leave symbolic Babylon, following the casting off of nominal Israel. C188

Began he to curse -- Foreshadowing the testing of the sanctuary class now. C189

I know not the man -- But this sin was before the Spirit was given. F224

Matthew 26:75

And wept bitterly -- We know not what his prayers were, but we may be sure they were full of deep contrition that he had denied the Master.

R5312:5

It is said that for the rest of his life Peter arose every morning at cock-crowing to remember afresh this denial of his Lord. R3368:1

The weeping showed that the denial was merely the result of weakness of the flesh. R5202:2

The weaknesses, the faults, the blemishes of his character were of his flesh and not of his real heart intention. R4711:6

Peter was sifted (Luke 22:31), and almost failed; but, being "clean," true at heart, he was enabled to come off victorious. Judas also was tested, and he proved to be unclean. C189

Those who fail today should, too, weep bitterly for transgressions and repent and profit by their experiences. R4712:5

Matthew 27

Matthew 27:1

Morning was come -- As early in the morning as possible, before the people would be generally astir. R5570:2, 4712:3

The Sanhedrin having been called together so as to legally confirm the illegal trial of the night previous. R3368:1, 4712:3, 2781:5, 1809:3

Matthew 27:2

To Pontius Pilate -- Tradition has it that Pilate had heard previously of Jesus, and even met him by appointment privately, making inquiry respecting his teachings. R5570:2

The governor -- The Roman Governor of Judea, the representative of Caesar's government. R5570:2

Matthew 27:3

When he saw -- Implying that he was surprised when Jesus was condemned.

Apparently he surmised that Jesus, brought to the crucial test, would assert himself as the Master and triumph over his enemies. R5552:4

Repented himself -- Judas was not without conscience, but lacked the genuine loyalty of heart which, in the Lord's sight, is indispensable; the absence of which, in Judas' case, was inexcusable. R3760:2

Were Judas' tears better than those of Esau (Heb. 12:17)? Did his repentance lead to a renewed and reformed life, or to self-destruction (Heb. 6:6)? R2283:6

Matthew 27:4

See thou to that -- Greek, optomai, attend thou to that. R140:3

Matthew 27:5

And hanged himself -- Acts 1:8 says that, falling headlong, he burst asunder. Both are true. If he chose the branch of a tree overhanging a precipice to hang himself, the rope might readily break under the strain and the fall take place. R5552:6

The rewards of unrighteousness never yield the honors and blessings coveted. R2469:4

"Woe to that man by whom the offence cometh." (Matt. 18:7) R3760:3

Every suicide, by his act, confesses his wish that he had never been born.

R3364:3, 5552:5, 4907:3

There may be hope for other suicides because of the ignorance and because Christ died for all. R5552:5

Thirty pieces of silver -- The price of a slave. R2745:1

Equivalent to about twenty dollars of our money. R2468:2

Children of Israel -- The whole twelve tribes. C293

Potter's field -- Burial place for strangers. R5552:3

Matthew 27:11

Art thou the King -- Realizing that Pilate would not recognize blasphemy as a cause for death, the charge against Jesus before Pilate was a totally different one, namely, that Jesus was a seditious and raiser of disturbance. R4712:3, 5570:3, 2312:6, 1809:6

Thou sayest -- He makes no response to the various charges and calumnies which the Jewish elders and priests heaped upon him. R2313:1

Priests and elders -- Having been rejected by them as the king. B251

Matthew 27:14

Never a word -- Jesus made no defense. He knew that the time had come for him to die. He would not attempt to turn aside that which he knew to be a part of the divine program for him. R5570:3, 2313:1, 575:4

The governor marvelled -- Amazed that anyone should be so indifferent to the preservation of his own life. R2313:1, 1810:1

Barabbas -- A highway robber. R5571:2

He evidently thought that, because Barabbas was so undesirable a person to have at liberty, the Jews would finally conclude that of the two they would prefer to have Jesus at liberty rather than Barabbas. R2313:2

Matthew 27:18

For envy -- Typified by the envy of Joseph's brethren. R3971:4
Because he and his teachings were having more influence with the common people than could be exercised by the chief priests and scribes. R4712:6, 2316:2

Realizing their own inferiority and unfitness to be the leaders, they could not brook the appearance of a rival of superior talents and ability. R1964:1

His wife -- Possibly one of the Lord's followers. R3896:4*

Matthew 27:21

They said, Barabbas -- The world's natural choice is for one of murderous spirit rather than a saint. R3896:2

Religious fanaticism is the deepest, wickedest and most conscienceless of hatreds. R2313:2

Matthew 27:22

They all say -- At the close of Jesus' ministry only about 500 worthy ones had been found. Most Israelites were not ready to be used of God in the blessing of the other nations. R4593:5

Three classes of criminals come to view: the Pharisaical class, who for envy delivered him up; the Judas class, hirelings, ready to sell their services for bribes; and the cold-blooded menials, who watch on with complacency and indifference. R1964:1-4

Let him be crucified -- The most ignominious and cruel method of death, so that his memory should be ever covered with infamy. R1810:4

What evil -- Answering "No" to their cry. R2313:2

But they cried -- Judas loved money, and these loved the approval of the priests and rulers and wanted to be on the popular side. R1964:2

Let him be crucified -- The Jewish aristocracy and democracy united in demonstration of untruth that "The voice of the people is the voice of God." R3369:5

Matthew 27:24

A tumult was made -- As a representative and mouthpiece for the Roman empire, Pilate was required to preserve peace at any cost. R2313:2

And washed his hands -- As a symbol of his own disagreement with the death-decree which they were compelling him to render. R2786:3

To indicate his dissent and clearing himself from responsibility. R3896:5

I am innocent -- Manifesting far greater concern than the Papacy would have done under similar circumstances. B330, 331

Remembering that Pilate was neither a Jew nor a Christian, but a heathen man, we cannot condemn him as others have done, but commend him as a man who loved justice. R2786:4

This just person -- While the world blamed Jesus, yet in the private counsels they recognized the fact that he was harmless. R4797:1

See ye to it -- Greek, optomai, attend ye to it. R140:6

It was policy that he rule justly, but justice was to be sacrificed at any time in the interests of the Roman Empire. R5570:2

Look to yourselves, that you are likewise free from blood-guiltiness. R2313:4

Matthew 27:25

His blood be on us -- The full responsibility of what followed was left with the Jews. R3896:6, 5721:1; Q356:1

The curse of blindness came as requested. D571

The Lord took them at their word. OV77:T

Alas! poor Jews! With what judgment you judge, you have been judged. R2313:4

The curse which they brought upon their own heads remains with them. They can only escape the curse of the Law and this additional curse by having the merit of Christ's blood implied to them. R3062:3

There is no way to escape from your self- pronounced curse of his blood, except by accepting his blood. R2313:4

The better educated Pharisees and Priests who incited the multitude had more responsibility, and Judas was the real crucifier because of his knowledge and willfulness. R4909:2

And on our children -- And they also expressed the desire that their posterity should bear it. Q356:1; R5721:1

It has been so! They have since suffered as aliens from God, without prophet, priest, sin- offerings or Atonement Days. R5571:4

The turning point of Israel's history. OV77:T

Scourged Jesus -- Possibly hoping that the scourging would satisfy his adversaries' thirst for blood. R3369:1

He delivered him -- Influenced more by considerations of policy than of principle, and willing to satisfy the people. R1810:4

The Roman government expected their governors to be absolutely just in respect to Roman citizens; dealings with others were to be conciliatory. PD69/83

Matthew 27:28

They stripped him -- "He shall see of the travail of his soul and shall be satisfied." (Isa. 53:11) E52

Matthew 27:29

Mocked him -- The trials, sufferings and contradictions which our Lord endured, while no part of our ransom-price, were expedient in the Father's judgment as being a part of his testing. R2316:3

Crown of thorns -- They jeered him upon his claim to kingship. R2786:5

Reed in his right hand -- Without a surmise that he really was the one to whose scepter every knee shall bow. (Phil. 2:10) R2786:5

Matthew 27:30

They spit upon him -- "I hid not my face from shame and spitting." (Isa. 50:6) E52

And smote him -- "I gave my back to the smiters and my cheeks to them that plucked off the hair." (Isa. 50:6) E52

Matthew 27:32

A man of Cyrene -- Where now were Peter, James and John! R3369:6

To bear his cross -- The portion of it which dragged. R3369:6

Because, according to tradition, our Lord had been compelled to carry the cross and fainted under it. E123

The opportunity to bear the cross for the members of the Lord's body is still with us. R2787:1, 3370:1

The Lord will send the aid necessary, even though, as in this case, it be impressed. R3370:1

Golgotha -- In Latin, Calvary. R3900:6, 3370:2

Place of a skull -- Here, in the perpendicular face of a limestone knoll, is the most remarkable likeness to a skull. R3900:6, 3370:2, 1394:6

Matthew 27:34

Mingled with gall -- To deaden the pain. R3370:2, 3901:1

Not as an injury, but as a kindness. It is supposed that the mixture would assuage thirst to some degree. R3562:6

Tasted thereof -- As a token of his appreciation for the kindness expressed by it. R3370:2, 3901:1

He would not drink -- Preferring to experience the full measure of the pain and suffering which the Father's wisdom and love and justice had prepared for him. R3370:2, 3901:1, 2473:3

Matthew 27:35

Parted his garments -- The clothing in which Jesus appeared after his resurrection was as specially created for the occasion as was the body in which he appeared. B128

The usual dress of a Jew consisted of five parts: the head dress, the shoes, the outer garment or toga, the girdle (one part for each of the soldiers) and the tunic. R3562:4

Some in Christendom are willing to divide among themselves day by day the blessings and advantages which have come through his death, but without appreciation or gratitude. R3562:4

Upon my vesture -- His seamless robe, beautifully representing his own personal perfection; probably a gift from one of the noble women mentioned as being among his friends. R2316:1

Cast lots -- For the "chilton," the tunic or coat; a kind of shirt fitting somewhat loosely and reaching from the neck to the ankles. R3562:4

Matthew 27:36

And sitting down -- Presuming to have no responsibility in the matter, caring nothing for the honor of justice or the vindication of right. R1964:2

They watched him there -- Depravity of fallen human nature was strikingly illustrated in those who witnessed the Lord's many wonderful works, and then his unresisting sacrifice for our sins--they were cold, without appreciation. R2315:6

Resembling, to a considerable degree, the whole of Christendom who have heard of Jesus and are still totally unmoved, unconcerned, without thankfulness or appreciation. R3562:4, 2316:2

There are still the cruel cold-blooded menials who, with complacency and indifference, and yet with curiosity, sit down and watch the sufferings of the body, and wonder what will happen next. R1964:6

God of Heaven! forbid that I should gaze with pitiless eye on a suffering child of thine. R5837:6*

Instead of falling at his feet and exclaiming, "My Lord and my Redeemer." Many in our day similarly view the Lord's sufferings with calm indifference. R2316:1

Set up over his head -- The crime of each culprit was, by law, inscribed over his head. R4713:5

His accusation written -- In three languages--Hebrew, Greek and Latin. R3562:2

KING OF THE JEWS -- Little did Pilate think that this was the true title of the wonderful man Christ Jesus whom they caused to be put to death. R2316:2

Two thieves -- Crucified as an evildoer. R2316:2

From the standpoint of the priests and Pharisees, the Lord's crucifixion with the two thieves was specially desirable; it would help to keep the people from thinking of him as a martyr. R3561:6

Every noble or pure man or woman, prizing purity in his own heart, would find it specially detestable to be so misunderstood as to be numbered with transgressors. R3561:5

Matthew 27:39

They that passed by -- Some of them had probably seen his "many wonderful works"; yet when they saw the tide turn against him, they seem to have been easily swayed. R2316:3

Reviled him -- "As he was so are we in this world." (1 John 4:17) R2316:5

Wagging their heads -- "We did esteem him stricken, smitten of God, and afflicted." (Isa. 53:4) R2316:5

The temple -- The true Church. T70

In three days -- The fifth, sixth and seventh thousand-year days. R3375:2

Come down -- Weakened by his sufferings, tortured by his merciless enemies, hanging helpless between heaven and earth, Satan challenged him to demonstrate his deity by descending from the cross. R5848:2*

Matthew 27:42

He cannot save -- He could have saved himself. (Matt. 26:53) R5195:4

How little they knew that it was necessary for the Son of Man to suffer these things to enter into his glory. R2316:4

If Jesus had saved himself, he could not have been the Savior of the world. R5578:1

King of Israel -- Synonymous with the term "King of the Jews" (verse 37). R2085:1

The whole twelve tribes of Israel. C293

Come down -- We are so glad he did not come down and leave us in our sins. R3370:6

Matthew 27:44

The thieves also -- The only little word of sympathy, however, that he received on this occasion, so far as the record goes, came later from one of these thieves. R2316:6

Matthew 27:45

From the sixth hour -- Nine o'clock in the morning, the hour of the morning daily sacrifice. R2316:6

There was darkness -- It was fitting that nature should veil her glories before such a scene. There was darkness, not dense darkness, but, simply, darkness. R2316:6

It must have been supernaturally dark for, as it was the full moon, a solar eclipse could have lasted but a few minutes at the most. R2316:6, 1816:4

Picturing the temporary triumph of the power of darkness over him who was the light of the world. R3902:6

Typifying the alienation from God which came upon the Jewish people as a result of crucifying the Lord. R1816:4

Unto the ninth hour -- Three o'clock in the afternoon, the time of the offering of the evening sacrifice, the time when Christ died. R2316:6

Matthew 27:46

My God, my God -- Jesus did not claim to be the Father, but the Son of God. R5578:5

The wail of a breaking heart. R84:2*

It is claimed that he died of a literally broken heart, evidenced by the fact that both blood and water proceeded from the spear-wound inflicted shortly after his death. R2316:6; E123

Why -- What have I done that I should be denied fellowship with thee? R4683:5

Hast thou forsaken me -- An actual withdrawal of the Father's favor and communion, a necessary part of the Lord's suffering as a sin-bearer. The penalty of Adam's transgression was not only death, but additionally separation or alienation from God. R2317:1

He had borne the contradiction of sinners, Peter's denial, and the fact that all his disciples fled; but the Father's spirit of fellowship withdrawn was more than he could bear. R2316:6

He bore the sinner's penalty in all particulars. CR392:5; E128

It was necessary that the Father should hide himself from him as though he had been the sinner. R4713:5, 5578:5, 4683:5, 3903:1

That was the most terrible moment of all his experiences. CR392:5; R4713:5

Such a dark moment might be permitted to even the most worthy follower of the Lamb. F143

The language of real, not pro forma, agony. E94

Matthew 27:48

Gave him to drink -- Doubtless with a fever raging, such as would be induced by the crucifixion, he had been thirsting for quite a while.

R3562:6

Matthew 27:49

Let be -- It is evident, from these words, that Christ's last prayer was heard even by his enemies. R2252:1

Matthew 27:50

When he had cried -- Matthew does not record the words, but we have them from Luke and John, "It is finished! Father, into thy hands I commend my spirit." R2317:2

Yielded up the ghost -- Literally, dismissed his spirit; that is, drew his last breath, or ceased to live; expired. R700:4, 3903:4

That is, the spirit. Not his spirit body, for at this time he had no spirit body. R2317:4

Matthew 27:51

Veil of the temple -- 60 feet long, 30 feet wide and about four inches thick. R3371:2, 2788:4

Was rent in twain -- Representing the opening of the way between the spirit-begotten condition and heaven itself. R3371:2

Matthew 27:52

And the graves -- There are serious reasons for doubting the genuineness of this verse and the following; but a portion of it, at least, appears in the oldest Greek manuscripts yet discovered. R1509:3, 2811:6

Of the saints -- Not the ancient worthies or the saints of the Gospel church. R2811:5, 833:2

Which slept arose -- The very most that could have taken place at that time would have been that some might have been awakened in just the same sense that Lazarus was awakened. Q289:2; R2811:5, 1509:6, 833:2
The word "sleep" used instead of the word "death." R2197:6

Matthew 27:53

Came out of the graves -- The narrative does not call it a resurrection; it merely says that they came out of their graves, as Lazarus did. R833:2

His resurrection -- The Greek word is not anastasis, but egeresis, an unusual word for resurrection, signifying resurgence or re-animation. R1509:3; F703

Matthew 27:54

The centurion -- All three centurions mentioned in the New Testament (Luke 7:2; Acts 10:1) were reverential. R3755:4

Matthew 27:55

Ministering unto him -- Providing for the physical wants of Jesus and the twelve. Christ never solicited alms. F286

Matthew 27:57

A rich man -- "He made his grave with the wicked [the sinful human race] and with the rich [in the tomb of the rich man, Joseph of Arimathea] in his death." (Isa. 53:7,9) R1394:4, 1360:1

Matthew 27:60

His own new tomb -- Which contained no other corpses; hence, there could be no question respecting the body of Christ and its burial. R2476:2, 3903:3

A great stone -- This was not a large boulder, but was shaped like a wheel, like a large grindstone rolling in a groove. R4713:6

Matthew 27:62

The next day -- Saturday morning. R4212:5*

Matthew 27:64

Be made sure -- The evil suspicions of the religious leaders were overruled by the Lord for good, and became a testimony of the truth and an assistance to faith on the part of believers. R2318:1

Matthew 27:65

Ye have a watch -- Giving the chief priests the privilege of hiring some of the soldiers as watchmen, much the same as anyone today can employ and pay a policeman for extra service as a watchman. R2476:3

Sealing the stone -- Rendering it secure against intrusion. E246

Setting a watch -- Saturday night. R4212:5*

Matthew 28

Matthew 28:1

End of the sabbath -- Hindered from coming the previous day because it was the Jewish Sabbath, the day now known as Saturday, the seventh day of the week. R2477:5

As it began to dawn -- How great the reward of these devoted women--last at the cross and first at the sepulcher. R1816:6

Improving the very earliest opportunity to honor him whom they so loved. R1505:5

The same is true of the resurrection of the Church, in the dawn of this great seventh day. R92:1*

"God shall help her and that right early." (Psa. 46:5) R3375:3

The first day -- Sunday. This day is reckoned as the third day and night which Christ spent in the tomb. R4212:5*, 3903:6, 3375:1
Symbolizing a new beginning, a new dispensation. Q366:2
Typifying the beginning of the seventh thousand-year day when the Church shall be raised. "Destroy this temple and in three days I will raise it up." (John 2:19) R3375:1-3

Mary Magdalene -- Out of whom Jesus had cast seven demons and who, from thenceforth, became one of our Lord's most earnest followers. She had much forgiven her, she loved much, and her love had brought her early to the sepulcher. R3375:6

Woman's love and tenderness, specially endearing charms of the sex, are well illustrated in this incident. They came with no thought of the resurrection, but to embalm his body more elaborately than they had had time for previously. R2477:5, 2317:3

Seemingly the Lord recognized that women can exercise faith more readily than can men, and here he used them as his servants and mouthpieces to prepare his disciples. R3905:2, 2317:3

And the other Mary -- It does not appear that they came together, but rather that Mary Magdalene was first to arrive. R2477:5

Matthew 28:2

Rolled back the stone -- Not necessary to our Lord's resurrection, because the body which he has now is no more his former body of flesh than that body of flesh was his former spirit body. R2318:2

In their eagerness, they forgot the great obstacle of the stone; but the sweet incense of their devotion arose to heaven, and God sent his angel to remove the obstacle. R1816:6

Matthew 28:3

Like lightning -- The angel appeared in dazzling brightness, that he might not be mistaken for a man. R4714:1

Spirit beings are glorious in their normal conditions. A183; R579:1; HG25:5, 28:5

Matthew 28:4

Became as dead men -- Almost swooned or fainted; but, recovering, hastened from the spot to make their report to the chief priests, at whose instance they had been appointed to this service. R3375:4

Matthew 28:5

Fear not ye -- The angel, so terrible to those out of harmony with the Lord, spoke graciously to those who were his friends. R3905:1

Matthew 28:6

He is not here -- The removal of the crucified body from the tomb was necessary to establish, in the minds of the disciples, the fact of his resurrection; had it remained, it would have been an insurmountable barrier to their faith. R1817:4

It is not for us to say what became of the natural body of Jesus. God has not revealed particulars respecting it, except that it did not corrupt. Perhaps it is yet to be produced by the Lord as evidence of the truth of the whole transaction. R3376:6

He is risen -- The one that was raised from the dead was the spirit-begotten new creature. R5158:1

The doctrine of the resurrection of the dead is peculiar to the Jewish and Christian religions. R3903:5

As it was necessary to know that Christ died before we could believe in him as our Redeemer; so it was necessary to believe that he rose again, so that he might be our justifier. R3903:2

The account proves three things: (1) the fact of the resurrection; (2) the Lord's change of nature in the resurrection; and (3) his personal identity notwithstanding the change of nature. R1816:5

Matthew 28:8

They departed quickly -- Though fearful and surprised when they received the angel's message that the Lord was risen, yet they grasped the fact by "intuitive" faith. R2317:3

Matthew 28:9

And as they -- With the exception of Mary Magdalene, who separated herself from them to go and tell Peter and John. B112

Jesus met them -- His second appearance after his resurrection. R3905:3
Appearing first to Mary, who seems to have been a woman full of faith as well as full of zeal, and one whose word would have influence upon the apostles. R2808:2

Possibly the same appearance as that recorded in John 20:14. R2802:3

He appeared as a man, but under varying conditions, showing that he was not bound by the limitations of the human nature. R3904:2

Had our Lord appeared in his real body, as to Paul, the effect would have been less favorable; he therefore adopted the method used by angels sent on special missions to men. R2318:5

All hail -- In the Greek, the usual salutation, practically signifying, Rejoice! R3375:6

Held him by his feet -- Had he appeared in the body crucified, they would certainly have seen the prints of the nails in his feet. R2801:5
His words, "Touch me not [don't hold on], for I am not yet ascended to my Father and to your Father, to my God and to your God" (John 20:17), were doubtless uttered at this time. R2317:3

We are not to assume that we are merely to hug the truth to our own hearts, but are to remember that it is for others also. R3375:6

And worshipped him -- It is undoubtedly proper enough for us to address petitions to our Redeemer and Advocate. R1410:2

Matthew 28:10

Be not afraid -- Do not hold me as though fearful you will never see me any more. R2317:6

Tell my brethren -- After we have found the Lord, we have a great duty toward the brethren. R3375:6

Into Galilee -- Their home. B112

Shall they see me -- It was necessary that the twelve apostles should be able to bear witness to the fact that Jesus had risen from the dead. R5579:2

Matthew 28:11

When they were going -- Having the true love which manifests itself in obedience, Mary immediately undertook the mission assigned her. R2478:3
An indication that, while never using women in the public preaching of the Gospel, yet they have a place in the less public mission in connection with the promulgation of the Gospel. R2316:1

Matthew 28:13

While we slept -- How foolish would be the testimony of men who would say what took place while they slept! R3375:4

Matthew 28:14

And secure you -- The assurance of protection, security against the ordinary penalty for a Roman soldier sleeping while on duty. R3375:4

Matthew 28:15

Until this day -- Up to the date of writing Matthew's gospel, which is supposed to have been written some nine years after the event. R3375:4

Matthew 28:16

The eleven disciples -- Manifesting Jesus' particular selection of them.

F214

The apostles were the special witnesses of the Lord's resurrection, although he was seen by others. R1522:5; F214

Went away -- Quite probably three weeks intervened without the slightest communication. Meantime the apostles had re-engaged in the fishing business. R3905:4, 3377:1, 2809:1

Into Galilee -- Perhaps remembering the message sent to them by the women (verse 10), that he would go before them into Galilee and meet them there. R3377:1

Most of our Lord's ministry was spent in Galilee, and the majority of believers were Galileans. R3376:1

Appointed them -- Hence there was an opportunity for all the deeply interested ones to be gathered together. (Article specifies 107 individually, plus others). R2808:6

Matthew 28:17

When they saw him -- Gradually they were taught the fact of our Lord's resurrection, that he was no longer dead, but alive; and that he was changed, no longer "the man Christ Jesus." R2809:1

The promise to us now is that we shall see him as he is--not as he was--because we shall be changed, that we may be made like him. R4185:5, 2318:6, 1817:5

But some doubted -- An evidence of the candor of the Evangelist's record; showing, too, that the Lord's followers were not over-credulous, but disposed to sift and weigh the evidence. R2809:3

Some of the five hundred brethren, probably none of the disciples. R2809:3
It was for the convincing of such waverers that Jesus remained during the forty days. R5587:5

Matthew 28:18

And Jesus came -- His eighth appearance after his resurrection. R3905:4
According to our reckoning, the sixth occasion. R2808:3

It was probably at this time that he appeared to the five hundred brethren mentioned by Paul. (1 Cor. 15:6) R2808:3

A new organism, but the same being; not flesh, but spirit; not weak, but powerful; not corruptible, but incorruptible; not dishonored, but honored. R1692:1

All power -- Authority. F397; R5587:5

Physical and spiritual. R61:5*

As the agent and representative of Jehovah. E59

Over angels and men, the dead and living alike. R43:5*

In itself a proof that Jesus is no longer human. B111

If the Lord is now merely still a man, he is still "lower than the angels." (Heb. 2:9) R5223:1

Including a knowledge of the times and seasons of the divine plan; also intuitive knowledge. R2082:5, 5922:6

He had not lost anything, but had gained much in passing into death and then out of it. R5625:5

Not that the Father had abdicated or surrendered any of his own power or authority; rather, the Father is always excepted. (1 Cor. 15:27) R2809:4

"He is Lord of all"--next to the Father, for "the head of Christ is God." (1 Cor. 11:3) R296:3

Although Jehovah is the head of Christ, we see him delighting to honor the Son, making him in turn the head of all principality and power. (Col. 2:10; 1:16; Eph. 1:10--Diaglott) R1550:1

"It pleased the Father that in him [the Son] should all fulness dwell"--"the fulness of the Godhead bodily" (Col. 1:19; 2:9)--so that all God does is through Christ, and all Christ does is by the power of the Father. R27:2*

Not that our Lord could set aside, overrule or violate any feature of the divine law and plan. R2809:4

Nothing should be done except at his command. R2888:3

The title and authority promised of the Father to belong to the Messiah; that which was once his reckonedly or prospectively was now his actually. R2809:4

He had delegated power and prospective authority before. R810:1

His human nature, when sacrificed, could do nothing more; but the new nature, fully developed in the resurrection, has all power. R3951:6, 713:6

The might, authority or power was gained by his sacrifice, recognized of God and declared to men by his resurrection. R810:1

Strictly speaking, it was from the moment of our Lord's resurrection that the Father committed all judgment unto the Son. (John 5:22) F397

It is one thing to have the power, and quite another thing to use it. HG149:5

The exercise of the power is delayed for a purpose. D621

At the time appointed, he will take unto him "his great power and reign." (Rev. 11:17) R1352:2

To be claimed in the kingdom. Infallible laws will be strictly enforced.

That will be the strictest government the world has ever known; absolutely no liberty will be granted to do wrong. R1163:6

Eventually all things shall be subdued under him. R1269:6

Consequently, it is only since his resurrection that he could be called the Almighty, as in Rev. 1:8. R1515:1

In sharp contrast with his previous utterances: "Of my own will I can do nothing; as I hear I speak." (John 8:28) R2318:6, 745:4

Our Lord alone was able to keep the divine law and to inherit the divine promise. R3789:5

"The keys [power to open] death and hades." (Rev. 1:18) R485:3

The glory of Moses has been "done away" (2 Cor. 3:7), the glory of Christ "remaineth." (2 Cor. 3:11) R1323:3*

"Let all men honor the Son even as they honor the Father." (John 5:23) R3161:2*

Is given unto me -- Since my resurrection as a spirit being. C240; E281; R1352:2

He rose again, qualified for the great work of the world's deliverance. OV429:T; R1670:2

But not exercised until the Body is made perfect through suffering and joined to the Head. D621

Not until all the members of the Church have finished their sacrifice in death--then will the Christ be fully empowered for the great subsequent work of restoring all things. C240

He had not this power and authority previously, during his earthly ministry. Now he was no longer under human limitations, or under the limitations of the death covenant. R5567:6

Though he had always occupied the place of honor in the heavenly courts, it was not until his obedience had been tested in the changing of his nature to a man, and in providing a ransom, that he received his present unexcellable glory and honor. R1514:6

Illustrated by the honor and distinction of Joseph being seated next to Pharaoh. R2888:2

In heaven and in earth -- Full authority in respect to both heavenly and earthly things; among spiritual as well as among human beings. R5587:5,6; A289

"That at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven and things in earth." (Phil. 2:10) A289; R5587:6

Matthew 28:19

Go ye -- Now that the Father has accepted the work finished at Calvary and recognized me as the Messiah. R2809:5

Primarily the eleven apostles, but subsequently it included St. Paul, who took the place of Judas. They had no successors; they are with us yet. R5588:1

All true disciples, fully consecrated, are authorized to preach the Gospel in any and every way, publicly or privately, by word, pen or printed page. R1720:1

Each royal priest is the peer of each other one in authority and dignity of priesthood; though in talents, intelligence, etc., and therefore in fitness, they are not all equals. R1137:4

Some stewards do not quickly enough note talents which might be utilized in the Lord's service. R1047:5

The commission divides itself into three parts: (1) make disciples of all nations; (2) baptize them; and (3) teach them. R2809:5

Any neglect of this commission and its order of procedure means comparative failure. R2810:1

When the dragnet (Matt. 13:47) is ordered ashore, this commission should be understood to be at an end. C215

Similarly today, we are following what we believe to be the direction of the holy Spirit in sending forth the pilgrims to proclaim the good tidings. R4360:4

Satan perverts the commission: first, making it mean the conversion of the world; second, destroying the real idea of baptism; third, confusing the matter of discipling; fourth, by making them think this is all that is needed, downgrading teaching; fifth, by misrepresenting the Apostle's statement: "Ye have no need that any man teach you." (1 John 2:20,27) R2810:5

Therefore -- Their commission to go and spread the truth of his being their Messiah was based on the fact that the Father had accepted his work, finished at Calvary. R2809:5

Omit, not in the oldest manuscripts. R3004:3

And teach -- A different Greek word than in verse 20; this word signifies proselyting or making disciples of. R2809:5, 5588:2, 4714:5, 4360:4; Q546:4

Not to make the nations disciples, but to gather out of all nations those willing to be disciples of Christ. R5588:2, 4786:4, 4714:5, 2809:5; Q546:4

First, informing those who have ears to hear that they are sinners through the fall, but that God has made a provision for their rescue. R2810:2; F447

A commission to the apostles and each member of the Church, according to opportunity and ability, to proclaim the Gospel. R5588:1

The work of the Evangelist comes first, to make disciples. The word "disciple" signifies pupil, in the school of Christ, in the primary department. R2810:1

It is not necessary to preach in the usual formal manner. Preach as the twelve disciples preached, by the wayside or wherever you find a hearing ear. If you lack talent for preparing a discourse, read forcibly and clearly something touching the subject you consider most needful to your hearers. R1047:5

All nations -- "This Gospel shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations." (Matt. 24:14) C215

People of all nationalities. R4360:4

You are no longer restricted to the Jews. R3200:1, 5045:4, 4786:4, 4714:5, 3004:6, 2872:1, 2319:1; Q547:T

It required very special instructions for Peter to preach to the Gentiles also. R3005:1

The disciples seemed to understand that he meant every Israelite scattered throughout all nations; and it was not for some years that they learned that the Gentiles were to be fellow-heirs of the same promises. R1095:2

Gather out of all nations those willing to be disciples of Christ. R5588:2

"Ye shall be witnesses unto me, both in Jerusalem and in all Judea and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost parts of the earth." (Acts 1:8) R3005:1
It is the will of God that the Gospel should be preached everywhere.

R2141:5

To the less degraded first, and to the more degraded later. R1545:6
The "Gospel of the Kingdom" is clearly set forth in the Scriptures, which are now published in all languages (not dialects) of the earth. R2872:2

This permission to disciple people of all nations did not begin until 3-1/2 years later. R4714:5

Not a command to convert the world. R4714:5, 3004:3, 2872:1, 2809:5
"Nevertheless, when the Son of man cometh, shall he find the faith on the earth?" (Luke 18:8) R2809:6

Baptizing -- Immersing, the correct translation and the original method of baptism, as acknowledged by many authorities. F453, 454

The outward symbol by which believers were to confess him. R1540:3

Water baptism is only a picture of the true; they are to be thoroughly immersed into the name of Christ. R5588:4

"Know ye not that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into his death?" (Rom. 6:3) F445, 446

All authorized to teach are equally authorized to baptize. That includes every follower of Christ, not excluding females, only that modesty indicates that they should avoid such public services except in rare necessary cases. R1541:4

All baptized would be commissioned to perform this symbol for others; and, if no consecrated could be found, an unconsecrated believer, or even a worldly person or unbeliever, might do it. F454

The Lord's Supper and Baptism are the only injunctions of a symbolic character commanded us, and they are new ones from those of the Jewish dispensation. R1526:6; F228

Not here the Pentecostal baptism of the spirit, because it was not in the power of the apostles thus to baptize anyone. NS54:1

Them -- Whoever you can make into a disciple, baptize him. Q547:T

Those who consecrate themselves. R2810:1,3

In the name of -- By the authority of. R2810:3; Q31:2, 33:2; F447

Into fellowship, or accord, with. R5588:4; F455

Not into the name of the Father, Son and holy Spirit; on the contrary, we are baptized into Christ, as members of his body. (Rom. 6:3-5) R2810:3

We recommend the following words: Brother ..., in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the holy Spirit, by this authority, I baptize thee into Christ. F455

The Father -- Become dead to every other principle than that which his name represents, and be thoroughly immersed into His name of righteousness, justice and truth. R5588:4

Does not imply three baptisms in one. The use of the three names is as if you were using a firm name, such as Smith, Jones and Brown; all three names would be used to show that it has the authorization of the whole firm. Q33:2

The Divine Three--Father, Son and holy Spirit--are related to our faith in the Creator, Redeemer and Regenerator; and this suggests the three steps in bringing men into the divine image. R197:3*

Of the Son -- Ignoring all sectarian names, Protestant or Catholic. R5588:4, 2810:3

To recognize his name and to be his members, his Body, his Church. R5588:4

Holy Ghost -- Holy Spirit. R5588:5; F455

Their own spirit or wills being dead, God's holy will and mind are to be their will and purpose. R5588:5; Q31:2,6

Approved by the spirit of holiness, the spirit of God, the spirit of the truth. Q31:2

It is proper to use the expression "holy Spirit" when performing symbolic immersion because the Lord so instructed, and because it is the holy influence and representative of the Father and the Son in directing the Church into all truth. R2001:2

Matthew 28:20

Teaching them -- Instructing them regarding the divine character and plan, the graces of the spirit and the rooting out of the spirit of worldliness and selfishness. R2810:2

Not astronomy, geology, nor any of the vain philosophies about which the world speculates, but "the things which I have commanded you." R5045:4, 3200:2

Observe all things -- That all men are sinners, that Christ came to give himself a ransom, that he is the only way to life, that whosoever would come must take up his cross, that all believers are one with him, that every branch in him must bear fruit or be taken away, that those who trust in him are to hope for and expect his second coming, that the ultimate end of our hope is in a resurrection, and that love is the fulfilling of the law. R2319:2,4

I am with you always -- By the holy Spirit and by the Word. A89; E204; R2455:6, 531:2

With his faithful followers, to bless, comfort, to strengthen, to fellowship and to safeguard their highest interests, though often at the expense of their temporal interests. R4714:5, 3166:6; B105, 203

In love and thought and care for you. B105, 203

As the Chief Messenger, or Angel of Jehovah. R5634:4

To sanctify to them their deepest distress. R5095:6

Not that he would personally be present in the world throughout the age; rather, through the holy Spirit, the power of God. R4185:4, 2810:6

He is absent in body, yet present in spirit. R102:4*

Meaning that he would supervise the work. R2811:1
Our Lord has been with his representatives in all their labors of love and self-denial throughout the entire age. R3166:6
Now we are not alone. We have the companionship of him who promised, "I will never leave thee nor forsake thee." (Heb. 13:5) NS451:3
While he would be absent from his people during the age, his power, spirit, care and love would be with them to guard their interests. R2319:5, 1820:6
Showing that the Lord gave the great commission, not merely to the apostles, but to all who should believe on him through their word. R2810:6
He was able to provide for them in one place as in another. R5625:4
Our Lord's statement no more signifies that he did not leave the world than it signifies that his hearers would continue to live until the end of the age. R2319:4
Even unto -- He did not tell us how long the age would last, nor all the trials and difficulties which would intervene; it has been to our advantage that he has left us in ignorance on this point. R4185:2
End of the world -- Greek, suntelia, end. R223:1*
End of the age. R5727:3, 5625:4; B105
Down to the time when the Gospel age will have accomplished its divinely purposed mission of gathering out a sufficient number of disciples to complete the divine purpose. R5588:5
In the end of the age, he is to be specially near and precious. R4784:2
How specially true in the end of the age, in the time of harvest, in the time of our Lord's second presence! R3166:6
Then he would come again in a personal and official sense to exalt his Church, establish his Kingdom, bless Israel with the New Covenant, and thus bless all mankind. R4714:6, 2319:5
We are now down at this end of the age. CR476:1

Mark

General

Tradition has it that the garden of Gethsemane belonged to the family of which the Apostles John and James were members, and that for this reason the Lord and his disciples were privileged to feel themselves at home there. St. Mark, the writer of one of the Gospels, but not one of the apostles, is credited with having been a member of the same family. One of the accounts of the arrest of the Master tells that amongst those who followed after him was a young man wrapped with a sheet, and who fled naked when some members of the band attempted to lay hold of him. That young man, tradition says, years afterward was known as St. Mark. R4707:2

Mark's Gospel record is supposed to have been indited by Peter himself, Mark being in a large measure Peter's amanuensis. R2469:5

See also "THE FOUR GOSPELS--GENERAL"

Mark 1

Mark 1:1

The beginning of -- In Mark there is no genealogy, for there Christ is spoken of not as a son, but as a servant. R1046:6*

The character of Mark as a writer is chronological. R1047:4*

The gospel -- Mark is written to the Gentiles, and its theme is Christ's ministry, his works. R1046:3*

Supposed to have been indited by Peter, Mark being Peter's amanuensis. R2469:5

Mark 1:2

My messenger -- The messenger of Jehovah to announce Messiah. R3712:1
Throughout the entire Gospel age the Church in the flesh has been doing a work similar to John's--announcing Messiah, not in the flesh, but the glorified Christ, Head and Body, and the kingdom which he will set up. R3713:1

Not "the messenger of the covenant." (Mal. 3:1) R3712:1

Mark 1:3

The voice -- Not the "Word." R2409:2

Make his paths -- Arrangements, affairs. R3683:5

Straight -- For a triumphal entry to his kingdom upon the earth. "An highway shall be there." (Isa. 35:8) R2563:5

The Church in the flesh, the greater Elijah, will be equally unsuccessful with that of the lesser antitype of Elijah, John the Baptizer. R2563:5

Mark 1:4

John -- John's mission was pre-eminently that of a reprover and reformer. R4978:5

John's work at the first advent foreshadowed the closing work of the Church at the second advent. B253

Six months older than Jesus, thus beginning his preaching six months before Jesus' baptism. R3712:1, 562:1*

Did baptize -- John's baptism was for Jews only, who were already recognized as typically cleansed by their Atonement day sin-offerings. HG732:5

In the wilderness -- We are not sent forth as John was, to dwell in the wilderness and to criticize and denounce everything and everybody. We are to copy our Lord, not John the Baptist. R4978:5

And preach -- The preaching and baptism of John were a special call to God's covenant people to repent of their sins and their failure as a nation, and as individuals to live up to their covenant. R1687:3

The greater John, the Church in the flesh, has exhorted as many as have ears to hear to repent of sin and reform their lives, that they may be prepared for the great changes imminent in Messiah's reign. R3713:1

The baptism -- To bring the hearts of the people back into accord with the Law that thus they might be ready for transfer from Moses to Christ. R3712:4

Proclaiming that those who would be ready for Messiah and the Kingdom should not only renounce sin and reform their lives, but should publicly declare the same--symbolizing it by a baptism in water. R3712:2

Of repentance -- Repentance from recognized sin, violations of their Law Covenant, and a typical cleansing from them, a return to a condition of righteousness of heart, as in the day when they were all "baptized into Moses in the sea and in the cloud." (1 Cor. 10:2) HG732:5

Not of baptism "into his death." F442

Remission of sins -- All Scriptures in support of immersion for the remission of sins belonged to the Jews, none to the Gentiles. OV240:6; F428, 433; R2931:3

Sins against their covenant, and their share in the sin of their nation in rejecting and crucifying Christ. R1421:1

For the remission of avoidable sins, gross sins. The godly Jews were not intended, nor expected, to come to John to be baptized. Q34:3

Not original sin--"Without the shedding of blood there is no remission" (Heb. 9:22), but the sins of the Jews against the Law Covenant. R2931:3

Mark 1:5

All the land of Judea -- The prepared instruments of the Lord are powerful in his hand. The whole nation was aroused, the expectation of the immediate advent of the Messiah was everywhere evident. R1916:3

Multitudes confessed their sins and were baptized, but later, when they failed to see either the King or the kingdom in earthly glory, they lapsed into unbelief. R1688:1

Confessing their sins -- The Jews thereby coming again into harmony with Moses, type of Christ, into whom they had all once been baptized. F432 John did not urge any to be baptized, except such as realized themselves to be transgressors against the Law. R3712:3

John was clothed -- John's simplicity of dress indicated he was not seeking to serve earthly or selfish interests--he had nothing, wanted nothing, needed nothing. R3712:3

With camel's hair -- Making him conspicuous, indicating that his entire life was devoted to the special service of the Lord. R3712:3

Adopting somewhat the manner and dress of Elijah of old, his prototype. R3712:3, 1687:6

Did eat locusts -- Comparatively he had nothing, wanted nothing, needed nothing. R3712:3

Mark 1:7

And preached -- For six months. R3712:1

Mark 1:8

He shall baptize you -- The baptism into death and the baptism of the Holy Spirit are distinctly separate. F442

With the Holy Ghost -- At Pentecost, upon the Israelites indeed. R3712:2; E290

Mark 1:9

That Jesus -- Having reached 30 years of age, manhood according to the Law, and therefore the right time to consecrate himself as a man. A179

And was baptized -- Typifying his consecration. A179

A baptism unto entire consecration to the will of God, even unto death. R1687:3, 3712:4

As a perfect man Jesus had something to offer as a living sacrifice to God. His complete subjection was symbolized by his baptism. R1688:1
He sacrificed all the blessings and favors which were his under the Law Covenant. R5090:1

Of John -- Our Lord's baptism was a new thing, totally distinct from John's baptism. It symbolized a baptism unto death. R3712:4, 1688:1,4
Baptism is valid even though the baptizer is not of the kingdom class. R1541:4

Out of the water -- Symbolizing the beginning of a reckonedly new life as a reckonedly new creature. R3712:4

The heavens opened -- He began to see deep spiritual truth, began to understand those things of which he had knowledge previously but not an understanding. CR145:6, 95:2; R4968:3, 4970:1, 5080:6

Similarly, the deep things of God are revealed to all who follow in his steps of consecration. R4970:1

Probably signifies that he was granted a vision of heaven, confirming his relationship to the Father, and connecting up the interim of his experience as a man with his prehuman experiences. R2565:5; Q547:4

And the Spirit -- There the Redeemer became the antitypical Passover Lamb and the Bullock of the Atonement Day. There he, as the man Jesus, died. There he was begotten of the holy Spirit and became the antitypical priest--the Sacrificer. R4969:6

Like a dove -- A manifestation representing the invisible. E212

The messenger of divine favor. R3712:5

The emblem of peace and purity, representing the fullness of Jehovah's Spirit of love in Jesus. E212

Not violently like lightning, but gently like a dove. R3296:6

John the Baptist alone witnessed the descent of the Spirit upon our Lord. E212; R3712:5

Descending upon him -- Thus beginning the Gospel age or Spirit dispensation. A224

Giving him the earnest of his inheritance (Eph. 1:14) of the divine nature. A179

Anointing him: Jesus was not the Messiah, the Christ, until his baptism. B66; T27, 37

The same anointing, the same baptism, is promised to all who follow in his footsteps. R1688:4

"After the baptism which John preached; How God anointed Jesus." (Acts 10:37, 38) B66

Mark 1:11

My beloved Son -- Jesus was the first son of God after Adam. R5623:5

John the Baptist alone witnessed the testimony of our Lord's relationship to God. R3712:5

Mark 1:12

And immediately -- Special trials follow consecration. R3296:3, 4970:1

The Spirit -- He was first of all pressed of the spirit (his own spirit or mind) to go apart for awhile and to study out afresh the covenant he had just made. R4970:3, 3716:1, 3297:2

His own spirit, his own new mind. Thus, it is our new minds, the result of full consecration to the Lord, that lead us into temptations, trials and difficulties. R3716:1

Driveth -- We should never voluntarily go into temptation, but knowing our weakness, should seek to avoid it. R3715:6

Him -- Jesus, not God. "For God tempteth not, neither is tempted of any." (Jas. 1:13) R370:2

Into the wilderness -- Away from every friend and acquaintance and distracting thing. R3297:3

That he might study the divine Word, treasured in a perfect memory, and now fully intelligible by the power of the Spirit. "The natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God." (1Cor. 2:14)
R3297:2,3, 5054:2, 3716:4

Mark 1:13

In the wilderness -- That he might understand the will of God. R5054:2

Forty days -- Doubtless spent in meditation and prayer, our Lord being anxious to do the Father's will in the Father's way. R3716:4
To confer with the Father; to hear and see in the prophecies the great work mapped out for him. R3297:3

Studying carefully the types of the Passover Lamb, the Day of Atonement sacrifices, the Jubilees, that he would be lifted up as a brazen serpent, led as a lamb to the slaughter, be despised and rejected of men, be cut off not for his own sins, but for the sins of the world. R3716:5,6, 4970:1
He found it necessary, before attempting to serve God, to study to show himself approved. (2 Tim. 2:15) R3717:1

Ministered unto him -- Strengthened him, revived him. R4970:6
From the moment of our positive resistance of temptation and positive standing up for the Lord, we acquire great helps and assistances by unseen powers. R3300:4

Mark 1:14

Now -- Estimated at six months to a year after his baptism. R2245:2

After that John -- John's work at the first advent foreshadowed the closing work of the Church at the second advent. B253

Preaching the gospel -- Showing the overlapping of the ages--even so the Gospel age and the age of restitution will lap a little. HG55:5

Kingdom of God -- An interchangeable expression with "Kingdom of heaven." (Matt. 4:17) R396:6
The Millennial age. HG315:3

Mark 1:15

And saying -- The first three and a half years of the Jewish harvest had, as its special test, time, and the fact of the Messiah's presence--a parallel to the Gospel harvest. B236

The time -- Greek: kairos; a fixed time, as in "Times of the Gentiles." (Luke 21:24) B78

The foreordained time when the offer of the kingdom would be made to the Jewish nation had arrived. R4969:1

The 69 weeks of Daniel's prophecy. (Dan. 9:24-27) R3630:2, 748:3

But when John asked if Jesus was the Messiah, Jesus did not say that we are living in the beginning of the seventieth week of Daniel's prophecy, but referred him to the "signs" of his work. (Matt. 12:3-6) R629:2

God's times and seasons are important features of his plan. B25

Is fulfilled -- The Deliverer has come. B236

"All things are now ready." (Luke 14:17) R1957:3

Our God is a God of order. Everything God does is in accordance with a definitely pre-arranged plan, and the times and seasons are no insignificant part of that plan. B25; R598:3

Is at hand -- The Deliverer has come. B236

Believe the -- Whoever believed this message recognized Jesus as the "Sent of God," the Messiah, who, in God's due time, will be the King of Israel and the monarch of the earth. R4969:1

Gospel -- Good news. R887:1, 4594:3, 1957:3

The word "Gospel" means "good tidings," as the angel preaches it: "Behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy which shall be unto all people."

(Luke 2:10) HG190:5

The good news of the feast now ready. (Luke 14:15-24) R1957:3

Mark 1:16

Simon and Andrew -- Though natives of Bethsaida, they evidently settled in Capernaum, perhaps because larger and more favorable to their business. R3309:1

Casting a net -- Our Lord called men who were not idlers. R2246:1

They were fishers -- The Lord's invitations have been chiefly to those in the humbler walks of life. R3720:5; F210

However able they were as men, they lacked the polish or education which people were accustomed to expect in religious teachers. R4969:3

Mark 1:17

Come ye after me -- Called from amongst the "disciples" or general followers to become associates in the ministry of the Gospel. F210

Fishers of men -- Spiritual fishing, like natural fishing, requires energy, tact, proper bait, and that the fisherman keep himself out of sight. Fish are easily alarmed when they find that anyone wishes to take them. R3308:3

"The kingdom of heaven is like unto a net, that was cast into the sea, and gathered of every kind." (Matt. 13:47) C214

Mark 1:18

Forsook their nets -- Promptly leaving all to follow him. R1521:2; F210
Forsook their earthly all for the prospect of sharing with Messiah in his kingdom. R4969:4

The twelve who forsook all were called from amongst the general followers who espoused the Lord's cause without leaving their daily avocations. F210 Evidently retaining some sort of interest in them, however, as they had no difficulty in re-embarking in the fishing business after our Lord's death. R3308:2

Mark 1:20

And went after him -- The boats and implements were not abandoned, but left in the care of associates, taking the necessary time to make proper arrangements. R3308:2, 3720:6

The same is true of us: we have duties and responsibilities which cannot be abruptly cast aside and ignored. R3721:1

The important thing decided at the moment, positively and permanently, was that they accepted the Lord's invitation. R3721:1

Mark 1:21

And they went -- More than a year had elapsed since Jesus began his ministry. R3727:4

Into Capernaum -- Jesus made Capernaum his home and the center of his work in Galilee for a considerable time. R2581:2

And straightway -- At once, indicating our Lord's strict attention to the Father's business. R2581:3

On the sabbath day -- Type of the seventh thousand-year day. B40

Into the synagogue -- Jewish synagogues were very liberally governed, and afforded an opportunity for nearly everyone of reverent manner to present his views respecting the law and the prophets. R3726:3, 3309:1, 2581:3, 1722:1

This greater liberty was more favorable to the truth than the present circumscribed methods of Christendom. R3309:1, 2581:3

While jealously guarding against the overthrowing of faith by those who reject the Word of God, purity of truth would be greatly stimulated by full liberty of discussion of the meaning of the Scriptures in a reverent manner. R3309:1

Probably built by the Roman centurion, whose servant Jesus had healed. (Luke 7:5) R2581:2

Recently exhumed--a substantial structure with walls ten feet thick, seventy-four feet long and fifty-six feet wide. R2581:2

And taught -- The Jewish synagogues afforded much greater freedom for presentation of the truth than do the churches today. R3909:1, 3726:3, 2581:3, 1722:1

Mark 1:22

Were astonished -- Both at the things which he taught, and at the manner in which he presented them. R2581:3

Never imagine that you can overturn an old lie without causing a terrible confusion and alarm among those not of the truth who are living under it, as illustrated by the confusion and scurrying of insects when you overturn a big, flat stone which had been in place for years. R3860:3*

He taught them -- Our Lord's discourses were along the lines of divine revelations--the Law and the prophets, and the fulfillment of these.

Similarly, the teachings of the Lord's representatives should not be on human speculations and philosophies, but on the Word of God. R3726:5

As one that had authority -- As a master who thoroughly understood his subject. R3726:3; OV159:1

Jesus had a thorough grasp of the Word of God, and his applications and interpretations therefore were convincing to his hearers. R4969:5, 2581:3

Not as the scribes -- The Doctors of the Law. OV159:1

The Jewish scribes then, as today, were evidently quite perfunctory and quite unable to give the people any understanding of the Law and the prophecies. R4969:5, 3726:3

The scribes and Pharisees haggled over the Scriptures, guessing and confusing their meaning, mystifying the people. R3726:3, 4969:5

Mark 1:23

In their synagogue -- The devil went to church then, as he not infrequently does now, and he was as opposed to having the truth preached then as he is now. R3309:2

A man -- We fully believe that fully one-half or more of those who are dealt with as insane are cases of demoniacal possession--"obsession."

R3727:1, 4976:3, 3771:3, 3310:4

Today Satan, acting more skillfully than in the past, is leading on as a scientist and is pooh-poohing suggestions that there are evil spirits, or a Beelzebub, or a prince of demons. R3310:5

An unclean spirit -- "The angels which kept not their first estate."

(Jude 6) R3727:1, 4969:5, 3309:3

Once an holy angel, fallen from divine favor through sinful relationship to humanity in the days of Noah. (Gen. 6:1-5) R4969:6, 3727:1, 3309:3

There are no such obsessions or possessions by holy spirits for they, like God, recognize the individuality of each member of the race, and do not intrude upon it. R3727:3

All who reverence God are warned against having anything to do with mediums, seances and every form of spirit communications as being of these demons--Satanic. R3726:1, 2582:1

Styled "unclean spirits" because they eventually reveal their true characters by unchaste, impure suggestions. R4969:5, 3338:4

Our Lord's dealings with the unclean spirits show: (1) the actual personal existence of invisible evil spirits; (2) the power, and limit of power, in such beings; (3) that the Lord's authority and power are known and recognized by the evil spirits. R1722:1

And he cried out -- The demon recognized Jesus and his teaching and used the young man as his mouthpiece, his medium. R4969:5

He believed the Lord's teachings were condemnatory of himself and his associates. R3309:3

Mark 1:24

Let us alone -- We thus infer that our Lord was explaining to the people the origin of sin and the power of Satan and of the fallen angels in respect to humanity. R3309:3, 2581:5

No doubt Jesus had mentioned demoniacal possession in his sermon. R2581:5, 3309:3

When the two-edged sword of truth enters, it creates a division and an uproar. R1633:3,4

To do with thee -- What have we in common? R3772:2

Come to destroy us -- Their observation of mankind, dying on account of sin, would lead them to surmise that death might be their portion also. R1680:1

Manifesting the fact that the Lord's authority and power are known and recognized by the evil spirits. R1722:4

This demon seems to have had the thought that at the coming of Messiah all evil was to be abolished and destroyed. R3727:2

"Art thou come to destroy us before the time?" (Matt. 8:29)--implying that the demons had some information, or premonition, that the time of the manifestation of power through the Messiah was still future. R3727:2

Their statement does not prove that their supposition was correct. R697:1; HG729:6

They will not be destroyed without first being given an opportunity for repentance and reconciliation with God. R2581:6

Protesting Jesus' interference with their tormenting of the man as an injury to their rights and liberties. R3772:1

It is common today for some to claim interference with their vested rights and liberties when estopped from exploiting their fellow-men. R3772:2

I know thee -- We may be sure that Satan and all the fallen angels knew the Lord and observed closely everything pertaining to his earthly life, death and resurrection. R4068:5, 2581:6

As Satan recognized Jesus in the temptation, so all of the fallen angels knew that the Holy One of God had become a man to redeem humanity. R3309:3

The Holy One of God -- Recognizing Jesus' mission, his holiness, and that he was the representative of the Heavenly Father. R2581:6

His conduct toward our Lord was far more respectful than that of the strictest sect of the Jewish church. R1680:2

While the Pharisees said, "Thou hast a devil." (John 7:20) R1680:1

Mark 1:25

Jesus rebuked him -- The Lord recognized and addressed him as a person, thus proving the actual personal existence of invisible evil spirits.

R1722:1

As St. Paul refused to allow a young woman medium to proclaim him and Silas servants of God (Acts 16:16-18), so Jesus refused to allow this demon to give testimony respecting himself--even though it was complimentary. R4969:6, 3309:4, 3122:3, 2182:1

Being unwilling to accept testimony from such a source. The Lord's people should resent the services of any who do not give evidence of heart-union with the Lord. R3309:4, 4969:6

Hold thy peace -- Our Lord did not deign to hold conversation with these evil spirit beings. R2581:6

The same Greek word translated "Be still" in Mark 4:39, suggesting that the storm there depicted may have been the work of the Adversary. R3324:4

Come out of him -- Give up your hold upon his mind and body. R3727:2

Evil spirits can do nothing except as God permits. R1722:1, 5540:2

Mark 1:26

The unclean spirit -- Thus the malignity of evil spirits is manifested.

There are no such possessions by holy spirits. R3727:3, 2582:2

Had torn him -- Caused violent convulsions, a fit; and used the man's mouth in uttering a loud cry. R3310:3, 2582:1

The demon was not hindered from causing the man considerable torture in going from him. Luke 4:35 says that he threw him down in the midst of the crowd--manifesting his malignity. R3727:3

He came out -- Apparently the first illustration of our Lord's miraculous power over disease and evil spirits. R3727:4

Mark 1:27

They were all amazed -- Not only the teachings of Jesus captivated them, but also his power to deal with evil spirits. R4969:6

The attendants at the Capernaum synagogue were seemingly nobler than those of Nazareth, who gnashed upon our Lord and sought to take his life. R3309:3

Mark 1:28

And immediately -- The Revised Version of this verse is preferable: "And the report of him went out straightway everywhere in all that region of Galilee round about." R3310:6

His fame -- Aiding greatly his ministry. R3310:6

As his fame increased, the opposition to him became more and more pronounced. R1735:3

Mark 1:29

The synagogue -- In Capernaum. R4979:2

A fever -- One of the evangelists intimates that it was a violent form of fever. R3310:6

How many today are being consumed with a fever of ambition, pride or discontent? R2582:6

They tell him -- Evidently the casting out of the demon suggested to the minds of the disciples the power of our Lord to heal diseases. R3727:4, 3310:6

Mark 1:31

She ministered -- This demonstrates that her cure was more than an operation of the mind, which could not have restored at once the strength lost by the fever. R3311:1, 3727:5

Instead of being weak and enervated, as is usually the case after a strong fever, she was strong and vigorous. This demonstrates that her cure could have been nothing short of miraculous. R3310:6

How many today, being released from spiritual fevers, arise to do vigorously the Lord's business? R2582:6

When the sun did set -- Because it was a cooler time of day. R3311:1, 2582:2

The Sabbath, being over, made it in the eyes of the people the more proper time to bring to Jesus the sick. R3727:5, 3311:1

All that were diseased -- Let us not seek for the loaves and fishes and physical healing, for after all these things do the Gentiles seek; but let us seek for spiritual health, strength and vigor. R3728:6

Mark 1:33

All the city -- Many in Capernaum were healed, and thus it was exalted to heaven in privileges, blessings and opportunities. (Matt. 11:23) R3728:2

Mark 1:34

He healed -- Expending his own vitality. R3727:5

"Virtue (vitality, power, strength) went out of him and healed them all."
(Matt. 8:17) R3727:5

The healing of the sick was merely incidental, to attract the attention, to assist the faith, to point him out as the finger of God. R3728:2, 4980:2, 2583:2

The miracles which Jesus and the Apostles wrought were merely with a view to the establishment of the early church. R4979:3

He did not attempt to heal all sickness. This will be done in Messiah's reign of a thousand years. R4980:2 No miraculous healing at the present time is authorized by God's Word. R4979:3

Had our Lord Jesus performed none of the miracles recorded in the Scriptures, how could we today feel the confidence, the assurance, that we do feel respecting him? R3310:1

Illustrating the power he ultimately will use on a higher and grander scale in the blessing of all the families of the earth. R3728:4, 2583:1, 2582:4, 1722:4

Not only to prophecy the future, but more particularly as signs, evidences, witnesses, respecting his teachings. R2582:4

Today greater miracles witness to the truth of Christianity, such as the opening of the eyes of understanding. R2582:5

The general healing of disease will doubtless be a prominent feature of the work of Messiah's glorious kingdom after its establishment. R4979:5

People would be glad to be healed of disease, even if they were assured that the cures were performed by the power of Satan himself. Thus many false doctrines commend themselves by promises of relief from physical ailments. R4979:3

Many that were sick -- But not all the sick of Palestine. His mission was not to heal the sick, but to preach the Gospel. The healing of the sick was merely incidental. R3728:2, 2582:3

There is no record of a single instance in which any of the apostles were healed of any disease. All, or nearly all, who were healed by Jesus and the apostles were "sinners." R4980:1, 3728:4

Suffered not the devils -- The Lord does not desire the testimony of devils respecting himself or his plan. The same is true of all the unregenerate. (Psa. 50:16, 17) R3727:6, 3309:4, 2582:2

Mark 1:35

He went out -- Leaving behind him in Capernaum many sick and disappointed. R4980:4

Departed -- Jesus did not remain to increase and deepen the favorable impression that he had made. R4979:2

He left, that those not in a proper condition of heart might forget, lose their interest and cool their ardor, while only Israelites indeed would continue to watch and pray for the kingdom. R3728:1

And there prayed -- The Lord frequently spent whole nights in prayer. (Luke 5:16; 6:12; Matt. 14:23; Mark 6:46; Heb. 5:7) R1865:5

Mark 1:38

Preach there also -- Our Lord's intention was to give evidences of divine favor to convince Israelites indeed. His mission was not to heal the sick but to preach the Gospel. R3728:1; 2583:2

Mark 1:39

Throughout all Galilee -- His principal ministry was in Galilee. R4556:3
He must attend to the necessities and interests of the entire flock.
R3728:1

Mark 1:40

A leper -- Leprosy was regarded by the Jews as an incurable disease, and as a type of sin. R4980:4

Mark 1:41

I will -- His prayer was answered, not because he was one of Jesus' disciples, nor because he promised to become one of them, but because of his exercise of faith, and in order to make of his case a testimony to the priests that Jesus exercised a power divine. R4980:4

Mark 1:42

He was cleansed -- Because of his exercise of faith, and in order to make of his case a testimony to the priests, that Jesus exercised a power divine. R4980:4

Mark 1:44

Say nothing -- The testimony of his Messiahship was to be hidden from the people for a time, but to be promptly given first to their "rulers" who represented the Jewish church in the trial then in progress, giving them an opportunity to receive Jesus. C168

Shew thyself -- To have the priest examine him as the Law required. R4980:4

To the priest -- To the representative of that church-nation, as a test. C169

Mark 1:45

Publish it much -- The result was that Jesus could not thereafter visit the large cities because he would be overwhelmed with the number of sick brought to him for healing. R4980:4

Mark 2

Mark 2:1

Capernaum -- Jesus' home at the time. (Matt. 4:13) R3728:3, 2583:1

It was noised -- It was soon widely known. R2583:1

In the house -- Probably Jesus' own home, but possibly that of Peter and Andrew, though not likely. R2583:1, 3314:2

Dr. Schaff suggests that according to the Greek text this might read "at home," instead of "in the house." R2583:1

No room -- Middle class houses at that time usually had one room only, about 20 by 40 feet in size. R3728:3, 3314:2

Preached the word -- Doubtless respecting the kingdom of God long promised, which he proclaimed to be nigh, even at the door. R3728:6
Probably respecting sin, its defilement and its penalty--death. R3314:2
Undoubtedly the same message delivered in Nazareth respecting the Lord's spirit being upon him, anointing him to preach and heal. R2583:2

His chief work, healings and miracles being merely incidental. R2583:2

We note a difference between our Lord's ministry and that of the apostles.

Jesus taught mainly surface and introductory truths, the time not yet being due for opening up the deep things of God. R1722:2

Mark 2:3

Bringing one sick -- The first business of every member of Christ, aside from his own development, is to help others to the Redeemer. R3315:6

Of the palsy -- Paralysis. R2584:4

A broad term for any disease which would render the individual helpless, this incident evidently being a serious case. R2583:5

Represents a condition of sin in which the individual loses his power; helpless, with a deadness of conscience to principles of righteousness.

R2584:4

His helpless condition probably hindered him from applying to Jesus on the day when so many of the sick at Capernaum were cured. R3728:6

Borne of four -- Similarly we can help to bring one another to the Lord, to the truth, to the influences and benefits sure to come from contact with Jesus or his body members. R3315:3

A large proportion of the blessing which has been bestowed upon the Lord's people through the Gospel has come through individual and private effort. R3315:4

Mark 2:4

Uncovered the roof -- A porch-roof, covered with tiles, which could be removed without much difficulty. R2583:3, 4980:3, 3314:2,3

A flat roof formed by heavy timbers about two feet apart, on which were placed slabs of either wood or stone, the whole being covered with earth or sod. R3728:3, 3729:1

An extemporaneous device of plain peasants accustomed to opening their roofs and letting down grain, straw and other articles, as they still do in the East. R2583:3*

We too, in bringing friends to the Good Physician of the soul, should not be readily stopped by impediments or obstacles. R2584:4

They let down -- Apparently without ropes. R3314:3

Using improvised ropes. R3729:1

Showing strong faith, not only in the Lord's power to heal, but also in his gentleness and goodness in reacting to this rude intrusion. R3729:1

Mark 2:5

Saw their faith -- Faith in the Lord as the sent of God, a condition indispensable to pardon. R3314:5

Such implicit faith, manifested by such heroic effort, could not fail to be appreciated by the Redeemer. R4980:3

The faith of the sick man and those interested in him. R1921:2, 3314:3, 1722:5

Some are inclined to put doctrine ahead of faith and repentance, but this will not do. R2584:5

The circumstances warrant the belief that the sick man himself exercised the faith and prompted his friends to take the steps they did. R2583:5

He said -- Not first asking respecting his previous course in life, nor waiting for him to express sorrow for sin. R3314:5

Our Lord was not offended by the intrusion, doubtless remembering that all things work together for good to the Lord's people, who will accept them thus. R2583:4

Let us learn also to overlook and forget rudeness, especially where there is evidence of sincerity of heart, faith, good intentions. R2583:4

Thy sins -- Not original sin and its death penalty, but sins in the plural, the man's own sins. R3730:5

Under the Law Covenant the Jews were held to account for their own transgressions; hence, serious sickness implied serious sins. R4980:3, 3730:5

Thus Jesus showed the great difficulty afflicting the whole family is sin, without which there would be no sickness. R3314:5

Putting the most important thing foremost: Jesus was primarily the sin-bearer and teacher, his work of healing being secondary. R3729:1

Be forgiven thee -- Thus, Jesus declared I am the Father's special agent and representative. R3729:2, 1921:3

Our Lord here assuming the office of the antitypical High Priest. R2584:2

This was justified because our Lord was making satisfaction for the sins of the whole world, and the Father had already indicated the acceptance of the sacrifice which was then in process. R4981:4, 3315:1, 1921:3

Suggesting the willingness of our Lord to forgive sins and heal the body in "the times of restitution." (Acts 3:21) R2584:2

Teaching the willingness of the Lord to forgive sins, to ignore them, to deal with us as though we were free from sin. R3314:5

Not blotted out, though forgiven. R3730:4

Implied full restitution to health and life. R1722:5

We mark a wide distinction between the blotting out of sin at the second coming of Christ, and the forgiveness of sins which may be enjoyed now by all who will exercise the necessary faith and obedience. R3729:6, 3314:6

But the man still lay helpless, his sins not blotted out though forgiven; still an illustration of the terrible effects of sin. R3730:4

Perfect creatures need no forgiveness, no allowance. R4981:1

Under the Law Covenant God arranged with the nation of Israel a certain kind and degree of forgiveness and reconciliation through Moses their Mediator. R3730:4

Our Lord must have seen a very proper condition in the young man's heart, else he would not have said these words unsolicited. R2583:5

Apparently the Lord was going to let him wait for the appointed time, with this simple assurance of the present favor of God, to thus test his faith and the measure of his satisfaction in that assurance. R1722:5

The palsied man had not brought a sin-offering under the terms of the Jewish Law, but had brought the sacrifice appropriate to the new dispensation, "a broken and a contrite heart." (Psa. 51:17) R2584:2

Members of the Body of Christ are fully qualified to declare to all true believers in Jesus these very words. R3315:2

Mark 2:6

The scribes -- The Rabbis, the Doctors of the Law. R2583:6

Reasoning -- We may suppose that it was partly to start this very line of reasoning that our Lord expressed himself as he did. R3729:2

Mark 2:7

Why doth this man -- The question was a very proper one, and they are not to be blamed for making the enquiry. R2583:6

Who can forgive -- A claim impossible to dispute, but one which Jesus substantiated by his power to heal this man physically. R2583:6

They did not consider that if he were the Messiah he would possess the authority. R4980:6

But God only -- All sin is primarily against God, whose law of righteousness is infringed. R3730:2

Claiming that Jesus was arrogating to himself a power which belonged to God alone. R4980:6, 3729:1

According to the plan of redemption Jesus was the only one who could forgive sins; or the Heavenly Father through him. R3730:2

God never gave power to bishops, priests or ministers of any denomination to forgive sins; nor did Jesus give authority to the apostles to forgive sins. They might preach forgiveness, but only in his name. HG737:5

Mark 2:9

Is it easier -- They had incorrectly thought that the forgiveness of sins would represent greater power and authority than the doing of miracles. R3314:6

Which is the greater power, to work miracles upon the natural body or to work a miracle of grace in the heart? R3315:2

The healing of the soul from the sickness and condemnation of sin should far outrank physical conditions and blessings. R2584:1

Arise -- Our Lord healed the sick to foreshadow the great work of his Millennial reign, to attract attention and establish his authority as a teacher, and to manifest his love and sympathy. R1722:1

Take up thy bed -- Although in the nature of restitution, this is not a blotting out of the man's sins. R3730:4

And walk -- Healing the man of the result of his sins. R3729:2

Mark 2:10

That ye may know -- It will be a lesson respecting the truthfulness of my statement. R2583:6

Mark 2:12

He arose -- Not completely out of all imperfections. Jesus merely healed him of a measure of his special difficulty. R3730:5

Mark 2:13

Went forth again -- The tense of the Greek would seem to indicate that our Lord kept going by the seashore, stopping here and there to discourse to the people, multitudes of whom flocked to hear him. R2590:3

Mark 2:14

He saw Levi -- His name was changed to Matthew when he became a member of the Lord's company. Matthew signifies "the gift of God." R2260:3, 4986:6, 2591:1

The receipt of custom -- He belonged to the Levitical tribe, but his service as a Roman tax collector socially degraded him and classed him as a "publican." R4986:6, 2591:1

The name "publican" and the profession were extremely odious to the Jews, as unpatriotic and disloyal. R2591:1

He was independent and humble-minded, braving the scorn of his fellow-countrymen. R4986:6

Perhaps the independence, humble-mindedness and the braving of the scorn of his fellow-countrymen were favorable qualities to becoming a disciple of Jesus. R4986:6

Follow me -- A special invitation to become Jesus' disciple. R4987:1

Not being previously invited to become one of Jesus' immediate disciples, Matthew could not essay to become one earlier. R2591:1

Followed him -- Forsaking all earthly goods that he might be a member of the Messianic class. R4987:1

We are not to suppose that Matthew left his money-drawer open, and his accounts with the Roman government unsettled, to immediately follow the Master. It may have taken weeks. R2591:1

The Lord and his disciples were well known. Probably Matthew had not only knowledge of our Lord, but also faith in him, as the Messiah. R2591:1

Mark 2:15

And it came to pass -- Probably several weeks after Matthew's call. R2591:5

In his house -- Matthew was a householder. R4987:1

A man of influence, Matthew immediately set about to use his influence in drawing others to the Savior. R2591:2

In consecrated homes the first consideration should be the service of the Master. R2591:3

Many -- Of his friends and business associates. R2591:2

So today, each should seek to exert his influence where it is greatest, upon his acquaintances, upon whom either his past honesty and good character should have an influence, or else those to whom his radical change of life would be most manifest. R2591:3

Publicans -- A term applied in Jesus' day to Jews who served the Roman government as tax collectors in Palestine. R4986:3

They were looked upon with disdain as being unfaithful to their religion and their nation. R4986:3, 2591:1

Like himself, of the ostracized class. R4987:1

Ones not professing holiness, but rather confessing estrangement from God and lack of harmony with his Law. R5464:1

Counted unpatriotic, disloyal to their own nation, in that they accepted the service of an alien government, and made use of their knowledge of their country and people in assisting to collect revenues deemed unjust. R2591:1

And sinners -- Jews who were careless in respect to the orthodoxy of their day; non-religious. R4986:3, 2591:2

Not necessarily evil-doers. R2591:2

They followed him -- The common people heard him gladly. R4967:3

Mark 2:16

Pharisees -- Signifies "holy person"--one scrupulously careful in observing the smallest details of the Law. R4986:3,6

Publicans -- Disdained as being unfaithful to their religion and to their nation. R4986:3

Sinners -- Styled "sinners" by the Pharisees because less particular in form, regardless of their having true moral status. R4986:6

How is it -- Jesus looked not upon the outward appearance, but the heart. He did not love the publicans because they were sinners, nor disapprove of the Pharisees because they outwardly kept God's Law. R5464:1

Eateth and drinketh with -- Not objecting that he taught the publicans and sinners, but that he ate with them, implying a social equality.

R2591:5 But the Pharisees would tolerate and eat with the Sadducees, although the latter were practically unbelievers, because they were of the wealthier and therefore more respectable class. R4986:3

Publicans and sinners -- Not that our Lord made companions of the rowdies or moral lepers of his time. R2591:3

Ostracized, not because they were wicked, but because their business was disesteemed, thus forcing them to have most of their social intercourse with the non-religious, by way of contrast called "sinners." R2591:2

Mark 2:17

He saith unto them -- This afforded Jesus the opportunity to give a great lesson in a few words. R4987:1

They that are whole -- Not implying that the Pharisees were not sick, and did not need our Lord's ministry; but that they did not admit that they were sin-sick and were not disposed to receive his good medicine of doctrine. R2591:6

Of the physician -- Implying the physician had a right to mingle with those whom he sought to relieve. R2591:6

Not to call the righteous -- Those that did not admit their sinfulness and imperfection; the self-righteous. R4987:2, 2591:6, 2260:2

Those who, not admitting their sinfulness and imperfection, do not seek divine forgiveness. R4987:2

Those who thought themselves righteous had a barrier before them which hindered their coming to the Lord. R4987:2

By these words Jesus sought to call attention to the fact that although the Pharisees claimed to be righteous, they were not so. They were sin-sick, imperfect, needing a Savior. R5464:3, 2591:6

"There is none righteous, no, not one." (Rom. 3:10) R4987:2

But sinners -- All sin is condemned of God, the little and the large; all unrighteousness is sin. R4987:1

Those that admitted they were unrighteous and had need of mercy. R2260:5, 2591:6

Admitting their sins, they were more ready to accept forgiveness. R4987:2

The disciples were nearly all from this lower, less orthodox, less educated class of Jews. R4986:6

Not that God is more pleased with those who live in sin than with those who strive to live in harmony with him; but the contrary. R5464:2

To repentance -- There is a great difference between calling men to repentance and calling them to the high calling. F87

Anyone who considered himself to be righteous would be beyond the call to repentance. R2591:6

Mark 2:18

Pharisees -- See Verse 16.

Used to fast -- At that time a fasting season was observed by the Pharisees and by those who had accepted the teachings of John the Baptist. R4987:2

The Pharisees fasted "twice in the week." (Luke 18:12) R2592:1

Probably the banquet of verse 15 was on one of the regular fast days of the Pharisees. R2591:5

Mark 2:19

Fast -- So long as Jesus was honored by the multitudes, it required comparatively little self-denial to be one of his followers. R2592:2

The bridegroom -- Jesus personally, not Jesus and the overcomers. R398:4
There is as much evidence of Christ's being the bridegroom to the typical church, as that he was reaper in the harvest of the typical age. R109:2*, 114:6*

Is with them -- Now in the Lord's second presence, we might say that the feast has begun again. It almost appears as though the fasting time has passed, and that the feasting and "joys of the Lord" have begun. R2592:2

They cannot fast -- It would be inappropriate for his followers to be in sadness and mourning at a time when they were receiving such wonderful blessings. R2592:1, 4987:4

They would have plenty of opportunity to weep and fast after he would be gone. R4987:4, 2592:2

Mark 2:20

Shall be taken -- Causing an abundance of perplexity and sorrow, then fasting would be in order. R2592:2

Then shall they fast -- Later on when trials came, when the Master got into the toils of his enemies, when his cause was unpopular, and the multitudes clamored for his death--then it required self-denial, antitypical fasting, to confess him and follow him. R2592:2

Thus for eighteen centuries God's people have been fasting, praying, and longing for the Bridegroom's return. R4987:4, 2592:2

In loneliness, and especially at the thought of the long delay in his coming to receive her to become his wife. R4987:4

Fasting is not obligatory, but a voluntary sacrifice of present and temporal good things that the mind and heart might go out more earnestly after the things not yet seen, but hoped for. R4987:4

Fasting signifies self-denial, a disciplining of the body by abstaining from delicacies, relishes, etc. R3659:5, 2592:2

Fasting is proper enough when intelligently done and from a right motive. A very plain diet or total abstinence may assist the full blooded and impulsive to self control. R2260:5

Fasting, under the Jewish dispensation was a symbol of self-denial under the Christian dispensation. R955:3

Mark 2:21

No man -- These two parables illustrate that before the blessing could come to natural Israel, spiritual Israel must be selected. R4987:5, 2592:5
This was perhaps the first intimation our Lord gave that Israel would be rejected. R2260:6

A piece of new -- Unshrunk. R4987:5

Cloth -- The fuller light of truth due at the first and second advents of the Lord. C160, 161

The imputed righteousness according to faith, based upon the merits of Christ's own sacrifice for sin. R2592:4

On an old garment -- An old sect or organization. C160

The Jewish system and arrangement. R2592:4

The impossible (absolute) righteousness required by the Law. R2592:4

The Gospel teaching is not a patch upon the Jewish Law, but is a new proposition. R4987:5, 2592:4

Away from the old -- Make the weakness of the old garment more noticeable. C160

None of the old systems are fit to be patched, or to receive the new doctrines. C160

Rent is made worse -- The shrinking of the new cloth would pull away the old and increase the difficulty. R4987:5

To combine Christianity with Judaism would have been disastrous to both--the one demanding absoluteness of righteousness; the other demanding acknowledgment of the impossibility of personal righteousness. R2592:4

Mark 2:22

And no man -- See Verse 21.

Putteth new wine -- Wine which had not yet finished its fermentation. R4987:5, 2592:5

Our Lord's new doctrines, the fuller light of truth. C160

The message of the Gospel dispensation. R4987:5, 2592:5

Into old bottles -- Wineskins out of which all the stretch and elasticity had gone; symbolically, old systems. R4987:5, 2592:5

In the Lord's day--Judaism; now, in the end of the Gospel age--sectarianism. R2592:5; C160

It was not the divine intention that Judaism should be reformed. R2592:5

Burst the bottles -- By the fermentation of the new wine. R4987:5, 2592:5

Picturing trials, disciplines and testings incidental to the preparation for the kingdom. R4987:5

Present truth, put into the denominations, would unquestionably mean the utter wreck of the denominations. R2592:5

The new truths would have destroyed any Jewish sect or organization built upon sectarian pride, errors, superstitions, and traditions. C160; R2592:5

The wine is spilled -- The new doctrines would have been left stranded, hampered by all the old errors and traditions of the sect. C160

New wine -- Today, the doctrine of the new dispensation. R2592:6

To put into Judaism the new doctrines would have meant that not only the Jewish nation would have been convulsed and wrecked by the spirit of the new teachings, but also that the doctrines themselves would have gone down with the wreck of that nation. R2592:5

Into new bottles -- New wineskins that will be able to stand the stress of the fermentation sure to come. R4987:5

God is now, as in the end of the Jewish age, calling out of the sectarian systems such as are Israelites indeed. R2592:5; C161

It is to this called out class that the new wine of the Gospel message is committed, and these experience the fermentation of trials, disciplines, and testings. R4987:5

Mark 2:23

That he went -- Probably on the way to the synagogue. R3316:6

Through the corn fields -- Wheat-field. R3754:1

On the sabbath day -- Signifies rest day. (See Verse 27) R4996:2, 5405:1; OV281:1

To pluck the ears -- The Rabbis ruled that rubbing the grain in both hands and blowing the chaff constituted winnowing and threshing, and violated the Sabbath. R3754:2, 5405:6, 4995:6

The Pharisees had a rule that no food should be eaten until after worship in the synagogue. R3316:6

Mark 2:24

On the sabbath day -- Jesus is supposed by some to have taught a laxity in the matter of Sabbath observance. This is a misunderstanding for Jesus was born a Jew and as much obligated to keep that Law as any other Jew. OV278:3

Not lawful -- Charging them with breaking the Sabbath. R5405:6, 3754:2; Q608:T

Mark 2:25

He said -- Objecting, not to the Sabbath Law, but to the nonsensical misinterpretations that were being made. R4995:6

When he had need -- David was not punished nor considered blameworthy because of the emergency of his situation. R4996:1

Mark 2:26

Did eat the shewbread -- In an emergency, thus not considered blameworthy. R4996:1

Mark 2:27

The sabbath -- Signifies rest day. R4996:2, 5405:1; OV281:1

Antitypical meaning to the Christian is the rest of faith. OV281:1; F392; R5405:5

Quite probably the early disciples kept the Sabbath day and the first day as well, for a time. R5405:3, 4600:2; F384

The great Messiah's reign of a thousand years will be the Sabbath of the world in general--the antitypical Sabbath. R5405:5, 4600:5; B40; D579; Q607:4; OV279:T

Israel's Law provided two Sabbaths; one every seventh year as well as one every seventh day. R5405:5

Was made -- There was no Sabbath day before the Jewish Law. R5405:1

Enoch and Abraham knew nothing about the Sabbath. R5405:1

For man -- Not "for all mankind." R1732:6

The Law not made to hinder any good or necessary work, but to benefit the people. R5405:6. 1732:6

For the benefit of mankind, for physical, mental and moral rest, recuperation and strengthening. R3316:2

God did not make man merely to keep a Sabbath, but he made the Sabbath for, in the interest of, mankind. OV279:1

Our Lord is showing the Jews they were putting an extreme construction upon the command. R1732:6

Not man for the sabbath -- It is a mistake to suppose, as some then and now do, that God made man simply to keep the Sabbath. R4995:6, 3316:2; OV279:1

Lord -- Signifies master, ruler, governor. R61:1*

Husband is a definition of Lord. The Anglo-Saxon word, Hlaford, from which our English word Lord is derived signifies breadkeeper, and is applied to one who has the general care over, and control of a family. R61:1*

Also of the sabbath -- He was the proper teacher to set forth its real significance. R3754:4, 4996:1

Lord of the great antitypical Sabbath, the great seventh day of a thousand years, the great antitypical Jubilee. R4996:4

Jesus could correct certain misapprehensions of the Law but the real meaning of the Sabbath could not be explained until after Pentecost.

R5405:6

To the Church, every day is a Sabbath; God's consecrated people rest as God rests--in faith, hope and trust. But also "there remaineth a rest for the people of God." (Heb. 4:9)--a different rest from that which we now enjoy--an actual rest after the resurrection change. R4996:4

Mark 3

Mark 3:2

Heal him on the sabbath -- Jesus did so many of his miracles of the Sabbath day as a prophetic picture of the great antitypical Sabbath day, the Millennium. R4600:5

Mark 3:4

On the sabbath days -- Type of the Millennial age. (See Verse 27) B40

To save life -- Greek: psuche; soul, being. E335

Mark 3:5

With anger -- A righteous indignation at hypocrisy and willful opposition to the light. R787:4, 4996:1

That men should think it sinful to relieve human distress on the Sabbath. R4996:1

Lack of ability to have just indignation would imply a lack of morals and of harmony with God. R5125:1

Being grieved -- Like him, the Lord's people should be wholly out of sympathy with everything not in harmony with God. R5125:1

Hardness of their hearts -- In a faithless attitude, not readily impressionable but inclined to be skeptical. R2651:3

The general trend of sin is to hardness of heart. OV304:2

He saith -- Showing our Lord's fortitude in pursuing his work, notwithstanding the opposition which conspired even against his life. R1735:1

His hand was restored -- The completeness and instantaneousness of his cures evidence the miraculousness of his healing. R1735:4

Mark 3:6

The Pharisees went forth -- They were rabid sectarians, fully convinced of their own importance. A similar spirit prevails today. R3754:5 Took counsel -- More zealous for their theory than for the truth, for the letter of the Law than for the spirit of the Law. R4996:1

The evil heart is not amenable to reason. R4600:5

The Herodians -- See Mark 12:13.

Against him -- As his fame increased, his opposition increased. R1735:3

Opposition and persecution are the inevitable concomitants of activity in the service of God, and they should be met with reason and candor. R1736:6

Might destroy him -- Excited to envy, malice, hatred and the very spirit of murder. R4600:5

Mark 3:7

Withdrew himself -- Not unnecessarily exposing himself to danger and then looking for miraculous interposition of providence for his protection, but using natural means and precautions for his preservation and protection until "his hour was come." (John 2:4) R1735:1

Mark 3:8

A great multitude -- Both Jews and Gentiles, thus creating a popularity for the Gospel which would be favorable to its dissemination later. R1735:4

Mark 3:10

For he had healed many -- His healings were accomplished by imparting a measure of his own vitality. R1735:4

To touch him -- Indicating that many of his healings were accomplished by imparting a measure of his own vitality, thus impoverishing himself to bless others. R1735:4

Mark 3:11

Thou art the Son of God -- Their conduct toward our Lord was far more respectful than that of the strictest sect of the Jewish church. Surely many of them will be prepared to return to their former estate on whatever terms a just God may prescribe. R1680:1

But the Pharisees said, "Is not this Jesus, the son of Joseph?" (John 6:42) R1680:1

Mark 3:13

He goeth up -- Evidently to take counsel of God with reference to the interests of the prospective Church, continuing all night in prayer. (Luke 6:12, 13) R1521:3

Withdrawing for physical and spiritual rest and refreshment after feeling his own loss of strength from continuous healings. R1735:4

Mark 3:14

He ordained -- While called individually, there was a special occasion upon which he dedicated them to their office as apostles. R1521:2

There is no intimation in the New Testament that, as one after another of the apostles died, other men were recognized as succeeding them. R5002:3

Twelve -- No more and no less. F209

The twelve were marked as separate and distinct amongst the disciples. F210

Only males were chosen to be the special public servants and ambassadors of the Gospel. F265

The twelve springs of Elim (Exod. 15:27) remind us of the apostles through whom has come the water of life. R4011:2

The recognition of successors to the apostles was one of the first errors after their death. R5002:6

He had many followers, both men and women, but only twelve were specially deputed as his mouthpieces and representatives among men. R5002:2

Send them forth -- Though we are not informed that their success in the work was any more marked during that time than was that of the seventy whom the Lord also appointed to this ministry, though not to the apostleship. (Luke 10:17) R1521:5

To preach -- These services were to be rendered specially in connection with the promulgation of the Gospel. F212

Their commission was, in the main, the same as the commission of the Lord and of the whole Church. (Isa. 61:1, 2) R1521:5

They were not to be lords over God's heritage. Their commission was one of service. F211, 212

Mark 3:16

Simon -- Bold, impetuous. R2261:1

Mark 3:17

James -- Elderly. R2261:1 John -- Young. R2261:1

The sons of thunder -- Probably because of their eloquence and forcefulness of speech. R3003:1

Andrew -- Far-seeing, careful, cautious. R2261:1

Philip -- Slow-witted. R2261:1

Bartholomew -- Nathaniel, the quick-witted. R2261:1

Matthew -- One of the heroes of faith. R2261:1

Thomas -- The doubting, skeptical intellect. R2261:1

James -- The advocate of works. R2261:2

Supposed to have been second cousin to our Lord, and for this reason, according to Jewish custom, styled "the Lord's brother." (Gal. 1:19)
R3003:2

Alphaeus -- Cleopas, husband of Mary. R3003:2

Thaddaeus -- Jude, a man of doctrine. R2261:2

Simon -- The zealot, a man of enthusiasm and independence. R2261:2

Mark 3:19

Judas Iscariot -- The conservative economist. R2261:2

As one of the tribes of Israel was cut off, and is not mentioned in the enumeration of the Apocalypse, but the tribe of Manasseh substituted (Rev. 7:6-8), so amongst Jesus' apostles, Judas is dropped and a successor appointed. R5002:3

By grouping them two-by-two, the Master made one full man out of two half men in each case. R2261:1

Mark 3:21

Lay hold on him -- Verses 20, 21 and 31 (Diaglott) seem to indicate more of a spirit of fear and anxiety than of opposition. R1736:5

He is beside himself -- His friends feared for him, so quickly had his course changed from one of privacy to one of publicity. R5037:1

Mark 3:22

The scribes -- Considering themselves representatives of Jewish orthodoxy and qualified to pass upon everything theological. R5037:1

Which came down -- To Galilee, in the vicinity of Capernaum. R5037:1

From Jerusalem -- Probably commissioned by the Jewish ecclesiastics there to come as spies, watch his words, withstand his teachings and if possible, find some occasion against him. R1736:1

Beelzebub -- The prince of demons, Satan. R3310:4

The first, and for a long time, the only, enemy of the divine government. R2171:5

This charge reveals the wisdom of Jesus' refusal to receive testimony from the demon. R3310:4

The prince -- Their chief; and no doubt as a superior order of being he exercises some degree of control. R2171:5

Satan is called the prince of darkness, of evil, of sin, or error, the "father of lies." SM548:1

Of the devils -- The "angels who kept not their first estate" (Jude 6) and who were restrained at the time of the flood. R2171:5; SM548:1

Greek: daimonion; properly rendered "demon." The unclean spirits, the familiar spirits, the fallen angels. R5183:3

Mark 3:23

Said unto them in parables -- "When he was reviled, he reviled not again." (1 Pet. 2:23) R4802:6

How can Satan -- The term Satan signifies adversary, opponent. R5183:3

Whose very existence is now being denied by many. F609; R3310:5

This does not imply that Satan will never be so cornered as to find it necessary to do good works in order to deceive; but that, when that time shall come, it will be a sure indication that his kingdom is tottering. R3784:2, 3120:1

Cast out Satan -- That would be suicidal; equivalent to a king stirring up strife in his own kingdom and working against his own cause. R1736:2

By the curing of physical ailments. F641; R1685:6

As he is now doing through "Christian Science." R2189:1, 3784:3, 1736:3

A proof that his power was on the wane. F638

The "wonderful works" of all who deny Jesus as the Redeemer are not to be credited to divine power. These works show to what straits Satan is reduced. R2189:2

If faith-healing power be not of God, it must be of the Adversary. R5037:2

Mark 3:24

Kingdom be divided -- The absurdity of a king stirring up strife and working against his own cause. R1736:2

Mark 3:25

House be divided -- The absurdity of the head of a house alienating and disrupting his own family and opposing the operation of his own plans. R1736:2

That Satan's house is now dividing against itself is manifest. R1736:3, 3784:2

Against itself -- Showing to what straits "the prince of this world" is reduced by the great increase of knowledge. His struggles are specially desperate at the age's close, before he is "bound" for the thousand years. (Rev. 20:1) R2189:2

Mark 3:26

Rise up against himself -- Reverse his methods and do some works of healing, thereby to clinch his errors and deceptions and to re-bind some. R5802:1

On the one hand causing sickness and death, and on the other hand healing the sick and casting out devils. R2189:2

Satan has long palmed himself off as a teacher clothed in light, but Satan in the roll of faith healer is a novelty belonging chiefly to our day.

R3120:2

We believe Satan has much to do with various faith healings done by Christian Science, Spiritualism, Hypnotism, etc. R3784:2, 1736:4; HG327:3

Be divided -- Upholding false and contradictory doctrines. R5037:2

He cannot stand -- If it was necessary for him to thus work against his own plans and arrangements, associates, etc. R3784:2

Satan has become a worker of miracles. This is a token that his "house" is tottering to its fall. R3120:1

Mark 3:27

Strong man's -- Satan, the powerful "prince of this world." R1736:2

House -- Or, dominion; or, arrangements. R1736:2, 626:6

Spoil -- The general spoliation of the present social structure will be indeed a dark night. R1955:1

In the great time of anarchy. Q626:1; A69

Destroy the works of evil, of sin, of superstition, of ignorance, etc. SM243:1

His goods -- His arrangements. R1626:6

All the present institutions of the world are Satan's goods and arrangements. Q626:1

Implying that he was already binding Satan, already spoiling his goods. R3784:3

He will first -- Satan must first be bound, restrained and deposed, before Christ's reign of righteousness and peace can be established. A69; HG538:5

Since the beginning of the time of the end, in 1799, and particularly since 1878, God has specially let in the light. The more the "light" shines, the more active is the Adversary to preserve his power. R1736:2

Bind the strong man -- Satan. R1736:2

With a strong chain of power; not his doom, but merely a restraint from deceiving the nations until the end of the Millennial age. R255:1

The first work of the new dispensation. "And he laid hold on that old serpent, which is the devil and Satan, and bound him a thousand years." (Rev. 20:2) A69

Set up God's Kingdom and overthrow sin. R1626:6

May it not be that part of the work accomplished by our invisible present Master was the binding? R4695:3

The work and teaching of Jesus were just such binding influences. R1736:2, 3784:3

When bound he will not have yet met his doom, but will merely be restrained from deceiving the nations. R255:1

His binding will be gradually accomplished. R3784:5

After the thief-like work of taking the Church is completed, and the kingdoms of this world go down in a climax of trouble. R3784:6

Spoil his house -- The work of destroying Satan's house was not intended to go on to a rapid completion. He would be permitted to control the world until the full end of the Gospel age, when his binding will be gradually accomplished and be followed by the liberating of the whole world from his chains of error. R3784:5

The general spoliation of the present social structure. R1955:1

Release humanity from his dominion. R1736:2

Mark 3:28

All sins -- Sins of ignorance will be forgiven. E272

Mark 3:29

He that shall blaspheme -- Jesus did not say that the scribes and Pharisees had committed the sin of blasphemy against the holy Spirit, though some of them may have done so. R5037:3

Against the Holy Ghost -- Jesus made this statement because they said that the spirit that was in him was an unclean spirit; that he was actuated by one of the fallen angels and not by the divine Spirit. R5037:4 Maliciously attributing to an evil source what could not be denied was a good work, free from sin, selfishness or ambition. R5037:4 Wilful opposition against that which is known to be holy and of divine appointment. R1736:4 Reject light when they see it. R192:3* Could not be committed in ignorance. R5037:3 Jesus did not say that the scribes and Pharisees had committed the sin. E272

Hath never forgiveness -- A sin unto death. R1249:1 Does not come under the satisfaction of divine justice whereby deliverance from Adamic death is secured. R1736:5 Because such conduct is treason against God. R1736:4 Neither in this world nor the world (age) to come. R192:3* "It is impossible to renew again unto repentance." (Heb. 6:4, 6; 10:26) R1249:1

In danger of -- Our Lord's reasoning did not change their attitude; hence, the rebuke and solemn warning. R1736:4 The scribes had so misused their education and opportunities as to be in great danger of becoming so degraded that even the kingdom influences would not bring them to a condition worthy of everlasting life. R5037:5 Those who violate their consciences, ignore the light they enjoy and sin against it, will find themselves proportionately degraded under kingdom influences and tests. R5037:5 Punishable with stripes. Every sin against light increases the danger of going into the second or eternal death. R1736:5 If corrective discipline does not produce reform, the increase of knowledge and experience will shortly make it a wilful sin against full knowledge, for which the full penalty would be inflicted--second death. R1736:5

Eternal damnation -- Eternal condemnation, eternal death. Every sin against light increases the danger of going into second or eternal death. R1736:4

Mark 3:31

There came then -- More out of a spirit of anxiety than of opposition. (See Diaglott on verses 20, 21 & 31) R1736:5

His brethren -- They did not believe in his claims and doctrines at that time, and seemingly could not understand why he was so revolutionary in his teachings and so antagonistic to all the recognized religious teachers of his day. (John 17:5) R1736:5

Arguing against the Roman Church teaching that Mary is "ever a virgin." R560:2*

And his mother -- Still pondering the mystery in her mind. R1736:5

Mark 3:32

Seek for thee -- Doubtless to urge him to greater caution for his safety and to more care for his physical necessities. R1736:6

Mark 3:34

Behold my mother -- The heavenly relationship was the one dearest to him. R1736:6

Whosoever shall do -- Not whosoever shall hear, or understand, or desire to do, nor even try to do. R1802:3*

The will of God -- Jehovah, his will and all his works are wholly on the side of purity, justice and truth--in no sense practicing sin, endorsing it, causing others to practice it, or in the slightest degree favoring it. R1781:3

Mark 4

Mark 4:1

A great multitude -- Attracted by reason of the miracles he performed. R3763:1

Mark 4:2

Parables -- Similes, illustrations, the thing said never being the thing meant. R3763:1

These different parable-pictures represent the same subject from different standpoints, just as a photograph of a building from the north, south, east and west, internally and externally. R4636:2, 5049:6

The prophet had foretold that our Lord would open his mouth in "parables" and in "dark sayings." (Psa. 78:2) R3763:3

Mark 4:3

Hearken -- An implication that an important lesson is contained in the parable. R3763:1

Only he that seeketh findeth the true meaning. R3763:1

A sower -- Known as the parable of the Sower, it might be more accurately described as the parable of the four kinds of soil, representing four kinds of human hearts. R3763:1
Our Lord was the great Sower, and after him the apostles. Since then he has used all of his faithful people more or less in this seed-sowing. R4634:3

To sow -- The field first sown is a Jewish field. The portion of the Gentile field that is being sown is but a limited one. R3764:3

Mark 4:4

By the way side -- The fields of Palestine are not fenced and the paths of travel frequently cross them. R3763:2

And the fowls -- Syrian and Palestinian birds seem to be much more numerous than elsewhere, probably on account of the climate; they are said to be one of the special pests of the farmer of that region. R3763:2
Representing Satan and his evil agents. R5039:2, 2634:6

Mark 4:5

On stony ground -- Palestine abounds with limestone, which renders the soil very rich, but, when shallow, very hot. R3763:2

Mark 4:6

The sun -- The sun of persecution necessary for the ripening. R5039:4

Mark 4:7

Fell among thorns -- Fifty genera and 200 species of plants in Syria and Palestine are furnished with thorns and prickles, probably more than any other country. Some grow ten to fifteen feet high. R3763:2*

Mark 4:8

Thirty...sixty...hundred -- One writer remarks that at Geneva in 1855 he got from the field a single ear of barley containing 276 grains. R3763:2
Bring forth the fruits of the Spirit; one hundred representing the highest standard, sixty not quite as high, and thirty might mean those of the Great Company. CR276:4

Mark 4:9

He that hath ears -- "Blessed are your eyes, for they see: and your ears, for they hear." (Matt. 13:16) R2712:2

Let him hear -- Having ears for the meaning, for the lesson, to know the will of God. R3763:3

We do our best to make plain the mystery, however only in proportion as our hearers have ears to hear can we succeed, only in proportion as the fear of God predominates over the fear of man. CR10:6

"He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches." (Rev. 2:7) B16

Mark 4:10

They -- Not only the twelve apostles, but a considerable number of disciples or followers. R3763:3

Asked of him -- Earnest desire to understand every word of God is an evidence that we belong to the kingdom class. R3763:5

The humble and truth-hungry inquire earnestly for the truth. B28

Mark 4:11

Unto you -- The Church; those walking in his footsteps. E333; R5088:1; CR435:1

The spirit-begotten ones. R4909:2

The meek, honest and faithful of God's people. D614; R4666:2

Israelites indeed in whom there was no guile, the very class for whom God had prepared the exceeding great and precious arrangements of his plan. R4108:2

An elect class he was attracting to himself who would be suitable for his Bride, his kingdom, his Church. R3763:4

Applies not only to the disciples of that day, but to the disciples all through the age. R1742:1

Unto the saints, in proportion as they are saintly. OV5:1

The brethren. CR476:3

While dismissing the self-satisfied, fault-finding quibbles of the Pharisees with dark or evasive answers, he took time and care in making the truth clear and plain to the humble. B27

It is given to know -- At the first presence, the humble Israelites indeed were not confused, but enlightened, so now in the second presence. D599; B28, 170

The Lord interpreted his parables and dark sayings to the apostles. R4909:2

Because they were in the condition of heart that would be profited by the knowledge. R3763:4

Yet even to the disciples there were certain things better left unsaid. "I have many things to tell you, but ye cannot bear them now." (John 16:12) R3780:4

Not to produce sanctification (consecration) but to strengthen, confirm, and upbuild those who are sanctified (set apart). R716:4*

If those without were declared "worthy of stripes" for not receiving the light, what shall we say of the responsibility of the twelve who not only saw much more, but by his power in them performed his miracles. R4909:2, 1962:5

"None of the wicked shall understand, but the wise (toward God) shall understand." (Dan. 12:10) R5039:2

The mystery -- "But ye, brethren are not in darkness, that that day should overtake you as a thief." (1 Thes. 5:4) C215

"The secret of the Lord is with them that reverence him, and he will show them his covenant." (Psa. 25:14) R5039:2

Why God permits evil is one of the "deep things" revealed only to those begotten of the holy Spirit. R1506:1

The apostles received a special insight, and corresponding responsibility. R4909:2, 4907:2, 1962:5

All this privilege, opportunity, knowledge and contact with the Lord made Judas specially responsible, and his crime inexcusable. R4907:3

Them that are without -- The world. OV5:1; CR435:1 Outsiders ensnared by the fear of men. CR10:6

Outsiders, not specially interested followers. R3803:2, 5088:1

The masses, not in a heart condition to understand and be profited. R5039:1

Outside the pale of the believing disciples--which included all Israel except a small "remnant." R1742:4, 4909:2

Outside of the twelve and other special disciples. R4909:2, 3780:3

The riches of God's grace were never intended to be understood, except by the elect. R4053:6

Not disciples, not consecrated. R3763:3

At the present time it is not given to all to see and understand, but the time is coming when all the blind eyes shall be opened. R3140:5

In parables -- Dark sayings. D614

Psalms 78:2 foretold that our Lord would open his mouth in "parables" and in "dark sayings." R3763:3

In order that, even though having the Bible before them, others than the consecrated may not really see and understand. B170

Mark 4:12

Not perceive -- The Scriptures were written and arranged in such a way by the Lord, through the inspired writers, that they could not be understood except by those who would come into harmony with him by faith and obedience. Q821:1

Nevertheless, there was something very attractive in the Master's style, so that even those who did not fully comprehend his teachings said, "Never man spake like this man." (John 7:46) R3803:2

Because their hearts were not right. Because of this unworthiness, blindness came upon Israel, and will continue until the fullness of the Gentiles is come in. (Rom. 11:25) R1742:4

Not understand -- Because the masses even of the Jews were not in a heart condition to understand. R5039:1

The dark sayings of our Lord were not understood by the people who heard them and seem to be but little better comprehended today. A128

But that the specially zealous Israelite indeed might be attracted to closer study and inquiry. R3803:2

Unintelligible words from the standpoint of ordinary Christian thought. R3763:3

We are not to be surprised at the wide difference of understanding of God and of his mightiness and character, as viewed by the saints and by the world; but to expect it. R2712:2

Lest at any time -- "A little knowledge is a dangerous thing." Had the multitudes believed, certain features of the divine plan might have been hindered. R3763:6

Should be converted -- Turned to a proper course. R3763:3

Mark 4:13

Know ye not -- The Lord expected his disciples to see the drift of this parable without inquiring for an explanation. R1741:6

He expected them to use their common sense in either interpreting the parable for themselves, or in judging the correctness of interpretations offered by others. R3250:3

How then -- He would have us think, consider and put out God-given mental faculties to their legitimate use. R3250:3

Will ye know -- Understand. R1566:2

All parables -- This parable would serve as a general key for the interpretation of all Jesus' parables. R5039:2, 3763:6, 716:4*

He only explained the one parable and left us to find the significance of the others by study, comparison and observation of his methods and principles. R716:4*

Any interpretation out of harmony with the general principles laid down in the Scriptures, or at variance with any plain, direct statement, may be set down as incorrect, whether we see a better one or not. R716:4*

Resulting in many misinterpretations of his teachings. R2476:3

Mark 4:14

Soweth the word -- The Word of God, the entire revelation which God has made to us--the Bible. R3764:1, 5039:2, 2628:4

More than this, it represents that particular element or feature of God's Word which relates to the kingdom. R5039:2, 2628:4

Intention, plan or purpose of God. R338:1, 421:2

First, in a Jewish field, already prepared by divine instructions and disciplines. The Gentile field that is being sown is but a limited one.

Christendom is the wheatfield. R3764:3

Not that any particular translation of the Word of God, nor that any religious writings which contain this Word are invaluable, but they are good seed only in proportion as they are thoroughly loyal to the divine Word. R3764:1

Mark 4:15

By the way side -- The heart not in a receptive attitude, hard like the wayside path. R5039:2

Paths hard trodden by life's experiences; sometimes by too great prosperity. Trials, sufferings, and disappointments may plow them up. R3764:3

Their hearts being solid and compact with selfishness. R2627:3

Hard ground--hard hearts, selfish hearts, proud hearts. R5039:3

For such the Lord must, either through trials in the present life or disciplines in the Millennium, plow up their hearts and make them ready for the reception of the truth. R3764:4

Satan -- Our Lord and the apostles were firm believers in a personal devil. R3165:6,5

Satan and his evil agents are represented by the "birds." R5039:2

Taketh away the word -- We lose the benefit of that which we do not understand. R5039:2

Mark 4:16

On stony ground -- Those with little depth of character, merely emotional, shallow, superficial in their love of righteousness. Below the surface are hard, stony, selfish hearts. R5039:3, 2627:5

We cannot see as God sees, we know not the heart, the shallowness of the nature. R3764:4

Immediately receive it -- The first gush of enthusiasm in the Lord's service, much as we may and do appreciate it, may be but the hasty production of shallow soil in the heart. R1656:1

Mark 4:17

No root in themselves -- Little depth of character, merely emotional. R5039:3

Having little nourishment, backed by little character, it will soon wither and bring no fruitage to maturity. R3764:4

The trouble was not with the seed nor with the sower, nor with the sun of persecution necessary for the ripening--the fault lay in the fact that their hearts were not right; they were hard, stony. R5039:4

But for a time -- Under new conditions character will be deepened and good results will be proportionately obtained. R3764:5

Offended -- All their ardor oozes out, their zeal is at an end. R5039:4

These are they -- Very nice people, hospitable, educated, etc. R5039:5

Among thorns -- Earthly projects and ambitions whose interests conflict with the interests of the kingdom. R3764:5

Soil that brings forth great thorns is rich, and if devoted wholly to the production of wheat would bring forth large crops. R3764:5

These thorns are not gambling devices, card parties, saloons and other places of ill-repute, nor secret sins and vices. R5039:4

This does not mean poor ground, for the thorns are to be found in the very best of ground. R2627:6

Mark 4:19

Cares of this world -- Their talents, influence, means, time--the strength of their hearts, the strength of the soil is absorbed in another direction--in the bringing forth of earthly projects and ambitions whose interests conflict with the interests of the kingdom. R3764:5

They are mistaken who suppose they can love both the Lord and the world.

"Ye cannot serve God and mammon." (Matt. 6:24) R3764:5

Deceitfulness of riches -- Money--lust and the excitement of business and pleasure. R5743:2

Experience would lead us to question whether or not prosperous ones are living as near to God as when they were less prosperous. R2520:2

The Lord occasionally finds some to whom he can entrust a stewardship of riches without injury, but such instances are rare. R2520:2

If a Christian grows rich, it should be with fear and trembling. R1045:5*

The awful power in money is more dangerous than dynamite. R1045:5*

This does not signify that merely the rich are thus deceived. SM317:2

Lusts of other things -- Money-lust, and the excitement of business and pleasure. R5743:2

Become unfruitful -- We "cannot serve God and mammon." (Matt. 6:24) R3764:5

Not much can be expected from the wayside heart of the shallow-hearted, but great possibilities are lost in those in whom the seed of truth is choked by the cares of this life. R3764:6

The first spot upon their robe distressed them; but subsequently they became accustomed to seeing it spotted and thought less and less of the matter. SM260:T

Mark 4:20

Hear the word -- See Verse 14.

Bring forth fruit -- One kind of fruitage but with differences in the amount of yield. R5039:5

Some thirtyfold -- Might mean those who perhaps will be of the Great Company class. CR276:4

Some sixty -- Might be the Bride class but not to shine quite as highly in the kingdom, "star differeth from star in glory." (1 Cor. 15:41) CR276:4
All will come forth glorious, but some will blaze with a more respondent brilliancy, because of their great zeal, and therefore their great likeness to their Redeemer and Lord. R5039:5

The amount of fruitage will be measured by the amount of love and zeal in the heart. R5039:5

Some an hundred -- Might be those who came up to the very highest standard. CR276:4

Those with the largest possible capacity and measure of service to our king. R3765:4

Those who love the Lord, his truth and his people most fervently. R2628:4

The fully appreciative and the fully loving, will be the most energetic to know and to do the Master's will, and they will bring forth the largest fruitage. They, too, will have the chief places in the kingdom. R5039:5

Those will have the places of honor next to the Redeemer, who, in this life, will manifest to God the greatest harmony with his character, in their zeal, their love for God, the truth and the brethren. R5039:6

Mark 4:21

Under a bushel -- Demonstrating lack of courage, appreciation, earnestness. R4967:5

Mark 4:22

There is nothing hid -- This prophecy is as true in the judgment of nations as of individuals. D541

Illustrated by the X-ray machine. R1954:3

Which shall not -- During the Millennial age. A303

Be manifested -- A day of reckoning regarding the proper and diligent use of our gifts in harmony with the divine purpose and methods. R1972:3

We seem to be approaching this time. R1954:3

A testimony dreaded but disbelieved by unjust stewards of wealth and power. C20

The murderer and his victim, the debtor and his creditor, the thief and his dupe, the defamer and the defamed, must face each other. R1655:1

Mark 4:23

Ears to hear -- The only Gospel was to be preached not to Jews only, but to people of any nation who might be found with "ears to hear"--with hearts to appreciate it. R2995:6

Mark 4:24

Take heed what ye hear -- Each should be on guard against communications and sparks that would be injurious, igniting the heart. R4381:4

With what measure ye mete -- The forgiving of God's children is made dependent upon their having a spirit of forgiveness toward the brethren. R5135:5

Mark 4:25

To him shall be given -- Following this just principle, the Logos, who had proved faithful in all things, was offered the Headship of the New Creation with its sufferings and the glory to follow. (1 Pet. 1:11) F64, 65

Mark 4:26

The kingdom of God -- The embryo kingdom. R5049:6, 2634:6
Referring to the kingdom class of the present time, rather than to the kingdom in its fully developed state during the thousand years of his glory. R5049:3

The nominal church of this Gospel age. R2634:6, 5049:6

A man should cast seed -- Jesus and the apostles did the seed sowing, not only for their own day but for the whole wheat class developed throughout this age. R5049:6

Mark 4:27

Night and day -- Illustrating slow, gradual, methodical development, covering the entire period of this Gospel age. R5049:6

Mark 4:28

For the earth -- The law of spiritual life finds a magnificent symbol in the law of vegetable growth. Such correspondency suggests one Bible in two volumes--the volume of Nature and the volume of Scripture. The first volume is the second volume illustrated. R29:4,6*

Bringeth forth fruit -- Slow, gradual, methodical development, covering the entire period of this Gospel age. R5049:6

Of this growth the vegetable growth is a magnificent symbol. R29:4*

First the blade -- Showing varied experiences over many days before it is finally harvested. R5049:6

Then the ear -- The Savior seems to use the idea of progression in three steps in reference to the development of the Gospel age, ending with the harvest. R211:4*

The full corn -- Unwavering trust in the Lord, abiding rest of soul, zeal in God's service, is a matter of growth. R5912:6

Is brought forth -- The gathering for the heavenly garner will be accomplished by the first resurrection. R5049:6

He putteth -- The same Lord of the Jewish age harvest is now present directing the work of the Gospel age harvest. R1742:2

Harvest -- Greek: therismos; reaping harvest. R223:1

"The harvest is the end of the age." (Matt. 13:39) R5049:6

Is come -- The present is the harvest time of the Gospel age. R1742:1

The kingdom of God -- An interchangeable expression with "kingdom of heaven." (Matt. 13:31) R397:1

This parable represents the kingdom from the viewpoint of the world--as the nominal church, developed from the original little seed of the true Gospel. R5049:6, 2634:6

Mark 4:31

It is like -- Different parables view the embryo kingdom from a variety of angles. This parable represents the kingdom from the viewpoint of the world--as the nominal church. R5049:6

Grain of mustard seed -- The original little seed of the true Gospel. R5049:6

See Verse 30.

Great branches -- We have a great institution today with many denominational branches. R5049:6

So prosperous as to invite the birds. R5406:5

So that -- It is the neglect to preach the Gospel of the "narrow way" that has brought such prosperity and made it a desirable place for the fowls of the air, Satan and his deluded ones. R5050:1

The fowls of the air -- The wicked one and his angels--Satan and his representatives. R5049:6, 5406:5, 4636:2, 2634:6

May lodge under the shadow -- As the real life of ecclesiasticism. R5050:1

Babylon, nominal Christendom, "the hold of every foul spirit, and a cage of every unclean and hateful bird." (Rev. 18:2) R2634:6, 5406:5, 5050:1, 4636:3

Mark 4:34

But without a parable -- This was the customary way for Jesus to preach. CR250:2

Not easily understood. If our Lord's parables and dark sayings be taken as plain, literal statements of truth, they will lead to all kinds of errors and misapprehensions. R4644:1

When -- About two years into the Lord's ministry. R3324:1

The even was come -- After 3:00 P.M. R3324:1

The past eighteen centuries have been a dark night in which the only light available has been "thy Word, a light to my feet." (Psa. 119:105) R3325:4

Let us pass over -- Because he was tired from his teaching and healing, in which vitality went out of him for the relief of the people. R5058:3

Unto the other side -- For a season of rest and refreshment. R5058:3

Mark 4:36

They -- From the various accounts we judge that all twelve disciples were with him, and apparently other "men"--seamen, as Matthew's account implies. R3324:1

In the ship -- One of the boats formerly used by some of his disciples and still owned by them. R5058:3

Mark 4:37

Arose a great storm -- "The prince of the power of the air" (Eph. 2:2) probably had something to do in the development of this storm. R3324:2
The storms may seem to come from the world, but really beyond the world is the Adversary. R3325:4, 3324:2

We do not wish to intimate that every storm is of Satanic origin, but we do hold that some of them are supernatural and of the Adversary. (See Job 1:13, 19) R3324:5

Picturing the experiences of the Church, being tempest-tossed all through the dark night of this Gospel age. R3325:1,2

The great time of trouble with which this age will end. R5329:5

The long reign of sin and death has been one continuous storm. R5239:5

There are storms of life which sometimes sweep over ourselves, the brethren and the whole household, and imperil us and seem sure to sink us in despair. R5058:3

These storms may be right inside our own person, of passion, anger, resentment, trials. R5239:5

It must not surprise us if a dark hour is before us, if the time will come when the stormy winds will be so fierce that many will cry out in fear and trembling. R3325:4

Compare comments on Psa. 46:1, 2.

Of wind -- The Sea of Galilee is quite subject to wind storms. R3324:2
Funnelled through profound ravines and wide gorges from the surrounding plateaus. R3324:2*

Beat into the ship -- If our faith be strong enough under such circumstances, we would keep on with our proper endeavors to adjust matters, corresponding to the bailing of the boat and the working of the oars; but also maintain an implicit faith that "all things work together for our good." R3324:6

Mark 4:38

Asleep on a pillow -- Evidently thoroughly exhausted from the labors of his journey and ministry. R3324:3

The Lord's providence had something to do with this prolonged sleep, in order to put the faith of the disciples to the test. R3324:3

It has seemed to the Church at times as though the Lord were asleep, inattentive to the prayers of his faithful, and inattentive to their cries and groans. R3325:1

They awake him -- Whoever can, by the exercise of his faith, take hold upon the Lord will find a great peace, a great calm come into his heart and into all of his affairs. R5058:6

Carest thou not that we perish? -- We are to cry for the Lord's help that we may be overcomers of the storms within us, of passion, anger, resentment. R5239:5

In the day of wrath the cry of the people will much resemble the cry of the apostles. R5823:6

The slightly different accounts given by Matthew, Mark, and Luke are all correct. One disciple cried out in one way and others in different words. R3324:3

Mark 4:39

Said unto the sea -- Representing the restless, turbulent, dissatisfied masses of the world. A318

Peace, be still -- Same Greek word used by our Lord to the demon, suggesting the storm was the work of Satan. (Mark 1:25) R3324:4
He who declined to ask the heavenly power for angelic protection (Matt. 26:53), was perfectly at liberty to call upon these powers in the interests of his followers. F650

Illustrating the manner in which the day of trouble will end. A171;
R5767:4; OV228:3

When the people cry to the Lord from the depth of their hearts, he will be ready to deliver them. R5823:6

Will come through Messiah's Kingdom speaking thus. R5601:2

This great storm will be much greater before the Lord will step in and say, Peace. R5696:1

The wind ceased -- Our Lord's ministry is supposed to have covered two years at the time of this miracle. R3324:1

There was a great calm -- "He maketh the storm a calm." (Psa. 107:29) R3324:1

A picture of the great rest from the evil one for a thousand years. R3325:4

The wind might naturally suddenly stop, but waters, thus lashed to a fury, could not be calmed thus quickly except by superhuman power. R3324:4

Yet he declined to ask the heavenly power for angelic protection in Gethsemane. (Matt. 26:53) F650

In the storms of life whoever can by faith take hold upon the Lord will find a great peace and calm come into his heart and all his affairs.

R5058:3,6

Mark 4:40

So fearful -- We cannot enjoy the sufferings, but we can enjoy the thought which faith attaches to them, namely, that these are but light afflictions working out for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory. R3325:1

Ye have no faith -- "Without faith it is impossible to please God."

(Heb. 11:6) "According to thy faith be it unto thee." (Matt. 9:29) "All things are possible to him that believeth." (Mark 9:23) R3324:6

Has your faith not yet developed to such a degree that you can fully trust me? R3324:5

We also have need of faith and need of tests to our faith. R3324:5

As lesson after lesson comes to us, the Master will expect, and we should expect of ourselves, greater faith, greater trust, greater peace. R3325:1

Mark 4:41

What manner of man -- The experience was a valuable lesson showing the wonderful power of God exerted through their Master; and the same lesson is for us. R5058:3

Mark 5

Mark 5:2

Immediately -- The story of the demons is connected with that of the storm on the sea, intimating that the demons will have considerable to do with stirring up the great "time of trouble." R5059:1

Out of the tombs -- As there were no asylums at the time, the maniacs, demonized, were subject to the private care of their friends. R3771:6

An unclean spirit -- Obsessed--that is to say, demons, the fallen angels mentioned in Jude 6 and 2 Peter 2:4 had gained access, and were in control of him. R5059:1

We should expect similar possessions today. In our judgment a large proportion of the so-called insane are in just that condition. R3771:3

They could not materialize, so the next best thing was to try to get possession of human bodies. Q671:T

Those who deny the personality of Satan must logically also deny the personality of demons, so frequently referred to in the Scriptures. R3771:3

While mankind are not all possessed of devils, through the spirit of evil they are all more or less possessed with the spirit of demons, the spirit of selfishness and thus, slightly insane, some more so, some less so.

R3773:1

Being debarred from all association with God, these fallen angels have no longer any pleasure in things on the spiritual plane, but crave association with depraved mankind and a participation with him in sin.

R1678:3

Had his dwelling -- Having broken his cords and fetters and having left his home. R3771:6

Mark 5:4

Plucked asunder -- Manifesting a wonderful strength. R3771:6

Mark 5:6

Afar off -- He must have seen the boat coming across the lake of Galilee, because he met Jesus immediately upon the landing of the ship.

(Verse 2) R3772:1

Mark 5:7

To do with thee -- The expression "What have I to do with thee?" might be more literally rendered, "What have we in common?" R3772:2
There is nothing in common between the Lord and spirit mediums, hypnotism, mental science, Christian Science, etc.; and none should have anything whatever to do with them. R3772:2

Son of the most high God -- The demons, fallen angels, recognized Jesus and spoke through the man's lips. R5059:1

While the Pharisees said, "Is not this Jesus, the son of Joseph?" (John 6:42) R1680:1

Torment me not -- Apparently Jesus had already begun to command the unclean spirit to come out. R3772:1

Demon's answer to the command of Jesus. R5059:1

The demons apparently understood God had a time appointed which would mark the limitation of their liberties and opportunities in connection with the tormenting of mankind by obsession. R3772:1

"Art thou come to torment us before the time?" (Matt. 8:29) R3772:1

The demons thus implied that an interference with their tormenting of mankind would be an injury to their rights. R3772:1

There are many amongst men who have similarly perverted notions of what are their rights, to impose upon others, to defraud, mislead, injure, pillage. R3772:2

Mark 5:8

Come out -- This miracle was a demonstration of the power of the Lord over evil spirits. A lesson intended more for the Lord's people of the Gospel age. R3772:5

Of the man -- This poor man is an extreme example of all out of whom the spirit of evil is cast through the power of the truth. R3773:2

Mark 5:9

What is thy name? -- We may suppose that the Lord knew the man was possessed of a great number of fallen spirits, but brought out the answer for the sake of his disciples and the others crowded about. R3772:2

Legion: for we are many -- About 2000, as indicated by the number of swine. R4976:2, 5059:4, 3772:5

So anxious were the demons to possess human bodies that there was a legion of them in one man. Q671:T

Hypnotism, mesmerism, clairaudient power and clairvoyant power are all part and parcel of the same great deception. R5059:5

Anxious in some manner to become associated with humanity, yet unable to assume human form, when they found a man willing, a legion crowded into him, thereby making him a maniac. R1678:4, 3772:3

Mark 5:10

He besought him -- The demons realized that they were subject to the commands of Jesus. R5059:2

Not send them away -- The evil spirits apparently do not have special pleasure in their own company, and are debarred from all intercourse with the holy angels. R3772:3

Out of the country -- To the abyss--to the second death, to utter destruction. R3772:4

Mark 5:11

Swine feeding -- Swine were condemned under the Jewish Law, and may therefore have been considered contraband. R3772:4

While the Jews did not eat swine's flesh, the foreigners did, especially the Roman soldiers, and the swine industry must have been a very lucrative one. R3772:4

The Jews of the vicinity were probably favorable to the industry, being interested in its prosperity; in the same manner farmers are interested in the prosperity of breweries, because through them they find a market for their crops. R3772:4 Scholars are of the opinion that this part of the country was largely inhabited by foreigners, the owners of large herds of swine. R3772:4

And all the devils -- They did not attempt to deny their identity, but admitted Jesus' lordship and power over them. F626

Obviously spirit beings. Those who deny obsession must account for the transfer of a disease of the mind from a man to a herd of two thousand hogs. R3772:5

Besought him -- Apparently evil spirits cannot impose themselves, even upon dumb animals, until granted some sort of permission. R2173:3, 4976:3 Demonstrating that they cannot trouble us except as we permit them, or tamper with, or allow our minds to come under their hypnotic or obsessing influence. R4976:3

Into the swine -- Rather than have no animal body at all, they prefer to have the bodies of swine. R4976:3

May enter into them -- To obsess them. R5059:2

The entertainment of evil thoughts, the practice of vicious habits, seems to break down the will and give admittance to these evil spirits to have control of it. R3772:3

Mark 5:13

Jesus gave them leave -- Demonstrating evil spirits cannot trouble us except as we permit them. R4876:3

The herd ran violently -- Swine are not easily stampeded; if you want them to move you must whip everyone of them. R4976:2

They were crazed by the strange outside influence which took possession of their brains. R5059:4

Man, with his higher organism, is able apparently to stand much more mental torment than the brute creation. R3772:5

Two thousand -- This part of the country may have been largely inhabited by foreigners, the owners of large herds of swine. R3772:4

There were enough demons to enter the whole herd. R4976:2

Were choked -- Swine were condemned under the Jewish Law, and may therefore have been considered contraband and their destruction authorized. R3772:4

Because unwilling to cooperate for their own deliverance, mankind's help must come in another way--by the fall of present institutions. R3772:6

Mark 5:14

And told it -- To clear themselves of responsibility and to tell them that the man who caused the difficulty was still near the spot. R3772:5

Mark 5:15

Clothed -- In his insanity he had torn off clothing and everything, but now peace and serenity reigned. R3772:6

Thank God for the clothing which we have in Christ's robe of righteousness, covering our blemishes and imperfections, the bruises of sin and the injury which we did to ourselves. R3773:2

In his right mind -- Released from his obsession. R5059:4

Sane enough, when rid of the evil influence. R4976:3

Thank God that we can now see things from the better standpoint, from the only true standpoint. R3773:2

Mark 5:17

To depart out -- Disregarding the healing of the man, selfishness reigned. If Jesus remained their hog business might be wrecked. R3772:6

This is exactly the reasoning of many in respect to the liquor traffic.

R3772:6

They loved better the ways of sin than the promised ways of righteousness.

R3773:1

Instead of desiring others to be similarly helped, they reasoned on the selfish side of the question, that his continued presence might wreck the business and economy of this prosperous country. R3772:6

Wherever the truth goes it creates a division and an uproar. R1633:3

Mark 5:18

Might be with him -- "To you, who believe, he is precious." (1 Pet. 5:7)
R3773:2

Perhaps fearful of being repossessed by the demons, perhaps ashamed of his previous course of life and old associates; but more probably to be a witness to the Lord. R3773:2

He wanted to preach to others of the great deliverance which he had experienced and to tell them of this further proof that Jesus was the Messiah. R5059:4

Mark 5:19

Jesus suffered him not -- Because it was not in harmony with the Lord's judgment of the Father's will. R5059:4

While Jesus refused the request, he did not spurn the consecration. R3773:3

Go home -- If we cannot be the apostles to follow his footsteps, we can go to our own homes and to our friends and there confess the Lord and his mighty power in us. R3773:4

And tell them -- Our Lord's journey on this occasion seems to have resulted in the conversion of but one person, the demoniac, his subsequent work there being done through him. R3773:4

How great things -- We should not only witness with our lips, but in all the departments of our life, testifying that we are now sane, that we now have the "spirit of a sound mind." (2 Tim. 1:7) R3773:5

Mark 5:20

And he departed -- Our Lord did not force himself upon them. R3773:1

Had done for him -- Our Lord's journey seems to have resulted in the conversion of but one person, the demoniac, his subsequent work there being done through him. R3773:4

Mark 5:22

There cometh -- While Jesus was enjoying the banquet at the house of Matthew. (Matt. 9:18) R2617:2

Rulers of the synagogue -- In charge of its affairs, inviting readers, managing its schools, etc. R2617:1

According to the custom of that time he was, therefore, a member of the local Sanhedrin, the court which tried certain classes of offenders.

R2617:1

Jairus -- As a man of high station, no doubt he was acquainted with the noblemen of the same city whose son Jesus had healed. (John 4:46-53)

R2617:1

Mark 5:27

Touched his garment -- The methods of restitution will doubtless be as varied as were the methods employed by Jesus in healing diseases at his first advent. One touched the hem of his garment, another stretched forth his withered hand, for another he prayed. R759:3

Mark 5:30

Virtue had gone out of him -- Life, vitality, vigor. "Himself took our infirmities and bare our sicknesses" (Isa. 53:4; Matt. 8:17), a prophecy that has had its fulfillment. R2028:5, 3885:6, 1359:3, 133:1; A230; E125; F633

The Master was not merely using a divine power, but was using up his own physical power for man's relief. R5104:1, 454:3

Vitality, strength. During his ministry he was continually imparting his vitality to the suffering ones around him, thus impoverishing himself.

R1359:4,3; E125; SM651:2

He did not partake of sin, nor did he share in imperfection, except as he voluntarily shared the sorrows and pains of some during his ministry, taking their pains and infirmities as he imparted to them his vitality, health and strength. A230

Jesus experienced the woes and sufferings of humanity without sharing in the imperfections and sins. He suffered for those around him, and made use of his own vitality in healing their diseases. R454:3

It is a fact coming daily to be more recognized among scientific men, that some persons possess greater vitality than others, and possessing more can communicate it to others who have less. R574:4

The greater the number healed, the greater was our Lord's loss of vitality and strength. E124

No wonder he was "a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief." (Isa. 53:3) R574:5

"Touched with the feeling of our infirmities." (Heb. 4:15) R1359:4, 2028:6; E126

To bless and heal in mind and body the sinners about him was part of his dying. SM645:1

Turned him about -- We can imagine the feelings of Jairus in consequence of this delay; while it added to his faith in the power of Jesus, it at the same time tested his faith in respect to the recovery of his child. R2617:2 Similarly, he gives us a ground for faith, and then, as we exercise that faith and act in harmony with it, he gives fresh corroboration; meanwhile testing it by permitting fresh difficulties, contrary suggestions, doubts, fears, etc. R2617:3

Mark 5:34

Thy faith -- Some were healed in answer to their own faith and some in answer to the faith of another. (Verses 23, 42) R759:3

Why troublest thou -- Hope is gone, submit to the inevitable. R2617:3

Mark 5:36

Only believe -- Divine promises and blessings are to the faithful only--both as respects the present and the eternal life. R2617:4
Faith, not credulity, is the prime essential of an "overcomer." R2617:3

Mark 5:37

Peter, and James, and John -- The Lord evidently loves fervency (warmth) of spirit or disposition. R2617:4
Not a selfish partiality, but rather as an indication that these three, specially zealous amongst the apostles, were further advanced in spiritual things, and best able to appreciate the privileges granted them. R2617:4
Noting our Lord's appreciation of zeal should lead all who are his followers today to strive after greater fervency of spirit. R2617:4

Mark 5:38

Seeth the tumult -- The preparations for the burial were far advanced at the time of our Lord's arrival, for it was the Jewish custom to have a speedy burial after death. R2617:5

Them that wept -- Matthew designates them as "minstrels." R2617:5

Mark 5:39

But sleepeth -- A common word for death in both the Old and the New Testaments. (1 Kings 2:10; Acts 7:60; 1 Cor. 15:51; 1 Thes. 4:14) R2617:5, 2197:6

Since there is to be an awakening of the dead, Jesus spoke of death as sleep, a period of rest, of quiet, of unconsciousness. R5059:6, 2617:6, 1939:4

He spoke in the same manner of the death of Lazarus. R5059:3, 5611:5, 2617:5

He did not say she was in heaven or in purgatory or in hell. R5611:5

Our word cemetery means "sleeping place." R2617:5

Heaven is not a sleeping place, but a place of joyful activity and life.

Neither could we imagine mankind sleeping in a Catholic purgatory, nor in a Protestant hell of eternal torture. R5060:1

Dr. Trench: "Thereby the reality of death is not denied, but only the fact implicitly assumed that death will be followed by a resurrection, as sleep is followed by an awakening." R2617:5

The Talmud contains the expression "when he slept" hundreds of times, as signifying the time of death. R2617:5

The second death is never called "sleep." R1939:4

Mark 5:40

Laughed him to scorn -- Not appreciating what he meant, even as the disciples did not appreciate the word "sleep" when used in connection with Lazarus. R2617:5

Mark 5:41

Talitha cumi -- In the ordinary Aramaic dialect of the people, a term of endearment to a young maiden. The words are equivalent to, "Rise, my child."--Alford R2618:2

Greek, egeiro, meaning "to awaken, arouse, stir: (Liddell and Scott); a word used in speaking of the temporary awakenings of our Lord's miracles. R1512:2

The damsel arose -- Awakened temporarily, not counted as a resurrection. OV352:1; R360:2

A foreshadowing, typifying or illustrating the resurrection. R4603:4

Jesus was "the first fruits of them that slept." (1 Cor. 15:20) Christ should be the "first that should rise from the dead." (Acts 26:23) R2618:4

He merely awakened her, leaving her upon the same plane of death on which she had been born, and had thus far lived for twelve years. R2617:6

Nowhere is this designated a resurrection. R2617:1, 2618:2, 360:2 She did not come back from heaven or from hell; was not resurrected, but merely awakened out of the sleep of death. R2618:2

Our Lord's miracles were merely illustrations of the great work which he will do on a world-wide, gigantic scale by and by--through the power and influence of his kingdom. R5060:4

Mark 5:43

Given her to eat -- Indicating that the revived ones (in the Millennium) will require clothing, nourishment, and assistance, and will acquire strength gradually. R734:2

Mark 6

Mark 6:3

The carpenter -- Tradition declares Joseph died while Jesus was yet young. This scripture gives it support. Jesus is called a carpenter, Joseph is ignored. R2559:5

His sisters -- Showing the fallacy to the Roman doctrine that teaches that Mary is "ever a virgin." R560:2*

They were offended -- Although his first miracle was performed in Galilee, his first reputation was gained in Judea and at Jerusalem, and he had more honor on his return from there to his home country. R4132:3

Mark 6:6

And he marvelled -- The only other instance where Jesus "marvelled" was at the faith shown by the Roman centurion. R3755:6

Mark 6:7

Unclean spirits -- The fallen angels. R2173:2

Mark 6:8

Take nothing -- Israel was a covenant people and it was their duty to receive and entertain the messengers of the Lord. The receiving or rejecting of them would be a test of their fidelity to God. R1988:2, 1743:1
An instruction reversed at the end of his ministry. Henceforth they should go out in no wise dependant upon the people. (Luke 22:35-37) R1988:4

No scrip -- Valise or satchel. They were not to take up any collections or have anything wherein to carry a surplus. R2261:6

These instructions, afterwards changed by the Lord, are not applicable to the present time. R2500:2

Mark 6:11

Shake off the dust -- To symbolize renouncement of all responsibility for the consequences of their rejecting the message. R2262:4

A testimony against them -- Their receiving or rejecting of the apostles would be a test of their fidelity to God as his covenant people. R1988:2, 1743:1

More tolerable -- Implying that it will be tolerable for both classes in any event. R1618:4, 5076:4

The Sodomites will be of the class to be restored by resurrection processes. R5314:5; HG647:6

Day of judgment -- So now; professed followers of Christ who have turned a deaf ear to the message of truth will be less favored in the kingdom than will the heathen. R5980:4

Than for that city -- The people of Bethsaida, Chorazin and Capernaum were regular attendants of the synagogues--decent people, having a form of godliness, but knowing little or nothing of its power. HG647:6

The destruction upon Sodom and Gomorrah was less awful than that upon Jerusalem at the close of the Jewish "harvest." R2262:4

In the Millennium conditions will be favorable even for the people of Galilee who were not moved to repentance and discipleship by the Lord's miracles; but still more tolerable for those of Sodom. R3348:5

Repent -- A prerequisite to salvation. R1437:2

Nowhere in the Scripture is eternal life promised to any except on conditions of faith in Christ the Redeemer, and repentance, or change of heart from sin to righteousness. R1437:2

Mark 6:14

King Herod -- A tetrarch, the ruler of a fourth part of the kingdom.

R3777:6

Antipas; the son of "Herod the Great" who slew the babes of Bethlehem.

R3777:6

Mark 6:16

It is John -- Possibly his evil experiences brought him some lessons.

R2638:1

Mark 6:17

For Herod himself -- Typifying the kings of the earth; civil power.

B261; R2280:4, 1754:4

Laid hold upon John -- He had preached only about a year. R3325:2
Typifying the Church in the harvest of the Gospel age. B261; R2280:4, 1754:4

There is a gradual beginning where the voice of conscience is heard, but if unheeded its voice grows more and more faint and its influence in the control of life less and less potent. R3777:2

Bound him in prison -- In the palace at Machaerus, which was also a fortress. R3778:5

Where he remained about a year before execution. R3325:2

No doubt fearing that, unreprieved and unchecked, this conduct might lead to disorders in the realm. R3778:3

Typifying the "dark night" in which no man can labor in the "harvest" work. (John 9:4) R1754:5

Typifying the coming restraint of the Church's liberties. B261; R2280:5

For Herodias' sake -- A beautiful and ambitious woman, a descendant of Cleopatra, a granddaughter of Herod the Great. R3777:6

A vain woman, without conscience, who, for ambition's sake, had dared everything that she might occupy the place of a queen. R5068:3, 3778:4

In the case of Herodias we see illustrated the power of ambition, and how important it is that our ambitions be noble, true and pure. R2636:3

Typifying the unfaithful nominal church. B261

Philip's wife -- Her oldest uncle, supposing that to him would fall the kingdom honors at the hands of the Roman emperor. R3777:6, 2636:2

For he had married her -- King Herod had put away his own wife, and was living unlawfully with the wife of his brother Philip. R5068:3

When Herod came to Rome to be invested with royal honors, she arranged to entertain him, and there entangled him with her personal charms, so that when he departed for his personal dominion, she eloped with him. R3777:6, 2636:2

For John had said -- Perhaps acting imprudently and exceeding his duty. R3326:2

A seeming lack of wisdom on John's part until we recall the typical character of John. R1754:4

The Greek text intimates that this was not said once merely, but rather as though it read, "John was saying"--was teaching continuously that there was wrong at the very head of the nation. R3778:2

Unto Herod -- Who was not an Israelite, but a Gentile. R1754:4

It is not lawful -- Also mentioning that this was likely to bring upon the people a war, for his wife whom he had put away was the daughter of King Aretas. R5068:6, 3780:1, 3778:1, 2637:6

As the Jewish nation was a covenant nation, John was probably within the proprieties of the case in denouncing a ruler of the Jews, while making no criticism of the other rulers of the earth not under divine law and covenant. R3778:2

We are to remember that Jesus made no comment along this line. Nothing in John's course should be construed as a special example of what we should do today in respect to public functionaries. R3778:2

John's mission was that of a reprover and reformer and, as a prophet, he was supernaturally guided in his course. Our Lord's mission was a different one. R2621:5

For church and civil power to be united. B261; R1754:4

It is not for us to sit in judgment on the course of John the Baptist, but we are inclined to think that he exceeded his duty in his criticism of the king and queen. R3326:2

We, like John, must by our teachings and example declare unlawful the proposed and sure-to-come union between church and civil government. R1754:4

Thy brother's wife -- His own niece. R3778:2

Mark 6:19

A quarrel -- Herodias was both angry and fearful--angry that he should dare speak of her relationship to the king; fearful, lest his eloquent words, moving the masses, might alienate her from the king. R5068:6
As the course of John incurred her wrath, so the course of the John class--the true Church--will incur the wrath of the ecclesiastical power. R1754:5

But she could not -- Intimating that John's imprisonment was in part at least to protect him from the wrath of Herodias, who might have hired assassins. R3778:3

Mark 6:20

Herod feared John -- There is an intimation that John's imprisonment was in part at least to protect him from the anger of Herodias. R3778:3
Herod feared John and the people who believed John to be a prophet, but Herodias feared neither God nor man. R5069:1
Two great characters contrasted. (See article for details of the contrast.) R3779:2

A just man -- A man who was following his conscience in a right course to the best of his ability. R3778:3

And observed him -- The Revised Version expresses it, "kept him safe," possibly fearing that if John were set at liberty Herodias would find agents for his destruction. R2637:2

He did many things -- Apparently John had unusual liberties in prison. His disciples had opportunities to come and bear messages to and from him. R2637:2

Heard him gladly -- The intimation of the Greek is that Herod gave John frequent hearings, heard him willingly, but was much perplexed. R3778:4, 5069:1, 2637:2

It was a shock to Herodias that the king would have heard John patiently, and even have seemed interested in him, and considered him a prophet of the Lord God. R2637:1

Thus we presume it will be more tolerable for the King of Sodom than for King Herod in the day of judgment. R3779:5

Mark 6:21

On his birthday -- These birthday feasts were occasions of carousal. R2637:3

A supper -- Such festivals were attended by men alone, and bountifully supplied not only with food but also with beverages, as a result of which the whole company would become quite convivial. R3778:6

At the palace fortress of Machaerus where Herod was preparing for the war with the King of Arabia. R3778:5

Lords, high captains -- A patriotic rally to assure himself of the favor and good will of all his under lords and influential subordinates. R3778:5

Mark 6:22

Daughter of the said Herodias -- Probably fourteen at the time of their marriage of Herod and Herodias. R2636:3

Educated in Rome, beautiful and attractive. R2637:3

The dancing girls were usually from the lower classes. She would make a special impression upon all by sending her daughter, a granddaughter of Herod the Great, to perform this part. R3778:6, 2637:3

Typifying united Protestantism. R2280:5

Danced -- A rare treat, a high honor to the king. R2637:3

So great a condescension by Herodias' own daughter implied that the king should make some return. R5069:1

Whatsoever thou wilt -- It was customary to remunerate the dancing girls liberally on such occasions, in proportion to the dignity of the entertainer. R2637:3, 3778:6

Mark 6:23

Unto the half -- Similarly, many a wealthy voluptuary has foolishly spent thousands and hundreds of thousands upon actresses and other conscienceless women in our day. R3778:6

Mark 6:24

What shall I ask? -- The crafty woman had kept the design wholly within her own grasp. Her daughter should not know in advance, lest she should make some error. R2637:4

An illustration of parental influence. Evil as Herodias was, she evidently had retained the affection of her daughter and her absolute confidence and obedience. R3326:4

Not even Salome knew of the price she was expected to ask. R3778:6

If she demurred to ask for John's head, the mother probably told her that both of them would sooner or later be outcasts; that his death was necessary. R5069:2

And she said -- Yet Herodias was not saved from the fate she dreaded. History records that within ten years her ambition prompted Herod to solicit Rome for an additional dignity. His request was refused, he was deprived of his dominion and banished to Lyons in Gaul, where he died. R3326:6, 2637:6

The head of John -- Someone has paraphrased it thus: "Little fool, you know not what you ask; what would all these things be to you and me unqueened and outcast, as we may be any day if John the Baptist live?" R3326:5

Her ambition had not thus far hesitated at anything, why should it hesitate even at murder, now in its greatest extremity? R2637:1

The beginning of temptation is to be drawn away of desire, of ambition--enticed thereby. When it has conceived it bringeth forth sin; and sin when it is finished bringeth forth death. (Jas. 1:14, 15) R2637:4

Mark 6:25

With haste -- Haste was deemed necessary lest the king's ardor should cool and his better judgment take control. R3326:5

In a charger -- One of the large platters used at the feast. R3326:5

John the Baptist -- A great and holy man, a prophet of the Lord, he will have a great reward in the future with all the holy prophets, coming forth from the death-state perfect because he was found faithful, even unto death. R5069:2

Mark 6:26

Was exceeding sorry -- He was grieved, yet not being humble or God-fearing, but merely proud and man-fearing, he felt bound by his oath. R5069:2

Even the weak and despicable Herod was shocked by the request. R2637:4

An indication that his heart was not utterly corrupt; but that he should yield to what he knew to be wrong, through pride, is an evidence of utter lack of character. R2637:6

Many have found themselves like Herod, led step by step, by what seems to them to be fate, beyond their control. R2637:5

For his oath's sake -- The king's honor (?) was maintained. R5069:2

From his wrong standpoint of view, duty appeared to lie on the other side. R2637:5

For a king to break his oath, made in the presence of his nobles, would imply that he was a man devoid of all principle and character. R3779:1

Many things that are highly esteemed amongst men are an abomination in the sight of God. (Luke 16:15) R3779:1

For their sakes -- The only proper method is to recognize and obey the voice of the Lord, regardless of how matters may seem to fallen man.

R2637:6

And, we might add, for pride's sake. R3779:1

Alas, poor world! How many are its snares of pride in the wrong things, and in fear of the wrong person! R5069:2

Would not reject her -- Not being a humble man, nor God-fearing; but merely a proud man with a man-fearing spirit, he found himself bound to comply with his own oath given in the presence of those great men. R5069:4

In proportion as Herod had great opportunities and defiled and degraded his conscience, in the same proportion he will awaken in the resurrection morning in a low condition morally. R3779:4

Sent an executioner -- Thus showing his greatness as a king, his respect for his illustrious company, and his high standard of value for his oath and his authority--but the Scriptures declare that things highly esteemed amongst men are an abomination in the sight of God. R3779:1

Beheaded him -- John the Baptist was the last of the prophets. R1754:1

As John never emerged from that prison, save to enter the deeper dungeon of the grave, so the Church's only deliverance in the "dark night" will be through the valley of the shadow of death. R1754:5

Evidently John's course was finished. Consequently there was no effort on the Lord's part to interfere with the powers of darkness that for a year restrained John's liberty and finally took his life. R1754:2

He had fulfilled his mission, proving his worthiness of a distinguished place in the earthly phase of the kingdom. R1754:2

We anticipate an attack upon the true Church, not upon the nominal system, and, as in the case of John, a seemingly complete victory of the Babylonish woman and her paramour, the world, over the faithful members of the Body of Christ in the flesh. R3326:6

In the prison -- In the palace fortress of Machaerus, where he had sought to remove him from Herodias and her particular influence. R3778:5

Mark 6:29

His disciples -- John's disciples who had become disciples of Jesus.
R1754:2

Laid it in a tomb -- John will get everlasting life as a glorious portion, but he will not be a member of the Bride class. R5069:4

Mark 6:30

And the apostles -- Returning at the time when Herod had cruelly beheaded John, and astonished that God would permit such an unjust procedure. So we, too, are frequently astonished to note to how great an extent providence permits the prosperity of the "prince of this world."
R4890:2,3

Gathered themselves together -- Returned from the mission work to which the Lord sent them two by two. No doubt there was a fixed time for their return and Capernaum was probably the rendezvous. R3779:3
From preaching in Galilee to take counsel of the Lord. R1754:2
By the news of John's death and the possible effect upon their work of this sudden outburst of royal wrath. R1754:2

Mark 6:31

Come ye yourselves apart -- Not turning aside from sin, for they had already done this. CR34:3

As at conventions--while they cost considerable money, they nevertheless are sources of great spiritual profit and refreshment. We should estimate spiritual strength above financial cost, though not to the extent of contracting debt. R3779:6

At conventions we turn aside from the busy scenes of daily life and strife to fellowship with God and with each other. CR34:1

A desert place -- Just outside the border of Herod's dominion, near Bethsaida. R2435:3, 1754:3

And rest a while -- Applies to merely physical rest from arduous and incessant toil as preachers, and by no means an intimation that preaching was not proper, not their special work. R890:2

He would not have us rest too long when other weary hearts are waiting for our ministries of love and consolation. R1754:3

Here commune with me and the Father. Here tell us of what you have done and what you have taught. Here examine carefully to see how correctly, how truthfully, you have presented my message. R4890:3, 3779:3

The Lord never asks of us such busy labor as finds no time for resting at his feet. R1754:3

Rest in the midst of your cares, trials and perplexities, a sweet rest of mind, and peace. R1754:3

Many coming and going -- Being fully engaged in divine service, even though greatly enjoying it, sometimes we do not have sufficient time for eating the spiritual food that we may be properly refreshed and upbuilt. R4890:4, 3779:3

So much as to eat -- Sometimes, when busy in the Lord's service and in making provisions for our temporal needs, we do not have sufficient time for eating the spiritual food. R4890:4

It is only to those who are serving the others, that the Master directly hands the precious viands. R890:3

Mark 6:33

Many knew him -- Jesus' fame had spread abroad. R1754:3

Unto him -- On the mountain slopes on the north-eastern shore of the Sea of Galilee. R2435:3

Mark 6:34

Saw much people -- In some respects pictures the world during the Millennial age. R3781:4, 5087:6

Augmented by large caravans, which at that time were en route to Jerusalem for the Feast of Passover. R3780:5, 2435:3

Moved with compassion -- Instead of being angry that his endeavor for privacy and rest should be thus intruded upon by people for whom he had already done so much. R3780:1

Such will be the spirit of all the Lord's followers. Their delight will be, not in self-gratification, but in doing good "unto all men as they have opportunity, especially to the household of faith." (Gal. 6:10) R2435:4

Not having a shepherd -- They had a soul-hunger which their forms, ceremonies, rituals, could not satisfy. R5087:2

He was the true Shepherd and ready at all times to fulfil his mission, to lay down his very life for the sheep--not only at Calvary, but hourly and daily during his ministry. R3780:2

Today, many of the Lord's people in Babylon are in a similar condition--persuaded that we are living in remarkable times, but without political or religious shepherds to guide them. R3780:2

Following blind guides and about to fall with them into the ditch of Israel's great calamity. R2435:6

The common people always refer to the learned. The learned therefore have the greater responsibility. This is in a large measure true today also. R5087:2

Though they had synagogues, regular readings of the Scripture, scribes, Pharisees, priests and Levites; they had a soul-hunger which the forms, ceremonies, rituals and burdens bound upon them could not satisfy. R5087:2

Teach them many things -- He taught them much to their advantage, to their comfort and as a preparation for their development, so that they would by and by be prepared for the deeper things, which were for his disciples only. R3780:3

We are to be specially on guard against choking the babes in Christ with strong meat; but nevertheless we are not to allow them to starve, but to give them the milk of the Word that they may grow thereby. R3780:4

Mark 6:35

Now far spent -- From another Gospel account it seems evident that, after teaching the people, our Lord left them for a time and went with his disciples apart on the hillside, where they reviewed their ministries. R3780:4

Mark 6:37

Give ye them -- Thus associating his people with himself, blessing them by these experiences even more than he blesses those to whom he sends them with his mercies, temporal and spiritual. R3780:5

Thus the people were made more or less acquainted with the apostles, who perhaps later on, after Pentecost, met many of them and, as the Master's representative, bore to them the heavenly bread. R3781:2

Before sending the people away he instructs all who are his disciples to supply them with something to eat, spiritual food, truths pertaining to the kingdom, to afford some strength and encouragement for the dark hour ahead. R2436:1

When anyone is present who is hungering and thirsting after righteousness, we are to tell him the good tidings, no matter in what form they must be presented, no matter how intolerable the conditions. R3333:5

Two hundred pennyworth -- About $32.00 (in 1905). R3503:2

Mark 6:38

Have ye -- How eager we should be that any little barley loaves we may possess, any little fishes, any dollars and dimes, and shillings and pence, any time and influence, might be used of the Lord in his blessed work! R3781:2

Five, and two fishes -- The Lord takes our time and talents, little and unworthy as these are, and blesses them and uses them in his service and accomplishes great things. R3780:5

It is a matter of continual wonder to the enemies of the truth, as well as to the slightly interested, that means never seem lacking for the promulgation of the harvest message without resorting to appeals to the world. R3781:2

Make all sit down -- They had learned to be obedient to whatever the Master would propose, hence no objection to the command which would appear to make them look foolish--preparing for a feast when apparently no feast could be spread for them. R3780:5

Mark 6:40

They sat down -- They obeyed; the Lord did the rest. R3780:6

Mark 6:41

When he had taken -- While Scripturally dignified by the name of sacrifice, yet really, to those who understand the situation properly, it is the very reverse, a blessing, a privilege, a favor. R3781:2

The two fishes -- Hence discountenancing any claim of special sanctity and acceptableness with God on account of vegetarianism. R3098:3

He looked up -- Christians should not neglect to render thanks for their daily food; but mere outward acts of formalistic piety by others are not pleasing to God. R2643:6, 2644:2

And blessed -- John's Gospel says, "He gave thanks." The giving of thanks to God brought indeed a blessing upon the food. R3780:6
Gratitude to God is appropriate however simple our bill of fare; but we might well refrain in public if our conduct would be misapprehended as Pharisaism. R3781:1

How can we partake of food, recognizing that it is of God's bounty and provision, without returning our thanks of acknowledgments? R3780:6
Undoubtedly food which is eaten in a pleasant and thankful attitude of mind is more nourishing, more refreshing, than the same food if eaten in unthankfulness or anger or with feelings of dissatisfaction. R3780:6, 2644:1

To his disciples -- The disciples were thus the better witnesses of the power of the miracle, and the people were made acquainted with them. R3781:2

The Lord could have fed the multitude without their help. R2644:4
Those who now follow the Lord will be privileged in the Millennial age to distribute the bread of eternal life to all families of the earth. R3781:4

To set before them -- During the thousand years of Christ's reign, the bread of life, the truth, will be freely distributed amongst all mankind. R5087:6

Those who now follow the Lord as his special disciples will be supplied abundantly in the kingdom with the bread of eternal life and will be privileged to distribute it to all the families of the earth. R3781:4

Among them all -- The Lord's miracles of feeding and healing were performed, not upon his consecrated disciples, but upon others. R1754:6

Mark 6:42

They did all eat -- Not sumptuously, not served in elegant and decorated ware, not fine food, but plain barley bread and dried fish. R3781:1
Plainness and simplicity of food would not only be more healthful, but would leave much more time for the spiritual refreshment, the bread from heaven, and the service of the truth to others. R3781:1

Chief object of the miracle was to reinforce and establish the faith of the apostles--effect upon the multitudes was secondary and similar. R1754:5

This miracle speaks to us of the power that our Lord will have in his kingdom for providing for the necessities of the whole world. R5087:5

Not only attesting to our Lord's sympathy, but it also spoke volumes to the people about the divine power that was in the Great Teacher. R5087:5

And were filled -- Skeptics who question this miracle cannot deny no less a miracle whereby the barley of the loaves and the two fishes could in due time, by natural processes, have brought forth enough of their kind to feed the multitude. R3333:2

It was not merely a taste of food that the Lord provided, but a satisfying portion--all had plenty. R3781:3 It would be better if we lived more upon the plain substantials of life, and did not too much pamper our appetites and encourage ourselves to eat beyond the point of proper satisfaction for hunger. R3781:4

They took up -- While the Lord had abundance of power to create, he would have his disciples note the principle of economy and practise it. R3781:5, 2435:5

The Lord's people should be careful to avoid wasting, not because of selfishness and a desire to accumulate, but, as the Apostle explains, "that ye may have to give." (Eph. 4:28) R2435:6

Twelve baskets full -- Haversacks, in which the apostles carried their provisions. R2435:5

None of God's provisions for his people are to be wasted. R3333:3

Those who distribute will find in the end their own vessels full. R2436:4

It was those who scattered to others who had their haversacks filled in the end. Those who are most intent upon feeding others with the bread of life are themselves most bountifully supplied. R3504:2

The memory is our "basket" in which to gather up in store for ourselves and others every spiritual morsel. R2435:6

Of the fragments -- Not the fragments left by the multitude, but those broken by our Lord and not distributed. R3781:4

Probably the fragments fingered by the multitude were left for the birds and squirrels, and these were the fragments from the breaking of the bread by the Lord. R3781:4

Let us take heed to the fragments, too, that we may render up a faithful record of our stewardship, that the talents entrusted to us have not been buried in the earth. R3781:6

Mark 6:44

About five thousand men -- Besides women and children. (Matt. 14:21) R1754:3

Yet, when tempted in the wilderness, he refused to use divine power to satisfy his own hunger. F650

Mark 6:45

To the other side -- To Galilee, Herod's territory, showing that our Lord's conference with the disciples had a pacifying and strengthening effect upon them. R2435:3

Mark 6:46

He departed -- For he "perceived that they would come and take him by force to make him king." (John 6:15) R1754:6

To pray -- The Lord frequently spent whole nights in prayer and he prayed earnestly and with many tears (Matt. 14:23; Mark 1:35; Luke 5:16; 6:22; Heb. 5:7) R1865:5

Nearly all of the Great Teacher's recorded prayers are simple and brief. Whenever he wished to make long prayers he went to the Father alone. This would be a good example for all to observe. R5095:3

We cannot come too often or tarry too long. R1865:3

Mark 6:47

When even was come -- The night-time of this Gospel age, with darkness of error and superstition. R2650:4

The ship -- The boat and the twelve toiling rowers picture the Lord's one true Church. R2650:3

Midst of the sea -- The stormy sea of the world's unparalleled trouble. B191

He alone -- They had learned from previous experiences that, while the Master was with them, all would be safe; but now he was absent. HG372:4

On the land -- He remained behind for this very purpose--that they might have these experiences and that he might teach them a lesson thereby respecting his providential care. HG372:5

Mark 6:48

Wind was contrary -- The adverse influences and fearful opposition that come against the Church. "We wrestle not against flesh and blood." (Eph. 6:12) R2650:4

The storms and billows of trouble and persecution which may impede and weary us. R2650:3

After the Master's ascension, no doubt the disciples felt themselves very much alone in the midst of a contrary people and found progress difficult and all of their experiences stormy. R5095:5

The fourth watch -- Between three and six o'clock A.M. R2650:2

As he comes to us in the early dawn of the Millennial Day. R2650:4

He cometh -- Picturing our Lord's second coming. B191; R2650:4

Unto them -- The Church, to rescue her from her toil and weariness and peril. R2650:4; B191

Walking -- As the manner of his coming was different from that expected, so the manner of the second advent differs. R2650:4

Upon the sea -- Picturing the stormy sea of the world's unparalleled trouble. B191

Mark 6:49

A spirit -- An apparition, a spirit manifestation in human form. R5095:3

A hobgoblin, a phantom, in harmony with stories always told by the seafaring. HG372:5

Some thought they had seen a supernatural being, and that it foreboded some calamity. R2650:2

Mark 6:50

Were troubled -- The same apostles who here cried out in terror, grew stronger and stronger in faith until they could and did trust the Lord in his absence where they could not trace him. R3338:5

Be of good cheer -- No doubt it helped the disciples later to remember the Master's ability to come to them on the troubled seas, and how his coming brought peace and quiet. R5095:5

This precious lesson still holds good for the Lord's people, that he will sanctify to them their deepest distress. R5095:6

It is the privilege of those who are fully consecrated to the Lord to be cheerful, happy, even in the midst of unsatisfactory and painful conditions. R4592:4, 2083:5, 1949:5 Cheerfulness is one of the loveliest graces of the Christian character. R1123:2*

It is I -- Learn to look to me, to remember that, having become my disciples, I have supervision over all your affairs, whether in storm or in calm. HG372:5

Be not afraid -- "All things work together for good to them that love God." (Rom. 8:28) Q272:2; R5058:6, 4784:2, 1607:5

Mark 6:51

The wind ceased -- When the Lord has joined himself to his Church the trials, storms, difficulties and oppositions will be at an end and the desired haven of the heavenly condition will be reached. R2650:5

Mark 6:52

They considered not -- They had already forgotten. R5095:3

Mark 6:54

They knew him -- Crowds continued to gather; partly for hearing, partly from curiosity and partly because the message that he gave was one of consolation, comfort and hope. R5095:2

Mark 6:56

Besought him -- Showing how interested people become in anything that will relieve them of sickness. R5095:2

The crowds continued to gather wherever Jesus went--for hearing, from curiosity, because his message was one of consolation, comfort, hope. he was not forever blaming them for not keeping the Law. R5095:2

They might touch -- God's consecrated people have realized a blessing also--a spiritual blessing--as Jesus passed their way, as by faith they reached out and touched the hem of his garment. R5096:4

The border -- The corner. R5096:4

Were made whole -- In healing the sick, vitality went out from him and he healed them all. All his public preaching also cost him considerable vitality. R5096:4

Mark 7

Mark 7:2

With unwashen, hands -- We may be sure that Jesus set his followers no example of filthiness or impurity. What Jesus objected to was a ceremonial washing whether the hands were clean or unclean. R5096:5

What the Pharisees meant was a ceremonial washing whether the hands were clean or unclean--to make a formal washing a part of their religion. R5096:5

They found fault -- Every sect of Christendom today seems fully persuaded that anything which would undermine the errors of their systems would be injurious to the cause of the Lord. R3786:4

Mark 7:3

Wash their hands -- Consuming much time, and burdensome on the poor, who had no servants to do these things for them, and not doing them, were considered unclean. R5096:6

Had become an important part of the Jewish observance though nowhere found in the Law. R2419:1

It was the making of such formal washing a part of their religion that Jesus objected to. R5096:5

Tradition of the elders -- Jesus suited none of them. To the impure he was too pure; to those of hypocritical profession he was too sincere; to the worldly-wise he was too frank. R5096:3

Shaping their lives by the Talmud; so many Christians today, while recognizing the Bible have their own theory, proof-texts and catechism. R5096:2; OV260:1

The theories and opinions that had been formed and handed down from the past that were not based upon the inspired testimonies of the prophets.

Q747:2

Creeds of the past. OV260:2

Protestant churches have departed from the pure Word of God and have adopted human dogmas and traditions which make void the Word of God. R1011:4*

Mark 7:5

Pharisees and scribes -- All the Higher Critics and Evolutionists occupying the pulpits of Christendom are in exactly the position of the scribes and Pharisees of old. SM301:1

Mark 7:6

With their lips -- "Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain." (Exod. 20:7) "Let every one that nameth the name of Christ depart from iniquity." (2 Tim. 2:19) R1527:3

Heart is far from me -- The Lord regards anything short of simple candor and honesty of heart with aversion. R1527:6 Christendom has hypocritically pretended to make a covenant with the Lord, pretended to be his people, while "their hearts were far from him." HG684:5

Mark 7:7

The commandments of men -- The Jews today regard the Old Testament as a sealed book; instead of endeavoring to comprehend it, they study and shape the course of their lives by the Talmud. R5096:2

So with Christendom; they read the Bible through the creed spectacles of their sect. R5096:3

Not allowing our own wisdom or the wisdom of other men to make the Word of God of none effect. HG653:3

Mark 7:8

The tradition of men -- While professing great Bible study, it is in ruts and grooves, and so hampered by creed-chains that progress or growth, or Bible-rearing is impossible. R780:5

Mark 7:9

Reject the commandment -- Both Jesus and the Pharisees claimed holiness and strict observance of the divine Law, but Jesus held to the Word of God and rejected the Talmud, and the Pharisees neglected the Word of God and held to the traditions. R5096:6

Comparatively few of the "common people" of Christendom realize how thoroughly the Word of God has already been rejected by the leading Doctors of theology. R3015:1

Mark 7:10

For Moses said -- Attributing both one of the ten commandments (Exod. 20:12) and a law not in the Decalogue (Exod. 21:17) to Moses, thus showing no distinction, as Adventists claim, between the Law of Moses and the Law of God. HG583:6*

Mark 7:11

He shall be free -- The commandment had been changed by the Talmud and any man might be free from honoring his parents by consecrating himself and substance to God and religious uses. R5096:6

Mark 7:13

Of none effect -- Null and void, which they had no right to do. R5096:6
Thus they had not a proper conception of the manner and object of the first advent. B241

And bringing you under a bondage that will hinder your growth in grace and knowledge. R295:5

The traditions handed down from our forefathers make void, meaningless, ungracious, the message of God's wisdom and love. OV260:2

How long will it require for people to learn that the Bible is so thoroughly one, and its story one, that a repudiation of one part means the repudiation of the whole? R3015:5

Through your tradition -- The theories and opinions that had been formed and handed down from the past. Q747:2

There are true traditions (2 Thes. 2:15) and false traditions. All of those which are in harmony with the divine Word are true; and all those which are not in harmony are false and not to be accepted. Q747:2

And speculations--"vain philosophies and science falsely so-called." (1 Tim. 6:20) Q798:2

Jesus, our pattern and teacher, gave no authority for binding ourselves with creeds and traditions. R295:5

The same is true of Christians today. Each denomination has its own theory, its own proof-texts, its own catechism. R5096:2

Mark 7:16

Let him hear -- They must expect meekly to cast away many preconceived opinions. B16

"Let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches." (Rev. 2:7) B16

Mark 7:18

He saith unto them -- The special light in both harvests is for the "Israelites indeed." B27

Mark 7:24

Arose, and went -- When all Galilee awakened, the people discussing making him a king, and the realization that the time for his death had not yet come, he journeyed from the area where he was so well-known some forty-five miles toward the Mediterranean. R3786:1

Borders of Tyre and Sidon -- More properly, the provinces of Tyre and Sidon, within the boundary of the land called Phoenicia, where these cities were the centers of wealth, influence and business. R3786:1, 3338:3
He was still in Israel, in Galilee, but over toward the border of Tyre and Sidon. R2280:3

Not that he went to either of these cities; apparently he merely crossed the borders of Galilee, and was thus for a time free from the authority of Herod. R3786:1

Have no man know it -- With the evident design of secluding himself from general notice, and possibly to gain quiet and rest. R2653:1

Mark 7:25

An unclean spirit -- Possessed of an evil spirit, a demon--"obsessed."

R5101:2, 3786:6, 2653:1, 2280:3

So far as we have any knowledge, most of these fallen spirits, demons, are unclean, depraved, and their influence upon those possessed by them is an unclean, injurious one. R3338:3

And came -- Prompted by her love for her daughter and her confidence in Jesus. R2653:2

Fell at his feet -- After the custom of the East, so expressive of humility, dependence and entreaty. R2653:5

As a poor and uneducated woman who would naturally have great diffidence in approaching a learned man, especially one of whom she had no doubt heard much. R2653:2

So there are others in the world today who, if they knew our Savior as we know him, would be no less faithful than ourselves. Some heathen, perhaps, would manifest greater faith than some in Christendom today. R3787:3

Mark 7:26

A Syrophenician -- Canaanitish. R3338:3

Of Syrian ancestors; by education and language, a Greek. She represented quite a mixture of nationalities--a Gentile out and out. R3786:6

At that time, therefore, "without God and having no hope in the world." (Eph. 2:12) R2653:2

She besought him -- Yet it must have been known that Jesus was a Jew and that his miracles and favors were confined to his own race. R2653:1

As a foreigner she had to overcome the prejudices of her own heathen ideas as well as everything akin to pride and the fear of being despised and rejected. R2653:2

Bringing her divine favor, even before it was due to come to the Gentiles. R2654:4

As no longer strangers, foreigners, dogs, but children, it would be no longer appropriate that we should cry or entreat or beseech in any wise for things which the Lord is not pleased to give us. R3338:6

Our petitions should be for holiness of heart, for the filling of his Spirit, for the spiritual food, refreshment and strength. R3338:6

Mark 7:27

But Jesus said -- Matt. 15:23 says "he answered her not a word," even implying that he left the house and the woman had to importune the disciples to intercede for her. R3787:1, 3338:3, 2653:2

Let the children -- The Jew occupied a place of favor represented by children. OV164:T; R2604:3

First be filled -- As the children would be provided for first, before the dogs, so the Jews should be ministered unto first, before the Gentiles. R2653:5; OV164:T

It is not meet -- A rebuff, calculated to dishearten one of little faith, but correspondingly to strengthen a great faith. R2653:5
Resisting her, not because he didn't understand the case, but to draw out her faith, preparatory to the giving of the blessing desired. R2653:3
The Lord may also ignore our petitions to increase our faith and appreciation of the blessing we desire. He may make a test of humility before he responds to our requests. R3787:4, 3338:4

Unto the dogs -- The typically clean Jew called the outsiders "heathen" and "dogs," and would never eat, marry, nor have any dealings with them. (John 4:9) R2604:2, 5444:4

The Jews claimed to be God's people, and the Gentiles were styled "Gentile dogs," because they had never been in covenant relationship with God. R5101:2

The Gentiles, in comparison to the Jews, were as the dogs of the household. R2653:5

Not an answer of disdain, contempt or indifference to her woe; but of interest and sympathy, explaining a reason why she was not a proper subject. R2653:5

Had there been pride in the heart, this response would have been sufficient to have put the woman upon her dignity and she would have openly tiraded against the Lord and all Jews as ecclesiastical bigots. R3787:1

Our Lord used the word signifying the little pet dogs of the family. R3338:4, 2653:6

There is no excuse today for any being in the attitude of "dogs." If they will, the door of favor still stands open that they may become "sons of God without rebuke." (Phil. 2:15) R5101:4

Mark 7:28

And she answered -- The people of the East are known for their importunity. To one who has ever held an official position in the East, the persistency of a pleading woman is a fact that one will never forget. R3786:6

Yet the dogs -- She was willing to confess herself one of the Gentile dogs, with no right to claim healing for her daughter, because not a Jew. Q601:T; R5444:4, 5101:2, 2653:6

With wonderful keenness and humility acknowledging that she was not one of the children who had a right to the Father's blessing. R2653:6

So she, as a Gentile, might be granted her request, without saying that she was as worthy as a Jew of his mercy and favors. R3787:2

We, too, should persistently hold on to the Lord for the blessings we may be sure he will be pleased to grant in his own due time and way. R2653:4

The children's crumbs -- That, as an outsider, she might be granted some of the Lord's favors without in any degree working disadvantage to the Jews, to whom the Lord's ministry was specially sent and given. R3338:4 She was of the Lazarus class desiring a crumb of divine favor. (Luke 16:21) R2604:3, 5444:4

As Lazarus ate the crumbs from the rich man's table. HG428:4; OV164:T Might she not have the crumbs of comfort and blessing which she craved--the healing of her daughter. R5101:2, 2653:6 In contrast, he has set before us "meat in due season" in great abundance. We need not importune for these; they are ours for the taking. R2653:6

For this saying -- The woman triumphed over the obstacle of the Lord's argument with wonderful keenness and humility. R2653:6, 3787:2 God greatly appreciates faith and, so far as possible, answers petitions offered in an importunity of faith. R3788:4 The faith manifested in her saying was sufficient. R3339:1 Jesus rewarded her faith by giving her a crumb of favor, the healing of her daughter. OV164:T; R5101:2, 3787:2, 2653:6

Mark 7:30

Come to her house -- Showing her further faith, in accepting the Master's word and going to her house. R3787:2, 3339:1, 2653:6 Many today hear the Lord's word assuring them their sins are forgiven, yet Little Faith bids them doubt and keep on bemoaning their sins and requesting forgiveness. R3339:1 Upon the bed -- The demon was gone out and in leaving had thrown the child in a fit upon the bed. R3787:2

Mark 7:31

And again, departing -- So far as the record goes, our Lord did nothing else in that quarter except for the poor Syrophenician woman. R3339:1 He came -- Taking an easterly course along the northern borders of Palestine and, crossing the river Jordan, coming southward to the Sea of Galilee. R3339:1

Mark 7:32

They bring unto him -- Matthew says they stopped in a mountain where the multitude brought their sick unto him. R3339:2 Willingly or unwillingly, the power of healing was associated with the exercise of faith, either on the part of the sick, or for him by his friends. R5103:3

Put his hand -- Evidently most of the miracles were performed by the laying on of hands, although the record also is that some were healed by touching Jesus or touching his garments. R5103:3

Took him aside -- Perhaps to impress upon him the lesson. R3339:2

A peculiarity in this miracle, that he healed him privately. R5103:3

Put his fingers -- These methods were used to attract the deaf man's attention and assist his faith. R5103:3 As he could not hear, nothing said to him could explain the situation; he could see the spitting, feel the touch and thus understand what was going on. R5103:3, 3339:2

Into his ears -- As though to start some life current through them. R5103:3

Touched his tongue -- These matters meant the submission of his mind, or the exercise of a degree of faith. R5103:6

Mark 7:34

Looking up to heaven -- Giving the man a lesson that the power for his cure was expected from God. R5103:6

As indicating that the sympathy of heaven was moved for the man's assistance. R3339:2

He sighed -- Indicating his deep sympathy with the man before him and with the groaning creation in general. "He was touched with a feeling of man's infirmities." (Heb. 4:15) R5103:6

The fact that he was perfect did not make him cold and unsympathetic, rather the reverse. His perfect mind would make all his sensibilities more active than ours, his sympathy would be stronger, his sense of pain keener. R5103:6

Perhaps an evidence of physical weakness, the result of the bestowing of his vitality and energy in the cure of the patient. R5104:1

Mark 7:36

Tell no man -- Seemingly understood, not as a command, but rather as a suggestion that he was not seeking publicity. R3339:4

They published it -- This may have been the first miracle in that region, and possibly the multitude coming, as Matthew records, were attracted by it. R3339:2

With us, the message is too good to keep; we love to tell the story, it did so much for us. R3339:4

As the Master would not reprove this one, neither does he reprove us if, in our zeal, we go sometimes to the extreme of trying to tell the good tidings to those who have no ear to hear. R3339:5

Mark 7:37

Done all things well -- When faith was manifested and the poor afflicted ones were before him, the Lord never refused to give the blessing; teaching that, in due time, the Lord will not withhold a blessing from any. R3339:4

Not merely this one healing, but many. (Matt. 15:29-31) R5104:2

The deaf to hear -- His mission was not to heal the sick, but "to give his life a ransom for all"; secondarily to call his footstep followers, and only incidentally, as an illustration of his kingdom, to do miracles and cures. R5104:2

It would have been a still greater work for Jesus to have expounded the divine plan and open the eyes of their understanding, but this was not possible at that time. Jesus said to his disciples, "Greater works than these shall ye do, because I go to my Father." (John 14:12) R5104:4

As new creatures we already have had our eyes opened, our ears unstopped and our tongues loosed, that we may speak of his goodness and love to others. R3339:4

In the kingdom "all the blind eyes shall be opened and all the deaf ears be unstopped." (Isa. 35:5) R5104:4

Mark 8

Mark 8:5

Loaves -- The same as used in Palestine today, about the size of our large buns and made of the entire wheat, ground. R5104:5

Mark 8:6

He took the seven -- The disciples gave their all for the feeding of the multitude, and all had sufficient. R5104:5

Mark 8:8

And were filled -- Quite possibly some of us would find ourselves equally healthy and strong on similarly plain food. Let us exercise faith in God and partake of our daily bread with thankful hearts. R5104:5

That was left -- The Master displayed frugality and encouraged economy on the part of his followers. R5104:5

Mark 8:9

About four thousand -- Yet when tempted in the wilderness, he refused to use divine power to satisfy his own hunger. F650

Mark 8:11

Pharisees came forth -- Considering Jesus a competitor and a successful one; and fearing, not without a cause, that their own reputations as teachers were becoming tarnished because of Jesus' superiority as a teacher. R5111:1

A sign from heaven -- Hence, belittling the many signs he was giving the people in the healing of the sick, etc. R5111:1

Tempting him -- To find fault. R5111:1

Mark 8:12

No sign be given -- Matthew 16:2-4 gives a more detailed account of the answer--that there would be one sign given that nation, but not until Calvary--the sign of Jonah. R5111:3

Mark 8:15

Take heed -- God's Word is truth, the bread upon which his people are to feed. But they are to use the unleavened bread--pure bread, pure truth, unmixed with the leaven of human philosophy. R5111:4

Be on the look out for, and avoid it. R5111:4

Beware -- A necessary caution because the Pharisees were the most holy sect amongst the Jews, and the most zealous and gifted Jews would naturally be attracted to that sect. R5111:4

Of the leaven -- Leaven (yeast) is a ferment which spreads, especially in dough for bread. R5111:4

A symbol of an evil influence. R5390:2

Leaven is corruption, an element of decay, hence a type of sin and death. R5192:4; T98

The corruption of human theory, blight, ambitions, selfishness, etc. F464

Let us stand free from all "leaven" in all the various creeds. R5111:4

No matter how holy any denomination of Christians may claim to be and seem to be, we are to beware of their leaven, their false doctrine. R5111:4

Of the Pharisees -- Its bread, its truth was intermingled with human traditions which would make sick and dyspeptic, and to that extent poison all the minds which received it. R5111:4

The Pharisees in the Jewish harvest picture the great religious rulers of nominal Christendom in the present harvest. C152

Of Herod -- Typifying the kings of the earth: civil government. B261; R2280:4, 1754:4

Mark 8:17

Perceive ye not -- Their mental eyes, their eyes of understanding, were not very widely open. R5111:5

Neither understand -- Today, in Bible study, frequently the spirit of our Lord's teachings is often missed altogether by some whose minds center merely around some little incidental. R5111:6

Mark 8:21

Ye do not understand -- Jesus was not finding fault with their having only one loaf; he still had power to produce bread. R5111:5
Similarly, in Bible study today, the spirit of our Lord's teaching is often missed because of some little incidental. R5111:6

Mark 8:24

Men as trees -- Truth is breaking through the clouds of tradition and error. Many are beginning to see dim outlines as did the physically blind one. R795:2
8:25

After that -- As some were healed gradually, as here, and others instantly (Matt. 8:14, 15), so likewise we may expect diversities in the operation of restitution now beginning. R759:3

Again -- Probably the man lacked faith and Jesus was gradually developing it in him. R5111:6

Made him look up -- He looked steadily and kept looking for some time, and then declared that he could see everything clearly. R5111:6

Jesus went out -- Probably toward the close of his third year of ministry. R3339:2

He asked his disciples -- The time had come to prepare them for the ignominy and death which he knew to be in store for him. R3339:3

Whom do men say -- Our Lord was drawing out the apostles, to crystalize in their minds the thought which he knew was already forming. R3339:6
Apparently, John the Baptist knew the most respecting our Lord's mission, as indicated by his query, "Art thou he that should come, or look we for another?" (Matt. 11:3) R3339:3

Mark 8:28

Some say, Elias -- Showing that the public mind was being exercised, was noting that he was not an imposter. R3339:6

Mark 8:29

Whom say ye -- Implying that they were separated in his mind from the rest of the people, and should have a clearer knowledge of him than others. R3339:6

Jesus had been with his disciples working miracles for probably two years before he asked them. R5767:5

For a considerable period of his ministry our Lord did not declare himself, even to his disciples, to be the Messiah. R5120:1, 3339:2

What think ye of Messiah? What think ye of his invitation to become his associates? What think ye of the cost of self-denial, self-sacrifice? What think ye of the great reward? R5120:6

And Peter -- Probably the eldest of the disciples and their spokesman. R3339:6

Thou art the Christ -- God's Anointed One: Hebrew, the Messiah. R3339:6, 5120:6

Without political or social influence, without wealth, name or fame as a leader or commander of the people, or a general of armies, he would have been regarded as mentally unbalanced to have made such a claim. R3339:6

More than a good man and able Teacher; but "the man Christ Jesus" who gave himself a ransom for all, of extraordinary birth, the Redeemer of the world and anointed as the great King, Prophet and Priest, whose kingdom shall be under the whole heavens. (1 Tim. 2:5, 6) R5120:5

It was better that people should claim it for him than that he claim the honor for himself. R5120:1

Mark 8:30

Tell no man -- To have proclaimed it in a general way might have created more or less of insurrection, and might have hindered the carrying out of the divine arrangement respecting his ignominious death. R3340:1, 3790:1
They could still proclaim the kingdom of heaven at hand, they could still speak of Jesus as the great Teacher and man, they could still wonder as to whom he might be. R3340:2

Of him -- The proper time for making him known as the Messiah would be after he had finished the work of sacrifice which the Father had given him to do. R3340:2

Mark 8:31

And he began -- Following the Lord's method, inquirers should first be instructed respecting the goodness, love and mercy of God, the redemption, and the glorious times of restitution, before being informed of the self-sacrifices of the "narrow way." R3340:5

Implying that thereafter this was frequently a subject for discussion and consideration between him and them. R3340:3

To teach them -- For the first time intimating to them that their surmises on the subject were correct--that he was more than Elijah, Jeremiah or any of the prophets--that he was the long-promised Messiah.

R3340:1

How the kingdom would be formally proffered to the Jews, how they would reject him, he would be killed and after three days rise again. R5120:1, 3340:2

The deep things of the divine plan are revealed to us only as we have confessed Christ. R3340:3

The same Lord is still teaching line upon line, precept upon precept, as we are able to bear the truth; and our preparedness for it will be proportionate to our nearness and fellowship with him. R3340:3

Must suffer many things -- Testings of faith and loyalty to God are as necessary to Jesus' followers as they were to himself. PD76/90

And be killed -- They must be prepared in advance for his shameful death, else it would prove such a shock to their faith that they could not recover from it, neither believe in his resurrection. R3340:2

After three days -- Representing the last part of the fifth, all of the sixth, and the early part of the seventh thousand-year day. R3375:3

Mark 8:32

Saying openly -- Before the entire twelve apostles. R3340:3

And Peter -- In his love for the Master, and intoxicated somewhat by the honors bestowed upon him already, undertook to be the teacher. R3790:2
Possibly elated by our Lord's words of commendation that the Father had revealed the matter to him. R3340:3

Many privileged to confess the Lord before men have stumbled over their own honor and exaltation. R3790:2

We are to listen to his Word, and not attempt to correct our Lord or substitute our own ideas. R3790:2

Took him -- Apart from the others. R2658:4

The only one with sufficient courage to express himself. R5120:2

And began -- Peter did not get to finish. The Master hastened to repudiate such a disloyal suggestion. R2658:4

To rebuke him -- Privately whispering to him that such sentiments should not be introduced or expressed before the apostles, that it would be discouraging to them all. R3340:3

Showing that the disciples clearly understood the statement about his death. R5120:2

How could he be the Messiah, and yet suffer death at the hands of his enemies? R3340:2

Insisting (as some do today) that the Lord's cause must conquer the world, as a result of their preaching. D654

This testing was about the Passover season, the time when the Lord's people seem to be in greatest danger of stumbling. R3178:3

He rebuked Peter -- Be not many of you teachers, brethren, knowing that a man who is a teacher has severer trials, temptations. (James 3:1) R3790:2

Get thee behind me, Satan -- Adversary, opposing spirit--in opposition to God and to all in harmony with God. F611; R5427:1

A hinderer of the work. R3790:3

In this course St. Peter was opposing the divine will and plan, of which the death of Jesus was the very center or hub. R5120:2

His servants ye are to whom ye render service. (Rom. 6:16) R3340:4 Jesus perceived that these influences were striving to hinder the consummation of his sacrifice, even as Satan tried to do in the beginning of his consecration. R5120:2

Afterward all of the disciples seem to have gradually settled down to a realization that the glories of the kingdom were still remote, and that the Master must go away. D564

Thou savourest not -- Thy words savor not of God's plan, but of human judgment and preference. R5120:2

That be of men -- Human wisdom. R3340:4, 3790:3

Mark 8:34

Whosoever -- Addressed to those who were already, in some sense of the word at least, disciples. R3235:6

Catholics and Protestants agree that only saints, the Little Flock, the elect, are fit for heaven when they die. HG215:4

Will come after me -- Our Lord's life was an illustration. R3790:3

Be my disciple, my follower, my sheep. R5654:1, 3236:4

Let him deny himself -- Sacrifice himself, his personal interests, ambitions, etc. R3846:4

Kill his will outright, not merely hack and mutilate it. The desire to give up our own will and accept God's will must be a joy, a pleasure. To be acceptable to God, it must be no cross to us. "I delight to do thy will, O my God." (Psa. 40:8) R3237:2,1

Self-denial is the first step--self-renunciation, giving up of the will to God. R5654:1; Q399

In their hearts they must give up all else; being glad to forsake all actually if the door of opportunity opened to them. R4557:4

"If we be dead with him, we shall also live with him." (2 Tim. 2:11)

R2615:6

Take up his cross -- Having counted the cost of discipleship. R3235:6

Endurance of trials, difficulties, disappointments --the crossing of the human will and preferences. R3236:4

It is our good human wills (not actually perfect, as our Lord's, but reckoned so through his imputed merit) that are to be crucified, delivered up to death. R961:5

Figurative of crucified. R960:2

In the sense of being sacrificed, even of earthly interests. Q399

If Christ's crucifixion was not the crucifixion of a sinful will and desires, neither is ours as followers of the spotless Lamb of God, crucified with him. R961:4

Actual, literal crucifixion signifies to deliver up to a torturous, slow, but sure death. The figurative closely resembles this. R960:2

And follow me -- "Walk not after the flesh but after the Spirit." (Rom. 8:4) R3237:5

This is the condition. In no other way will Jesus become our Advocate. R5775:5

This is the class, typified by Israel, who have entered the antitypical Canaan, who are fighting the good fight. R5351:4

Mark 8:35

For whosoever -- This principle is applicable to the Church only, during this age. The rule will be the reverse for the world during the Millennium. R4536:4

Will save his life -- Greek: psuche; soul, being. E335; R248:6

Seeks to preserve the restitution life imputed to him through the merit of Christ. R4536:4

Those who love self, popularity, worldly prosperity, honor of men, more than they love the Lord, and who reverence human theories and systems more than the Word of the Lord. D628

Shall lose it -- His eternal life. R4536:4

The great "prize" of the divine nature. R5120:3

Not worthy to share the kingdom. D268

Shall lose his life -- Greek: psuche; soul, being. E336

Sacrifice in the interests of the Lord's cause. R5120:3, 4536:4

Anyone solicitous of maintaining his rights and holding on to the present life, unwilling to sacrifice all, will lose the great "prize" of the divine nature. R5120:3

Shall save it -- The reward of life on the spirit plane. R5120:3

In the first resurrection. R528:4*

Mark 8:36

Gain the whole world -- The selfishness thus developed will make them unfit for the eternal life. R5120:3

Lose his own soul -- Greek, psuche, life, being. E336; CR207:4*

His existence for which nothing would compensate, for without existence there could be no possession or pleasure. R3341:2

What shall a man give -- Wealth, fame or name for a few years in the present time. R5120:3

For his soul -- Greek, psuche, life, being. E336

Mark 8:38

Ashamed of me -- There are many ways of showing ourselves ashamed of Christ: if we are ashamed of any member of his Body, if we are ashamed to be recognized by the world as members of his despised Body, if we are ashamed of his doctrines. R1189:5*; E237; CR448:4

"He that despiseth you despiseth me." (Luke 10:16) R3777:1

We are not to hold back from the service of the truth because we are well-known by our neighbors, nor because of the majority of those who distribute tracts are illiterate or forced to the service of poverty.

R4001:5

The heart attitude that says, "So long as right is as easy as wrong I will choose the right, but if wrong is easier than right I will choose the easier way," is disloyal to God. SM346:1

If Jesus had joined hands in Pharisaism, even had he kept quiet and left their hypocrisies alone, he would not have suffered. So with us. E236; R374:4

Such characters are not willing to be closely identified with the Body of Christ, but would follow "afar off." R1189:4*

They have not, by faithful service, developed the necessary character and proved their sympathy, devotion, love and zeal for the Lord and his truth. C210

Manifestly such will not be fit for the glorious position to which the Lord has called us if so weak of character. SM764:T, 346:1; R1189:5*

And of my words -- Love to God is above all, and love to God's Word Jesus puts next. R753:5

Ashamed to confess the doctrines which he taught. E237; R5120:4

To be ashamed of the truth, of the divine plan, of the teachings of God's Word, because they are unpopular with men, is to offend the Lord and prove ourselves unworthy of his favor. R5120:4

Whoever honors and serves not the Lord's Word, lacks evidence of love for the Lord himself. R4480:5

They have the spirit of bondage and fear which bringeth a snare and blindness upon them again. R525:6

The acceptance of truth as due, in the face of unpopularity, is a part of the testing. The Lord puts his plan, his Word, as his representative.

R2597:4

The Bible and the literature which expounds and illustrates it. R3777:4

The Lord puts his Word on a parity with himself. R3776:3, 2597:4, 318:2

In neglecting them they neglect him. R55:6

I have yet to find a man that is not ashamed of the ordinary misnamed Gospel of damnation. HG190:6

Sinful generation -- Those who had not made a consecration. R5120:4

Son of man -- The Son of the man (Adam). E153

The "Son of man" is a title of high honor because it is a perpetual reminder of his great victory by which he obtained the divine nature. E151

Be ashamed -- He will not own them as members of his Bride class. R4967:6

He would rightly be ashamed to take for his Bride one so inferior to the true standard of moral excellence. R1189:5*

Such a heart would be unworthy of the glorious high calling. Indeed it would make even an unworthy human being. SM346:1

If we would maintain him as our Advocate, we also must be advocating his cause amongst men. R5120:4

As in Luther's and Paul's day, so now those too indolent or too cowardly to express truth which they see, prove both by word and act that they are unworthy of the knowledge and consequently they are left in darkness.

R402:5, 310:6

When he cometh -- In the Millennium. R3777:5, 3341:2

The holy angels -- The saints, his holy messengers. C302

"The Lord cometh with ten thousand of his saints." (Jude 14) C302

Mark 9

Mark 9:1

Not taste of death -- Jesus prepared his disciples for the transfiguration vision. R5121:1

The kingdom of God -- God's Royal Majesty. R5121:1

Mark 9:2

After six days -- Eight days, counting the one in which this was uttered and the one in which it was fulfilled. R2659:1

Six days after Peter's confession that Jesus was the Messiah, and after our Lord had explained that he would meet with contempt, persecution and death. R3345:2

During the six days following the announcement of the Master's coming suffering, ignominy and death, we may assume that the apostles were sad-hearted and bewildered. R5121:2

This time that elapsed between the breaking of the news of his death to them and the vision, was just enough for them to digest the meaning of our Lord's words. R3345:5

Peter and James, and John -- The three leaders of the apostles. R3345:2

From amongst the strongest of the number. R3345:5

The most advanced in faith and zeal. R2659:1

Leadeth them up -- Luke tells us that he went there to pray, and we may reasonably suppose that the three apostles joined with him in prayer.

R3345:2

An high mountain -- Presumed to be Mt. Hermon. R3345:2

When used symbolically mountains represent kingdoms. A318

For a little prayer meeting with the Lord: "Where two or three are gathered together in my name." (Matt. 18:20) R3345:2

He was transfigured -- By a miraculous power he appeared transformed to spirit conditions. R3345:2

The object of the "vision" was probably two-fold--the comfort and strengthening of the Lord, and the enlightenment of his chosen witnesses.

R1761:4, 3794:5

The import of this vision is clearly indicated by Peter. (2 Pet. 1:16-18)

R1761:1

Mark 9:3

Raiment became shining -- Symbolic of the Lord's coming personal glory.

R1761:2

Representing the "glory to follow" (1 Pet. 1:11) when the sufferings are all complete. B20

Representing the Lord after having experienced his resurrection change.

R5121:2; F677

Exceeding white as snow -- After the manner of angels. R5121:2

There was glory and honor attached to the Jewish dispensation and to the Gospel dispensation, but a still greater glory was manifested in the presence of Jesus, who represented the Millennial dispensation. R3345:6

Mark 9:4

Appeared unto them -- It was only an appearance, because Christ was the firstborn from the dead and neither Moses nor Elijah is as yet "made perfect." (Heb. 11:39, 40) F676; R3345:3, 1761:2

As a symbolic representation of the glory of Christ's Millennial kingdom.

Radiant, but less so than Jesus. R5121:2, 3345:2

Elias -- Moses and Elias were not actually present on the mount, for the resurrection had not yet taken place. R3345:2, 1761:2

A figure of Elijah representing the Gospel or Christian dispensation. B255

A figure of Elijah representing the overcomers of the Gospel age. F677; B20

A figure of Elijah representing the Gospel Church in the flesh. R3345:6,

5121:4, 3794:3

A figure of Elijah representing the spiritual or heavenly phase of the kingdom. R1761:2

Moses -- A figure of Moses representing the Mosaic or Law dispensation. B255; R3794:3, 3345:5 A figure of Moses representing the faithful overcomers who preceded our Lord--the Ancient Worthies. F677; B20
A figure of Moses representing the faithful of natural Israel. R5121:4
A figure of Moses representing the earthly phase of the kingdom. R1761:2
A figure of Moses representing the faithful on the earthly plane through whom the heavenly blessings will pour out upon humanity. R5121:6
Talking with Jesus -- Respecting his decease. (Luke 9:31) R5121:2, 3794:4
The conversation of the vision corroborating his statements that he would suffer a martyr's death at Jerusalem. R3345:5
Typically looking toward, pointing out, and speaking of the sacrifice and sufferings of Christ and "the glory that should follow." (1 Pet. 1:11)
B255, 20; R5121:5,2
The glorified one stood between the Moses class, called previously, and the Elijah class, which had just begun to be called. R5121:5
Jesus represented the Millennial dispensation and the divine kingdom in glory. R3345:6
Moses and Elias, like Jesus, had fasted forty days. They were one with the Lord in a remarkable devotion to the Father. R3794:2

Mark 9:5

Three tabernacles -- Evidently thinking that the Master would rejoice at such blessed fellowship, and willing to do anything for his aid. R5121:2
How many there are like Peter who want to rear earthly tabernacles and fail to understand and appreciate the real vision of the kingdom. R3795:1
Peter was bewildered, confused, but in harmony with his natural temperament, wished to say something. R2289:3, 5121:2

Mark 9:6

Were sore afraid -- Representing our fear lest we should fail in so great an undertaking. R3794:6

Mark 9:7

There was a cloud -- Representing the darkness and trouble which would be permitted to come upon them by Jesus' rejection and death. R3794:5
Since then the Lord has frequently permitted the same dark cloud to come over his faithful ones, that they might be the better prepared to listen to his Word. R3794:6
And a voice -- Such a voice was heard on three different occasions: (1) At our Lord's baptism. (Matt. 3:17) (2) Here on the mount of transfiguration. (3) Just before the crucifixion. (John 12:28) R2237:4

"And this voice which came from heaven we heard" when we were with him in the holy mount. (2 Pet. 1:18) F676; B255

This is my beloved Son -- A fresh encouragement to their faith that Jesus was "the Son of the Highest." (Luke 1:32) R5121:3

Their faith was corroborated; God himself had testified in this miraculous manner that Jesus was his Son. R5121:3

Hear him -- A needed lesson in reverence, humility and patience. "Let every man be swift to hear, slow to speak." (James 1:19) R2289:4

Be still! Hearken rather to the words of my beloved Son. R2289:3

"My sheep hear my voice." (John 10:3) R3346:5

Representing how through this Gospel age, while the misty cloud surrounds the glory of the Lord, we will have great need to continually hearken to the Word of the Lord. R2659:6

In that day (the glorious Millennial age) all shall hear the voice of the Son of man. R3345:6

The essence of the entire vision was to demonstrate that Jesus was the Messiah, worthy of being honored and heard as the mouthpiece of God. R3794:5

And suddenly -- The vision vanished as suddenly as it appeared, as John's visions vanished and changed from time to time. R3345:6

Jesus only -- The "vision," the voice and the cloud had all passed away, and the natural conditions were again realized, while the lessons of that solemn hour remained to gain a yet broader significance after Pentecost. R1761:5

Mark 9:9

As they came down -- They descended from the mount to engage in the duties of life--to complete the lessons of faith and obedience; yet, the influence of the vision continued. R2659:6

We cannot expect to dwell on the mountain heights of enraptured vision always. Our duties and trials are necessary experiences. R2660:4

What things they had seen -- A "vision"--not a reality (Matt. 17:9)--of the coming glory of Christ's kingdom. (2 Pet. 1:16-18) R1761:1, 5128:3, 3345:6; B255

Mark 9:10

Rising from the dead -- The vision impressed the resurrection to their minds, especially of our Lord. R3346:1

It was evidently the divine intention to impress the matter of the resurrection upon their minds. R3346:1

Mark 9:11

Why say the scribes -- The apostles were seeing that Jesus was the Messiah, hence the question. R3346:2

Mark 9:12

Elias verily cometh -- The glorified Christ. B254

Restoreth all things -- During the Millennial age. B254

For the purpose of making ready the world for the kingdom. R3346:2

Mark 9:13

Elias is indeed come -- In a sense, to those who could receive it, John the Baptist had thus come, and had introduced Jesus as the Messiah. R5121:6
Pointing out that John had served as Elijah to those who receive him as Messiah. R3346:4

As John the Baptist was the forerunner of Jesus in the flesh, so the greater Elijah, the Church in the flesh, is the forerunner of the great Messiah on the spirit plane. R5121:5, 3346:4; B260

Not going on to explain to them how he and they and all of the faithful Church would, while in the flesh, represent the higher antitypical Elijah, and endeavor to do a restorative work, but without success. R3346:4

Mark 9:18

They could not -- So with us, occasionally by faith we go into the kingdom and see the glory of the Lord revealed, and then come down from the heights of contemplation to face the fealties of the present--the Adversary still in possession of the world, many his slaves and dupes, and no earthly power sufficient to cast him out. R5128:3

Thus the Lord's people are still in the valley of conflict contending with the will of the flesh and the devil; yet their eyes of faith behold at the top of the mountain the glorious Lord, who will cause them to share in the glories of his kingdom. R2659:4

Suffer you -- Bear with you. R5128:6

Mark 9:22

Oftimes -- This case was one of occasional obsession by an evil spirit. R5128:3

Cast him into the fire -- Account of a similar case in California in 1895 where the author feels he should have exorcised the spirit instead of merely reasoning with the woman possessed by it. R2179:2

To destroy him -- There are modern cases where obsession has induced suicide attempts. R2179:2

Mark 9:23

If thou canst believe -- How great stress the Lord lays upon faith! Our blessings increase in proportion as we will exercise our faith. R5128:6

To him that believeth -- "If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will and it shall be done unto you." (John 15:7)
R5129:5

Mark 9:24

Lord, I believe -- The father realized from Jesus' words that the difficulty rested with him, that he must exercise faith else his son could not be recovered. R5129:2

Mark 9:25

Enter no more -- This was the special point of this cure. The evil spirit had frequently left the boy, but only to return. R5129:2

Mark 9:26

Rent him sore -- We surmise Jesus allowed the evil spirit liberty in the method of leaving the victim to demonstrate how malicious and evil the spirit was. R5129:2

As one dead -- The binding of Satan will be accomplished in a great "time of trouble," and humanity will be left in an almost dead condition.
R5129:4

Mark 9:27

Took him by the hand -- Not only must the Adversary be cast out of humanity, but the world needs the hand of divine power for their uplift out of the mire of sin and death. R5129:4

Lifted him up -- Messiah's kingdom will not only bind the Adversary and forbid him to re-enter humanity, but the power of the kingdom will work amongst the fallen, lifting them up to the divine standard. R5129:4

Mark 9:29

But by prayer and fasting -- Showing that their greatest power would result from their living lives of self-denial and prayer. R4650:4
Fasting, or self-denial; and prayer, or fellowship with God. R5129:5
God's people could accomplish much more if they would always exercise full faith in the Lord, and continually live more in the spirit and less according to the flesh. R5129:5

Mark 9:32

They understood not -- For none were begotten of the holy Spirit until Pentecost. (John 7:39; Acts 1:8) R5361:3
Their minds naturally drifted to the great hopes that Jesus would soon be King, and they would be in honored positions as his associates. R5361:3

Mark 9:33

He came to Capernaum -- Passing hastily through Galilee, seeking to avoid the curious. R5361:3

Mark 9:34

They held their peace -- They were ashamed to tell the topic of their dispute. R5361:6, 2660:3, 1766:3
Certainly not indefinitely, for that would have been showing disrespect to the Master; but there was a brief silence which indicated some embarrassment. R1766:3

By the way -- After the vision in the holy mount there followed temptation. Our highest views of heavenly things are quickly followed by earthly trials and difficulties, which serve to test and prove us. R3795:3

They had disputed -- Because they had not enough love for one another. R5193:4

This spirit disappeared after Pentecost. R5959:1

Who should be the greatest -- The Lord's prime minister. R5361:6

While the humility of the Lord's apostles is very marked in their subsequent career, in the beginning of their course, they were all to some extent influenced by old ideas which it was the object of Christ's teaching to gradually eradicate. R1766:2

After the selection of the three (Verse 2) their relative prominence in the kingdom was naturally suggested to their minds. R1766:3, 3796:1, 2660:3

Called the twelve -- Avoiding personalities, as it is always wise to do when possible. R3796:2

Desire to be first -- The spirit of rivalry being the very opposite of the spirit of love and meekness. R1766:5 The Master invariably encouraged hopes and ambitions. His reproofs were merely against their strifes as to which should be the greatest. R1415:3

But if the lesson was thus important to the apostles in their position as leaders, it is also important to the whole Church, all of whom are, to a greater or less extent, exposed to temptations to rivalry and ambition.

R1766:3

Shall be last of all -- The selfishly ambitious who seek honor rather than service will be disappointed. R5361:6

The saying, "He that humbleth himself shall be exalted; and he that exalteth himself shall be abased" (Luke 14:11), is seen to be the statement of a philosophical principle of divine law. R1766:6

In his kingdom, self-seekers would have the lowest place. R5361:6

Servant of all -- Self-seekers will have the lowest place. R5361:6

It was not their own greatness that was to be considered but God's favor. R5361:6

Mark 9:36

He took a child -- "As newborn babes, desire the sincere milk of the Word, that ye may grow thereby." (1 Pet. 2:2) R2660:3

The great Teacher was a lover of children even though, as far as the record shows, he did not generally give his time to them. R5362:1

And set him -- The manner is impressive and solemn; as though he would say, "I want you to take this lesson to heart and ponder it well." R1766:6

Shall receive -- Recognize and show kindness to. R1761:4

One of such children -- Simple of heart, meek, truthful, free from ambition and rivalry, faithful, trusting, loving, obedient, teachable, indifferent to social distinctions and popular opinions, without guile.

R1766:6

The least and humblest of God's children. R1767:4

Such disciples as have this child-like character, the mark of true followers of Jesus. R3797:2

See Mark 10:14

In my name -- Because he is mine. R1767:4

Receiveth not me -- Not me alone. R5361:6

Him that sent me -- They were to receive each other as representatives of Jesus; and more, as representatives of the Father. R5361:6

Showing his disciples that it was not their own greatness that was to be considered, but God's favor. R5361:6

Mark 9:38

One casting out devils -- This one forbidden by John would correspond well with some now holding meetings other than those which we attend. R5501:3

He followeth not -- We can be workers in the harvest, and yet not followers of the Lord. To be followers of the Lord, we must not only be workers in the harvest, but also must be workers according to his will. R4798:3*

The Lord makes use of various characters as agents in healings, even as Judas was one of the twelve who worked miracles. R749:4

We forbid him -- "What authority have you to cast out devils? Jesus did not send you out as one of the twelve, or as one of the seventy. You have no business in this work. Q280:1

Mark 9:39

Forbid him not -- Each spirit-begotten child of God has a right to speak, to preach, to declare his Heavenly Father's Word and message. None has a right to interfere. R5410:1, 5122:2

We are to keep strictly in mind that the Lord has not given any of us a right to supervise his work nor to forbid another to preach the Gospel. R1522:2

Conscience is always to be respected; nor is any one who stands faithful to his conscience to be disesteemed therefor by his brethren, even if their consciences view the matter differently. R5501:6

While none may interfere with or bind his brother, we may give over some of our own liberties. All who become members in a class thereby surrender individual rights. R5410:2

If any person is doing a miracle in the name of Jesus, we are not to interfere. If the Lord wants to stop him, he can stop him. It is not our business to stop him. Q493:1

Whenever we find anyone doing a good work we should be sympathetic to the extent we see they have good hearts, but this does not mean that we should follow with them and leave our special commission of teaching the truth. Q280:3

We neither urge nor insist upon our own views as infallible, nor do we smite or abuse those who disagree, but regard as "brethren" all sanctified believers in the precious blood. R5367:3, 4067:2

Where brethren find it advantageous to meet in different classes it will usually be found that originally too great restraint of personal liberty was exercised and that the majority were too careless of the sentiments of the minority. R5502:1

But if anyone exercise his talents in a manner which we consider unwise, or wholly or partially erroneous, it is our duty not to render any assistance to the unwise course. R1629:2

Not applicable to cases of direct opposition, direct attacks upon the harvest work. R4434:1

If Satan and his angels will do good, and heal and bless mankind, we certainly will not cast a straw in their way. Let them do all the good works they will, and the more the better. R760:4

In my name -- If they recognize Jesus and the value of his death, if they trust in him for eternal life and seek to walk in his steps, they are our brethren, whether they follow with us or whether they do not. Q495:T
It is one thing to say Christian, it is another thing to think Christian, and it is another thing to mean Christian. Q493:1

Those who claim things in the name of A Christ, but who deny that Jesus Christ, our Lord, tasted death for every man and redeemed us by his own precious blood, are not of us, and the sooner we recognize that the better. Q495:T

The word "Jesus" means "Savior from our sins," and Christian Scientists do not believe there are any sins and say there is no penalty for sin. Q495:T

There are many false Christs; so it makes a great deal of difference in the name of which Christ is the miracle done. Q495:T

Is on our part -- A general principle which none should lose sight of. R760:5

We are to love all and wish God-speed to all loving the Lord and manifesting his Spirit, whether they associate with us or not. R3747:1

Mark 9:41

For whosoever shall give -- Including the worldly man. T93

Whosoever is a big word, and takes in men of all characters. HG41:4
Including the thief on the cross who spoke kindly to the suffering Savior. F669

There have been remarkably noble specimens of humanity among the heathen, such will have a reward. R1030:3*

We advise that money be not solicited from outsiders, though we know of no reason why money tendered by outsiders should ever be refused. F347

A cup of water -- Money for the Lord's work need not be refused if voluntarily offered by outsiders. F347

Not lose his reward -- In the Millennial age. R2701:4, 2612:3,6, 412:1, 259:1

It would indicate their sympathy, and no doubt would bring them eventually, either in the present or in the coming life, some recognition and reward. F347

There have been remarkably noble specimens of humanity among the heathen, and such will have a reward; but such a character could not, and cannot now save a man whose life is already forfeited. R1030:3*

Showing that the dead will not only be raised for punishment. HG41:4

Whosoever shall offend -- Greek: skandalon; scandalize, stumble, entrap, injure, hurt spiritually, thus subjecting himself to certain losses beyond the present life. R3797:3

Beguile and lead astray--from the truth, or holiness of life. R1767:4

When leaders of church unite to force people to accept or reject their views by restraining the liberty of speech and the liberty of the press, to prevent the publications of doctrines of the Bible according to other men's views, they have departed from the rational ideal of dealing with the subject. HG507:5*, 604:5*

These little ones -- These that are little or humble minded, meek and loyal of heart, R3797:3

Better for him -- Because such a calamity could not in any way affect his future life. R3797:3

Mark 9:43

And if thy hand -- Figurative language--a literal hand could not cause one to stumble in such a way as to affect his eternal welfare. R486:3*

Take the first clause of verses 43, 45 and 47, and connect them with the first clause of the 49th verse. R3797:5, 112:4

Any comfort, pleasure, or taste as dear as a hand. R2603:1

Any sin we may cherish, be it as precious as a right hand. OV167:3

Offend these -- Would by its gratification cause you to forfeit the life to come. R2603:1, 112:4

Cause thee to maintain an injurious character, a tendency to scandalize or injure others. R3797:5

Cut if off -- As God will not accept a divided heart, if a part of your powers symbolized by "hand" offend, it would be better to have a single one, than two working in opposition. R508:3*

It is better -- It would be better to endure the loss of members than lose all in gehenna. R2603:1, 112:4

The future life is of inestimable value, and it will richly pay you to make any sacrifice to receive and enjoy that life. R2603:1

Teaching the necessity of separating themselves from everything which should hinder them from meeting the requirements of the law of life, no matter how dear or valuable that object might be. R508:2*

Enter into life maimed -- Everlasting life, which is the opposite of the everlasting destruction symbolized by gehenna. R2602:3, 112:4

Into the everlasting life and harmony with God symbolized by the New Jerusalem. OV167:3

It would richly repay them to deny themselves many comforts, pleasures and tastes, dear to them as a right hand, precious as an eye, and serviceable as a foot. R2603:1; HG511:4; OV167:3

God will not accept a divided heart, a divided service, if a part of your powers cause you to offend; it would be much better to cut it off and have a single one. R508:3*

Go into hell -- Greek: gehenna; everlasting destruction. "Valley of Hinnom." This valley lay just outside the city of Jerusalem and served the purpose of sewer and garbage-burner to that city. No living thing was ever permitted to be cast into gehenna nor were the Jews allowed to torture any creature. R2601:2, 896:1, 111:6; OV167:2

A figure used by our Lord and the Prophet Isaiah (66:24) to represent the utter destruction of the second death. R896:1

Jerusalem was a figure of the kingdom of God, the New Jerusalem; hence its valley was an appropriate symbol of the second death, the utter extermination of all things abominable at the close of the Millennial age. R896:4; HG224:5; OV167:T

The Jews knew it to refer to the valley outside their city, which was not a place of torment, nor a place where any living thing was cast, but a place for the utter destruction of whatever might be cast into it. R2602:6
Kimchi says that brimstone was thrown in to continue the fires and that the condemnation of the wicked in a parabolic way, is called Gihinnom. R112:1

The history of the Valley of Hinnom detailed. HG224:4-6; OV167:1

Never shall be quenched -- Not a neverending fire. The fires of gehenna burned on until all was consumed, just as an uncontrolled fire burns a house. R2603:1, 111:6

Mark 9:44

Where their worm -- This verse is spurious; not in oldest MSS. R2602:5, 112:4

Verse 44 and 46, and part of 45, are not found in the oldest Greek manuscripts, though verse 48, which reads the same, is in all manuscripts. R2602:6, 112:4

If thy foot -- Symbolizing offending powers. R508:2*

Any sin we may cherish, be it as precious as a right foot. OV167:3

Cut it off -- As God will not accept a divided heart, if part of your powers symbolized by "foot" offend, it would be better to have a single one than two working in opposition. R508:3*

Cast into hell -- It became customary to cast the "carcasses" of certain criminals into the Valley of Hinnom instead of giving them decent burial, thus it was noted, detested and dreaded as an extreme of punishment.

R896:1, 111:6

Into the fire that never shall be quenched-- This phrase is an interpolation; not in the oldest Greek MSS. R2602:5, 112:4

Mark 9:46

Where their worm -- This verse is spurious; not in oldest MSS. R2602:5, 112:4

Mark 9:47

And if thine eye -- Anything as precious as an eye. R112:4

Any sin we may cherish, be it as precious as a right eye. OV167:3

There are eyes of the understanding as well as natural eyes. Eye is representative of design or purpose. R486:3*

A literal eye, hand or foot, could not cause one to stumble in such a way as to affect his eternal welfare. There are eyes of understanding as well as natural eyes. Eyes are also used as representative of design or purpose. R486:3*

Offend thee -- It is not an uncommon thing for many who have professed to have an eye for the glory of God, to have a much larger eye for business, for literature, for fame, etc. R486:6*

Pluck it out -- As God will not accept a divided heart, if part of your powers symbolized by "eye" offend, it would be better to have a single one than two working in opposition. R508:3*

It is better -- Paul echoed the same spirit when he said, "I count all things but loss"; "Let us lay aside every weight--and run." (Phil. 3:8; Heb. 12:1) R486:6*

Hell -- See verse 43.

Fire -- This word not found in the best MSS. R112:4

Mark 9:48

Their worm -- If carcasses thrown into the Valley of Gehenna fell upon ledges and not into the fire, they would breed worms and be destroyed just as completely. R2603:1, 896:1, 112:1; OV167:2

Dieth not -- This does not imply everlasting (immortal) worms, but that they did not die until they had completed the work of destruction.

OV167:2; R896:1

Taken from Isa. 66:24 where the context shows that the prophecy relates to the future, to the period of Messiah's kingdom; and that it was carcasses, dead bodies, that were in evidence. OV167:4

No one thought of killing those worms or stopping their ravages. They were doing good work, reducing the dead carcasses tossed into the valley into dust. OV167:2

What in the world has given worms the power of living forever? Would not that be a gift of God to those worms? HG224:3

Fire is not quenched -- Referring to the burning of brimstone in the bottom of gehenna. Its use was intended to destroy bacteria, the germs of disease, and help to preserve the health of the city. OV167:3; R896:1,4, 111:6

In the literal hell or gehenna, in one of the valleys near Jerusalem, the fires were kept burning continually. R486:3*

It was kept burning purposely, by a law, and the worms were allowed to feed upon whatever was thrown into that valley, but did not alight in the fire, but on the rocks above. HG224:6

It burned on until all was consumed. R2603:1, 896:1

See also verse 43.

Mark 9:49

For -- Connects the first clause of verses 43, 45 and 47 with the first clause of verse 49. R508:2*

We must not fail to notice the intimate connection between the 49th verse and the former verses by the little work "for," which shows the relation of the statements to each other. R508:2*

Salted with fire -- May we not only submit to, but volunteer to be "salted with fire," then we shall be prepared to offer an acceptable sacrifice "salted with salt." R508:6*

Forsaking all to be a disciple of Christ, we understand to be the salt of fiery trial and separation. R508:3*

Every sacrifice -- In the type, salt was required to be offered with the sacrifice. "With all thine offerings thou shalt offer salt." (Lev. 2:13) R508:5*

If we become careless and neglect the salt, the sacrifice will become offensive unto God. R508:6*

Salted with salt -- A symbol of fidelity, loyalty and incorruption. R508:5*

Mark 9:50

Salt is good -- Salt signifies a purifying quality, it gives flavor to whatever it is attached and seems to signify a preservative quality that is a detriment to corruption. Q618:1

There are few, if any, words in the Bible that have a wider range of symbolism than the word salt. It is used as a symbol for fidelity, friendship, incorruption, barrenness, perpetual desolation, preservation, etc. R508:1*

Referring to its symbolism of purity, righteousness, and to its cleansing, preserving and healing influence. R2099:5*

Several of the oldest and best manuscripts (among which are the Sinaitic and Vatican) insert the word "then" after the word "salt." R508:3*

Have lost his saltiness -- By clinging to the world, and worldly ways, to anything that is foreign to the word and spirit of Christ. R508:4*; Q618:1

If the Christian should persistently fall away from his righteousness, he is "thenceforth good for nothing." (Matt. 5:13) R2099:5*

How important that we not only have salt in ourselves, but that we continue to retain its healthful properties. R2099:5*

If we lose the quality of being separated from the world and have the spirit of pride, we would lose our Christianity and cease to be the Lord's representative. Q618:1

If you are clinging to the world and worldly ways, thoughts and associations, or to a worldly church organization, then the salt is losing, if it has not already lost, its savor. R508:4*

Wherewith will ye season it? -- There is no way to restore saltiness to salt once it has gone. So if we lose the holy Spirit, there is no way by which we could be renewed again. Q618:1

Have salt -- Purity, righteousness. R2099:5*

In yourselves -- If we have not the salt in ourselves, how can we be the salt of the earth? If we are not truly and sincerely righteous, how can we exert upon others the cleansing and healing influences? R2099:5*

Mark 10

Mark 10:3

What did Moses -- Moses stood in the position of a father to the whole nation, the nation being regarded and treated as children under age.

R5046:4, 1725:3

Who acted representatively in bringing the Jews under the Law covenant, as Christ acted representatively in removing it. R1725:4, 5046:6

Hath joined together -- The marriage contract is similar to that between the Lord and the Church--perpetual. F516

As a type of the union of Christ and the Church. F495

Mark 10:13

They brought young children -- Children were brought to Jesus by their parents, that he should bless them. R4823:3, 5362:1

His disciples rebuked -- Feeling that the Lord's time was too valuable to be thus used. R5362:1

Suffer -- Permit. R4823:3, 5362:1, 4853:4

The little children -- Jesus was a lover of children even though he did not generally give his time to them. R5362:1

For of such -- Inculcating simplicity, purity, honesty, sincerity, such as in a little child--trustfulness in the Father and in those with whom we have to do. CR154:1; R5362:2, 4853:4

Of such like is the kingdom. Jesus is representing the gentle, teachable, guileless, humble disciple by a little child--"in malice be ye children (having none)." (1 Cor. 14:20) R521:3

Little children will not be in the kingdom at all. Only developed, tried, perfected characters will constitute the overcomers who will sit with the Master in his throne. R5362:2

The proper child, unspoiled by its elders, is disposed to be very trustful; and, until deceived, it is disposed to believe every word of the parent and to trust implicitly to the parent's wisdom and power. R5362:2
See Mark 9:37.

Mark 10:15

Not receive the kingdom -- The message of the kingdom. R5362:2

As a little child -- In that pure, simple manner that a little child would receive a message. R5594:4

"As new born babes, desire the sincere milk of the Word, that ye may grow thereby." (1 Pet. 2:2) R2660:3

The followers of Jesus are not to be little children, but must be childlike. R5362:2

How beautiful the thought--"children of God!" R521:3

Mark 10:16

In his arms -- Thus exhibiting his own sympathetic love and humility of heart. R5362:1

And blessed them -- Or, prayed a blessing upon them. R4823:3

The influence of child-blessing services, arranged weekly in Brooklyn, upon parents and children are favorable, impressing upon the former their responsibilities. R4823:6

Mark 10:17

There came one -- Supposed by some to have been Lazarus, whom Jesus later awakened from the dead. R3529:1

A Jew of a prominent family, a ruler. R3843:1

A young ruler of the synagogue. R5422:3

Notwithstanding the persecuting spirit of the rulers and teachers in Israel against the Lord and all who believed in the validity of his claims, he came to him openly. R1774:3

Kneeled to him -- Saluting him with that reverence due to so great a teacher. R1774:3

What shall I do -- He was anxious for a perfect conformity to the will of God; and so anxious that he manifested his willingness to bear reproach for it in coming to Jesus. R1774:6

If I have been sincere, I ought to be ready to accept whatever answer he will give me as divine direction, and should promptly obey. R3843:1

Mark 10:18

Callest thou me good -- Unless you believe from the heart that I am the Son of God and not a falsifier, hypocrite and blasphemer. R2727:6

Is this simply a mark of courtesy? Or do you recognize the fact that there is only one standard of goodness, which is represented by God, therefore recognizing me as a teacher whom God approves? R3843:1

Pointing out that everything that is really good must in some way be of God and in accordance with God. R5465:2, 4658:2

Thou knowest the commandments -- Not waiting for a reply. R5465:2, 3843:1

It was necessary that our Lord's answer should be in line with the Law Covenant which was still in force, not yet "nailed to the cross." (Col. 2:14) R3843:2, 5465:3

We would not so tell him now, but then the Law Covenant was still in force in Israel. R5465:2

Not, Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and confess your inability to keep the divine Law perfectly. That was not yet then due to be promulgated. R3843:2

Mark 10:20

All these have I observed -- He was trying to do right in every way. R5438:6

He had been living a most exemplary life; but that was merely his duty; no one has a right to live a bad life. R5438:6

Indicating a realization that by the deeds of the Law no flesh had yet gained the life it promised for obedience. R1774:3

Mark 10:21

Beholding him -- He was a noble character, even though he was not a disciple. R5395:3, 1774:5

He was a model young man, such an one as all lovers of truth and righteousness delight in. R3843:3

Loved him -- It would have been impossible for the Lord not to love such a grand character. R2728:2

Loved his humility and earnestness, and his endeavor to keep the Law. R3843:3

Loved his endeavors to keep the Law and loved his manifestation of humility and earnestness in coming as he had, in a public manner, to ask the way to life eternal. R3843:3

Who was thus desirous of being in full accord with the Heavenly Father's will. OV332:T; R1774:6

He was a sincere Pharisee. R5464:2

One thing thou lackest -- With all his morality there was inconsistency.

He possessed wealth, and should use it to the glory of the Lord. R5422:3

There was a lack. His attitude, although he did not realize it, was not that of entire consecration to the will of God. R1774:6

He had failed to keep the Law in those two most important principles--supreme love to God and love to the neighbor as to self.

R1774:6, 2728:2; OV332:1

There is none so perfect that he lacks nothing. R1775:4

Sell whatsoever thou hast -- You must do more than merely avoid sin. God is now calling for sacrificers. R5438:6

If you do not sacrifice yourself, you cannot become my disciple. R5438:6

Possessions, time, reputation, ambition. R1775:1

No man could be his disciple unless he would surrender all. R5422:3

He must not be selfish, or he could not be Christ's disciple. R5422:5

Not that the Lord's people should be penniless, dependant upon the charity of others, but their possessions all must be consecrated to the Lord to be used in his service. R3844:4

If that young man had assented and made further inquiry as to the particulars, it is our opinion that the Lord would have modified his statement--suggesting that the selling and giving to the poor be not done all at once, but gradually, as the necessities might seem to open up.

Q149:4

Give to the poor -- Use that which you consecrated as wisely and as thoroughly as you know how, as God's steward. F576; R1775:1

"Love is the fulfilling of the law." (Rom. 13:10) R2728:2

Whatever could not have been done for the Lord's cause directly could have been done for the poor of the Jewish nation, who indirectly represented the Lord's people. R3844:5

Not that the riches should be given away recklessly or indiscriminately but, as God's steward, to distribute it according to the wisdom which God would give. R5465:3, 3844:1

Feed the hungry with the bread that perisheth; but first, rather, to feed the spiritually hungry with the bread of life. R1775:2

Treasure in heaven -- Every Jew, ready and willing to sacrifice his earthly belongings and become a follower of Jesus, would be accounted worthy of transfer from the house of servants under Moses to the house of sons under Christ. R3843:5

Additionally, he might become a joint-heir with Jesus in glory, honor and immortality. (Rom. 2:7; 8:17) PD66/78

A life of glory, honor, and immortality--the divine nature. R5438:6

In laying up treasure in our minds and hearts, we are building character fit for an inheritance in the kingdom of heaven. R5519:1

Take up the cross -- There is no other way to come into Christ but by way of the cross. We must bear it as he bore it. R5422:5

Even the full surrender of earthly possessions would not be sufficient. R5465:3

In putting before others the trials and the cross, we should also put before them the glory to follow. R5422:5

These words are not found in the Sinaitic and Vatican MSS. R3843:6

And follow me -- Follow my example. R5465:3

Every Jew willing to become a follower would be transferred from the house of servants to the house of sons. R3843:4

This means the complete subjection, the death of the flesh. R5220:6

As it was expedient that the Master pass through experiences of self denial, so it is expedient that his Bride be similarly touched with a feeling of the world's infirmities. R4138:4

To follow Christ is not to make unwise disposition of our possessions and talents, but, as wise and faithful stewards, to use them to the best possible advantage in his service. R1775:1

Mark 10:22

He was sad -- But he had no complaint to make. R3843:6

He was anxious to do God's will, but not sufficiently anxious to be accounted worthy of membership in the Little Flock. He was willing to do right, to do justly, but unwilling to sacrifice. R5465:5, 5395:3

No doubt the heart of Jesus was sad also when he saw the blight of selfishness and self-will attacking that promising half-blown rose of character. R1774:6

Went away grieved -- Sorrowful; he did not want to give everything to the Lord, but preferred to hold on to his wealth. R5395:3, 2728:3

With all his morality, there was inconsistency. He possessed wealth, and should use that wealth to the glory of God. He must not be selfish, or he could not be Christ's disciple. R5422:3

He forsook the opportunity to do the greatest good, and thus turned his back upon a membership in the kingdom class. R5465:5

Declining to have the eternal life which Jesus was offering on the only terms now attaching to the offer. R3844:3

We hear nothing of his subsequent conversion, but in all probability he remained in sympathy with the Jewish teachers and partook more and more of their spirit of opposition to Christ and his teaching. R1774:6

In the kingdom, we may see the young ruler glad to have life eternal through the acceptance of the divine arrangement. Sacrifice will not be possible then nor will it be required. R3845:1

During the past eighteen centuries the same test has proved many good, honorable and wise people to be unfit for the kingdom. R3843:5

He had great possessions -- He was very rich. R5395:4

Mark 10:23

How hardly -- With what difficulty. R3844:3, 2761:2 The difficulty was that he had set his heart upon his riches, demonstrating that he loved God and the divine will less than he loved his earthly property. R5465:5

He might have said, I have some children for whom I must make some provision. But the Lord said, Give all that you have to God. A parent can consecrate his children so far as he is concerned. R5422:5

How rarely. R874:1

The possession of wealth, in combination with selfishness, leads to a measure of satisfaction with present circumstances and conditions unfavorable to faith in God's heavenly promises. R2761:2

Shall they -- The Doctors of the Law, the prominent Pharisees, the rulers in the synagogues, the members of the Sanhedrin, etc., were the wealthiest of Israel. R3844:3

That have riches -- Not because God is opposed to riches, for he himself is rich above all others. R2761:2

Any valuable possession--talents of music, oratory, art, mental endowment, or influence. R2761:3

Not merely of gold, but may be of honor, position, power, approbation of men, etc. R5319:3

Whether those riches be of reputation, fame, learning, money, or even common ease. HG716:6

Though generally applied to money, it may properly be applied to any valuable possession--talents of music, oratory or mental endowment--which carry with it weight of influence among men. R2761:6

We should have no idols--either wealth, fame or selfish ease--which might attract our devotion away from God. R5465:6

No rich man can enter the kingdom. The only way one can enter is by becoming poor. R3844:6

Many who know nothing of actual want of life's necessities are much exercised by the loss of luxuries when adversity comes. R873:6

Hindrances of the rich are: faith in wealth instead of God, pride which riches foster, friends which riches bring, and the proportionately larger sacrifices which must be made. R2729:1

It is as proper for the earthly father to make provision for his children as for the heavenly Father to plan for, educate and prepare a future home for his children. It is when parents attempt to become rich and to leave their children rich that they specially err. R1828:4

The kingdom of God -- Used interchangeably with "kingdom of heaven." (Matt. 19:23) R397:1

Not the earthly nominal church which rich men find little difficulty in getting into, but the glorified Body of Christ. R2761:3; A284

Mark 10:24

Children -- Simple, unsophisticated ones. R3844:3

That trust in riches -- Not that a man has been born wealthy or that he has acquired great wealth, but that he would love these riches, would hinder his faith in God. R3844:4

Mark 10:25

To go through -- We have heard it is possible for a camel to squeeze its way through on its back knees provided the load be first removed from its back. R3844:5

The eye of a needle -- A small gateway of ancient cities, used at night; a camel could pass through only on his knees and unloaded. D304; F575; R5466:1, 3844:5; PD66/78

For a rich man -- No rich man can enter. The only way one can enter is by becoming poor, sacrificing everything. R3844:6; PD66/78

A rich man could enter the kingdom of God only by renouncing his burdens, giving up all to the Lord. R5466:1

The kingdom of God -- Not the earthly nominal church, but the real kingdom, the glorified kingdom which shall be established in the end of this age. R2761:6; A284

Mark 10:26

Who then can be saved? -- If the few who are to inherit the kingdom are the only ones who will get eternal life, then indeed there are few that will be saved. R3843:6

Mark 10:27

With men it is impossible -- With men, it might seem impossible that a man could have riches and use them conscientiously--be a sacrificer.

R1775:2

According to the Law no such thing was possible, but God made possible this plan of salvation through Jesus. R3845:2

All things are possible -- If the rich man be honest-hearted and humble, and his riches alone stand in the way, the Lord would show him how to use his wealth, or else strip him of it. R5466:2

God has made provision for the wealthy: "Jesus Christ by the grace of God tasted death for every man." (Heb. 2:9) R3844:6

The rich young ruler and all the families of the earth are to be blessed in the Lord's established kingdom. R3845:1

We have left all -- A full surrender to God--a leaving of all and a yielding up of all. R5466:4

The twelve chosen apostles had professed much. How much greater was their responsibility. R4909:1

Earthly business and calling and ambitions that they may glorify the Lord.

Aiv

Their all was not so very much, nor any more in many cases than we have to leave, but it was their all, and so was acceptable. R1041:4

Peter had left his fishing business and his friends to travel with the Master. He had thus given up his own will and present interests to do the will of God. R1041:5

Mark 10:29

Verily I say unto you -- Jesus did not fully endorse Peter's statement. He knew about Judas and that with Peter some self-will still remained.

R5466:4

Hath left house -- We are not to get the mistaken idea that the Lord wishes us to sacrifice others. It would be wrong to deprive our families of necessary comforts and temporal provisions, but having provided these the surplus is the Lord's. R3845:5

If a man has made proper provisions for his family, it is for him and not them to decide how his time, energy and further means shall be spent.

R3845:6

We know of none so poor that he could not sacrifice something, and the poorer we are the more diligently should we strive to find something to render unto the Lord our God. R3845:3

Sometimes the Lord's people put too much value on money and not enough on service. R3513:6*

Or wife, or children -- Our Lord certainly did not mean that we should sacrifice others in order to be his disciples; it is ourselves that we are to deny, ourselves that we are to sacrifice. R3845:5

Not that the Lord would have us deprive our families of necessary comforts. He that provides not for his own is worse than an unbeliever. (1Tim. 5:8) R3845:5

And the gospel's -- Whatever is more than our responsible provision of necessities, is held merely as a steward for use in the Master's service. R3845:6

Mark 10:30

Receive an hundredfold -- The greater our present loss, the greater will be our reward both now and hereafter. Those who sacrifice nothing need expect no reward. Those who receive little of the Lord in this present life and have small hope of a share in the kingdom are those who have sacrificed little. R3845:3

What a broad promise! How gracious the divine arrangements. R5466:4
Not saying that Peter's little all was not worth mentioning, but recognizing it and encouraging Peter to continue to sacrifice all, with the assurance that in due time he would be rewarded. R1041:5

Now in this time -- The Lord's precious promises, backed by loving letters of sympathy and encouragement, much more than offset the frowns and hostilities of the world and the nominal church. R1346:2

With persecutions -- The Master promised compensation for the world's hatred even in this present life. R1346:2

In the present time "tribulation," "persecution" and "all manner of evil," and in the age to come, everlasting life and glory as his joint-heirs. R1084:1

Mark 10:31

But many that are first -- Position, honor of men, wealth and education were barriers to becoming disciples. Those who were first or most prominent were really less favored; those who had less opportunity were really first or most favored. R3845:5

In point of time God called fleshly Israel first; but in point of favor, and in time of realization, spiritual Israel comes first. B206; A293

Many possessing great privilege and opportunity for exaltation to the kingdom will fail to embrace it, while others, naturally less favored, will gain the great prize. R5466:5

Again, those who first had the opportunity of becoming disciples of Jesus at his first advent will not, on that account, have any advantage over others of the Lord's followers in the future. R5466:5

Shall be last -- Adam and Eve will probably be the last members of the human family to be awakened. R4499:1; D641

The last first -- The less learned, less noble, less influential, less wealthy were advantaged. It was easier for them to humble themselves, to sacrifice. R3845:5

Some not favored during the Gospel age, natural Israel, will be granted the chief favors during the Millennial age. F118

The last to die will probably be the first to be awakened. D641; R4499:1; SM441:T

Mark 10:32

They were amazed -- Overawed by the stupendous things which the Lord had declared to be imminent. R3362:2

Mark 10:33

They shall condemn him -- The priestly Sadducees, and not the people and their Pharisean leaders, were interested in having Jesus brought to trial for his open attack on the priestly misrule, and from fear lest the Romans might hold them responsible. R2420:1*

Mark 10:35

James and John -- They had been permitted to come nearer than the majority of the twelve. They were with him in the holy mount, at the awakening of Jairus' daughter and in Gethsemane's garden. R5483:3
Who, it is supposed, were Jesus' full cousins. R3362:2

Come unto him -- Matthew tells us that their mother, Salome, was with them and really made the request for them in their names. R3362:2

Do for us -- The others would not appreciate it so much as we do. CR151:6

Mark 10:37

Grant -- Or permit. CR151:6

Unto us -- They loved the Lord very dearly, and thought they could appreciate a nearness to him more than some of the others. R5483:3; CR151:6, 411:5

That we may sit -- Jesus appreciated their love for him, and their desire to be near him. CR411:5; R3362:2

Others might not care so much where they were placed, but James and John would like to be close to the Master. R5091:1, 2072:2

On thy right hand -- Not merely for ambition's sake, but we may suppose that they loved the Lord dearly and thought that they could appreciate a nearness to him more than could some of the others. R5483:3, 4487:3

The other on thy left -- It will not surprise us should we find the Apostle Paul in one of these two positions. R3362:6

In thy glory -- He had not told them his kingdom would be a spiritual one and that they would need the first resurrection change to be sharers of it; nor had he made it clear that a whole age would intervene before they would be made sharers in the kingdom. R5483:1

Mark 10:38

But Jesus said -- He did not reprove them for he read in their hearts their love and loyalty toward himself, and that their desire for the position was not merely for the honors and authority implied, but specially because this would bring them closer to himself. R3362:2

Ye know not -- Do you know what it costs to get on the throne at all? CR151:6

At that time they could form no idea of the blessedness of being joined with Christ in his kingdom. R2072:2

Can ye drink -- Are you able, are you willing, to pay the cost of getting on the throne? CR151:6; R3362:3

Will you carry out fully the covenant of consecration to death which you made and on account of which you are reckoned as members of my Body? If this is your will, I will test you, to make your calling and election sure. R4310:2

It meant, Are ye willing? because it would be impossible for the disciples to have known their own ability, except in the sense of having confidence in God that he would give the ability. R3362:3

All who would sit in the throne must drink of the cup. All who will faithfully drink of the cup shall sit in the throne. R4332:1

The privilege of drinking of "the cup" is offered only during the Gospel age. R936:3

Of the cup -- This cup of self-denial and self-sacrifice with Jesus signifies our participation in the blood of the New Covenant--in providing the wherewithal for the sealing of the New Covenant. CR47:5, 411:6; PD66/78 Cup of ignominy and suffering. R2292:4, 5484:1, 4436:5; CR411:6, 151:6 Signifies the consecration to death of all the members of the Body of Christ. R4980:5

Only those who drink of his cup may sit with him in his throne. R4453:5; CR411:6

The privilege of drinking of "the cup" (sharing in the sacrifice of life) is offered only during the Gospel age. R936:3

That I drink of -- Ours must be the same "cup," his cup, else we shall have neither part nor lot in his kingdom glory. R4436:5; CR47:5 Jesus' "cup" was the one to which he elsewhere referred, saying, "The cup which my Father hath poured for me, shall I not drink it?" (John 18:11) R5483:6

The cup signifies experiences; as, for instance, when our Lord said, "The cup which my Father hath given me, shall I not drink it." (John 18:11) R3362:3

Mark 10:38

Be baptized -- Baptism into death is the real baptism for the Church, as it was the real baptism for our Lord; water baptism is only the symbol. F441

Only by sharing in his baptism into death could they hope to sit with him in his throne. CR76:1; OV242:5

With the baptism -- The baptism unto death. F438, 442; R5484:2, 4495:5; CR76:1, 411:6; OV242:5

The full renunciation of all earthly rights. R5484:2; PD66/78

The baptism of their wills into his will and the Father's will. F442; PD66/78

That I am baptized with -- Into my death--to self-will, to cutting off from every earthly privilege, if such be God's providence for you. PD66/78
No reference to water baptism, but to his baptism into death, of which he spoke a few days later, saying, "I have a baptism to be baptized with; and how am I straitened until it be accomplished." (Luke 12:50) R5484:1; CR76:1

We can -- We are willing; we will sacrifice everything to follow in your footsteps. R3362:4; CR151:6

With divine assistance, we will go through anything to be with you, because we love you. CR151:6; R3362:4

Be sharers of his cup of ignominy and his baptism into death. R5484:2

They were already consecrated, in the sense of agreeing to take up the cross to follow after Jesus in the narrow way, but the Father had not yet accepted their consecration. R4495:5 Evidencing that these two noble apostles were not inspired by selfish ambition in their request. R3362:4
They had no thought that he wished them to be baptized again in water; they understood well that it was the baptism of their wills into his will and the Father's will. F442

Ye shall indeed -- Whoever of his called ones are willing at heart for these experiences, the Lord will grant them the privilege, and also the assistance. F442

They should indeed have the experiences necessary to fit them for a place in the Kingdom. R3362:5, 4436:5

Willingness on the part of all is as much as the Lord could reasonably require of his disciples. We have not the power that he possessed; we are sinners by nature. R5484:4

He assured them and us that he will furnish trials and assistances, and that if faithful to the end, we shall have a crown of life. PD66/78; CR151:6

Drink of the cup -- The juice of the grape not only speaks of crushing till blood comes forth, but also of an after refreshment. R5192:6

A wholly different matter from justification by faith. They were already justified by faith, but could not sit on the throne unless they would be sanctified by participation in Christ's death. R4495:5

Whoever will be successful as a disciple of Christ in attaining to joint-heirship with the Master must first of all demonstrate a loyalty and faithfulness in respect to suffering with the Master. R5484:1

Shall ye be baptized -- Suffer sacrificial death with Jesus; not to provide the ransom, however. PT388:4*

The Master's baptism meant the full renunciation of all earthly rights. R5484:2

Mark 10:40

Not mine to give -- That is not for me to decide, but for divine justice to apportion out. CR152:1, 151:6; PD66/78

The honors and glories of the kingdom will not be determined by grace, but by justice. PD66/78

There is a further zeal, beyond that which brought our consecration, which will determine how near we may be to the Master in the throne. CR152:1

Given to them -- Possibly Paul and John. F726

For whom it is prepared -- It shall be reserved for whom the Father has arranged it; and the Father has arranged it along the lines of justice.

CR440:3; R4436:5, 3362:6

Not that the Father prepared the place in advance by any arbitrary divisions, but rather that his pre-arranged plan is that each follower of Jesus shall have positions of honor proportionate to the zeal of their faithfulness in the present time. R3362:6

Places in the Millennial kingdom are not to be given on the score of mercy or favoritism, but absolutely, on the score of quality. R5483:4

Mark 10:41

Be much displeased -- Possibly some, Judas included, were anxious for the power of the throne, but without the special love and longing to be near the Master himself. R3363:1

Exercise lordship -- Lord it over one another, and recognize caste and station. R2278:3, 843:6

We have no evidence that the early Church ever regarded the apostles as lords in the Church; or that the apostles ever assumed such authority or dignity. R1523:5; F230

Mark 10:43

Not be among you -- He who serves most and not he who lords it most should have the chief respect of the Lord's people. R3363:5

Esteem and honor one another in proportion as you find in each other unselfish sacrificing love and service. R844:1

Whosoever will be great -- Esteemed in proportion to their service, and not in proportion to their titles, their priestly vestments, or their praise among men. R1574:2

Minister -- Greek: diakonos; deacon, servant. F253; R1574:2
Whichever one will serve the others most will thereby be demonstrating to God a greater fitness for a higher place. R5484:5

Mark 10:44

Servant of all -- Or greatest servant. R1574:2

No other lesson requires to be so carefully learned by the Lord's people as this lesson of humility. R3363:4

Esteem such very highly for their service' sake. (1 Thes. 5:13) R844:1

The chief positions in the kingdom would be given along the lines of meritorious service. Each would have the opportunity to strive for the chief position by striving to render service to the others. R3363:1

Mark 10:45

For even the Son -- The Lord did not have one standard for his followers and another standard for himself. R3363:2

As therefore my greatest service towards you renders me your chief, so shall it be among you. R844:1

Came -- Proof positive that in exchanging the higher nature for the human nature our Lord had not given his life as a ransom, but merely made the preparation for that work. E426

But to minister -- To serve others. E426; F230

The key to Mark's Gospel where Christ is shown as a worker. In Matthew he is described as a King (Matt. 1:1); in Luke as a philanthropist (Luke 19:10); and in John as God manifested (John 20:31). R1046:6*

The Lord did not have one standard for his followers and another for himself. R3363:2

And -- The serving of Jesus' ministry and the example of obedience and self-denial which he displayed, though blessed to those of his day, and to others since, was not all by any means. R851:3

To give -- If we were bought, something was given for us, and to some one. R387:3

Proof positive that our Lord in exchanging the higher nature for the human nature had not yet given his life as a ransom. E426

His life -- Greek: psuche; soul, being. E336; R667:3, 53:4*

"The Good Shepherd giveth his life for the sheep." (John 10:11) R408:1*
The life Jesus gave was all the life he possessed--it was his life. R280:3
Telling how he gained the right to loose the prisoners of sin and death from the tomb and to offer life to all for whom life and all had been lost. R866:4

When our Lord was changed from spirit being to human being, it was not a laying aside of existence. But at Calvary, existence was laid down completely, he died, ceased to exist. R667:3

There is a difference to be observed between the laying down of the ransom-price and the application of that ransom-price. R4818:6

A ransom -- The Greek term rendered ransom is lutron-anti, a price to offset or to correspond. In 1 Tim. 2:6 it is the same expression reversed.
R1256:2, 5622:6, 387:3; E428

To recover by paying a price. R867:3

Jesus was the only one who could be the corresponding price for Adam.
R5622:6

The death of Jesus was the giving of the price. R4818:6

Thus bringing life to light. (2 Tim. 1:10) R3337:6

As Adam, through disobedience, forfeited his being, so Christ Jesus, as a corresponding price, paid a full and exact offset for Adam's soul or being. E428

His death was a free-will sacrifice. He could have sustained life as a perfect man forever. R463:6

The ransom-price that Jesus gives has been progressive, and is not yet completed. R5622:3

For many -- For many lives. R280:3

It was not for his own sins that he died, it was for ours. In dying he gave himself a ransom price--a corresponding price--for the sins of the whole world. R3363:4

Mark 10:46

Went out of Jericho -- Possibly going from the old city to the newer one of the same name. R2729:2

With -- With the Lord and his apostles were a considerable number of friends, together with numerous Pharisees. R3847:6

A great number of people -- It was the Passover season, and many were journeying in the same direction with Jesus--toward Jerusalem. R5484:3, 3847:6

Blind Bartimaeus -- His persistency was the evidence of his faith and that he was of sincere heart. R3848:1, 5485:1, 2729:6

There were many blind in Palestine, yet only comparatively few received such a blessing, undoubtedly because few had the requisite faith. R3848:1
The Lord did not attempt to heal all the sick of Palestine. Bartimaeus was only one of many blind beggars by the wayside. R5485:1

Mark mentions only one, the chief subject of the lesson, but Matthew mentions a companion. R2729:3

That physical blindness is a terrible affliction none will question. But how much more serious is the mental and spiritual blindness which prevails. R3848:2

Many are blind as respects the beauties of the Bible. Some are so deeply engrossed in business or pleasure-seeking that they never lift up their eyes to the glorious beauties of nature. R5486:1

Some heathen are pictured as blind, seeking the Lord, "if haply they might feel after him and find him." (Acts 17:27) R2729:6

As Bartimaeus was not an alien, yet blind, so in spiritual Israel there are many who are not aliens from God, but are spiritually blind. R2730:1
Not a sinner, but a member of the household of faith, an Israelite, yet blind. So today, many not sinners, members of the household of faith, are mentally and spiritually blind. R2730:1

The world still lies in darkness. Only the few now get their eyes open, as did Bartimaeus. They are people of special character, willing to ignore the general sentiment of those who bid them be quiet and continue in ignorance, blindness. R5485:5

A lesson that sin brought alienation from God, and moral blindness. R2729:6
By the highway side -- Hoping to excite sympathy of the passers-by. R3847:6

Mark 10:47

He began to cry out -- Some heathen, desirous of having the light of truth, are as blind men groping, crying out to the Lord in prayer, "feeling after God, if haply they might find him." (Acts 17:27) R2729:6

Thou Son of David -- Of special significance to the Jews of that day--the great King was prefigured by Solomon, David's son. R5484:6
The long-promised King of David's line, the Messiah. PD65/77; C257; E130, 133; SM210:2

Have mercy on me -- Our Lord paid no attention at first, but passed on. R2729:3

Mark 10:48

Many charged him -- Those in the forefront of Jesus' company rebuked him, intimating that the great Teacher should not be interrupted by a wayside beggar. R3847:6, 2729:3

Hold his peace -- When the spiritually blinded cry for help there are sure to be some even amongst the Lord's friends to rebuke them instead of to encourage. R2730:4

The thought is suggested that many are more worthy to have the Master's attention, that we are too insignificant, too sinful, for him to recognize. R3848:3

He cried the more -- An evidence of his faith, the persistency which belongs to true faith. R3848:1

He would not listen to those who sought to still his voice and turn aside his faith. R5485:1

He longed for sight, and had faith to believe that the great Messiah might be prevailed upon to rescue him from darkness. R2729:3

Son of David -- As High Priest, Jesus was prefigured by Aaron; as Law-giver, by Moses; and as King, by Solomon, David's son. R5484:6

Mark 10:49

Jesus stood still -- He had already passed Bartimaeus by, not offering to heal him. His eyesight was restored because of his faith, because he cried out. R5485:1

And commanded him -- He did not shout for him to come, but commanded, "Let him be brought." R3847:6

To be called -- Giving those about him an opportunity to share in the work of blessing. R2729:3

They call -- The people first of all bade Bartimaeus keep quiet; but when Jesus called him, they joined in giving words of encouragement and helping the blind man to the Savior. So we should encourage the blind, the superstitious, to come to the Savior. R5486:1

Thus greater attention was brought to the whole miracle and to the divine power which it manifested. R2729:3

Be of good comfort -- Those who had, a moment before, upbraided the blind man for his temerity in expecting a blessing from the Messiah, now gladly bore the message of hope to him. R2729:3

Generally they are without encouragement until they realize their need and cry to the Lord. These now find assistance from those who delight to assist them. R3848:4

He calleth thee -- He bade the blind man to come to him, to show his faith, and thus be a more important lesson to the multitude. R5484:3

It is not within our power to give sight to the spiritually blind. All we can do is let the blind ones know that Jesus of Nazareth passeth by. R2730:4

Mark 10:50

Casting away his garment -- In his haste to respond. R3848:1, 2729:5

Whoever would come to Jesus should cast away everything found to be a hindrance. R2729:6

Mark 10:51

What wilt thou -- Jesus did not inquire respecting his responsibility for his condition. It was sufficient that he realized that he was blind. R2730:2

Many today when asked this question request riches, honors of men, or temporal blessings, instead of spiritual sight. R3848:4

Lord -- The word "lord" here is "rabboni," the most reverential term of four titles used amongst the Jews at that time--rab, rabbi, rabban, rabboni. R2729:6; E71, 77 I might receive my sight -- The vast majority are unlike Bartimaeus. They do not realize their condition--"and knowest not that thou art wretched and miserable and poor and blind and naked." (Rev. 3:17) R2730:2

Those who respond such do receive enlightenment from the Lord, an enlightenment by which they can see him who is the Way, the Truth and the Life. R3848:4

Thy faith -- Few of the many blind men in Palestine received such a blessing, because few had the requisite faith. R3848:1

Received his sight -- All the miracles Jesus performed were foreshadows of the greater work which is to be accomplished by the establishment of his Millennial kingdom in due time. R5484:1

Illustrating some at the present time who are brought to the Lord and graciously receive the opening of the eyes of their understanding. R3848:3

Only the great Physician is able to open the eyes of understanding. R2730:4

Only the few now get their eyes open, as did Bartimaeus, those who hunger and thirst after righteousness. R5485:5

During the Millennial period all blinded eyes will be opened to the goodness, greatness, love and power of God. R5485:6

Followed Jesus -- A sincere heart is demonstrated by the fact that, after he had received his sight, he followed the Lord, glorifying God. R3848:1

Transformed sinners should thenceforth follow Jesus as his disciples, seeking to walk in his steps. R2730:1

We were all more or less blinded by the Adversary; and as we get free from his blinding influence, our hearts rejoice in the favor of him who has brought us out of darkness into marvelous light. R5485:4

Mark 11

Mark 11:1

And when they came -- Sunday--the first day of our Lord's last week.

R3852:2, 5494:3

Monday forenoon, 10th Nisan. R4212:2*

Nigh to Jerusalem -- About two miles distant. R5494:6

He sendeth forth -- Instead of withdrawing, he was now taking the active part--sending for the colt, preparing for the triumphal ride to the capital of the nation as its King. R5494:6

Mark 11:2

A colt -- It has been the custom of the kings of Israel to ride to their coronation upon an ass. R5494:6

The Lord thus fulfilled the prophecy of Zech. 9:9. R1795:1, 4122:3

Mark 11:3

Send him hither -- Jesus instructed them to say that the colt would be returned after the Master had used it. R5494:3

Mark 11:7

Cast their garments -- In lieu of a saddle. R5495:1

He sat upon him -- Offering himself as the antitypical Passover Lamb on the tenth day of the first month. F461

This was the first time Jesus had formally put himself forward. On previous occasions, when they sought to make him a King, he had withdrawn himself. R5494:6

A formal matter, fulfilling the prophecy and leaving the nation of Israel without excuse. R5494:6

The triumphal entry of Jesus on the ass was only typical. The antitype will be glorious, beyond the veil. R5495:5

Mark 11:8

Spread their garments -- As a mark of respect and honor, waiting until the little animal had passed over them, and then running on before and placing them again. R5495:2

Mark 11:9

They that followed -- In contrast to triumphal entries of great conquerors, Jesus, the Prince of Peace, followed by an army of saints, walking in his footsteps, presents a beautiful picture--even to the worldly. These victors conquer by dying. R5495:4

Cried, saying, Hosanna -- The people were familiar with the prophecy relating to Messiah's coming, which declared "Shout, O daughter of Jerusalem." (Zech. 9:9) R5495:1

Jesus knew the masses would give him a royal welcome, and swayed by false teachers, they would a few days later cry, Crucify him! R1795:2

Mark 11:10

Blessed be the kingdom -- Jesus presented himself as their King. B239

"He is Lord of lords and King of kings." (Rev. 17:14) B238

Now their King, their strong tower, had come, but so meek and lowly that they in their pride of heart could not recognize him. B225

Jesus knew the prophecy, that he would be despised and rejected. Therefore the journey meant something very different to Jesus from what it signified to the disciples and multitudes. R5495:1

Prefigured the coming of Christ as King in 1878 AD, the end of this Gospel age, which is the antitype of the Jewish age, the two being exact parallels in both time and circumstances. R1795:2; C233

"Even today do I declare that I will render double unto thee." (Zech. 9:12) B225

This exercise of kingly power and authority in the spring of AD 33 typified the raising of the sleeping saints in AD 1878. C233, 234

Hosanna in the highest -- One party crying "Hosanna to the Son of David! Blessed is the King of Israel!" and the other responding, "Hosanna in the highest!" R5495:1

Mark 11:11

Jesus entered into Jerusalem -- This action, together with its chronological order, was performed as a part of that great system of types which foreshadowed good things to come. R1795:2

Unto Bethany -- Jesus lodged at Bethany, Monday night, 11th Nisan. R4212:2*

Mark 11:12

And on the morrow -- Monday he drove out the money-changers, etc. R3852:2
Cursing the fig tree and cleansing the Temple on Tuesday forenoon, Nisan 11th. R4212:2*

Mark 11:13

Seeing a fig tree -- Representing the Jewish nation. R5503:2, 5920:5, 4788:4; D604

"Learn a parable of the fig tree." (Mark 13:28) R5920:6

Having leaves -- The good show of leaves was deceptive. R5503:1

The fig tree puts forth its fruit before its leaves appear; and when the leaves appear, the fruit is ripe. R384:2

Nothing but leaves -- Or, professions and appearance of faithfulness; but, when searched in their harvest time, were found lacking fruit--cursed for the age. R384:2

God sent his Son seeking fruit from the Jewish nation, but he found none as a nation, but only a few individuals. R5920:5, 4788:4

Was not yet -- More properly, it would read, "for the time of the figs was not over," was not past. It would be strange for Jesus to come before the proper time to look for figs. R4788:2

The time for harvesting figs was not yet fully come. R384:2

The time for the Jews to bear fruit was not then. R127:2*

The time when they will bear fruit is after the fullness of the Gentiles has come in. (Rom. 11:25-27) R127:2*

Mark 11:14

No man eat fruit of thee hereafter -- The blight upon the tree because of its unfruitfulness corresponded exactly to the blight pronounced the day before upon the Jewish nation because of its unfruitfulness. R5503:2 That Christ used the fig tree to represent the destruction of the Jewish nation seems evident. R127:1*

"O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, which killest the prophets, and stonest them that are sent unto thee; how often would I have gathered thy children together, as a hen doth gather her brood under her wings, and ye would not; Behold your house is left unto you desolate." (Luke 13:34, 35) R4788:4

Ever since that time the Jews have been desolate and blighted as a nation. R5920:6

For ever -- To the end of the aion, or age. R5503:1, 4788:2

Or, to a completion. R5503:1

During the Gospel age, as a nation, they have borne no fruit, but when the Bride is taken out from the Gentiles, they will receive favor. (Acts 15:14, 16) R127:3*

But there is a promise that this blighted fig tree shall again become a living tree--a living nation--after their "double" of disfavor has been fulfilled. R5920:6

"When ye shall see the fig tree putting forth leaves, then know that summer is nigh." (Matt. 24:32) One of the signs of a new dispensation would be the sprouting, or indication of life amongst the Jews. R5503:2, 4788:5, 384:2, 127:4*

Mark 11:15

They come to Jerusalem -- Josephus tells us that sometimes the population of Jerusalem on such an occasion was swelled to the number of two millions. R4122:6

Into the temple -- Not in the Temple proper, but in its outer courts, the whole of which was designated the Temple, or house of God. R4123:1
A type of the glorious Temple of perfection; hence, all business done in it was profanation, spoiling the beautiful perfection of the type. R5504:4
Typical of the true Temple, the Church of the living God. R3851:5
The consecrated or Temple class stands related to the nominal church, as a whole, as the literal Temple stood related to the holy city Jerusalem, as a whole. B239

It is assumed, we believe without sufficient authority, that there were two cleansings. R4122:3, 2332:1

Began to cast out -- Such authority belonged to any Jew under the Law. R3851:4, 5503:5

The use of force in cleansing the Temple followed the assertion of regal authority. R2332:1, 4122:3

A further manifestation of his consciousness of his power with the common people. R3852:6

He had visited the Temple time and again as a Jew, and had witnessed the same scenes, but had not interfered--a proof that the occurrence took place but once. R4123:2

Primarily, it had to do with that time; secondarily, it was typical of a cleansing of the antitypical Temple due, we believe, in this our day. R5503:4

As a typical act, indicating that, in the end of this age, judgment begins with the professed house of God (1 Pet. 4:17), and his great displeasure against those who make merchandise of the truth. R1795:5

Typifying the cleansing of the consecrated Temple class since 1878, in which every selfish, carnal thought, and all worldliness must be cast out, that the Temple may be clean, God's dwelling place. B239; R3851:5, 4123:3, 1795:2

Overthrew the tables -- Under our laws, it would be quite improper to enter any church in order to interfere with any of the rights of conscience or procedures sanctioned by the congregation owning the edifice. R5503:4

Under the Jewish Law it was different. Every Jew was privileged to enforce the divine Law in respect to blasphemy or any sacrilege. R5503:5, 4123:2

Typically indicates that in the end of this age judgment begins with the professed house of God, those who make merchandise of the truth. R1795:5, 3851:6

The moneychangers -- Typifying those in the nominal temple who rob the people by accepting salaries for that which is not food. R3851:6

A certain Temple tax must be paid in a certain kind of money, called the "shekel of the sanctuary." The last coinage of these was in BC 140, hence they were quite scarce in our Lord's day and sold at a premium. R4122:6
Not only visitors from foreign lands needed to purchase shekels of the sanctuary, but also the home folk. R4122:6

Here money-sharks found opportunity for meeting people in distress, who came to the Temple for prayer. Jesus referred to them as "those who rob widows." (Matt. 23:14) R5503:5, 4123:1

Many in the nominal temple today make merchandise of their privileges, opportunities and knowledge. Roman Catholics are led to believe they can present nothing acceptable to God except as they receive it through their priesthood. R4123:3

The collection plate is passed with regularity, and frequently strong appeals are made for money. R4123:4

The seats of them -- He did not set at liberty the doves, which could not easily have been recovered, but permitted their owners to take them away. R4123:2

That sold doves -- The multitudes of strangers from afar rarely brought with them the doves, pigeons or lambs, etc., which they presented in sacrifice. R4122:6

The antitypical cleansing now in progress mainly affects those who make merchandise of holy things. R3851:6

Mark 11:16

Would not suffer -- All this of double significance: (1) Primarily, it had to do with that time, (2) Secondarily, a cleansing of the antitypical Temple due in this our day. R5503:4

Mark 11:17

Is it not written -- Every Jew was privileged to enforce the divine Law in respect to blasphemy or any sacrilege. R5503:4

My house -- In which there were three courts --one for the Jews, one for Jewish women and an outer court where believing Gentiles might worship. These courts represent different degrees of approach to God's favor. R5504:1

"Know ye not that your body is the temple of the holy Spirit?" (1 Cor. 6:19) See also 1 Cor. 3:17; Eph. 2:21; 1 Pet. 2:5. R5504:1

The antitypical Temple may be viewed from four different standpoints. R5504:2

Of all nations -- The outer Court of the Gentiles, was provided to the intent that all nationalities might there congregate for worship. It was probably little used, as few Gentiles had become sincere converts to Judaism. R4123:1

In the antitypical Temple all mankind, during the Millennium, will be privileged to draw near to God. R5504:2

The house of prayer -- Thus Peter and John went up to the Temple to pray. (Acts 3:1) It was the one place of all others in the world where the soul might feel that it could draw especially near to God. R5503:6

The channel of prayer, the way of approach of mankind to draw near to God for forgiveness of sins and for the reception of all the blessings and mercies which God has provided in Christ for whosoever will. R5504:2

Ye have made it -- Thus placing the responsibility upon the scribes and Pharisees. R5503:5

A den of thieves -- The loan-sharks infested the Temple, pretended sympathy for those in trouble, and loaned money on exacting terms which finally devoured the property of the widow and the orphan in a legal manner. R5503:6

Religion is still used as a cloak to cover selfishness. R5503:6

The professed Christian ministers, teachers, elders, that are Evolutionists, rob God and take the money of the people deceptively. R3852:1

Mark 11:18

They feared him -- The truth is being proclaimed so often to the offense of the scribes and Pharisees of today. R2746:6, 1795:5

Mark 11:19

And when even was come -- Monday. R3852:2

Tuesday night, 12th Nisan. R4212:2*

Mark 11:20

And in the morning -- Tuesday, the last day of his public teaching.

R3852:2

Wednesday forenoon, 12th Nisan. R4212:2*

Mark 11:21

The fig tree -- A type of the Jewish nation, to whom Jesus came when it was proper to expect fruitage. R4788:4, 5920:5

Cursedst -- Greek, kataraoimai, signifying condemnation--to speak against, to speak evil of, to injure. Jesus injured the tree, he made a declaration unfavorable to its future development. R2443:3, 701:5

It signifies the very opposite of blessing; it signifies a curse in the sense usually understood in the English. Webster defines cursed thus: Deserving a curse; execrable, hateful, detestable; abominable. R701:5
Pronounced a blight. R5920:2

Is withered away -- Because the Jewish nation had not brought forth the proper fruits. R5920:6

All the sap (spiritually) had gone out of it. R5577:5

Similarly, in the end of this age we may expect the Church will suffer violence, and anarchy set in. R5577:5

But there is a promise that this blighted Jewish fig tree shall live again--become a nation. R5920:6

It was not so important that divine displeasure be visited on an unintelligent tree, but it was important that the disciples get the needed lesson and that the disciples see that the Lord's power could and would be exercised on their behalf. R5920:5

Mark 11:22

Have faith in God -- It was necessary that the disciples be convinced by Jesus' miraculous works that he was sent of God, before they developed faith. R5920:3

Jesus ascribed always the honor to the Father. R5920:2

He would direct the minds of the disciples to the things that he did as being always of God--thus differentiating his power from that of Satan. R5920:2

Mark 11:23

Unto this mountain -- The kingdom of the Evil One. R2522:4

Symbol of difficulties and obstructions in our Christian course. R1967:5

Be thou removed -- God gave no such command; hence, faith would have no basis for operation. God does not command foolish or unnecessary changes. R5446:4; Q774:2

By their "faith in God" (verse 22) it was not to them an incredible thing that God should raise the dead. R875:3*

Cast into the sea -- Sea and waves symbolize the restless masses of humanity. D596 But shall believe -- Have absolute confidence in the Word of God. R5446:4

He shall have -- If they should receive a command from God to move a mountain, and should give the command with faith, the results would follow. R5446:4

Mark 11:24

What things soever ye desire -- God's children will desire only such things as he has promised in his Word. R2005:4, 436:6*

But we are cautioned to ask only for such things as the Father has expressed a willingness to grant. Therefore the child of God must be a close student of his Father's Word. R2005:4

See that those desires are in accord with the Spirit and Word of God, so that ye may have a foundation to "believe that ye (are entitled to) receive them, and ye shall have them." R436:6*

That ye receive -- That ye shall receive. R2005:4

Ye shall have them -- We should look for answers in natural rather than supernatural channels. R2006:1

Mark 11:25

Praying, forgive -- The very essence of Christian principle is love, sympathy, forgiveness of the faults of others. We may not forgive in the absolute sense until our forgiveness is asked, yet we should be always in a forgiving attitude. R2253:3, 1693:6

May forgive you -- Only the merciful shall obtain mercy. (Matt. 5:7) R2587:1

Mark 12

Mark 12:1

Began to speak -- A part of our Lord's discourse on the last day of his public ministry. R1982:2

A certain man -- Jehovah God. R1982:3, 2756:1, 1795:3

Planted a vineyard -- The Jewish nation, typifying Christendom in the harvest of the Gospel age. "For the vineyard of the Lord of hosts is the house of Israel." (Isa. 5:7) R1982:3, 2756:1, 1795:3

An hedge about it -- The divine Law, the testimony of the prophets, the special supervision and fatherly guardianship of God and the ministration of his faithful servants, all of which served to separate them from ungodly, surrounding nations, and to protect them from their influence. R1795:3

For the winefat -- Or wine press, including the vat for the reception of the juice. R1795:3

Representing Israel's advantages; the worship of the sanctuary, the leadings and teachings of Jehovah, etc. R1795:6

Built a tower -- A watch tower, for the protection of the vineyard, representing God's care over it in setting watchmen, the prophets and others, upon the towers of Zion. (Ezek. 3:17; Isa. 62:6; Jer. 6:17) R1795:6

Let it out -- From the time of the exodus to the coming of Messiah--nearly 19 centuries. R1982:3

To husbandmen -- The priests and leaders of the people. R1795:6, 1982:3
The Pharisees and Doctors of the Law, whose duty it was to care for the vineyard. R2756:1, 1795:6

The divinely constituted leaders of the nation from the time of the exodus to the time of the coming of Messiah. R1982:3

Mark 12:2

At the season -- At such times as it was proper to expect some fruit.

R1796:1

The appointed harvest time, in which those addressed were then living.

R1795:6

A servant -- A prophet or teacher. R1796:1

His faithful prophets. R1982:5

That he might receive -- "He looked for judgment, but behold oppression; for righteousness, but behold a cry." (Isa. 5:7) R1982:3, 1795:3

From the husbandmen -- Through their influence. R1796:1

The rulers in Israel, because of their influence and power, were held responsible for the course of the nation. R1796:1

Of the fruit -- The Lord had a right to expect gratitude, love, obedience, meekness, and readiness of mind and heart to follow further leadings into new paths. R1795:6

Mark 12:3

They caught him -- Seeking honor one of another, and not God's glory.

R2756:1

Beat him -- Verses 3-5 refer to the shameful handling of the worthy servants of the Lord. R1796:1, 1982:5

Mark 12:5

Beating some, and killing some -- See Jer. 37:13-21; 1 Kings 18:13; 22:24-27; 2 Kings 6:31; 2 Chron. 24:20, 21; 36:16; Acts 7:52; Heb. 11:35-38. R1796:1

Mark 12:6

One son -- The Lord Jesus. R1796:1, 1982:5

Will reverence my son -- Though God knew it would be otherwise, it is so expressed to show the reasonableness of such expectation. R1796:1

Mark 12:7

Those husbandmen -- The chief priests and rulers. R1796:1

The scribes and Pharisees who sat in Moses' seat. R2755:6

Among themselves -- They plotted privately and deceitfully. R1796:1

This is the heir -- This man claims to be the King, the Messiah of the Jews. R1796:1

Let us kill him -- Crucifying our Lord. R1796:3 Shall be ours -- We shall retain our prestige and power. R1796:2
Their selfish ambition to retain their stewardship. R1982:5, 1796:2
They did not realize that the course they were taking was the very one which would lead to the destruction of that typical kingdom of God. R5505:3

Killed him -- A prophecy of the murderous culmination of the wicked purposes even then filling their hearts. R1796:4

Mark 12:9

Destroy the husbandmen -- Cast the chief priests and rulers out of their offices. R1796:4, 1982:6

The overthrow of the Jewish system, or polity. R2756:1

Unto others -- The establishment of a new order of things through other servants--our Lord Jesus and his apostles, who did not seek honors to themselves, but sought the glory of God and the welfare of his vineyard.

Teachers of the Gospel. R2756:1, 5505:4, 4678:5, 1982:6

The Gentiles. R1796:4

Similarly, those in high positions as representatives of God today, who misuse their office and symbolically "murder" the Lord's people, will be dealt with. R4678:6

Mark 12:10

The stone -- "The stone which the builders refused is become the headstone of the corner" (Psa. 118:22)--the top-stone of a pyramid, the chief corner stone. R1982:6, 5505:6

The top-stone, Christ Jesus, the head-stone of God's building, pattern for the whole, stone of stumbling and rock of offence. C329; R5505:6

The result of the stumbling of the nominal Gospel church over this stone will be the same as in the Jewish church (Isa. 8:14); they will be broken. R1983:4

With this example, how careful should every Christian be. R1983:4

Which the builders rejected -- This stone might be rejected by them then, but that would not hinder its exaltation in God's due time as the chief stone in the glorious temple of God. R1982:6

Is become -- Referring to his triumph in the resurrection and his future glory. R1796:4

Exaltation as the chief stone in the glorious spiritual Temple of God. R1982:6

Mark 12:12

Against them -- The Jews. R1795:3

So aptly did it represent their state of heart that its only effect was to rouse them to renewed energy to fulfil the final prediction of the parable. (verse 13) R1795:3

Mark 12:13

They send unto him -- On the last day of our Lord's public ministry. R3852:2, 1756:6

Of the Pharisees -- Who privately taught that the Jews as the people of God should never pay taxes to other rulers. R3852:6

And -- The counsellors were of different factions, quite opposed to each other, but drawn together by mutual interest in their opposition to Jesus. R2756:1

Thus it ever is with error; the most contrary theorists are ready to cooperate with each other in opposition to the truth. R2756:2

Of the Herodians -- Not Jews at all, but, like Herod, Ishmaelites--sons of Abraham through Hagar; as the Jews were his sons through Sarah. They were not religious, but, in a considerable measure, politicians. R2756:2
Who stood firmly, boldly and publicly for the suzerainty of the Roman Empire, claiming that it was to the advantage of the people of Israel to be under Roman power, and that the paying of tribute was right and proper. R3853:1

To catch him -- If possible to get him to commit himself to some treasonable statement, on account of which they could bring him before Pilate as an enemy of the Roman empire, and thus have him legally executed in a manner which the people could not resist. R3852:6

The Jew was aroused to renewed energy to fill up the iniquitous measure of their guilty fathers and so fulfill the final prediction of the parable. R1795:3

When they thought to entrap him in his words, he entrapped them in their words. But he reviled not. R4802:6 The most contrary theorists are ready to cooperate with each other in opposition to the truth. R2756:2

In his words -- To get him to either declare with the Herodians that the tax was right and thus break his influence with the people, or to publicly side with the Pharisees, denounce the tax, and thus be open to the charge of treason. R3853:1

Feeling he would either lay himself open to the charge of teaching sedition, and therefore liable to arrest as an opponent of Herod and Caesar; or, by approving the taxes, they esteemed he would alienate from himself many of the Jews who were now regarding him favorably. R2756:2, 3853:1; Q273:6

Thou art true -- Subtly stated to compel Jesus to give a straightforward answer which they believed would convict him of treason. R3853:1
All of their complimentary remarks stood to his credit in the minds of the common people. Q274:1

Knowing their hypocrisy -- Veiling their base designs under guise of speaking for the Truth. Q274:1

Our Lord understood the situation in an instant. R3853:2

Why tempt ye -- Why do you try to entrap me? Look at the motives in your own hearts and judge of how much sincerity or falsity is there. R3853:2

Thus, in a word, he showed that he perceived the real animus of their question. R2756:3

Me -- It was utter folly for imperfect men to seek to entrap the perfect one. R104:2

A penny -- Literally, the census coin, in which the tax was to be paid; a denarius, the usual wage for the day laborer, corresponding in value to 17 of our cents. Q274:1; R3853:2, 2758:3

Mark 12:17

Render to Caesar -- Not an evasion of the question, it was an answer in the fullest sense. R3853:3, 2756:3

To the extent there is no conflict with the commands of our Over-Lord. R5929:2; A266

That are Caesar's -- "Tribute to whom tribute is due." (Rom. 13:7)
R1555:5; A266

To the disciples this would imply that the affairs of the world may be safely left with the world, under the Lord's supervision, for he is able to make even the wrath of men to praise him. R3853:3

If Caesar gives us liberty to vote, it is not necessary that we should use that liberty; but should he command us to vote, it would be proper for us to comply and use our best judgment. R3853:4; A266

God's people are to be subject to the powers that be, and to wait for God's kingdom, rather than to attempt opposition, insurrection, conflict with the laws of earthly authorities. R2756:3

And to God -- "What shall I render unto the Lord for all his benefits to me? I will take the cup of salvation and call upon the name of the Lord." (Psa. 116:12, 13) R3853:5

Things that are God's -- A lesson to the Lord's people to keep religious affairs separate and distinct from worldly politics. R2756:3

As originally created, man bore God's image stamped upon his very nature. The ones addressed should have also remembered that God's superscription was upon them, that he had accepted them as his people--Israel. R2756:3 The heart, the life, the affections, belong to God, and should be rendered to him. R2756:4 It is but a reasonable service that we should present to the Lord the little all that we possess in this present life. R3853:5 They marvelled -- They were put to silence, they could take no exceptions to such an answer. R2756:4

Mark 12:18

Come unto him -- No doubt, boastfully. R2756:4
The Sadducees -- A class of Jews, well educated, intellectual, but utterly lacking in any faith respecting a future life. Whether or not they believed in a God we are not informed. R3854:1
The Agnostics or Rationalists of that time. R2756:4
No resurrection -- Greek: anastasis, is without the Greek article, showing no emphasis, indicating no special peculiarity. With the article, the first or special resurrection is meant. R1512:1
They asked him -- To entrap him. R3853:6

Mark 12:19

Moses wrote -- In Deut. 25:2-10. R3854:1
Raise up seed -- The object of that law seemingly was to prevent the obliteration of any family. R3854:1

Mark 12:20

Now there were -- The question was probably a suppositious one, though stated as a fact. R3854:1

Mark 12:23

In the resurrection -- Greek, anastasis, "raising up," all the way up to the divine likeness represented and lost in Adam. R1510:4

Mark 12:24

Jesus answering -- Our Lord did not attempt a particular answer to their question, knowing that they were not sincere and that it was not yet time to give an explanation of many of the details respecting the resurrection. R3854:2
Do ye not therefore err -- The difficulty was with them, and not with the divine plan. R2756:5

They had thought to make the teaching of Jesus concerning resurrection look ridiculous. R5059:3, 3854:1

Power of God -- Who is abundantly able to arrange for all the exigencies which will arise in the perfecting of his own gracious plans and promises. R2756:5, 3854:2

Mark 12:25

When they shall rise -- Without designating the resurrection of the Church or the resurrection of the world, stating the matter broadly in such a way as to apply to both. R3854:2

They neither marry -- The restored human family will, during the period of restitution, lose their sexual distinctions, and at the end of the thousand years be all of them in perfection, like Adam was before Eve was taken from his side. R3854:3; T101

Are as the angels -- As the angels do not die, neither will the perfected human beings die. R3461:6

Mark 12:26

As touching the dead -- It is the dead who need a resurrection. Note our Lord does not say "as touching the living that they shall arise." R3854:5

That they rise -- They are to be raised, they are not extinct. E352; R3854:4

In the book of Moses -- To show that there were various features of the Old Testament which indirectly taught the resurrection, without mentioning it in so many words. R3854:4, 2756:5

God of Abraham...Isaac...Jacob -- They had reasoned the Old Testament said little about resurrection. Jesus showed them that the Scriptures indirectly taught the resurrection without mentioning it in so many words. R3854:4, 5059:6, 2796:4; CR374:2

If they were dead, extinct, without hope of a resurrection, God would never speak of them in this manner. R2796:4, 2756:5

God's grounds for speaking of humanity as yet having a hope of life beyond the grave rests not upon any change of the sentence, but upon a predetermined plan to provide a Savior. R2198:1

Of the dead -- The extinct, for whom no future is designed. R2198:1, 5059:6; CR374:2

Not the God of a dead camel, etc., because he had made no provision for the resurrection of camels, etc.; but his provision for the resurrection of the human dead constitutes a full explanation of his statement here--that he is still the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. R3854:4

Of the living -- From God's standpoint they only sleep. E353; R5059:6

One of the scribes -- A man of more than average education. R5521:2

Asked him -- Quite probably in all sincerity, and not to entrap Jesus.
R5521:2

Which is the first -- Quite a common question among the Jews. R3861:2
A theological question much discussed amongst the Jewish rabbis; a question upon which they were very generally divided. R2756:5

Of all -- Doubtless referring to the Decalogue. R5521:3

Mark 12:29

Jesus answered -- With a quotation from the Old Testament. (Deut. 6:4, 5) He added nothing, because nothing could be added. R5521:3, 2756:6
Quoting from the summary of the Ten Commandments. R3861:2

Hear, O Israel -- This declaration which the Jews called "The Shama" was considered sacred. Therefore, there could be no objection to our Lord's answer. R2756:6

Not merely the "ten tribes," but "all Israel." R1341:1; C229

God is one Lord -- And not three Gods. The Son of God is not the Father, but the Son, who "proceeded forth from the Father," who was the beginning of the creation of God. (John 8:42; Rev. 3:14) R3861:5

Trinitarians and Unitarians seem to have divided the truth between them so that neither one possesses it in the Scriptural sense. R3861:3

Mark 12:30

Thou shalt love the Lord -- Love is the principal thing. God is love.
R5521:3, 5370:1

"Love is the fulfilling of the law" (Rom. 13:10) Only in proportion as love is in the heart can this divine law be fulfilled by any. R2757:1

All comprehensive: The Lord must be first with us in every sense of the word. R3861:6

Will be required of mankind, and all those whom God accept's as members of The Christ. R4597:1

This fullness of love for the Father represents, not the beginning of the consecrated Christian's condition, but its fullness, its completeness.
R3862:1

The mark of character, which is that which the law of God places as the smallest condition which would be acceptable to him--the mark of perfect love. Q274:3

The sentiment of personal responsibility to God maintained in all of Israel's laws, the spirit of which is today recognized as the very best statement of human obligation. OV10:1

Thirty centuries have failed to improve upon this statement. OV10:1

The terms of the New Covenant are the perfect obedience to God as represented in this Law. R4597:1

The reason why the Jews could not keep the Law was that they did not have perfect love in their hearts. R2757:1

Failure to keep this law will bring the time of trouble. A309

The writings of Confucius, that one should not do to others what he would not have others do to him, is merely a negative statement, while this is a positive one. R5521:6

Thy God -- Jehovah. E40

First reverence--later love. We cannot love God until we have become acquainted with him and ascertained the lovable qualities represented in him. R3862:1

With all thy heart -- By perfect obedience to this Law even unto death, our Lord fulfilled the Law Covenant, redeemed mankind, and became heir of the Abrahamic promise. B84, 85

This means the full consecration of time, talent, influence, everything. R3862:1

Our affections must all reverence and love him. R3861:6

Heart conversion results from the knowledge of God and the love for him. R3735:4

The Lord thus epitomized the Ten Commandments, which are in themselves a brief epitome of the whole Law. A45; HG533:3

Any one who kept this Law would not be serving self. R5666:3

Such love does not wait for commands but will appeal for service. F124

Ultimately this Law must govern all of God's intelligent creatures who will have life. A136

With all thy soul -- Our being, our bodies, must all be controlled by the love of God. R3861:6

You cannot do more than that, except as Jesus did, by laying down that life. Q365:2

With all thy mind -- Our minds must recognize, reverence and love the Lord. R3862:1

With all thy strength -- Our strength of mind or body must recognize him as worthy of every loving service we can render. R3862:1

The first commandment -- The confession of faith which Abraham Lincoln considered should be the sole qualification for church membership--the Savior's condensed statement of both Law and Gospel. HG718:6

Mark 12:31

And the second -- He divided the Law into two parts, as on the two tables of stone; the one part relating to God and man's obligations to his Creator; and the second part relating to man's responsibilities toward his fellow-man. R2756:6

Second only to the previous statement of the love to God. R3862:4

Namely this -- Quoting from Lev. 19:18. R3862:4

Love thy neighbour -- The government instituted by Moses was a model of fairness and justice between brethren, and also the stranger and foreigner. OV10:1

"If any man say, I love God, and hateth his brother, he is a liar; for he that loveth not his brother whom he hath seen, how can he love God, whom he hath not seen?" R3862:4

As thyself -- Not better than thyself. Our Lord's self-sacrifice in our behalf went beyond this requirement. R3804:6

These two parts were a synoptical statement of the entire Law of God. R5755:3

The keeping of these two commends would touch upon, cover and include every item of the divine Law. R3862:4

Mark 12:34

Not far from the kingdom -- Very near to the point where he might become one of his disciples. R5522:1

One of sincere and honest heart--the kind whom the Lord would be pleased to have enter the kingdom class. R3862:6, 5522:2

Durst ask him -- Fearing further questioning would show their deficiencies and make him more prominent. R3862:6

Mark 12:35

How say the scribes -- Not endeavoring to entrap them as they endeavored to do with him; but because there is no better method of presenting a truth strikingly than through a wisely directed question. R2757:3

The son of David -- The long-promised King of David's line, the Messiah. PD65/77; C257; E130, 133; SM210:2

Mark 12:36

By the Holy Ghost -- By inspiration. E129

The LORD -- Jehovah. E129

Said to my Lord -- Greek: Adon; master, ruler. E129, 49

The resurrected Messiah. E136

Sit thou -- Against the trinitarian view of several persons in divine power, "equal in power and glory." R2757:5

On my right hand -- Position of power, authority, rulership. A92

Associated with me in the kingdom, highest in my favor. R2757:5

Mark 12:37

Callesh him Lord -- In the days of his flesh he was the Son of David, but in his glorification he is David's Lord in that David will receive through him the blessings of participation in the Messianic kingdom. Q365:4
The matter thoroughly upheld our Lord's claim that Messiah must have a divine origin, divine authority, and be backed by divine power in whatever he would do. R2757:5

Is he then his son? -- The father of Messiah in the flesh will thus become the son of the Messiah of glory. R365:4

The common people -- To whom especially the message was sent during the last half of the 70th week of favor. C170

Publicans and sinners. R2414:2

Who knew not the Law, and had not heretofore heard the invitation. R342:6

The publicans and harlots were not made subject of special missionary efforts. When these classes came to his ministry, manifested interest and showed signs of repentance and reformation, he received them cordially. R2414:2

The powers of darkness are greatest in the more influential and the better educated. SM241:1

Heard him gladly -- And insisted on his recognition as King. C170

Because the Master taught plainly, not employing the questionable course of putting special meanings on terms in common use, as do the Christian Scientists. HG704:5*

Mark 12:38

Beware -- If any find in themselves the enumerated characteristics, he should flee from the sin as he would from a contagious disease. R3863:4
We are not necessarily to reverence and follow Doctors of Divinity, but are to be discriminating in regard to the respect we have for them and their teachings. R3863:4

Of the scribes -- Doctors of the Law--in our own times, Doctors of Divinity. R3863:3

Our Lord did not say that all of the scribes, all of the learned Doctors of the Law, had the disreputable qualities he reprov'd. R3863:3

The more one knows, the more of a scribe he is, the greater will be his condemnation if the characteristics here set forth by our Lord are his. R3863:5

In long clothing -- Long robes of profession. R3863:4

If one finds himself greatly influenced by the opinion of others respecting his clothing, let him beware. R3863:5

Love salutations -- If one finds in himself a self-seeking, a selfish disposition to grasp the best for himself on all occasions, and loves public praise and recognition, titles, etc., let him beware. R3863:5

In the marketplaces -- Greek, agora, root of agorazo, to redeem. E429

Mark 12:40

Devour widows' houses -- Covetousness, greed, love of money led them to disregard dishonestly the rights of others. R5389:3

Taking advantage of technicalities of law to take possession of a poor widow's substance. R5338:6, 5389:3, 4795:2

Buying cheaply at forced sale. R3316:2

The sin of selfishness, avarice, indicates a lack of the Spirit of the Lord. R4795:2

Mark 12:41

People cast money -- Apparently with willing hearts. R5522:4

Mark 12:42

A certain poor widow -- She may have become a disciple. It is of just such self-sacrificing material that the Lord makes disciples. R5522:5

She threw in -- Not in an ostentatious manner for the coins were too small to boast about. R5522:4

The Lord knew that the woman was giving money to an institution which was repudiating him and which shortly would be destroyed because of being unworthy to continue. R5522:5

Two mites -- The smallest copper coins in circulation--each worth about one-eighth of a cent. R5522:4

However small our talents, however few or limited our opportunities of service, our offerings are not despised, but are credited proportionately to the real spirit of sacrifice prompting them. R3863:6

The Lord in making his estimate will take knowledge of the spirit which actuated us, rather than of the results secured by our efforts; so that of some small talent it may be said, as it was said of the poor widow who casts in the two mites into the treasury--that the smaller gift was more appreciated by the Lord than some of the larger ones. R3166:3

The very small affairs of our lives, the very small sacrifices, the very small self-denials, will be great in the Master's sight if they denote, love, devotion and self-sacrifice. R5522:5

Mark 12:43

He called unto him -- We assume Jesus, by divine power, knew the woman, her circumstances and the amount of her gift. R5522:4

I say unto you -- This shows the Lord's appreciation of sacrifices and services. R5522:4

Cast more in -- Her gift was greater in God's sight because she had given that which would cause self-denial. R3863:5

If our gifts to his service be actually small, they are accepted in proportion to what we have, in proportion to what the gifts cost us in the way of self-denials. R1594:4

The very small sacrifices, self-denials, in the Master's sight will be great, if they denote love to the Lord and his cause. R5522:5, 3863:6

Mark 12:44

Of their abundance -- The loss of which they perhaps would not seriously feel. R5522:4, 3863:5

Cast in -- Whoever loves another will seek to serve him and be willing to render service at an expense that would be proportionate to his love. R3863:6

All that she had -- Our gifts are accepted in proportion to what we have--in proportion to the cost to us in self-denials. R1594:4; F344
Let us see to it, not only that we do with our might what our hands find to do, but also that our every sacrifice and gift to the Lord and his cause is so full of love and devotion that the Lord will surely approve it; as done from love for him and his, and not from vain glory. R3166:3
Similarly, a poor brother donated $2, saying it was the result of his walking instead of riding to daily work, and other small extras he had willingly denied himself to be able to share in the spread of the truth. R1672:

One, who gave more than half of his possession to the Lord's service and would have given more, was counselled otherwise, urged to keep enough to maintain self and family, so that he could give his time in the service of the truth. R2078:3

Even all her living -- Practically all that she had. R5522:4
The Lord did not caution her. F344

Mark 13

Mark 13:5

Take heed -- Appears four times in this chapter: lest any one deceive you (verse 5); to yourselves, what ye say and do (verse 9); to what I have told you (verse 23) and, watch and pray (verse 33). R566:1*

Mark 13:6

Saying, I am Christ -- Not the fanatics who from time to time have claimed to be Christ and have deceived but few, but the great church systems of men which have so counterfeited the genuine Messiah (Head and Body) as to partially deceive many. D580, 565

Mark 13:7

Ye shall hear of wars -- Thus briefly did our Lord summarize secular history, and teach the disciples not to expect very soon his second coming and glorious kingdom. D566

Rumours of wars -- Threats, intrigues of wars. D566

Mark 13:8

Kingdom against kingdom -- It will be the thorough transition from the reign of sin and death to the reign of righteousness and life which will cause the great time of trouble marking the closing of the Gospel age. R5399:6

And troubles -- The great time of trouble. R5399:6

Beginning of sorrows -- Primary sorrows, the secular history of the Gospel age. D566

Mark 13:9

But take heed -- Thus Jesus forewarned how we would be treated. R356:5

Deliver you up -- During that same period, the Gospel age. D566

In the synagogues -- They could teach the people there for a time, but as they shunned not to declare the whole counsel of God, they soon found little, and finally no opportunity, to teach the people in the synagogues. R986:5

Ye shall be beaten -- As the disciples of Jesus met thereafter from house to house, but, if bold for the truth, were no longer permitted in the Jewish synagogues, so we no longer meet with the nominal Gospel church, which is now so overrun with tares that the wheat cannot flourish. R356:5

Must first be published -- This witness has already been given. The word of the Lord, the Gospel of the kingdom, has been published to every nation of the earth. D568

In 1861, reports of the Bible Societies showed that the Gospel had been published in every language of earth. A91

Among all nations -- The commission given at the beginning of the age: "Go ye and teach all nations." (Matt. 28:19) C215

"This gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations." (Matt. 24:12) A91; D169, 567

Does not imply the conversion of the world. He says nothing about how the testimony will be received. This witness has already been given. A91; D169, 567, 568

Mark 13:13

Ye shall be hated -- The mob spirit, the lynching spirit, is but a less legal form of "The Holy Inquisition." Evidences multiply that the mob spirit, the Inquisition spirit, is growing. All should be on guard. PD48/97

Mark 13:14

When ye shall see -- Recognize, discern, distinguish. R710:6; B268, 271; D572, 573

Understand, recognize, identify. D572

The abomination, defilement and desolation are old; but so gross was the darkness of error during centuries past that few, if any, could see it.

D572

The abomination -- That Wicked One (2 Thes. 2:8), the Man of Sin (2 Thes. 2:3), the Mystery of Iniquity (2 Thes. 2:7), the Antichrist (1 John 4:3), the Son of Perdition (2 Thes. 2:3), the Beast (Rev. 13:1), the Little Horn (Dan. 7:8), the Papacy. B271, 277

The Papal doctrines of transubstantiation and the sacrifice of the Mass, supplemented now by theories of self-atonement by Papacy's imitators. C98, 99; D572

Whose foundation rests in the doctrine of the Mass, which substitutes human performances instead of the great sacrifice of Calvary for the cleansing away of sin. D572

In another parallelism, fleshly Israel's rejection of the true sacrifice for sins and their retention of the typical sacrifices were no longer acceptable to God, but abominations. D572

Standing -- Having stood. D573

Where it ought not -- In the holy place. (Matt. 24:15) God's holy place or true temple, the Church. D572, 573; C26

In the holy place, in the stead of the true sacrifice. D573

Let him that readeth -- Reader. D573

Understand -- Consider. D573

Take heed and not be mistaken regarding the real abomination. C26

That be in Judea -- Christendom, the system falsely styling itself Christ's kingdom, not literal Judea, as it is itself a hill country. D573

Flee -- From the influence of the abomination and from the system falsely styling itself Christ's kingdom, mountain. D573

To the mountains -- The true mountain, Christ's kingdom. D573

The Greek may with equal or greater propriety be rendered in the singular--mountain--and is so rendered in a majority of instances in the Common Version. D573

Mark 13:15

On the housetop -- Represents the most saintly of the people of God.

R5456:4

Of the church systems of Babylon. House-top saints, who have a higher life and experience and faith than merely nominal church members. D575

Not go down -- All temporizing or human reasoning will be dangerous; no time must be lost in obeying. D574

Into the house -- Represents the house of God. R5456:4

Nominal church systems. D575

Take any thing out -- Their valuables in human estimation, such as titles, dignities, respect, commendations of good and regular standing, etc. D575; R5456:4

Everything must be forsaken. R5456:4; D575

Mark 13:16

That is in the field -- In the world, outside of all human organizations. D574

Any of the Lord's people who have left the nominal church, and gone out into the world. R5456:4

Not turn back again -- Not join the nominal churches. D574

But flee to the Lord. R5456:4

Take up his garment -- Their valuables in human estimation. D575

Mark 13:17

Woe to them -- How difficult it is to flee from the nominal church system with its multitudinous machinery for false and rapid begetting, which they have learned to glory in and boast of. D576

They will fear to flee in this day; realizing that but few of their "babes" would be able or willing to join in the flight. Indeed, only the spiritual will be able to endure the ordeal. D577

The perils would seem overdrawn if applicable only to the physical sufferings of the believers who fled in the Jewish harvest; but his words are manifestly appropriate to the spiritual flight and trials of this harvest time. D574

That are with child -- There are spiritual "babes" as well as fleshly babes, and bastards as well as sons. D575

All faithful servants of Christ, all earnest laborers for souls, are such as are described in this text as being "with child." D575

With spiritual children, begotten of error instead of truth, hence spurious, not sons of God. (Heb. 12:8) D576

And to them -- Ministers, Sunday School teachers--those whose work consists in giving out "milk." D576

Them that give suck -- Includes many ministers and Sunday School teachers, whose religious work consists in giving out "milk"; not always pure, sometimes diluted with tradition and philosophy, opiates which keep their babes docile, sleepy and "good," but hinder their growth in knowledge and grace. D577

Mark 13:18

Not in the winter -- The winter-time of Babylon's trouble--the burning of the tares in a great time of trouble. D578
"The harvest is past, the summer is ended (winter has come), and we are not saved. (Jer. 8:20) D578
It is still the custom in country places to leave the burning off of refuse until the winter. D578

Mark 13:19

For in those days -- The trouble coming will be the outgrowth of selfishness, which is fast ripening. R1470:2
As a result of selfishness reaching its limit, becoming ripe and going to seed. SM266:1
Affliction, such as -- More terrible as well as more general. D540
Neither shall be -- It will never need to be repeated. R1519:4

Mark 13:20

Except that the Lord -- So great will this trouble be that without some intervening power to cut it short the entire race would eventually be exterminated. D579
Those days -- The anarchy of the world. C366
For the elect's sake -- Through or by the elect, who will intervene at the proper time. D578, 579
His kingdom, Christ and his Church, will intervene at the proper time and bring order out of earth's confusion. D579
Shortened the days -- The work of destruction will be "a short work."
(Rom. 9:28) D558, 578

Mark 13:21

And then -- That is, now. D581
Lo, here is Christ -- Displaying himself as the only representative of Christ--the Pope, the Sovereign of England, the Czar of Russia, the Synods, Conferences, and Councils. D580
Anticipating a greater deception by the increased power of unified Protestant denominations cooperating with Papacy, the "Image of the beast." (Rev. 13:15) D581

Or, lo, he is there -- In any particular place. B165

Believe him not -- Our Lord's revelation at his second presence will not be in a room, nor to a community in a wilderness or desert place, nor even to one nation, as at the first advent, but it will be a general world-wide manifestation. D583

Mark 13:22

For false Christ's -- Deceptions. R113:6

False prophets -- False teachers. R113:6

And shall shew -- Lead into confusion and error. R113:6

Signs and wonders -- Through the assistance of the fallen angels, more than even Spiritists have dreamed of. R2189:3, 4351:2, 2179:1

To seduce -- By suggesting the abandonment of the way of the cross, and cooperation in "social uplift." E115

If it were possible -- The "strong delusions" upon Christendom will not be permitted to deceive "the very elect." R3296:1, 4438:6

But so close will they be in sympathetic fellowship with the great Shepherd that they will discern his voice and not be deceived. R4438:6
To those who abide in Christ, grace, wisdom, and aid sufficient will be granted for their time of need. F192

If the Lord did not protect them by the "armor of God." (Eph. 6:11-18)
R3490:4

Even the elect -- The "very elect," those who "make their calling and election sure." (2 Pet. 1:10) F165

The "very elect" will be shielded by the Truth and its holy Spirit. R4351:2

Mark 13:24

In those days, after that tribulation -- Still in the 1260 years of Papal power, but after the brunt of the tribulation had passed. D585
The tribulation "of those days" should be clearly distinguished from the tribulation at the end of those days, in which this age and harvest will close. D583

The sun -- Symbolically, the Gospel light, the truth--and thus Christ Jesus. D590

Shall be darkened -- Literally, in the dark day of May 19, 1780 which extended over 320,000 square miles. D587

The nominal church's sun is being darkened, its moon is being turned into blood, and its stars are falling. D591

Symbolically, by denial that we were bought with the precious blood, and by substituting the theory of Evolution. D592

And the moon -- Symbolically, the light of the Mosaic Law. D590

The darkening of the moon at its full the night following May 19, 1780, seems to have been little less remarkable than the darkening of the sun.

D587

The moon as a symbol represents the light of the Mosaic Law. As the moon is a reflection of the light of the sun, so the Law was the shadow, or reflection beforehand of the Gospel. D590

Not give her light -- "Shall be turned into blood," (Joel 2:31; Acts 2:20)--the Law comes to be regarded merely as a meaningless and barbaric ceremony of blood. D593

As the sunlight of the ransom becomes obscured, so the moonlight of the Mosaic Law, which in its sacrifices foreshadowed the ransom, must of necessity become obscured also. D592

Mark 13:25

And the stars -- The Scriptures do not distinguish between stars and meteors, as is commonly done in our day. D588 The word star (Greek: aster) is not used respecting any of the faithful (outside the apostles) in referring to them in this present life; but it is used in reference to those who depart from the truth and become "heady." D594

Symbolically, the false stars, wandering stars (Jude 13), pulpit stars, regarding themselves of equal or superior authority with the "twelve stars" (Rev. 12:1), and the inspired apostles (2 Cor. 11:13), Rev. 2:2) D591, 593, 594

Shall fall -- Literally, the meteoric shower of Nov. 13, 1833. D588 The teachings of the God-ordained twelve stars of the Church, the apostles, will fade from view--cease to be recognized guides or lights. D593

Many of the false stars have fallen from every pretense of Gospel shining to the level of the comprehension of the masses to whom they shine. D596 Symbolically, the false stars make a great display in coming down from spiritual to earthly conditions--to the Christian-citizenship-politics level. D595

And the powers -- The sectarian creeds and systems. D597

That are in heaven -- The nominal church. D600

The heavens represent the ecclesiastical powers of Christendom. D591

The religious powers and influences of the world. R1305:2

Shall be shaken -- This shaking is already begun. R1305:2, 5516:6

Mark 13:26

And then -- At that same time. D597

Shall they see -- With the eyes of their understanding. D600; B153

Some will see the divine plan of the ages and recognize it as one of the signs of the presence. (Luke 12:37) D599

Coming in the clouds -- Clouds of trouble. B152

The tribes of earth will see the clouds of trouble and confusion incident to the shaking of the "heavens" and realize it to be a storm which shall shake the "earth" also. (Heb. 12:26, 27) D600

The judgment of Babylon, Christendom, social and ecclesiastical, is another sign that the Judge has come. D599

Power and glory -- The glory of power and justice. B153

In his glorious body, (Phil. 3:21) a spiritual body. (1 Cor. 15:44-49)
R261:2

Mark 13:27

Send his angels -- Messengers as he has used throughout this age--earthly servants, begotten of his holy Spirit. D601
Colporteurs, magnetically attracting the "wheat" class, are flying through the midst of heaven giving sympathy, consolation and Christian love which hearts have longed for and nowhere else found. R4541:2

Messengers of the new King of earth. D600

Gather together -- For this gathering the Lord has provided a general unity, sympathy, and teaching through a general channel. F274

"Gather my saints together unto me." (Psa. 50:5) B164

"Make up my jewels." (Mal. 3:17) B164

Gathering of the good fish into baskets. (Matt. 13:47-49) D600

Gathering of the wheat from the tares into the barn (Matt. 13:30), the calling of "my people" out of Babylon. (Rev. 18:4) D600

His elect -- All of the consecrated class accepting the high calling of God and to whom a crown is apportioned. F165

From the four winds -- From every quarter. D601

Part of heaven -- The nominal church. D600

Mark 13:28

Of the fig tree -- The incident of the Lord cursing the fig tree (Matt. 21:19, 20) inclines us to believe that the fig tree in this prophecy may be understood to signify the Jewish nation. D604

The Jewish nation. D604; R5503:2

Branch is yet tender -- The buds will thrive, but will bear no perfect fruit before October 1914, the full end of "Gentile Times." D604

Putteth forth leaves -- One of the signs of a new dispensation would be the sprouting, or indication of life, hope, promise, amongst the Jews. R5503:2, 4788:5

Looking forward to the re-establishment of the Jewish nation. R4788:5

The winter time, the blight time of the nation is at an end. R5503:2

We see the Jews looking back to Jerusalem. Thus the fig tree is putting forth its leaves, or giving signs of life, looking forward to the re-establishment of the Jewish nation. R4788:5, 5920:6; D604

Summer is near -- The Jewish nation has been having a long winter time, but the spring time of this nation is now at hand. R5920:6

The Hebrews divided their year into two seasons, summer and winter. D602

Mark 13:29

That it is nigh -- The kingdom of God. (Luke 17:21) D602

Mark 13:30

This generation -- Greek, genea, not used with the significance of race, but in reference to people living contemporaneously who will witness the signs enumerated. D603

A "generation" might be reckoned as a century, the present limit, or 120 years, Moses' lifetime, the Scripture limit. D604

Might be reckoned as equivalent to a century from 1780, the date of the first sign. By 1880 every item predicted had begun to be fulfilled. D604

It would not be inconsistent to reckon the generation from 1878 to 1914, 36-1/2 years, about the average of human life today. D605

These things be done -- We are not looking for things to come which are already here, but are waiting for the consummation of matters already in progress. D605

Mark 13:31

Heaven and earth -- The present ecclesiastical and social order. D602

Mark 13:32

That hour -- When the heavenly Kingdom should be set up. E36

Of his second coming. R5943:5

Knoweth no man -- It was not then due to be revealed; does not prove we cannot know now. B18; D605; R1873:3

Our Lord gave quite a detailed account of events which must intervene, indicating a lapse of a considerable period between, yet giving no clear idea of its length. B160

These words cannot be understood to mean that none but the Father will ever know of his times and seasons. B18

The time was unknown then and was to so continue until God's due time for making it known. R1873:3

"The wise shall understand." (Dan. 12:10) D606; B19; R2972:6; OV268:3

Neither the Son -- It does not say the Son never will know. B18; D605; R2972:6, 1796:3

Times and seasons for the full accomplishment of the restitution of all things were wisely hidden from his view, as they were also wisely hidden from the Church's view until the realization of it was near at hand.

R1688:2

The Son certainly must know of the time of his own second advent, at least a little while before it takes place. R2972:6, 1873:3, 1796:3; D605

He does not so answer in Acts 1:6-8. We must suppose that then he did know, because he was then "born of the Spirit" with "all power" including the power of knowledge. R2082:5, 1796:5

Jesus proved himself worthy to "loose the seals." (Rev. 5:2, 12) of the scroll of God's plan. R5943:5,4

The revelation of the plan to him was a gradual one as features became due. R3160:3

The things that were sealed on the inside of the scroll of Rev. 5 were not proper to be understood by our Redeemer until he had received all-power, after his resurrection. R5943:6, 2156:2

Mark 13:33

Take ye heed -- The times and seasons will be very important some time, so do not become indifferent. B19

None then living shall escape the great time of trouble except the Little Flock, the Bride class. R2302:5

Watch and pray -- Watching unto prayer, thus keeping their hearts in a humble and teachable attitude. R1797:1

Be always watching for the first evidence of my parousia. B163

Watch yourselves and also the word of prophecy. B22

With the Word of God in heart and mind, and the spirit of truth in yourself. B23

That in due time ye may know. D606; B19

"Watch ye, that ye may be accounted worthy to escape." (Luke 21:36)

R2302:5; B23; D606

For ye know not -- Because the time was long according to human reckoning, and a knowledge of it would therefore have been discouraging. R1796:3

Although it was neither proper nor possible for the Lord's people to know in advance the exact time of the second presence, yet when the due time would come, the faithful ones, the watchers, would be informed. R2972:3

The time of the Lord's presence could not be known beforehand, even by the saints; nor was the fact of the Lord's presence recognized until nearly a year after October 1874. D612

Such a state must continue until the proximity of the event renders the knowledge of the time no longer a cause of discouragement, but of the revival of hope and anticipation. R1796:5

Mark 13:34

A far journey -- Even to heaven itself, not to return until the time for his kingdom to be established in glory and power. R2634:2

Every man his work -- Each should seek to know his talents and to use them, and should not attempt the use of talents not given him, and a work therefore not committed to him. R2527:1

In the Church. R2527:1

As illustrated by those who built with Nehemiah. R2526:6

As Nehemiah's plan was that each person should undertake the building of the wall nearest to his own residence. R2527:1

Mark 13:35

Watch -- The signs of the times in light of God's Word, for the second advent of the Lord, the establishment of the kingdom, and the transformation of the Church to the divine likeness. R2973:3, 1796:3
Our watching is to be for the second coming of him who redeemed us. R2973:1

Watch intently, earnestly, interestedly, because we know of the good things God has in reservation. (1 Cor. 2:9-13; 1 Pet. 1:4) R2973:5

Watching implies hoping, and it also implies waiting. R2973:2

Watch, because ye know not, in order that, at the proper time, ye may know. R2972:2; D606

We are to watch the signs of the times in the light of the Lord's Word, our lamp. R2973:3

The watchers look not merely at the outward signs, as seen in the world. They scrutinize carefully and repeatedly their "chart," the Bible's prophetic outline of the world's history furnished by the King himself. R2973:6

The watchers are those who are in harmony with the King and who have respect to his promise, and they, therefore, do not neglect the words which he speaks. R2974:1

Implies not only some advantage in watching, but that the manner of the second advent will require some discernment. R1796:5

This watching will serve as an antidote to worldly influence. R2303:1

Therefore -- Implies that the manner of the second advent might be contrary to general expectation. R1796:5

Cometh -- This cannot refer to our Lord coming at death, as often taught, because death is an enemy. R2303:1

Mark 13:37

I say unto all -- Unto all believers. R2972:5

The whole Church to the end of the age. R1796:2

Mark 14

Mark 14:1

After two days -- One of the two days before the Passover, beginning on Wednesday night, 13th Nisan. R4212:2*

The feast of the passover -- Lasted a week, and was one of the most important celebrated under the Jewish arrangement. R3363:3

The chief priests -- The great religious teachers felt themselves sponsors for the people. They perceived that their hold over the more ignorant Jews was being impaired by Jesus' teachings. R5540:6

By craft -- It was merely a question of how they could accomplish the murder and deceive the people, so as not to provoke those who had begun to exercise faith in Jesus. R5541:1

Put him to death -- They seem to have been unanimous in believing that his destruction would be for the good of the Lord's cause, as they misunderstood that cause. R5540:6

Not on the feast day -- For he would be surrounded by the multitude, some of whom thought him to be a great prophet, others of whom considered him to be the Messiah. R5541:1

Mark 14:2

Lest there be an uproar -- It was anticipated the friends of Jesus might arouse a commotion amongst the throng which might make the religious leaders of the Jews appear to be seditious. R3366:3

Mark 14:3

In Bethany -- The honored guests of Lazarus, whom Jesus awakened. R5541:1, 3534:2, 2447:3

At the close of the Jewish Sabbath Day just preceding our Lord's crucifixion. R5540:3

Sunday night, 10th Nisan. R4212:2*

Possibly the sixth day previous to the Passover, the Sabbath. R2447:3, 3534:2

Simon the leper -- Who probably was dead. R5541:1

Possibly the father of the family, or the late husband of Martha. R3534:2, 2447:3

At meat -- A feast or banquet in our Lord's honor. R2448:1, 3534:3

Martha, Mary and Lazarus were the hostesses. R5541:2

A woman -- Mary, sister of Martha and Lazarus. R3877:2

Alabaster box -- Apparently a small vase. R5230:5, 2448:1

"Do not keep the alabaster boxes of your love and tenderness sealed up until your friends are dead, but fill their lives with sweetness."--A

Boston printer. R5541:5

Ointment of spikenard -- Not oil, but very expensive perfume. R5230:5, 3535:1, 2448:1

A beautiful picture of love and devotion, illustrating the manner in which we can pour perfume on each other, by speaking graciously to each other and by seeking to see the best that there is in one another. R5231:4

Very precious -- Equivalent to a year's wages of a working man. R3535:1, 5541:4, 2448:2

Considered in the light of the odor and blessing it has shed upon all of the Lord's people, Mary's alabaster jar of precious perfume, very costly, has proven to be extremely cheap. R3535:3

Brake the box -- Opened the box's tyings and seals. R2448:2
Probably uncorked it. R5230:5

And poured it -- The reverence which she felt for Jehovah, she sought to express toward his highest representative, Jesus, who had brought her brother back from the tomb. R5541:4

We can pour perfume on each other by speaking graciously to each other, and by seeking to see the best in one another. (Eph. 5:1, 2) R5231:4

We can anoint friends, brethren and others with kindly words, loving sympathies, tender expressions. R3878:1

As we do this, the Lord will allow some one to scatter some flowers also for us. R3878:2

"An offering and a sacrifice to God for a sweet-smelling savor." (Eph. 5:2) R5231:4

While Jesus was still alive. A week later and it would have been too late. R3536:5

Do not keep the alabaster boxes of your love and tenderness sealed up until your friends are dead. Flowers on the coffin cast no fragrance backward over the weary way. R3878:3*, 3536:6

On his head -- According to another account, she subsequently poured a portion of the same perfume upon his feet. R5541:2

Manifesting her adoration, reverence and devotion to him as her Lord, the Messiah. R5230:5

Expressing the reverence which she felt for Jehovah she sought to express toward his highest representative, Jesus. R5541:4

The perfume of Mary's acts of love, kindness, and adoration have come down through the ages, filling the entire Church with the sweet odor. R3877:4, 2448:5

She pleased the Lord, and illustrated the noblest and truest qualities of the feminine heart. R3877:4

Although our Head has been glorified, we may anoint his "feet" who are still with us. R3878:5, 3536:2

Mark 14:4

There were some -- John tells us that the leader of the murmurers was Judas. R5541:2

This waste -- Such ointments were much more expensive at that time than now. R5230:5, 5541:4

Mark 14:5

Might have been sold -- Mary may have prepared the perfume herself, for Judas does not object to its having been purchased for a large sum, but that it might have been sold for 300 pence. R2744:1

Three hundred pence -- Greek, denarius, silver penny, the average daily wage at that time. (Matt. 20:2) R2448:2, 5541:4, 3535:1, 2744:1

About six dollars, representing the labor of a year. R5541:4

About $48. R2744:1, 3877:2

The joy, the comfort, the blessing that came to the heart of our dear Master, and that strengthened him for the experiences of coming days, was worth far more than the 300 pence. R3878:3

Given to the poor -- It is a mistake to suppose that time or money spent in the Lord's service or in the study of his plan means that much less for the poor. R3877:5

And they murmured -- John tells us the leader in this was Judas. (John 12:14) R5541:2, 3535:3, 2448:3

Considered in the light of the odor and blessing and refreshment which it has shed upon all the Lord's people throughout this Gospel age, Mary's alabaster jar of perfume, very costly, has proven to be extremely cheap. R3535:3

Mark 14:6

Let her alone -- A severe reproof to those whose sentiments of love had no other measure than that of money. Money is not the only thing of which people are sorely in need. R2448:3

Mark 14:7

The poor -- Generally they are the class most ready to receive the truth. R1104:3

Poverty has proven a blessing by developing sympathy, patience, love, goodness, helpfulness, toward those who need our care and assistance. R3535:6

With you always -- Throughout this Gospel age. R3535:6, 4702:6

Have not always -- A little while he would be glorified. R3536:1, 4702:6

Mark 14:8

She hath done -- Though the Lord declined to recognize a woman as a teacher of religion, his special love for this Mary and her sister Martha is particularly recorded. R4702:3,5

She did what pleased the Lord; she illustrated the noblest and truest qualities of the feminine heart, love, devotion, fidelity, she spoke by actions rather than by words, and the perfume of her acts of love and kindness and adoration of her Lord have come down through the ages, filling the entire Church of Christ with the sweet odor of the perfume she poured upon his head and subsequently upon his feet. R3877:4

What she could -- She has shown her devotion to the best of her ability. R3535:2

No one could have a higher tribute. She cannot do more, she has done all she could. R5230:6

This expression of Jesus should be of special comfort, particularly to the sisters in the Church. Not discouraged by her limitations, Mary was on the alert to improve all the opportunities that she had. R5230:2, 4702:3

Let us all make sure the Master can say of us as he said of her. R2512:6

The Lord accepts the little sacrifices as though they were greater ones.

It is not the amount that God is seeking, but the character, the disposition of heart. R2717:4

To anoint my body -- We may suppose these would seem very strange words. The disciples thought he would not die. R5230:6

The "feet" members of the Body of Christ are still with us; let us hasten to anoint them with the precious spikenard perfume. R3878:5

Mark 14:9

A memorial of her -- Not merely to honor her, but to inspire and encourage others of God's people to the obtaining and exercising of a love which delights in service, yea in costly sacrifice. R5541:4

What a sweet memorial of Mary! How we all love and reverence her true womanhood, and appreciate the fact that her intuitions in respect to this anointing of the Lord were superior to the reasonings of the twelve apostles on the subject--they were too cold and calculating, too business like. She made up for this deficiency in the warmth of her loving devotion. R3877:5

The Mary class is still with us. R3536:2

The person who is economical and penurious in his dealings with the Lord is sure to be the loser thereby. "The liberal soul shall be made fat."

(Prov. 11:25) R3535:4

Mark 14:10

Judas Iscariot -- What a sharp contrast between the love and generosity of Mary and the mean selfishness of Judas! R3878:4

Representing some who for earthly advantage for themselves are willing to deliver other members of the Lord's Body up to tribulation, adversity and reproach. R3366:6

There are some amongst the Lord's professed disciples who commit a similar crime, willing to sell the Lord for social position, honor, popularity, titles, by misrepresenting his character, plan and Word. R4907:4, 3366:6

To betray him -- Perhaps surmising Jesus could deliver himself, possibly thinking to gain the money without our Lord being injured; but, in any event, showing a baseness of character and willingness to do evil for selfish reasons. R3366:6

Perhaps he reasoned that since all these things would happen to the Lord anyway, he might as well have the money. R3878:6

Mark 14:11

To give him the money -- Some today are willing to sell the truth for financial profit or social advantage, and others willing to sell the members of the Lord's Body. R3366:6

Conveniently betray him -- Suggesting that he would be in touch with Jesus' movements and could inform them of the most suitable time, a time when the multitude would not be with him. R5541:1

Mark 14:12

The first day of -- The 14th of Nisan, the Feast of Passover beginning on the 15th. R1800:2

Unleavened bread -- A reminder of their haste in fleeing Egypt, not having time for bread to rise, and their suffering in Egypt, called the bread of affliction. (Deut. 16:3) R1800:2

Its chief significance was the putting away of sin. R1800:2

A type of the world's proper condition in the Millennial age--the putting away from them the leaven of sin. R1800:3

Killed the passover -- Typified Jesus, the Lamb of God. R5542:3

The killing of the Passover lamb was always done on the 14th of Nisan; so also the sacrifice of Christ was accomplished on this same day, thus fulfilling the prediction of the type. R1800:3

"Christ our Passover is sacrificed for us." (1 Cor. 5:7) R3749:3

Mark 14:13

He sendeth forth -- Thursday, daytime, 13th Nisan. R4212:2*

Evidently Jesus was at Bethany, at the home of Lazarus, when he sent this word. R5541:3

Two of his disciples -- Peter and John. R5541:3

Mark 14:14

The goodman -- Probably a believer. R1800:3

It has been surmised by some that the house was that of Mark's mother, Mary, and that the upper room thus used was the same one in which the apostles subsequently met and where the Pentecostal blessing was poured out upon them. R3363:6

The guestchamber -- During passover week hospitality was recognized as a duty in Jerusalem, hence the readiness with which the Lord's request for a room was granted. R1800:3

Mark 14:15

A large upper room -- Supposed to be the same one in which the disciples were gathered on Pentecost. R5541:3

We do know that it was at the house of this Mary that many gathered to pray for the release of Peter from prison. It was "a large upper room" and was already prepared with a suitable dining couch of proper dimensions. R3363:6

The early Church meeting places were usually private dwellings or rented upper rooms. R984:2

Mark 14:16

They made ready -- We may be sure everything was in exact conformity with the original requirements. Jesus and his apostles were bound by every feature of the Jewish Law as much as other Jews. R5541:6

Mark 14:17

In the evening -- Thursday, 14th Nisan. R4212:2*

Mark 14:18

Which eateth with me -- As my guest, a member of my family. R5542:1

Shall betray me -- Said with a double object--to show his disciples he was aware of the betrayal and as a final reproof to Judas, to startle and to cause him to think. R5542:2

Mark 14:19

One by one -- The import would be, It is not I whom you have meant! R5542:2

Even Judas joined in the general inquiry, "Is it I?" R5542:2, 3364:3
Not overconfident, but each seeming to fear his own stability. They had the spirit of self-examination. R1800:5

Mark 14:20

One of the twelve -- Judas was probably present at the Passover Supper partly for the purpose of learning the direction which Jesus and the others would take after the supper. R3366:3

Despite the custom of the time, to be loyal and faithful to the one whose bread he ate. R3879:3

Dippeth with me -- Unleavened bread, resembling thick pancakes, was sometimes used instead of a spoon to sop up the essence of the meat. R5542:1

Mark 14:21

Woe to that man -- Judas' intimate acquaintance with the Lord made him specially responsible. NS603:6

Judas had a sufficiency of light to condemn him so he would have no further opportunity and hope. R5453:1

Let us beware of the little things which, like a switch upon a railway, turn a train into an entirely different track, and may lead us off far from the goal we at first desired to reach. R3367:1

Had never been born -- Evidently his was the sin unto death--the joys of his useless, wasted life did not overbalance its sorrows and anguish and his subsequent despair and suicide. R3879:4

Being unmoved by our Lord's words is strong evidence of the willful intention which marked Judas' crime. R4906:6

Leaves no ray of hope for his restoration. R1800:6

One of the most detestable characters known to the pages of history. R4909:5

Every suicide by his act confesses his wish that he had never been born. R3364:3

Mark 14:22

As they did eat -- It is entirely probable that Judas was not present when Jesus, a little later, instituted the Memorial Supper which Christians now celebrate. R5542:2

Christ's death should not be celebrated monthly, quarterly or weekly, but, as the archtype of the Jewish Passover, should properly be celebrated annually. R5542:3

Jesus took bread -- Some of the left-over unleavened bread. R3526:3

In the Passover a literal lamb was used to typify Jesus, but now the breaking of bread represented the death of Jesus. R5542:3

The unleavened bread memorializes the purity, the sinlessness, of him who gave himself to be the ransom-price for all. R4591:2, 2772:3

"I am the bread of life." (John 6:35) R2772:3

"For we being many are one bread, and one body." (1 Cor. 10:17) R5542:5
And brake it -- Represented the death of Jesus. R5542:3
Represented the sacrifice of Christ's humanity for our redemption. R1800:6
It must be "broken" in order to be appropriated; it was also necessary that he be broken in death, sacrificed for our sins, ere we could appropriate his merit and enjoy everlasting life. R3526:4
When we break this Bread together as a Memorial, we not only symbolize our Lord's broken body, but also our own breaking or dying as members of the Church. R4591:5
Take, eat -- Symbolically represents our partaking of the fleshly perfection of the man Jesus. R4591:3
The appropriation to ourselves, by faith, of justification to human life-right. R5871:1, 1800:6
The rights and privileges which Christ surrendered may be appropriated by all who accept him. R3879:6
This is my body -- Not that the bread was turned into his actual body and the wine into his actual blood, for he still had his actual body and blood; but that they symbolically represented his body and blood. R5542:3, 3526:4
This represents me, the antitypical Lamb; it represents my flesh. F464;
R5870:5
A figure of speech. He would not have meant as some believe that the bread turned into his actual flesh, for he still had his flesh. R3879:5, 5870:5
The broken bread represented the sacrifice of Christ's humanity for our redemption. R1800:6
To call their minds from the typical lamb to himself, the antitype, and to show them that it would be no longer proper to observe a feature of the Law which he was about to fulfill. R4839:4, 466:1

Mark 14:23

He took the cup -- Symbolical and pointed forward to his own death.
R4331:3
Representing crushing of the grapes, the blood of the grapes, the Master's blood, the life sacrificed, poured out, and their lives with him. R3880:3, 4591:5
We not only need nourishment to come back to God and his favor, but we need the precious blood to release us from the condemnation of justice.
R3526:5
They all drank of it -- Having the same significance of the broken bread. Partaking in it also meant the appropriation of the benefits of his sacrifice, thus securing our justification. R1800:6
It was Jesus' cup, of which he drank, that he gave to his disciples to finish. Thus, symbolically, we are invited to be partakers of the sufferings of Christ. (2 Cor. 1:5-7) R4475:1

All who would sit with him in his throne must drink of his cup of self-denial, self-sacrifice. R4591:5

All partook with him his cup of suffering and death. R3880:2

Meaning our appropriation of the benefits of his sacrifice, thus securing our justification. R1800:6

Mark 14:24

This is my blood of -- The blood prepared in advance of the covenant, wherewith to seal it and make it obligatory. R4331:3, 5542:5; E28 The new testament -- A covenant of mercy. R2859:3

Before our Lord could become the Mediator he must seal the New Covenant with his own precious blood. E28

Jesus' death constituted the blood which seals, makes efficacious, the New Covenant. But the Church is blessed in advance of that New Covenant, and their blood is counted as part of the sacrifice which seals that covenant. R5542:5

The New Covenant will not become operative until the cup of the Lord's sufferings which is left behind has been drained in death by the last member of his Body. R5542:6, 4310:2,3

The New Law Covenant will be inaugurated by Messiah, its Mediator, at his second advent. R5542:5

Our Lord has not yet already sealed the New Covenant with his blood. Q179:4

Which is shed -- "To give his life a ransom (the redemptive price) for many." (Matt. 20:28) R1336:1

Plainly presenting Christ's death as the means through which he gained ability to benefit many. R1335:6*

For many -- The world in general. R111:2

Mark 14:25

Drink no more -- His work, his drinking of the cup, was finished the next day on Calvary. There he completed the drinking of the cup which the Father had poured for him. R5542:6

Fruit of the vine -- If anybody prefers to think of it as being grape juice, I have no objection. Q486:4

Not literal wine, but the new thing typified by it. R3365:1

I drink it new -- The new wine--the joys, rights and privileges of the divine nature--in that kingdom. R721:2

Having a new and blessed significance, being commemorative of the heroism of their faith under the most crucial tests, and a rejoicing together in the victory of that faith. R1801:1

All who would drink of the present cup of suffering, ignominy and death would also share in his cup of joy and blessing, glory and honor in the kingdom. R3880:3, 3365:1

Foretells the final triumph of Christ and the Church. R1801:1

The kingdom of God -- At our Lord's second advent. R3880:3

Mark 14:26

They went out -- Let us do the same. Let each go home with heart full, prolonging our communion and fellowship with the Master. R5195:2

The mount of Olives -- A distance of perhaps a mile. R5550:2
There is a small enclosure now on the side of Mt. Olivet, about 150 feet square, which is reputed to be the place of our Lord's agonizing prayer. It contains eight very old and very gnarled olive trees, and whether the exact spot or not, it represents it sufficiently well. R2773:6

Mark 14:27

Ye shall be offended -- Discouraged, stumbled, amazed; the thing they were not expecting would occur. R5550:3

Sheep shall be scattered -- Knowing how desolate, aimless and perplexed they would feel, it would be his chief concern in the 40 days between his resurrection and ascension to gather them again and re-establish their faith in him as the Messiah. B111

The Lord willed that severe testings should come to the sheep through the Master. R4488:2

Mark 14:29

Yet will not I -- Peter's courage, manifested on so many occasions, was really his weak point. R5563:1

He was trusting too much to his flesh, and not looking to God and prayerfully watching against temptation. R5550:3

Perhaps it was remembering these words that he drew his sword in the Lord's defense. (John 18:10) R2468:6

Mark 14:30

Thou shalt deny me -- Peter was trusting too much to his flesh, and not looking to God and prayerfully watching against temptation. R5550:3
As our Lord forewarned Peter of coming trials, so he has forewarned us of the great crucial test near at hand. R5550:6

Siftings are permitted, not because the Lord has no interest in us, but because only those who can stand siftings, trials and tests, are fit for places in the kingdom. R5563:6

Perhaps the Lord allowed this for our sakes, that we might realize we need to put our confidence in the Lord. CR307:5; R5550:3

Mark 14:31

I will not deny thee -- Peter realized no dread, no fear. Hence he did little watching and praying in comparison with what he should have done, and self-confidence led to his undoing for a time. R5563:1

Said they all -- They declared themselves loyal and ready for death. How little they knew what severe trials would come upon them. R5550:3
The mistake many make is not realizing how severe the trials and temptations may become, in not realizing the necessity of heavenly assistance in every time of need. R5550:5

Mark 14:32

Gethsemane -- An olive orchard or garden. R5550:2

Signifying an oil-press place. Jews used olive oil for food and light.

Jesus is the nourisher, as well as the enlightener, of the world. He almost crushed his soul in a garden used for the crushing of olives.

R5550:2, 2773:3

Doubtless in the end of this age there will come Gethsemane experiences to the Church. R5550:5

To his disciples -- Because he loved them, and knew that they loved him, he permitted them to watch and pray with him. R1801:2

Sit ye here -- To watch, to be on guard against something that was to occur. R5550:6, 2773:6

I shall pray -- That he might find grace to help in time of need. R1801:1
Having first comforted, counselled and prayed for and with his disciples. R1801:1

Mark 14:33

Peter and James and John -- As a sort of outer guard--the three in whom he found the most active and consoling sympathy. R1801:2, 2773:6

The three most courageous, zealous and earnest of his disciples. R2774:1

To be sore amazed -- As though the sorrow had come upon him unexpectedly. R2774:1

To be very heavy -- Carrying the thought of loneliness, home-sickness, friendlessness. R5551:1

Because of the coming shame of trial, conviction, and execution as a blasphemer and seditious. The perfect man must have suffered far more than would have been possible for a fallen one. R3885:3, 3367:2

Overwhelmed with the fear that in some manner he might have failed of perfection, and that his death might mean extinction. R3886:1, 5551:5

The Master's personal eternal life was in the balance. R5551:4

No one can thoughtfully read this lesson without feeling there is something thoroughly incorrect in the idea that Jesus was his own Heavenly Father. R2773:3

Mark 14:34

Exceeding sorrowful -- The thought of extinguishment of life was an important factor in his sorrow. R4804:2

Death to him was very different from what it is to us who are nine-tenths dead, with benumbed sensibilities. R3885:6

An intense mental and nervous strain; an agony which would have worn him out shortly, which caused him to sweat great drops of blood. R1801:2, 3367:3

Fearful lest he might have violated the Law, made some mistake and not come up to the requirements of the Father. R5331:4, 5551:3, 3367:2

Unto death -- I feel as if I would die now, without coming to that great crisis which is before me. R5551:1

The death of Jesus began at Jordan; it culminated and was finished at Calvary. R5104:2

Paul assures us that the Master's Gethsemane experiences were linked with fear--not fear of dying, but fear of remaining dead. (Heb. 5:7) R5551:5

Mark 14:35

He went forward a little -- To be alone in his communion with the Father. R5550:6

And prayed -- "Unto him that was able to save him from (out of) death (by resurrection)." (Heb. 5:7) R5551:5, 3885:6, 3367:3

Mark 14:36

All things are possible -- If it were possible for the divine plan to be otherwise worked out, he might be saved from the special tribulations of the hours just before him. R5551:4

The substance of all is that our Lord was exceeding fearful of himself--fearful lest he should make a misstep and thus spoil the entire plan of God, which he had so obediently undertaken and thus so loyally performed. R3886:2

Take away this cup -- In the matter of his baptism into death, there was no hesitation. The ignominious death was the thing he prayed might pass. R5421:2,3,6, 5551:5, 3886:2, 3367:2

Jesus was to drink the cup which belonged to the sinner in order that he might redeem man. R5421:6

It was necessary he suffer the death of the cross in order he might redeem the Jew. R5421:6, 5126:4, 5047:4,5, 3901:4; E430

The same cup represented in the communion service. R5421:3

The shame and reproach of being executed as a blasphemer against God and an injurious person amongst men. R3367:2

Not that he might not die, for he had come into the world for that purpose; but that the Father might have some way of passing by the special ignominy of that hour. R5551:5

He comprehended, as others had not comprehended, what death really is. He appreciated, as others did not appreciate, the meaning and value of life.

R5551:2

The question was, had he done the divine will fully, in a spirit pleasing to the Heavenly Father; and would he pass through the experience of the next few hours with proper obedience, or fail and lose his all in death?

R5551:6, 5331:4

Had the Master failed, there was no one to make good for him. His failure meant everlasting death. R5551:4

Drinking of the cup by the Church represents, not only justification, but sanctification. R5421:5

How different with us who seek to walk in his steps, we have nothing to lose, for as a race we are all under the sentence of death. R5551:3

Not what I will -- As a man. T54

But what thou wilt -- As the Father--the divine. T54

He learned the Father's will for him, and he was content. R5421:2

Mark 14:37

And he cometh -- Seeking human sympathy. R5550:6

Findeth them sleeping -- It was midnight and they were accustomed to retiring early. R5550:6

The strain of the evening and the weighty lessons which the Master had imparted reacted in drowsiness. R5550:6

Well it had been expressed by the prophet, "Of the people there was none with me." (Isa. 63:3) He trod the winepress of grief alone. R5550:6

A great difference between the Master and his followers: the Master is with us, "I will never leave thee nor forsake thee," and there is also a fellowship of spirit amongst the brethren of Christ. R5551:6

Sleepest thou -- Not begotten of the holy Spirit, they could not therefore so fully watch with the Lord and pray with him as if they had been spiritually enlightened. R5331:1

Couldst not thou watch -- Gently he reproved them. R4804:5, 2774:4 They were not without loyalty; it was not a matter of indifference to them, but they did not comprehend. R5331:1

One hour -- Little did they realize that at that critical hour their own and the whole world's salvation hung upon the shoulders of their trembling, suffering Lord. It was the dark hour of the world's crisis. (John 12:31) R669:2

Mark 14:38

Watch ye -- Be watchful, active, alert, and co-labor with God and with the Lord Jesus Christ. R5332:1

Addressed, with much force, to the eleven; and more particularly to the three whom he had called apart to be a little nearer to him. R5331:1 Not merely on my account, you need to be in a watching attitude on your own account. An hour of severe trial is upon us all. R2774:4

Watch and be on guard against the encroachments of the world, flesh, and devil; watch for all the encouragements of the Lord's Word; watch for everything that will strengthen us in faith, loyalty, hope and love.

R2775:5

Some will make light of the warning and expose themselves to danger; others will hearken, resulting in their preservation. R3761:4

There seems to be special need of this at the Passover season. R3178:3

See 13:33,35.

And pray -- For wisdom and grace. R5331:5

Our Lord watched and prayed, got a blessing and came off victor; they did not watch or pray, and as a result we find them scattered and bewildered.

R2775:2

Some make the mistake of praying without watching; others make the mistake of watching without praying. R2775:5

Pray together as the Lord's people; pray in our homes, as families; pray in secret, in private; have the spirit of prayer in all that we say and do. R2775:5

In harmony with our intelligence--our knowledge of the divine plan. R5332:4

Lest ye enter -- Lest they should fall in their temptations. R5331:5, 5312:5

Lest ye fall in this evil time. R2774:5

Those who neglect the Master's words will be sure to enter into temptation, and be tolerably sure to fall therein. R2775:5

They would have fallen into temptation the same, but they would not have entered into it. R5331:5

That we may be shielded from temptation that without his aid would be beyond our endurance, and that he will, in his own due time deliver us from evil and imperfection and grant us a place in his heavenly kingdom.

R5835:5

The devil is seeking whom he may devour. He knows our weak points and is ready to take advantage of them. R3179:4

Into temptation -- In this hour of trial which is upon us all. R2774:5

It was the most trying time for our Lord, for the apostles, and particularly for Judas and Peter. R3759:3

Now is the time for the Church to be specially on the alert against the wiles of the world, the flesh and the Adversary. R5331:6

We may not clearly discern in advance the character of the temptations, for if we knew all about them beforehand, they would be but slight temptations and easily overcome. R5332:4, 3179:1

A temptation resisted makes us so much the stronger to resist the next. R5331:5

The flesh is weak -- Notice his kind consideration for the bewildered and weary disciples, and his loving excuse for them. R1801:6

Mark 14:40

When he returned -- It was no sign of weakness that he thus craved human sympathy. R801:2

Asleep again -- Instead of watching and praying, therefore the less prepared for the trial hour coming on. R3367:5

Mark 14:41

Sleep on now -- "Of the people there was none with me." (Isa. 63:3) He trod the winepress of grief alone. R5550:6

An angel appeared and strengthened him with the assurance that he had been faithful to that moment, and that divine blessing would be with him in the trial at hand. From that moment onward, all fear and agony were gone.

R5551:6, 5331:4

It is enough -- Assured of the Father's favor, he could pass through any experience; he had gotten the victory. R5331:4

Mark 14:43

Cometh Judas -- The Judas class of today are those who receive temptation, enter into the spirit of the allurements, and are swallowed up by it. R3760:1

A great multitude -- The high priests' servants, court followers, resembling the police of today. R3367:4

An impromptu sheriff's posse. R3887:2

Staves -- Clubs. R3367:4

Mark 14:45

And kissed him -- The Greek indicates he kissed him repeatedly. R3887:2

Mark 14:46

And took him -- The binding of our Lord seems to have been entirely unnecessary, except as the "band" might desire to make an exhibition of their prowess to those who had sent them. R2469:4

Mark 14:47

And one of them -- Peter. (John 18:10) R3887:6, 3367:4

Drew a sword -- They had the swords to demonstrate that our Lord was not taken contrary to his own will. R3367:4

To defend the Lord. R3886:6

The only sword which the Lord's people now may use is the sword of the Spirit, the Word of God. R3888:1

Mark 14:48

Are ye come -- The Lord seems to have remonstrated his binding. (John 18:12) R2469:4

Mark 14:50

All forsook him, and fled -- Awakened, surprised, dismissed by the Lord. R3367:4

Our Lord, in surrendering himself, stipulated that his apostles were not included in the arrest. R3367:4

Our Lord had said, "let these go their way." (John 18:8) R3888:1

They were disconcerted by the Master's arrest and his evident willingness to be arrested. R4756:2

The temptation, the fear they could not resist. R3178:6

It is appropriate that the Body of Christ should, at the Memorial season, have special trials, peculiar difficulties, testings of faith, obedience and loyalty. R4756:2, 3178:3

Mark 14:51

A certain young man -- There is some evidence that John Mark, the writer of this Gospel, was the lad, awakened by the commotion of Jesus' arrest, who came forth in his nightgown. R5550:3, 4707:2, 4347:2, 4169:1

Mark 14:53

To the high priest -- Caiaphas, evidently the ringleader in the conspiracy against Jesus. We may presume it was by his orders our Lord was taken first to Annas (John 18:13-24), his father-in-law. R2780:6

First to Annas (John 18:13), the rightful high priest according to the Law, the office being for life. His son-in-law, Caiaphas, was the acting high priest, appointed by the Romans. R1809:2

Were assembled -- It was not lawful to try any man for a capital offense between sundown and sunrise. Hence this trial was an informal one. It must be ratified by the Sanhedrin after sunrise. R3367:5, 1809:3

All the chief priests -- Carefully excluding, evidently, a few such men as Joseph of Arimathea, Nicodemus, and probably a few others known to be favorably inclined toward the new teacher. R1809:2

Mark 14:54

Into the palace -- Peter and John went with the crowd into Pilate's court to see what would befall the Master. R3178:6

Mark 14:56

Bare false witness against him -- Who would misrepresent him, his teachings, etc., either ignorantly through misunderstanding him or designedly with a view to gaining favor with the offices of the court. R3888:3

Witness agreed not together -- Two witnesses who agreed were required by law. (Deut. 19:15) R1809:3

The Jewish Law required at least two witnesses in any such trial. R2781:2

Mark 14:58

Destroy this temple -- Misunderstood or deliberately falsified--he had said that if they destroyed the Temple it would be reared again within three days (antitypical). R3370:5

The true Church. R3080:6, 3081:1; T70

Within three days -- The last of the fifth, all of the sixth, and the early part of the seventh thousand-year day. R3375:2, 3080:6

Mark 14:61

He held his peace -- Knowing that the truth was not desired and would avail nothing. R1809:5

Had the witnesses repeated his words exactly there was nothing in them upon which any law would condemn him. R3888:4

The High Priest, however, realized that he had utterly failed of getting any testimony against the Lord. R3888:4

And answered nothing -- Knowing that the truth was not desired and would avail nothing with these men who so warmly cherished murder in their hearts. R1809:5

The Christ, the Son -- The charge against our Lord was based upon his claim of being a Son of God--not the Father himself. R2781:5

Mark 14:62

I am -- The Messiah, the Son of God. R2781:3

He deliberately answered "I am," knowing that his reply would be like the signing of his death warrant. R1809:5

Right hand of power -- This prophecy compassed the certainty of his death and resurrection. R1809:5

Signifying the chief place, the position of excellence or favor. He will be on the right hand when coming, and remain on the right hand forever.

The power and glory of his kingdom, which he had previously affirmed was not to be of this world, or dispensation, but of the world to come, wherein dwelleth righteousness. R1809:5

"Sit thou on my right hand, until I make thine enemies thy footstool."

(Psa. 110:1) A92; R531:6

And coming -- Pointed to his return in the end of the Gospel age. R1809:5

In the clouds -- A time of trouble. R5269:2, 153:1; B138

Represents confusion in general. R5269:5

Of heaven -- The powers of spiritual control. A318

Mark 14:63

Rent his clothes -- Whose very robes were symbolic of the blessed one in their midst. R1809:5

In token of astonishment and horror at such blasphemy. R1809:5

Mark 14:64

The blasphemy -- "Blasphemy is to attribute to God that which is contrary to his nature, and does not belong to him--and to deny what does." B306

The word is applicable to any indignity offered to God. B306

The Sanhedrin preferred this charge for its effect upon the people. R1809:6

One of the few charges the penalty of which under the Law was death.

R3367:5

Mark 14:65

And some -- For two hours from 3 AM to 5 AM. R2470:5

To spit on him -- "I hid not my face from shame and spitting." (Isa. 50:6) E52

And to buffet him -- The rabble in the Court, hearing the commotion, felt at liberty to abuse the prisoner, as they had done others. R4711:5

"I gave my back to the smiters, and my cheeks to them that plucked off the hair." (Isa. 50:6) E52

And the servants -- Low minds delight in the misfortunes of those whom they realize to be their superiors. R2470:5

Did strike him -- Manifesting the same spirit as their masters. Their methods were ruder because they were more ignorant and coarse. R2470:5
"Consider him who endured such contradiction of sinners against himself."
(Heb. 12:3) R2781:6

"He shall see (the fruits) of the travail of his soul (in the grand restitution of the redeemed race), and shall be satisfied." (Isa. 53:11)
R1360:1; E441, 52

Mark 14:66

In the palace -- John and Peter had now separated. R5563:4

Mark 14:68

But he denied -- Mark's Gospel record is supposed to have been indited by Peter himself, Mark being in a large measure Peter's amanuensis. R2469:5
The writers of the New Testament were certainly very different from the majority of writers in that they told the absolute truth without modification or varnish. R5563:2

In terror. R4488:5

To see his Master apparently without friends in heaven, delivered over to his enemies and led from one tribunal to the other, has a paralyzing effect upon St. Peter. R5563:4

Stunned by the identification and wondering to what it might lead. R5563:4

The first instinct of nature, self-preservation overpowered him. He desired to avoid the troubles that had come upon Jesus. R3367:6

The Master knew the loyalty of Peter's heart, he knew he did it under stress. R5053:4

The Lord places himself, his brethren and his Word on a par. Those who deny his truth and his Word of prophecy are denying him. R3368:1

Men who freely tell of their failings must have been men of great courage, great sincerity, great love for the truth. R5563:3

Judas went down into the second death despised. Peter, after ups and downs of trial and discipline, passed to a reward of glory, honor and immortality. R5563:1

Into the porch -- Where the shadows were deeper and the people fewer. R5568:4

Mark 14:71

Began to curse -- This account of cursing, omitted by John, is supposed to have been indited by Peter himself, Mark being Peter's amanuensis. R2469:5

In terror. R4488:5

Peter's crime was nothing like that of Judas, he had merely sought to protect himself, he had not sought to even risk the injury of his Master. R5563:5

Foreshadowing the testing of the sanctuary class now. C188

I know not this man -- This was prior to his being anointed by the holy Spirit. F223

This has been a blessing to the Lord's followers, knowing that they, too, were sometimes overtaken in a fault. R3368:1

Mark 14:72

And Peter -- His crime was nothing like that of Judas; he had merely sought to protect himself. R5563:5

He wept -- Jesus lifted up his eyes and looked at Peter--a sympathetic glance, not an angered one--but it went straight to the heart. R5563:5

A great blessing to all the Lord's followers in their weaknesses and faults. They have learned from Peter to weep bitterly for these shortcomings. R3368:1

After he had it out with God in tears and prayers, he started again in the good way. R5331:6

The thoroughness of Peter's repentance is abundantly testified to by his subsequent loyalty, even unto death. R5563:5

Both Peter and Judas repented; the one who was merely entrapped was accepted back to divine favor. R3760:1

Tradition relates that ever after Peter arose at cock-crowing, made a fresh remembrance of his weakness and accepted divine forgiveness. R3368:1

Tradition has it that, remembering how he had denied the Master, felt it too great an honor to share the same form of death and, at his own request, was crucified head downward. R5563:5

Mark 15

Mark 15:1

In the morning -- Friday, 14th Nisan. R4212:4*

With sunrise, the Sanhedrin met officially. R3368:1

A consolation -- To ratify the illegal trial of the night previous. R3367:5, 1809:3

Respecting how they should present the matter before Pilate. R3368:1

The whole council -- To make sure their purpose should be accomplished. (Luke 23:1) R1809:3

Delivered him -- Israel rejected Jesus in the flesh. R251

Mark 15:2

Art thou -- It is possible that some of the Lord's people may be branded as blasphemers and hailed before governments on the charges of preaching Christ as another King. R3369:6

The King of the Jews -- Blasphemy being no crime under Roman law, they made the charge treason against the Roman government. R3368:1, 1809:6
The Roman governor cared nothing for the Sanhedrin's religious ideas. R1809:6

Thou sayest it -- Not quite equivalent to yes, yet it intimated that he did not wish to dispute the charge. R3368:4

Mark 15:3

Accused him -- Before the Sanhedrin, the charge was blasphemy for its effect upon the people; here an entirely different equally false set of charges involving treason, more likely to arouse the wrath of the Roman rulers. R1809:6

Of many things -- Treason against the Roman government; that he declared that there was another King besides Caesar, namely, himself, the Messiah; and that he had forbidden to pay taxes to Caesar's government. R3368:2, 1810:1

They evasively answered that of course he was a wicked man, worthy of punishment; else they would not be there at all accusing him. R5570:2

Mark 15:4

Pilate asked him again -- Not readily accepting the charges of the Pharisees. He knew them to be hypocritical. R3368:3

Mark 15:5

Yet answered nothing -- "As a sheep before her shearer is dumb." (Isa. 53:7) R3368:4, 1815:6, 1359:5

Pilate marvelled -- That any one could be so indifferent to the results of his trial. R3368:4

Mark 15:6

He released -- As a matter of clemency and favor. R3368:5

Mark 15:9

Will ye -- His thought evidently was to arouse in them, to some extent, an enthusiasm in favor of his liberation of Jesus. R3368:5

Release unto you -- Thinking this a favorable opportunity to dispose of Jesus and get him out of the hands of the chief priests and leaders of the people. R5571:1

Mark 15:10

For he knew -- Pilate perceived that something in Jesus' teachings appealed to the people more than did the teachings of these religious rulers, and that he was being asked to perform a mean and unjust act for persons who sought to shirk their own responsibility. R5570:3

For envy -- As Joseph, a type of Jesus, was rejected by his brethren for envy. R3971:3

Mark 15:11

The chief priests -- Annas, the high priest, was subsequently dragged through the streets, scourged and murdered. R3369:3

Barabbas -- The world's natural choice is for one of murderous spirit rather than a saint. R3896:2

Religious fanaticism is the deepest, wickedest and most conscienceless of hatreds. R2313:2

Mark 15:13

They cried out -- At the close of Jesus' ministry only about five hundred worthy ones had been found. Israel was not ready to be used of God in the blessing of the other nations. R4593:5

Crucify him -- The most ignominious and cruel method, so that his memory should ever be covered with infamy. R1810:4

When they rejected the King they rejected the kingdom. R4557:2

Mark 15:14

Then Pilate -- Neither a Jew nor a Christian, but a heathen man. R3368:2, 3895:6

The persecutions under Pagan Rome were not worthy of comparison with those under Papal Rome. Under Pagan Rome the charges against Christians were frequently dismissed with contempt (as Pilate and Herod attempted to do). B330

Crucify him -- The common people furnished not only multitudes to cry Hosanna, but also later, multitudes to cry, "Crucify him, crucify him," under the influence of their leaders. NS630:3

The voice of the people can be relied upon in some matters, but as respects religious things the voice of the people is far from being the voice of God. R3369:5

It must not prejudice our judgments to find the popular voice against us also. R3369:5

The closing scenes of the Church's experience may resemble that of our Redeemer, accused of blasphemy and treason. R3369:5

Mark 15:15

And so Pilate -- Shortly afterwards, he lost his commission as governor and, in despondency, committed suicide. R3369:3

Willing to content -- Influenced more by considerations of policy than of principle, willing to satisfy the people, yet protesting the innocence of the prisoner and washing his hands in token of his own innocence. R1810:4

While recognizing that he failed to take the noble part, we are far from sharing with the majority in their very ignominious view of this governor. R3368:2

And delivered Jesus -- Not amenable to our God, for he knew him not; but merely to Caesar, and Caesar only expected him to preserve the peace and quiet of the city and maintain the dignity and authority of Rome. R3368:3

Scourged him -- Perhaps hoping that the scourging would satisfy his adversaries' thirst for blood. R3369:1, 3896:1

"Yet learned he obedience by the things which he suffered." (Heb. 5:8) E51

To be crucified -- Our Lord's death was the first in which the victim was entirely innocent. The only one, therefore, whose dying was wholly voluntary. R3369:3

Mark 15:17

With purple -- Robed him as a King and had some sport with him. R3369:1

Mark 15:19

They smote him -- It would seem that this would have exhausted the forces of nature; but our Lord, as a perfect man, had extraordinary powers of endurance. R1815:3

"I gave my back to the smiters, and my cheeks to them that plucked off the hair." (Isa. 50:6) E52

Similarly, in the end of this age, we may expect that the Body of Christ will also suffer violence. R5577:5

Did spit upon -- "I hid not my face from shame and spitting." (Isa. 50:6) E52

Mark 15:21

Simon, a Cyrenian -- Tradition has it that the Cyrenian became one of the followers of the Nazarene, through having the truth of the Savior's message borne upon his heart by the experiences of that hour. R5577:2, 4171:6

Where were Peter, John, James, Thomas and the other apostles, that they did not volunteer assistance? Doubtless they were deterred by fear. R5577:2, 3369:6

Out of the country -- A passing farmer. R5577:2

Alexander and Rufus -- The mention of their names is strong corroboration of the tradition that Simon was known to the apostle and that he ultimately became a Christian. R4172:1

To bear his cross -- Carrying the hinder part which usually dragged. (Luke 23:26) R3369:6, 2787:1

Whether by carrying the cross entirely or by walking behind Jesus and carrying a portion of the weight is not made very clear by the original text. R5577:2, 4171:6, 3369:6, 2787:1

Greatly weakened by three years of ministry, giving his vitality freely in healing of diseases; and being in a constant strain, without sleep, from the time he had sent his disciples to prepare the Passover. R5577:2, 3370:1 He took the infirmities of humanity until much weakened. E125

The opportunity is with us now to take up the cross and follow after him. R2787:1

If disposed to envy Simon his privilege, let us reflect that many of the Lord's brethren are daily bearing symbolic crosses and that it is our privilege to assist them. R3370:1, 2473:2

If no brother sees his privilege, the Lord will send the aid necessary, even though it be impressed and that because of the sympathy of the worldly. R3370:1

As the wooden cross was not his heaviest burden, so his followers have crosses which the world sees not, but which the "brethren" should understand. R3370:1

Mark 15:22

They bring him -- Each of the three prisoners being under the guard of four Roman soldiers, with a centurion in command, sixteen persons in all. R2787:1, 3369:6

Foremost went one who bore a white board on which was written the crime for which the prisoner was to be executed. R2473:5

The place of a skull -- Because the slope of the hill closely resembled a skull in shape and color, dark crevices in the face of the rock corresponding to the eye sockets and nose cavity. R3370:2, 2473:3 About three-quarters of a mile from Pilate's Judgment Hall. R3370:1

The significance of the Hebrew word; the Latin name for a skull being Calvary. R2473:3

Mark 15:23

They gave him -- Not an indignity, but an act of kindness. R3370:2

Mingled with myrrh -- Sour wine with bitter narcotics, to deaden sensibility to pain and reduce suffering. R3370:2, 1815:3

A society of women customarily undertook this act of mercy for victims of Roman crucifixion. R3370:2, 1815:3

Received it not -- Preferring to have his mind awake and clear to the last. R1815:3

Matthew informs us he tasted it, as a token of appreciation, but he refused to drink of it, preferring to experience the full measure of pain and suffering the Father's wisdom, love and justice had prepared for him. R3370:2, 2473:3, 1815:3

Mark 15:24

Crucified him -- The cross was laid on the ground. The victim was stretched upon it. Nails were driven through the feet and hands. A still more trying moment came when the cross, lifted by sturdy men, was allowed to drop into the socket prepared for it in the rock. R3370:2

Parted his garments -- Indicating the stony-heartedness of the Roman soldiers. R5578:1

His outer robe, his head dress, sandals and girdle--enough to give one piece to each. R3370:3

Hence, the clothing in which Jesus appeared after his resurrection was as specially created for the occasion as was the body in which he appeared. B128

Cast lots -- "For his vesture they did cast lots." (Psa. 22:18) R3370:3

Mark 15:25

The third hour -- Jewish reckoning; or nine o'clock, Friday morning, our reckoning. R3370:3, 1815:3

They crucified him -- The death-warrant was signed by Pilate about nine o'clock in the morning--the trial of Jesus and Pilate's various attempts to secure his release having occupied three hours. R2473:2

Mark 15:26

Was written -- In three languages: Hebrew, the language of the country; Greek, the language of the visitors and the educated; and Latin, the language of the empire and of the soldiers. R2473:5

Latin, the official or governmental language of Rome; Greek, the classical language of that period; and Hebrew, the language of the Jews. R3370:3, 2493:5

JEW -- The term "Jew" had come to be synonymous with the term "Israel." R2085:1, 1341:1

Mark 15:27

And with him -- "He was numbered with the transgressors." (Isa. 53:12) R3561:5, 3370:4, 1815:6

Crucify two thieves -- The chief priests may have thus tried to detract from the injustice of their course, or perhaps to demean Jesus. R3370:4

Mark 15:28

The scripture was fulfilled -- Isaiah 53:12. R1815:6, 3561:5, 3370:4

Mark 15:29

That passed by -- Golgotha was on a frequented route. R3370:4

Railed on him -- Now satisfied that his claims were false, that probably his miracles were deceptions wrought, as the Pharisees said, by the power of Beelzebub, the prince of devils. R3370:4

"As he is so are we in this world." (1 John 4:17) R2316:5

Wagging their heads -- "We did esteem him smitten and afflicted of God." (Isa. 53:4) R2316:5

Thou that destroyest -- He had not spoken of destroying their Temple, but had said that if they destroyed the Temple, it would be reared again within three (antitypical) days. R3370:5

To a sensitive mind like our Lord's, such a charge of misrepresentation would be a burden upon his heart, yet he bore it patiently. R3370:6

The temple -- The true Church. R3081:1; T70

In three days -- The last of the fifth, all of the sixth, and the early part of the seventh thousand-year day. R3375:2

Mark 15:30

Save thyself -- It never occurred to them that any one would voluntarily lay down his life for his friend. Neither did they conceive of the necessity or object of the Lord's death. R3370:5

Come down from the cross -- We are so glad that Jesus did not come down from the cross, and thus leave us in our sins and the whole world unredeemed. R3370:6

Mark 15:31

The chief priests -- Neglecting, doubtless, important matters, in their eagerness to make sure that he did not escape them. R3370:4

He saved others -- A singular admission of the truth. R3370:6

Himself he cannot save -- A deeper significance than they realized. Only by the sacrifice of himself could he hope to save others. R1815:6
He could have saved himself. (Matt. 26:53) R5195:4

Mark 15:32

The King of Israel -- All Israel, the twelve tribes. C293; R1341:1

Pilate called him "King of the Jews" (verse 26); proving that the term Jew and Israelite were synonymous. R2085:1

That we may see -- Eventually those who crucified the Lord shall look upon him whom they pierced and mourn because of him. R3370:6

They that were crucified -- Perhaps both, but probably only one--the other for a time keeping silent, but afterward speaking in defense of Jesus, as related in another Gospel. R3371:1

Mark 15:33

There was darkness -- Seems to have been a supernatural darkness, for an eclipse of the sun was impossible during the full moon of the Passover time. R1816:4

Doubtless an expression of divine wrath and as typical of the darkness of alienation from God into which that long-favored nation had plunged by this act. R1816:4

Picturing the temporary triumph of the power of darkness over him who is the Light of the world. R3902:6

God hung the world in mourning when the creature crucified the Creator. It was God's miracle, calling the attention of the world, at that time assembled in Jerusalem, to the depth of the crime committed. R4394:4*

Until the ninth hour -- 3 o'clock PM--the time for the daily evening sacrifice, the time Christ died. R2316:6, 3371:1, 1815:6

Mark 15:34

A loud voice -- Indicating considerable vitality still. R3371:1

My God, my God -- Attests to us the fact that he did not claim to be the Heavenly Father, but the Son of God. R5578:5

Why hast thou forsaken -- The penalty of sin was not merely to die, but also to be cut off from fellowship with God. Jesus, in taking the sinner's place, must for a moment at least have the full experience of the sinner's alienation. R5578:5, 2474:4

Jehovah's sustaining power must necessarily be withdrawn to make the sacrifice complete. R1816:4

Evidently it had been hidden from him up to this time that he must suffer this phase of the punishment of Adam's transgression. R2474:5

Now he must sink beneath the rod and be cut off from the favor of God, that so, by his stripes, we might be healed. R1816:4

Because Adam as a sinner was cut off from fellowship with God, his substitute was obliged to have a similar experience. R3371:6, 2474:4; F143

The language of real, not pro forma, agony. E94

He bore the sinner's penalty in all its particulars. E128; R5578:5

Such a dark moment might be permitted even the most worthy follower of the Lamb. F143

Mark 15:36

Filled a sponge -- From it he sucked refreshing moisture for by this time, under such circumstances, he must have developed a raging fever.

R3371:2

Let alone -- Our Lord's last prayer was heard even by his enemies.

R2252:1

Mark 15:37

And Jesus cried -- Exhausting all his remaining vitality, the last triumph of victorious faith. R1816:4

What he said is not recorded in Mark's account, but Luke gives it as,

"Father, into thy hands I commit my spirit"--my life. (Luke 23:46) R3371:2

Gave up the ghost -- An old English term. He died. R2788:5

Breathed out his last breath, let go his hold upon life. R3903:4

Mark 15:38

Veil of the temple -- 60 ft. long, 30 ft. wide, 4 inches thick. R3371:2

Separating the Holy and Most Holy. R3371:2

The Jew might well stand awe-struck at the rending of the heavy veil and the throwing open to the gaze of all that which for centuries was regarded as too sacred a place to be entered but once in the year. R4394:4*

Was rent in twain -- Christ has opened a new and living way through the veil, that is to say, through the sacrifice of his flesh. R3371:2

Representing the opening of the way between heaven itself and the heavenly condition of true believers still in the world. R3371:2, 2788:5

Top to the bottom -- Not from the bottom toward the top, as if it were the result of wear, but from the top to the bottom, indicating a manifestation of divine power. R3371:2

Implying the work was God's. R2788:5

Mark 15:39

Gave up the ghost -- The centurion was convinced of our Lord's death and so reported to Pilate. R2476:2

The death of Christ was so important that its proofs should be indubitable. R2476:2

The Son of God -- The closing scenes of the drama evidently were very awe-inspiring, to his friends and enemies. R2788:5

Many were willing at last to admit that the occurrences were remarkable, and corroborated to some extent the Master's claims. R2788:6

Mark 15:40

Salome -- The wife of Cleophas. R2473:4

Mark 15:41

Ministered unto him -- Provided for the physical wants of Jesus and the twelve. Not by soliciting alms, but out of their abundance. F286

Mark 15:44

Pilate marvelled -- Evidence that Jesus' death was not the direct result of crucifixion. He lived only six hours on the cross. Men who were crucified usually lived much longer, even for days. Christ's death was a voluntary act in the divine administration. R198:1*

Were already dead -- He died sooner than usual, not because blemished, but because weakened by his healing ministry: "Himself took our infirmities and bare our sicknesses." (Matt. 8:17) F123, 124

Mark 15:45

He knew it of the centurion -- The centurion charged with the execution was convinced of his death, and so reported to Pilate, the Governor. R3903:2

Mark 16

Mark 16:1

Sabbath was past -- Early on Sunday morning. R4212:5*

The wave of sheaf, and its antitype, the resurrection of Christ, were "when the Sabbath was past"--the eighth day, or first day of a new week. (Lev. 23:11) R108:3*

Mary Magdalene -- How great was the reward of these devoted women--last at the cross and first at the sepulchre. R1816:6

Salome -- Also Joanna, the wife of Chuza, Herod's steward; according to Luke 24:10. R4176:3

Sweet spices -- To show sympathy and love for the deceased. R2317:3
If our Lord had been crucified on Thursday there would have been all day Friday in which they could have completed the work of embalming. R1816:6
His friends believed that he was dead and wrapped him in spices for burial: indeed in their grief they seem to have forgotten his promise of a resurrection--so much so that even after he had risen it was with difficulty that they were convinced. R3903:3

Anoint him -- Anxious to bestow the last tokens of their esteem and love. R1816:6

Mark 16:2

And very early -- "The Lord shall help her early in the morning." (Psa. 46:5) R3375:3

In the morning -- The entire Body of Christ will be raised on the third thousand-year day, early in the morning. R3375:3

The Lord was a part of the three days dead and rose on the third day, early in the morning, and that likewise the first resurrection will be complete--the entire Body of Christ will be raised on the third day, early in the morning. R3375:2

When our Lord spoke, "Destroy this temple and in three days I will raise it up"--"he spake of the temple of his body" (John 2:19, 21) which is the Church. R3375:2

First day of the week -- The "third day" after his death (Luke 24:21, 46; 1 Cor. 15:4; Lev. 23:11) R3574:5* The resurrection of Christ, the antitype of the wave of sheaf, was the eighth day, or first day of a new week. (Lev. 23:11) R108:3*
Sunday, 16th Nisan. R4212:5*

Mark 16:3

Roll us away -- In their eagerness they forgot the great obstacle of the stone; but the sweet incense of their devotion arose to heaven, and God sent his angel to remove the obstacle. R1816:6

Mark 16:4

Was rolled away -- The sweet incense of the women's devotion arose to heaven and God sent his angel to remove the obstacle. R1816:6

Mark 16:6

He is risen -- The birth, death and resurrection of our Lord are the three circumstances of his first advent which should be remembered by every child of God. His birth was the dawn of hope for our race; his death was the seal of pardon and peace; and his resurrection was the assurance which God gave of the efficacy of his blood. R1631:3, 5579:3

Jesus, the human soul, died; but he was raised from the dead a soul of a higher order. He that ascended was the same as he that had previously descended from the heavenly to the earthly condition. R5578:6

The resurrection of our Lord is the assurance of the resurrection of mankind. R1816:2, 1631:4

His resurrection was the assurance which God gave to all men of the efficacy of his precious blood. R1631:3, 5579:3

The doctrine of the resurrection is peculiar to the Jewish and Christian religions. R3903:5

To presume that Christ's glorious body is but the reanimated body of his humiliation is to deny the assertion of the Apostle that "it doth not yet appear" what a spiritual body is. (1 John 3:2) R1817:4

He is not here -- The removal of the crucified body from the tomb was necessary to establish in the minds of the disciples the fact of his resurrection. If it had remained there it would have been an insurmountable barrier to their faith. R1817:4

Mark 16:7

Go your way -- It seems that Mary Magdalene separated from the other women and ran to tell Peter and John. (John 20:1, 2) B112

Tell his disciples -- Carefully looking up each one of "the eleven," sending the women who were first to the sepulcher to communicate the fact of his resurrection to each of them. R1522:4

And Peter -- Specially mentioned lest he should be overcome with discouragement on account of his previous unfaithfulness. R1522:4, 5053:5, 4714:1

Setting us an example of benevolence and forgiveness without request. R5053:5

Mary hastened to the home of John, where Peter was lodging. R4176:3

He goeth before you -- Because in his resurrection Jesus was so different, we are prepared to understand why he conducted himself so differently from that which he had done before. R5578:6

Into Galilee -- Their home. B112

Shall ye see him -- After his resurrection we find our Lord promptly taking up his work just where it had been broken off by his death--the work of still further preparing the apostles to bear reliable testimony to the whole Church. R1522:4

Mark 16:9

Now when Jesus -- No part of the 16th chapter of Mark, after the 8th verse, is genuine. R3311:5, 4359:3, 3728:3, 2871:6, 2675:5, 2141:5, 1536:6, 1314:3; F637, 649; HG720:3; Q325:T, 747:4; NS345:1, 859:5, 860:6 Omitted in the Sinaitic and Vatican manuscripts. Evidently Mark's Gospel was originally incomplete and someone undertook to finish it about the fifth century. The fifth century Alexandrian manuscript is the oldest to contain the last 12 verses. R1998:5; HG403:3; SM568:1

These verses are spurious according to the American Standard Version, the Diaglott, and the Revised Version. HG261:4

Some of the items in these verses are found in other Gospels. It would never do to add a lie without a certain amount of covering of truth to sugarcoat it. NS859:5

Every theory which requires bolstering up by spurious passages should be abandoned, and will be abandoned by those who are honest truth-seekers. NS681:2

He appeared first -- The first of a maximum of eleven appearances (all enumerated in the article). R3905:2-5

We do not use such terms as "manifesting" ourselves or "appearing" to one another, but they are used respecting Jesus because in his resurrection he was a Spirit being. CR367:3, 467:2

He appeared in various fleshly forms materialized. R266:5; CR467:2

It was necessary the apostles should be a witness to testify Jesus was risen from the dead. CR467:1

To Mary Magdalene -- He was still their Lord and Master, the same Jesus, although no longer Jesus in the flesh. R3905:2

Out of whom he had cast seven devils -- She from thenceforth became one of the Lord's most earnest followers. R3375:5

Mark 16:10

And she went -- Verses 10 to 20 are spurious. To sanction them would be to join with those who wrote them in adding to the Word of God. (Rev. 22:18) Q747:4

Mark 16:12

After that -- Where was he the remainder of the time? Present, but invisible. R579:2, 18:5

He appeared -- Seven times in the flesh, once in glory above the brightness of the sun. He was the same at all times, but the manifestations were different. R5579:4

Sunday afternoon; the fourth of possibly eleven appearances. R3905:3

He is said to appear, or show himself, language never used of him before his change from a natural to a spiritual body; now, as angels had done, he appeared. R579:2, 18:5

In another form -- Not only as a different person, but also in different clothing; for his clothing had been parted amongst the soldiers. R5579:1 He created, or materialized, a body and clothing in their presence; and after a few moments he vanished out of their sight, dissolving the body and the clothing, while he, the spirit being, remained invisible. R5579:1 The manner of the testimony of the resurrection proves three things: (1) the fact of the resurrection; (2) the Lord's change of nature, and (3) his personal identity, notwithstanding the change of nature. R1816:5

Sat at meat -- Since our Lord made himself known several times in connection with their partaking of food, the early Church appears to have gotten into the habit of having a simple meal in common in remembrance of this--a sort of love feast. R1421:2

Mark 16:15

Go ye -- This verse and all this chapter from verse nine to the close is acknowledged by all scholars to be an interpolation. We should better use the well-authenticated words of Matt. 28:19. R4359:3, 3728:3, 3311:5, 2871:6, 2675:5, 2141:5

It was necessary that the twelve apostles bear witness to the fact that Jesus had risen for there could have been no Gospel message of hope of divine favor through a dead Savior. R5579:2

God gave all his consecrated followers authority to preach the good news of a New Covenant, another chance to all mankind to gain everlasting life. R807:1

Into all the world -- Indicating that it was no longer confined to the Jew. R605:1

Flash forth the truth into every nook and corner where dark creeds and black theories have so long lain. R825:6

Mark 16:15

Preach the gospel -- So long as the apostles could reasonably, properly find hearers for the Master's word, they preached it. So it must be with us. We must not be intimidated. R4317:4

Each steward of the manifold grace of God should remember his commission. R825:5, 4317:4

To every creature -- Greek, ktisis, meaning, man in the flesh. HG31:4
When our Lord broke down the middle wall of partition between Jew and Gentile the Gospel went to every creature; not that every creature would hear, but that there was no longer a distinction to be made. HG188:4

Mark 16:16

He that believeth -- It is consecrated believers only who may be developed and perfected now--he that believeth and is baptized. R605:2
The test or judgment of the Church during the Gospel age is "not works, but faith." R700:3

No man will be saved without faith in Christ as his ransom; some in this age, the vast majority in the coming age. R936:1

Baptized -- Immersed in water in the likeness of the real immersion into death. R937:4, 606:3

With the baptism that Christ was baptized with, into death. R605:3, 606:3, 936:4

Shall be saved -- During this age; the advantage to this class is the high exaltation to a new nature--the spiritual. R606:3, 700:3

These words are in accord with the teachings of the Gospel. Only those who hear about the Lord Jesus, who believe and make a consecration--are baptized into his death--belong to the class God is now saving. All the remainder are damned, more properly, condemned, in Father Adam because of his disobedience. HG345:1

Shall be damned -- Greek, katakrino, rejected. The great mass of mankind will be condemned as unfit for the service of the Master in this "high calling." He that believeth shall be chosen, he that believeth not, shall be rejected. HG17:2 Our word "damned," from misusage and the bad theology of the Dark Ages, has a sulphurous odor, whereas its plain, simple meaning is the same as the word "condemn." NS860:3, 859:5

Or condemned, as entirely unfit to receive the favor during this age; but not irrecoverably damned as unfit for service, for restitution. R606:3, 936:4

Mark 16:17

These signs shall follow -- Verse 17 and 18 are an interpolation, made somewhere about the fifth century. F637

These words are not true of the Lord's followers. R3728:3

Neither observation nor history attests the fulfillment of such a statement. It is evident that these signs do not now accompany belief in Christ. R1998:5

With new tongues -- A Satanic counterfeit of the gift of unknown tongues of Pentecost, now deluding honest souls throughout Christendom. R3941:2-5

It is our understanding that the speaking in unknown tongues in religious meetings is a deception being practiced upon earnest children of God.
NS861:5

Mark 16:18

Any deadly thing -- Spurious. The thought that the Lord's people may be specially favored of him in respect to physical health and other creature comforts is a delusion and a snare. F650 Not hurt them -- Our Lord did not use his power, so far as the record shows, upon any of his followers or disciples. R3728:4

While no immunity from poisons, bites and stings is granted to the Gospel Church, we have the Lord's promise that nothing shall by any means hurt us as new creatures. R2675:5

They shall recover -- Let us not seek for the loaves and fishes of physical healing, but let us seek spiritual health and vigor, and all these temporal things shall be added unto us according to divine wisdom and love. R3728:6

Mark 16:19

So then after -- The manifestations in the flesh during the forty days corresponded exactly to the manifestations which Jesus had made long previously, one of which was to Abraham. R5579:4

These forty days were necessary, for teaching: (1) that he was no longer dead, but alive; and (2) that he was no longer a man, but a spirit. R5579:1

Into heaven -- "Where he was before." (John 6:62) R1059:3, 445:5*

On the right hand -- Comparing John 6:62 and Mark 16:19 we conclude that before his advent to earth Jesus occupied the right hand position, but was not so exalted as his present position. (Phil 2:9) R1059:3, 445:5*
Not the Father's position, but the chief position at the Father's right hand--right hand signifying the chief position of favor or power. R445:5*

Mark 16:20

The Lord working -- By whatever means the apostles confirmed the word, it was by the power of the Lord Jesus working with them--whether by destruction of life or by healing. R61:6*

With signs following -- But Paul shows us (1 Cor. 13:8-10) that when the necessity for such signs is done away they no longer continue. R605:3

Luke

General

Luke, the physician, was not one of the apostles, and his records are not therefore of apostolic authority. Such authority or plenary inspiration was not necessary, however, in the recording of plain, simple facts such as the Gospel of Luke and the books of Acts present. It is reasonable to assume that since the Lord used Luke's abilities in connection with the work of recording the facts of that time he was guided of the holy Spirit in the ascertainment of the facts, which his education and natural talents eminently qualified him to state succinctly. Luke was guided of the holy Spirit, in the same sense that all of the Lord's consecrated people are guided by his Spirit, which is to a different degree from the plenary inspiration granted to the twelve apostles. R2924:1

See also "THE FOUR GOSPELS--GENERAL"

Luke 1

Luke 1:1

Forasmuch -- It would have been easy for dishonest men to have omitted these introductory words and have given the gospel the name of James, Paul, Andrew, Peter, or Nathaniel. R2816:4

Believed among us -- Among us primitive Christians. R2816:3

Luke 1:2

Even as they -- The apostles. R2816:3

Luke 1:3

To me -- Luke, a physician. R2924:1

To write -- The transition from oral to written teaching was gradual. R434:5*

Most excellent Theophilus -- A friend, supposed to have been a person of considerable dignity and influence. R2924:1

Comparing this with Acts 1:1, we see that Luke is the author of that book as well. R5829:1

Luke 1:4

That thou mightest know -- The oral word being committed to writing by apostles and evangelists, and accredited publicly by the churches in the lifetime of the writers. R434:5*

The certainty -- The unerring certainty. R434:5*

Luke 1:6

Both righteous -- John was given them in answer to prayer. R1671:6

The preparation for John's ministry began before he was born, in the hearts of his parents. R1915:3

The "chosen vessel" is always a prepared vessel and this preparation from God begins long before the chosen one knows of it. R1915:6

Luke 1:13

John -- The Redeemer's forerunner and herald. R4940:4, 4939:2; B253; CR400:2

Luke 1:15

Shall be great -- Because of favorable prenatal conditions. R1671:3, 1916:1

Most highly honored of all the prophets in that he was chosen to introduce the Son of God to Israel and the world. R1916:4

He was a great man, preacher and prophet; great in the sense that he that ruleth his own spirit, according to divine principles, is greater than he that taketh a city. (Prov. 16:32) R1916:1

At maturity he was ready for the work of introducing to Israel the long-promised Messiah. R1916:1

"He that is greatest among you, let him be as ...he that doth serve."

(Luke 22:26) R1916:5

Patiently submit to the humbling now, and joyfully wait for the glory by and by. R1916:5

Sight of the Lord -- Because meek and lowly of heart. R1916:2

But not in the eyes of man; never a guest in the palace of Herod, but a prisoner; no orator, but a "voice crying in the wilderness" (Isa. 40:3); not arrayed in purples, but in camels' hair. R1916:1

The great ones of earth have passed away; they have all come to naught, and in the Millennial judgment they will come forth to shame and confusion of face. R1916:4

Wine -- From Greek, oinos, grape wine, which always intoxicates when used to excess. R509:4

Filled with the Holy Ghost -- God's power began to operate upon him at his birth, and even before. CR400:2

After the same manner that the other prophets throughout the Jewish age had been under that holy Spirit. R2562:3

We must not understand this to mean that he was begotten of the holy Spirit, in the sense that Christians are begotten of it. R2562:3

From his mother's womb -- The Scriptures make plain the fact that children may and should be consecrated to the Lord by their parents before their birth, or even their begetting; so that the little one may ratify the covenant of consecration at a tender age. R1671:3

His prenatal influences were such that, from his birth, his heart was inclined toward God and holiness. R1916:1

Luke 1:16

Shall he turn -- Restore harmony between Israel and "the fathers", the patriarchs, etc. R557:4

Representing that the world shall come into a condition of harmony and peace with God. R557:4

Luke 1:17

Shall go before him -- Jesus. R556:6

In the spirit -- John the Baptist was not actually Elijah returned to earth, neither is the Church. B253

We know positively that John was not Elijah for we have his own testimony on the subject. "And they asked him, Art thou Elijah? And he said, I am not." (John 1:21) Q772:4, 817:2

And power of Elias -- An uncompromising and fearless spirit, backed by the power of divine truth. R1379:2

Doing an Elijah work for fleshly Israel, introducing Christ in the flesh. B253

All who have this spirit and the power of present truth concerning the Kingdom and Christ's presence, constitute the Elias. R1379:2

As the man Christ Jesus was introduced by the man John doing an Elijah work, so the glorious Christ must be preceded by a great Elijah, making ready for the second advent. R2839:1

The Elijah class will now call attention to the present Christ. R557:2

Elijah and John represented the true and faithful witnesses of this Gospel age. R557:2

John the Baptist stood for, or represented, a multitudinous Elijah, as Jesus stood for, or represented, a multitudinous Christ. R557:1

"If ye will receive it, this is the Elias." (Matt. 11:14) R1379:1

To turn the hearts -- To prepare the way of Messiah by performing a reformation work in preaching repentance and baptism for the remission of sins and declaring the Kingdom of heaven at hand. Q772:4

John's work as Elijah did not fail because of his own lack of faith, but because of the Jews' unreadiness of heart to be influenced by him. R2838:6

To the wisdom -- In a word, to restore harmony between Israel and the "fathers," the patriarchs, and, in a fuller sense, the world whom Israel typified shall come into a condition of harmony with God, similar to that of the "fathers." R557:4

As a forerunner or introducer. R2838:6

Make ready a people -- Preparing the way for the reign of the glorified Church and its glorious head, by making ready a people prepared, the Little Flock. R557:2

Luke 1:20

Thou shalt be dumb -- If Zacharias' faith was tested, it was found strong, and was assisted by his nine-month experience of dumbness. R4940:4

Luke 1:24

Elizabeth conceived -- As, in the cases of Sarah (Gen. 18:9-14), Hannah (1 Sam. 1:5-27) and the Shunamite (2 Kings 4:14-17), the miraculous interposition of divine power quickened the natural forces where they had been dormant, inoperative or entirely suspended. R560:6*

Luke 1:26

In the sixth month -- Probably on Christmas day of the year 3 BC. B62

Gabriel was sent -- The chiefest messenger remaining in the courts of glory. R490:5

Luke 1:27

Virgin -- This child was specially begotten by divine power though Mary was still a virgin when she brought forth the child. R4964:1

Luke 1:28

The angel came in -- Christmas day is more properly the annunciation day, or the date of his human begetting. R3468:2, 3114:3, 2558:4; B61

Blessed art thou -- The fact that Mary was honored by the Lord above all other women, in that she was chosen to be the mother of Jesus according to the flesh, would prove her nobility of character and purity of heart. R2558:3

Fear not -- Not fearing reproach from Joseph or the world. E102

Found favor -- Mary was full of faith and the joy of the Lord, to be an instrument in his plan. E102

Luke 1:31

Jesus -- Signifies Savior, or Liberator--"For he shall save his people from their sins." (Matt. 1:21) R1006:1, 270:2, 134:2

Luke 1:32

He shall be great -- Naturally sustaining the misconception of the character of the first advent. This was the Messiah they were looking for, not "a man of sorrows." (Isa. 53:3) Yet he taught, by precept and example: "He that would be great, let him be the servant of all." (Mark 10:43,44) HG72:1

Son of the Highest -- Fulfilling the predictions respecting the Messiah; the long-promised seed of Abraham. R5157:2, 5300:5

The title of the Son of God officially applied to the man Christ Jesus before his birth, and this title he constantly approved. NS256:6

And the Lord God -- The whole gospel dispensation comes between the beginning and ending of this text. HG52:5

Throne of his father -- Christ Jesus is the promised scion of David's house, the heir of his throne, referring to the dignity, power and authority of office which David exercised. C257

Not needful that he should have a human father of the Davidic line. The principle of inherited royalty through a mother is illustrated in the current (1883) heir apparent to the throne of Great Britain, the Prince of Wales, not through his father, but through his mother, the queen. R453:1 In Jewish genealogies it was customary to reckon lineage through either parent. R453:1

The throne of David is the emblem, or symbol, of David's reign, or kingdom; and David's reign, or kingdom, is a type, or figure, or shadow, of the reign, or Kingdom, of David's Son and Lord. R1283:1*

David -- The throne of David is the symbol of David's reign; a type of the Kingdom of David's Son and Lord. R1283:1, 1063:1

The long-promised King of David's line, the Messiah. PD65/77; SM210:2; C257; E130, 133

Also called the "seed of Abraham" (Gal. 3:16; Rom. 4:13) and the "seed of the woman [Eve]." (Gen. 3:15) R1063:1*

Luke 1:35

The Holy Ghost -- Jesus was begotten, not by Joseph, but by the holy Spirit. R3291:2, 4964:1, 432:4, 84:3

Come upon thee -- The narrative of Jesus' miraculous conception has the very best and oldest Greek MSS. to support it--the Sinaitic, Vatican and Alexandrian in Luke; though the account is missing in Matthew--not omitted. R434:4

The life principle by which Jesus was conceived came directly from the Heavenly Father. R5064:3, 1031:1*, 432:4

That holy thing -- "Holy, harmless, undefiled, separate from sinners."

(Heb. 7:26) E95; R5748:2, 3710:3, 3291:6, 776:1, 453:1, 432:4

Holy, because his life did not come from Adam, the contaminated fountain. E103; R777:1,5, 432:4

He knew no sin, while all other men are sinners by nature. (2 Cor. 5:21; Rom. 5:18; 1 Pet. 2:22) R776:2

He partook of the human nature without its condemnation. R1247:5

He did not partake of the condemned or forfeited life of Adam through Joseph, but of a life as directly from God as was the first Adam's; an unforfeited life which he could give for the life of Adam and all who died in him. R432:4*, 316:1*

His life came directly from heaven (Heb. 1:5) and he was therefore, though human, yet free, both from Adamic sin and its penalty, death. R1031:1*, 997:6

The only obstacle to the generation of a perfect man is the lack of a perfect father to give a perfect life-germ. In the case of Jesus a perfect life-germ was transferred by divine power from a pre-existent condition to the embryo human condition. R777:1; E103

If we can have a perfect life germ we can have a perfect child from an imperfect mother. If a breeder of stock wishes to raise the standard of his stock, he selects a fine bull, and thus improves his entire herd. And so, if we had perfect fathers, we would soon have a perfect race. R4964:1

What was needed was not merely a sacrifice for sins, but a sinless sacrifice, which would thus pay the sinner's penalty. E96

Our Lord was unlike sinners in respect to sin, imperfection; but like them in the sense of having their same nature or flesh--he, in its perfection; they, in various degrees of imperfection through sin. R997:6

Born of thee -- Though retaining perfection, he partook of the nature of his mother. R777:5, 1247:5

He was the seed of the woman (Gen. 3:15), and not the seed of man. His very nature was perfectly holy, unlike our nature. R84:3*

Though life or being comes from the father, form and nature come from the mother. E103

Illustrated by the improper union between the "daughters of men" (Gen. 6:2) and those angels which kept not their proper estate or condition. The wonderful offspring were born of imperfect, dying mothers, but begotten by vigorous, unimpaired fathers. E103

The Son of God -- He became man, and was a Son of God; as Adam was a son of God. R316:1*

Luke 1:36

The sixth month -- John the Baptist was six months older than our Lord and began to preach six months before our Lord became of age and began his ministry. B58

Luke 1:39

A city of Judah -- Ain-Karim, marked by tradition as the birthplace of John the Baptist. R1381:6

Luke 1:42

Blessed art thou -- The hope to be the mother of the long promised "seed of the woman" (Gen. 3:15) seems to have filled the heart of Eve's daughters through the line of the family of godly Seth, all the way down to and including Mary. R1175:3

Luke 1:44

The babe leaped -- "Filled with the holy Spirit even from his mother's womb." (Luke 1:15) R1671:6

Luke 1:46

And Mary said -- Compare the language and sentiment of her poetic-prayer-prophecy with that of Hannah in 1 Sam. 2:1-10. R1813:2

My soul -- Being; life and body combined. R205:1

Magnify the Lord -- Not fearing the reproaches of Joseph or others. E103
The mind of Jesus' mother, instead of being antagonistic to his perfect development, cooperated to that result. E103

Luke 1:52

Put down the mighty -- Solomon's line; from being Messiah's ancestors. E133

Exalted -- The crown and diadem were removed from Zedekiah, and from the line of Solomon, to be given to him whose right it is--the Righteous Branch of the Davidic root. E133

Them of low degree -- Nathan's line. E133

Luke 1:53

Filled the hungry -- Referring to the restitution blessings to be granted to all the meek of the earth through the Millennial reign of Christ. R1754:6

Luke 1:54

His servant Israel -- The whole twelve tribes. C293; R1341:1

Luke 1:63

John -- Signifying, "the favor of God." R4940:2

Luke 1:64

His tongue loosed -- His faith had been helped. He had triumphed over all doubts and manifested this by giving him the name mentioned by Gabriel. R4940:2

Luke 1:68

Blessed be the Lord -- Praise to God, the Fountain of every good and perfect gift, comes first. R4940:3

In verses 68 to 70, of this prophecy praise to God comes first. R4940:3

God of Israel -- The whole twelve tribes. C293; R1341:1

He hath visited -- After the usual manner of prophecies, the thing about to be accomplished is spoken of as though it had been done. R4940:3

In fulfillment of his gracious promises of old. R4940:3

Redeemed his people -- Greek, poieolutrosin, to make a loosing, i.e., to set at liberty, to deliver, occurring only once. Literally, wrought redemption for his people. E433

This word should not have been translated redeemed but rather delivered, as a guard against confusion of thought by the English readers. E433

Things not completed are here mentioned as though they had been accomplished: the first step toward Israel's deliverance had been taken, and it was spoken of joyously as though the entire matter were already accomplished. E433

Applies not only to the redeeming work accomplished by Jesus at baptism, but is comprehensive enough to take in the entire work of reclaiming humanity. R4940:5

Luke 1:69

Raised up an horn -- Symbol of power. T42

The begetting of Jesus had already taken place. The holy Spirit spoke of the things begun, but not yet accomplished, as though finished. R4940:5

Luke 1:71

We should be saved -- Verses 71 to 75, relate to the deliverance of God's people from the power of their enemies. R4940:5

None but God's people will ever be delivered from the enemies here referred to. R4940:5

From our enemies -- Enemies through wicked works, blinded by the god of this world. R4940:6

Satan is an enemy. Sin is an enemy. And "the last enemy that shall be destroyed is death." (1 Cor. 15:26) R4940:6

Luke 1:73

The oath -- The church are the children of the oath, the Abrahamic Covenant. R5300:5

Luke 1:76

And thou -- Verses 76 to 79 tells of a work to be accomplished before the destruction of all enemies and the lifting up of those worthy to be sons of God. R4941:1

Shalt go before -- Be the forerunner of Jesus. R4941:1

Luke 1:77

To give knowledge -- To show them the "high calling" of this present age. R4941:4

Luke 1:78

The dayspring -- The "Morning Star" or "Day Star," before the Sun of Righteousness arises to scatter the darkness of mankind during Messiah's reign. R4941:4

This "Day Star" guides the feet of the saints, even while still in the time of trouble, before the new dispensation is ushered in. R4941:4

Luke 1:79

To give light -- Truth. A20, 25

Shining into the hearts of believers with sanctifying power and setting them afire with zeal for the truth. R4941:4

All shall have at least 100 years of opportunity under the clear light of "the Sun of Righteousness." (Mal. 4:2) R1772:5

Sit in darkness -- Ignorance. A18, 25; B163

Luke 1:80

The child grew -- Probably as a forester. R2562:5

Strong in spirit -- Greek, pneuma--mind, character. E318

In the deserts -- Not in the sandy deserts, but more properly in the wilds, the uncultivated regions, perhaps in the "hill country" where his parents resided. R2562:5

Possibly the Lord's providences ordered the affairs of his parents so that they were forced to reside in such a wilderness where they would have comparatively little intercourse with others. R2562:5

Till the day -- The period, not the 24-hour day. R2836:1

When he was 30 years of age. R2563:1

Unto Israel -- No longer regarded by our Lord and the apostles as the "ten tribes" merely, but, as it is expressed, "All Israel." R1341:1; C293

Luke 2

Luke 2:1

It came to pass -- In a seemingly accidental manner the prophecy was fulfilled which foretold that Messiah would be born in Bethlehem. (Mic. 5:2) R3700:5

In those days -- Especially auspicious because: (1) the spirit of world-conquering had brought the nations into close contact, broadening their ideas; (2) the transplanting of peoples to other lands made them more cosmopolitan; (3) Israel had been largely scattered, bearing influence and witness amongst other nations; (4) the Greek language had reached its zenith and was the literary language of the civilized world; (5) Roman conquest assured universal peace and hence a more favorable time for the announcement of the Gospel and the safety of its representatives; and (6) Israel was at its highest development, intellectually, morally and religiously. R2555:6, 1673:6

Also, the Old Testament had been translated into the Greek language three centuries before Christ. This version is called the Septuagint. R1674:1

Went out a decree -- Thus, in a providential manner over which they had no control whatever, Joseph and Mary were brought to the very city in which most appropriately the great heir of David should be born, as foretold by Micah (Mic. 5:2). R2556:2

Caesar Augustus -- The Roman Emperor. R2556:1, 3700:5

Representing Rome, the fourth universal empire. A253

Noted for his systematic collection of large taxes from all tributary nations. C29

That all the world -- The Roman empire at that time bore rule over the whole world, the civilized world of that day. R3700:5, 3702:4; A253

Should be taxed -- A poll or census of the whole world for the purpose of taxation. R3700:5, 2556:1

Corresponding faithfully to the prophetic description of Caesar Augustus in Dan. 11:20. C29

Luke 2:3

Went to be taxed -- Every male citizen had to report to his native city.

R2556:1

For tax registration. R4941:3

Luke 2:4

The city of Nazareth -- In olden times there were honorable cities and mean cities. Nazareth was generally recognized as one of the latter, while Bethlehem was distinctly one of the former--the City of David, Israel's beloved king. R3700:3

Bethlehem -- The chief city of their province. R1401:3

Lineage of David -- Both Joseph and Mary, though through different lines. R3700:5, 3702:4, 2556:2

Luke 2:5

Mary -- Luke shows the genealogy of Mary, by which our Lord was related to the family of David through the line of Nathan. R2555:6

Luke 2:7

She brought forth -- It matters not that December 25 is not the anniversary of our Lord's birth, that really he was born about September 25. One day, as well as another, will serve us to commemorate our Savior's birth in the flesh. R4298:3, 3700:2, 3114:3, 2558:4, 2407:2; NS750:2
Though we reverence his flesh, and are deeply interested in all that pertains thereto, nevertheless, our still greater interest is in our risen Lord. R2556:4

Luke 2:7

Her first-born son -- In a most humble manner. R3702:5

A gift of love divine. R5135:2

Implying that she brought forth other sons afterward. R560:2*

About October 1st, 2 BC; 33-1/2 years prior to April 3rd, 33 AD; 29-1/2 years prior to the beginning of John's ministry in the 15th year of Tiberius Caesar. B60, 61

Manger -- Became his most convenient cradle. R2556:3, 3700:6, 1247:3

No room for them -- The experiences of Joseph and Mary were by no means exceptional. R2556:3, 3702:4

The same decree brought many others of the numerous family of David, and as the inns were comparatively limited and small, it is not surprising that the inn proper was full of guests. R2556:3

Neither Joseph, nor Mary, nor Jesus, nor the disciples, nor the Evangelist who recorded the incident, offers the slightest complaint or suggestion of dissatisfaction with the arrangement provided by divine providence. R2556:5

Had the people recognized who he was, how gladly they would have welcomed him into their inn. Similarly, wherever the Lord's people are, many would make them welcome, did they but recognize them as messengers of Jesus and the Heavenly Father. R2556:4

Luke 2:8

Shepherds -- The vicinity of Bethlehem is a pastoral country and is today covered with flocks. R2556:5

The grand truth of the Savior's birth was sent through humble, trustworthy, human agents. R1674:1

The announcement was not made to an assembled world, nor even an assembled Israel, nor yet to all who, like Simeon and Anna, had long been looking for the hope of Israel, but to only a few devout shepherds. R1674:1 We may take for granted that the humble shepherds to whom the message of the Lord's advent first came were men who thus hoped in the promise of God; for to such, and such only, the Lord discloses his purposes. R1478:2

As a class, not particularly well educated as respects schools; yet many of them were thoughtful, and secured by reflection and conversation considerable knowledge. They might be termed an intellectual and thinking class of people. R2556:5

Keeping watch -- As a guard against thieves, as well as against wild beasts. R2556:5

This account does not comport with a mid-winter birth for Christ. R562:4

Would that the shepherds of the Lord's flock were now watching: they would now be advised of the second coming of the Lord's Anointed. R1401:5

Luke 2:9

Were sore afraid -- Fear is one of the dominating impulses of the human mind, especially in connection with any revelation from the Lord. Men realize they are imperfect and instinctively fear further curse and condemnation. R3700:6, 3115:2, 2556:6; NS750:3

All mankind more or less feels instinctively a fear of the supernatural, a trepidation at the very thought of being in the presence of the holy angels. R2556:6

Man's acquaintance with those in influence and power lead him to dread the still greater authority and power of the Almighty, lest it should be injurious to him. R3115:3

All humanity realize that they are sinners and naturally have forebodings. They find it difficult to believe that God is really gracious and loving. R4941:5

Satan has used this tendency of fear as a lash, wherewith to drive man away from God, and from the Bible, his revelation. NS750:4

Luke 2:10

The angel said -- If we could only get all true Christians to study this verse and to see the depths of its significance, it would quickly revolutionize the teachings of Christendom. R2557:2

Fear not -- The angel understood that through sin man becomes fearful in the presence of spirit beings. R3115:2, 3700:6, 2556:6

Only the true Christian has that perfect love which casts out fear. (1 John 4:18) R3115:3

It is for the true children of God today, as it was for the angels at that time, to assure the world that God is better than all their fears. R3700:6

So in approaching mankind with God's message, it is appropriate that we begin by saying, Fear not! The God we preach is not a demon, but a God of wisdom, justice and love, with all power to carry his program to a successful conclusion. NS750:3

As God's children realize that his work is surely going forward to success, doubts and fears give way, rejoicing takes the place of despondency. R632:5*

"Their fear toward me is taught by the precept of men." (Isa. 29:13) The Lord would have his people free from this fear, though not free from a proper reverence toward him. R3115:3

I bring you -- Reiterating the Abrahamic promise, "In thee and in thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed." (Gen. 12:3) NS554:6, 800:1

Glad would we be if we had a thousand tongues to sing our great Redeemer's praise, and a thousand hands and feet to use in the promulgation of this blessed message. R4103:5

Good tidings -- The Gospel. R5126:1, 3701:1, 2596:1, 2557:1; HG615:2, 655:3

A good message, a glorious message, assuring the deliverance and blessing of all the world. R5717:1

A prophecy of good things to be accomplished for the Church and the world during the Millennium. R3701:4

When Messiah's Kingdom shall be established. R4848:2, 5370:3

When all the deaf ears shall be unstopped, and blind eyes shall be opened. (Isa. 35:5) R5370:3, 4523:1

Transcending anything and everything else in the world; all other philosophies are foolishness. R5126:1

The Gospel contains no reference to the damnation and eternal misery of any. R2596:1

That good message of God's love began to be lost sight of in the second century. R5970:6

Thus far it has been good tidings only to the Church. R5370:3

The meat in due season--the harvest message. R4105:3

We are to tell out these tidings by personal contact, by handing out literature, by preaching. R5893:4

The blessedness of these tidings is cumulative: first, "good tidings"; then "great joy"; and then the crowning feature of it is that it is "to all people." The sacrificial feature of the Lord's ministry was made less prominent than his power and majesty and glory, because the sacrifice related specially to God. R4098:2

Of great joy -- Not great misery. R3701:1, 4523:1, 5893:4

Should be to all Christians a gladsome message; but rejected by nominal Christendom. R2708:6

As there was joy at the return of the prodigal. (Luke 15:11-24) R3361:5

Of privilege, love, hope. R3115:4

Of remission of sins through Christ's blood, of reconciliation with the Father. R2564:5

"Blessed are the people that know the joyful sound." (Psa. 89:15) R2568:3

Man's joys will increase with every step taken on the return journey back from sin and death to perfection of life. NS614:6

Prefigured in the name Isaac, which signifies "laughter." R3952:6

To all people -- In due time. (1 Tim. 2:4-6) R1908:2

God, who had a "due time" for calling natural Israel and who had a "due time" for calling spiritual Israel, has a "due time" for making known the riches of his grace to the non-elect world of mankind. NS767:4

As every member of Adam's race shared in his fall and the curse of death, as a result, so every member of the race was included in the great redemptive sacrifice which our Lord Jesus offered. R3701:1

"All the deaf ears shall be unstopped." (Isa. 35:5) SM174:2

Including those now in death. R1478:3, 659:1*, 9:6*

Not only to those who, since his birth, have died in ignorance of the only name whereby we must be saved, but also to the billions who had died before God's salvation was brought to light in the Gospel. HG306:5

If only a few have yet heard the "good tidings" in any sense, must there not be a restitution to life as well as a future proclamation of the only name given? R412:6, 447:1*

How prone the Lord's people seem to be to suppose, first of all, that he was to be a Savior merely for the Jews; or secondly, merely for a special elect class; or thirdly, for those who under present darkness manifest a special life for righteousness. R3115:3

The angels did not declare that our Lord came to bring universal and everlasting salvation to all people. R3115:4

Through natural Israel, to all the families of the earth. R4848:2, 447:4

Not merely to the Little Flock. A104

In great mercy, God has provided our ransom price. R1127:5

Redemption, restitution and everlasting life will be offered to all.

R1674:4

Every member of our fallen race shall be blessed with a clear understanding of his imperfections and of the redemption provided. R3115:3

All who have lived and died, both before and after Jesus' birth. OV170:T; CR228:1

Only a small portion of the race has heard the "tidings" in this life.

R556:4*

All those who come unto the Father through him, by faith and obedience.

R2407:3

Luke 2:11

For -- Taking cognizance of the fact that it was to reasonable people, who would want to know why an unchangeable God, who had once pronounced a curse, should so alter matters to supplant the curse with a blessing, the messenger states the philosophy of the divine plan. R3701:2, 2557:3

Note the order of presentation: first a pronouncement of divine favor and blessing, that it is a cause for joy and shall extend to all people; second, the specific explanation of how it is to be accomplished--through a Savior. R2557:3

Unto you -- Mankind. PD55/67

Is born -- About October 1st, although generally celebrated on December 25th. R2407:2, 4298:3

He was transformed from the spiritual to the human nature, in order to give the exact equivalent for that which was lost. R1673:3

"For unto us a child is born." (Isa. 9:6) R2550:1

The promised seed of Abraham. R4963:2, 5300:5

A Saviour -- Our Lord's name, Jesus, signifies Saviour. R2557:4
It was prophetically that the babe of Bethlehem was called a Savior. He was to be a Savior, The Christ, the Lord. But as the babe he was none of these. R4715:2, 4298:4, 3701:2

Signifying life-giver. The Syriac version is the one in which Savior is translated life-giver; and Syriac was, likely, the language spoken by Jesus and others of Palestine at that time. R4941:6, 4715:5, 3702:2, 2407:3; HG244:2, 306:4; NS800:1

The antitypical Moses, the antitypical Aaron, the antitypical Melchizedek, the antitypical David. He was also the Son of the Highest. He was to be the Savior--the Deliverer--the Mediator of the New Covenant. R4941:6
If the Redeemer was not perfect, then he could not be the Saviour of the world. R4964:1

A life-giver is a father. Jesus is to be the "Everlasting Father" (Isa. 9:6) to the world. R2407:3

The Bride and the Bridegroom, unitedly, will be the world's Savior. R4715:5

Christ -- The Messiah, the long-promised seed of Abraham. R5300:5

The Greek word Christ signifies Anointed. R4715:2

He became the Christ before becoming the Savior and Lord. R4715:2

The angel first declared the divine favor and blessing, then how it should be accomplished; setting an example for us. R2557:3

Called Anointed Messiah because it was foreseen of God that he would be. R5891:1

Luke 2:12

A sign unto you -- To assure them that this was he. R1478:6

Lying in a manger -- As one of the humblest of earth. R1063:2

Necessary, not only to their identification of Jesus, but also to bring down their thoughts from the great and grand results to its humble beginnings, lest they should be misled in their expectations. R2557:4

Similarly we are not only to tell of the future glory, greatness and grandeur, but we are to tell also of the present humiliation. R2557:4

Luke 2:13

The heavenly host -- As the angels could sing and rejoice at the first budding of the divine plan of salvation, so also can all who have faith in the ultimate outcome rejoice with joy unspeakable and give praise to God in the highest and to his Son our Lord. R3701:3

Capable of appreciating what fallen man could not appreciate. R1674:4

This shows how the angels of God are interested in the affairs of men, and how they sympathize with us and rejoice over our prosperity. "There is joy in heaven among the angels over one sinner that repenteth." (Luke 15:7)

R1478:6

Praising God -- A kind of Hallelujah chorus, or angelic response to the message of the angel already given. R4942:4

It is not surprising that they did not weep for the sufferings and humiliation, but sang, grasping merely the culmination of the great divine plan which had its beginning in the birth of Jesus. R4098:2

Thankful for his mercy to the children of men. R3701:2

And saying -- The anointing which we receive of the Lord is that which leads us to declare the good tidings of this great salvation in all its lengths and breadths and heights and depths. NS207:2

Luke 2:14

Glory to God -- This was but a reiteration of the Gospel message already delivered. R2557:5

Properly the anthem begins with praise to him that sitteth upon the throne, to him who devised the great and wonderful plan of redemption and who sent his Son, our willing Redeemer. R3115:5

God will be glorified by all the angels, by his exalted Church, by restored humanity, by all the intelligent creatures on every plane, in every age! R5577:1

The proper glory to God is not yet rendered on earth as it is in heaven. R4942:4

If the jubilant songs of the angels hallowed the advent of the Lord into the world, can we imagine them to be silent when the Anointed Body is received into glory? R1821:3

As God's children come to a knowledge of God's glorious plan, rejoicing takes the place of despondency. R632:5*

In the highest -- In the highest strain of heart and voice, with the fullest appreciation. R3115:5

It declared that the work which should be accomplished by the babe just born should redound to the highest glory and honor of Jehovah God, his Father. R2557:5

After the Millennial reign of Christ has accomplished its work. Not yet does God receive glory in the highest. R3702:1, 3701:6

Peace -- After praising God, come the consequences on earth; namely, peace, peace with God. a peace which comes from a restoration to the race of the divine good will. R3115:5 A prophecy of God's purpose to bring about through the newly born child the abrogation of the curse and the establishment of peace and sinlessness among mankind. R5576:2

It will be during the Millennial age that this prophecy of the angel will have its fulfillment. R3701:5; Q752:T

Not yet fulfilled. The birth of the babe was one step toward it; the death on the cross another; the resurrection and ascension were other steps; the selection of the Church is another, nearly completed; the Messianic Kingdom will complete the prophecy. PD67/55

The Millennium will be introduced by force--"The Lord shall fight in that day." (Zech. 14:3) NS131:2

Peace established upon a firm foundation--the lifting of the curse. R3115:6

In a world-wide Eden. R5715:2

Not such a peace as men might patch up between themselves, but a peace with God. R3115:5

Good will toward men -- And not, "On earth peace amongst men, in whom he is well pleased." Even the Lord's people have no peace on earth. R3702:1

The expression "good will toward men" as rendered by a majority of translators is confirmed by the latest found manuscript, the Lewis manuscript of the Gospels, discovered in 1892 in the convent at Mt. Sinai. R1674:4

A declaration of what God purposes to do. He has not good will toward the present sinful, rebellious attitude of the race. He has never good will toward sin, God's curse indicated his ill-will toward man--in other words, his displeasure because of man's sin. R5576:2, 3701:6

Even when our Lord had died as man's ransom-price, God's favor did not come to the world. R5576:3

A prophecy of God's purpose to bring this about through the newly born child. R5576:1; PD55/67

In a sense, the grandeur and blessing of the new dispensation began at the birth of Jesus. C346

Steps toward this are the birth of Jesus, his death on the cross, his resurrection and ascension, and the selection of the Church. The Messianic Kingdom will complete the prophecy. PD55/67

Luke 2:15

Angels were gone -- The shepherds recognized the angels and their message as from the Lord. R1479:1

Let us now go -- So each one who has heard of the grace of God with an appreciative heart can do nothing less than seek the Lord. R2558:1

Luke 2:16

Mary and Joseph -- Were pious, reverent, and obedient to the Law. R3711:1, 2558:3

Luke 2:17

Made known abroad -- So we must reverence, and serve his cause by proclaiming his gracious message with which we have been favored. R2558:1

Luke 2:18

They that heard it -- The grand truth was one to be received by faith; and it was sent through humble, but trustworthy, human agents, who were the honored instruments in God's hand. Any who proudly despised the instruments were unworthy of the good tidings. R1674:1

Luke 2:19

But Mary kept -- Mother-like. R1479:4

She made no boasts, but waited for God's due time. R3702:5

Doubtless it was from her lips that Luke received the information contained in this chapter. R2559:5

And pondered them -- Wondering what would be the consummation--little dreaming, we may be sure, how great her son ultimately must be made, according to the divine arrangement. R3291:3

Luke 2:20

Shepherds returned -- Fully assured that the promised seed had really come. R1479:4

Luke 2:22

When the days -- When Jesus was forty days old. (Lev. 12:1-4) Q757:5; R4942:1

To present him -- Although the first-born had been exchanged for the tribe of Levi, nevertheless the first-born of each mother was to be devoted specially to God and his service. R4942:2

To the Lord -- All of the first-born are represented as belonging to the Lord, to be devoted to God and his service. Q757:5; R4942:2
Similarly the elect Church, the Church of the first-borns, are "a kind of first-fruits unto God of his creatures." (Jas. 1:18) R4942:2

It is the custom of some parents to make a formal consecration of their children to God in the presence of believers. The influence upon the children cannot be other than beneficial, though this does not take the place of the child's personal consecration when it reaches the age of discretion. R4942:2; Q758:T

Luke 2:23

Called holy -- The Church being gathered during this Gospel Age is styled the Church of the first-born. (Heb. 12:23) R4942:2

"A kind of first-fruits unto God of his creatures." (Jas. 1:18) R4942:2

Luke 2:25

Just and devout -- One of the kind of characters to whom God reveals his truth. "Light is sown for the righteous, and joy for the upright in heart." (Psa. 97:11) R1674:2

Waiting -- The expectation of Messiah was general at that time. B21
One of a minority in heart-harmony with the Lord and his Promise; an Israelite indeed. OV71:T

The consolation -- The fulfillment of the Abrahamic promise. R4942:5
Through the long-promised Messiah. R4098:3

Of Israel -- The whole twelve tribes. C293; R1341:1

Luke 2:26

Revealed unto him -- That the accomplishment of the promises made to Abraham was nigh. R4942:3

Not see death -- Until he had seen the Deliverance of Israel. R4942:3

Luke 2:27

Came by the Spirit -- This aged prophet recognized Jesus. R4942:3

Parents -- Considering the foster-father Joseph as father. R3291:2

Luke 2:29

Lord -- Greek, despotes, better translated Sovereign or Autocrat. E70

Luke 2:30

Thy salvation -- The way in which salvation shall come to Israel and all the families of the earth. R4942:3

Jesus' birth was the dawn of hope for our race. R1631:3

Luke 2:32

A light -- Not yet is the Sun of Righteousness enlightening all the Gentiles, not yet has Christ become the glory of his people Israel; he is, nevertheless, all through this Gospel age, a great light to all those whose eyes are opened that they may see it. R3031:6, 1674:2

"That was the true light which lighteth every man that cometh into the world." (John 1:9) R1674:2, 3031:6

Let us walk as children of light. (Eph. 5:8) R3031:6

To lighten the Gentiles -- Salvation unto the ends of the earth. R3010:2
Nations; all mankind, regardless of faith. A107

The glory -- Not yet. R3031:6

Simeon is contrasting the two salvations. A107

Then believing Israel will glory in him. R1674:3

Thy people Israel -- The whole twelve tribes. C293; R1341:1

Such as shall become Israelites indeed. A107

Simeon declared this under divine inspiration. R1674:2

The good tidings will be to all people, but the special salvation will come only to his people. A107

Christ is the glory of the Church, the true Israel of God (Rom. 11:7); and he will be the glory of fleshly, or natural, Israel when their eyes are opened and they are received by him under the New Covenant. R2126:1

Luke 2:33

And Joseph -- Not called the father of Jesus. R4957:3, 2559:4

Luke 2:34

Simeon blessed them -- It is not probable, however, that Simeon, who spoke under divine inspiration, understood fully the import of his words. R1674:5

Set for the fall -- During the period of Israel's disfavor. B228

Israel stumbled over Jesus, except the few who became his disciples, probably ten or fifteen thousand. R4942:6

The world has witnessed the fall of Israel from divine favor and their sad conditions as outcasts for nearly two thousand years, because of their rejection of Christ. R1674:3

Reminding us of the words of Paul, that our Lord is a "stone of stumbling and rock of offence" to many in Israel. (Rom. 9:33) R4942:5; B228

"They shall fall backward and be snared and taken" (Isa. 8:15) R4942:6

And rising again -- Greek, anastasis, without the Greek article, hence showing no emphasis, indicating no special peculiarity. R1512:1

Paul, quoting Isa. 8:15, proceeds to show the recovery of Israel as soon as the elect class of this Gospel age has been completed. (Rom. 11:9-11) R4942:6

St. Paul also told of the rising again of many who stumbled. He declares:

"They shall obtain mercy through your mercy." (Rom. 11:31) R4942:5

Now the time for their rising again has come (beginning AD 1878). R1674:5

Restoring all things after their "appointed time," their double is complete. B228

Raised up nationally. R1674:5

To divine favor. R4942:6

For a sign -- True all through the age, and the reproach of the cross has not yet ceased. R1674:5

A mark, or standard. R4942:3

Luke 2:35

A sword shall pierce -- Referring to Christ's tragic death, and the trial of faith thereby instituted. R1674:5

May be revealed -- Proving which are loyal and faithful to God as true soldiers of the cross, and which are not. R1674:5

Luke 2:36

Anna, a prophetess -- Devout, faithful; a saintly woman. R1674:5, 4942:5
God requires faithfulness on the part of female as well as male stewards in the use of all their talents. R1549:4

The Scriptures utter no voice and establish no precedent contrary to female activity in the various legitimate pursuits of life for which nature and education have fitted her. R1549:3

The tribe of Aser -- Another evidence that the entire house of Israel (twelve tribes) was represented at Jerusalem in our Lord's day, and not the tribes of Judah and Benjamin only. R1674:6; C295

Of great age -- Over a century old. R4942:5

Luke 2:38

Spake of him -- To the saintly ones, waiting for the fulfillment of the Abrahamic promise. R4942:5

For redemption -- Greek, lutrosis, deliverance. E433

Anna spoke to those who were looking for deliverance in Jerusalem, expecting freedom from the Roman yoke, but not necessarily understanding that the greater deliverance was to come by payment of a ransom price. E433

Luke 2:40

The child grew -- Prior to reaching his twelfth year. R3710:6

He was permitted to grow after the ordinary manner, gradually, getting stronger physically and mentally, being filled more and more with wisdom, and giving evidence that God's favor was upon him. R3291:1, 2558:3

He did not miraculously know all that was in the Law and the prophets. He acquired knowledge, but with that ease, rapidity and retentiveness with which only a perfect mind can grasp and hold it. R1916:3

His earlier years were evidently spent in studying prophetic utterances concerning God's Plan and his own share therein. SM643:2

Let us not forget the necessity for growth--adding to faith virtue, knowledge, self-control, patience, godliness, brotherly kindness and love. (2 Pet. 1:5-8) R2560:1

There is heavenly wisdom in the limited description given us of the childhood and youth of our Savior. Let us not, then, attempt to imagine with particularity what the Lord has seen fit to cover and not reveal R3710:6, 2558:1

Our minds are more drawn to the important features of the Lord's work by reason of the brevity of the sketch given us of his earthly life and interests. R3290:6, 3291:6, 2558:1

From what we know of childhood, we recognize it as the period of development. R5064:3

In spirit -- In mind. E52

Siniatic and Vatican MSS omit these words. R1682:2

Filled with wisdom -- This wisdom was intimately interwoven with the Law and the prophets. R3711:2

Our Lord was not only born under favorable religious influences, but trained in that way. His mother and her husband were pious, reverent, and evidently disposed to be obedient to every feature of the Law to the extent of their ability. R3711:1

Few were able to read, but Jesus was amongst those few--not because of schooling privileges, but because of his brilliant mind which retained everything that came to it and to which, therefore, the Bible was continually an open book. R4957:2, 2558:3

Jewish boys had an advantage over those of other nations because the services in the synagogues consisted of readings from the Law and prophets by course. Thus all Jewish children had excellent facilities for hearing the Word of the Lord. R4957:2, 2559:1

The grace of God -- The blessing. C52

The word "grace" signifies that which gives pleasure, as loveliness of form or character, or the most admirable virtues. R3711:1

Luke 2:41

His parents -- Not implying that Saint Luke supposed Joseph to be the father of Jesus. He was the foster father, his foster parent, or step-father. R4957:3, 3291:2

Every year -- His "parents" were strict religionists and obeyed the Mosaic Law by attending regularly the feast of Passover at Jerusalem every year. R4957:3

This requirement of the Law was observed by the most devout Jews only. R2558:3

Feast of the passover -- A great religious gathering; continued seven days. SM563:1; R3711:1, 3291:2, 2558:5

Represented the blessings and favors of relationship to God, based upon the merit of the Passover Lamb. SM563:1

He could not grasp the full import of the prophecies and his share in them until after he had been anointed with the holy Spirit. R1688:2

Luke 2:42

Twelve years old -- It was a custom that Jewish boys should make a consecration at the age which Jesus did. R5064:4

A child, reasonably well born, raised under the influences of a Christian home, would, we believe, very generally be ready at the age of twelve years to make a consecration of himself to the Lord. R3711:5

It is a serious mistake to conclude that a child of 12 has sufficient mind to grasp elementary principles of secular education, and be prepared for higher studies of a secular character, but unfit for higher religious studies. R2558:5

It was a Jewish custom that a Jewish boy should be considered "a son of the Law" when he attained his twelfth year. He thus became responsible under the Law and thenceforth was required to keep its festivals, etc.

R4957:3, 3711:2, 2559:4

In his thirteenth year. R2558:4

To Jerusalem -- His first visit to the great city. R2559:1

Of the feast -- The Jewish children were accustomed to attending religious services. R5064:4

Luke 2:43

Fulfilled the days -- The Feast of Passover continued seven days, but it was the custom for many of the pilgrims from distant parts to remain over only two days, until after the principle ceremonies. R2558:5

The child Jesus -- He could not begin his ministry because he was bound by the restrictions of the Law. R3291:5

Neither Mary nor Joseph seemed to have appreciated the greatness of Jesus. R3291:3

Tarried behind -- So absorbed with the opportunities and studies. R3291:5

Not yet finished with his investigations as to when to begin his ministry.

R4957:6

During the Passover Feast the great men were engaged in public functions.

Hence his best opportunity for conference with them was at the close of the feast. R4957:5

He was apparently, for a child of his age, especially well able to take care of himself. R3711:3

Joseph -- Not called the father of Jesus. R4957:3, 2559:4

Luke 2:44

In the company -- The gathering of Jews from all parts of Palestine, yea, from the entire world, meant great crowds of people; on some occasions more than a million. R4957:3

They sought him -- It was customary for the women of a caravan to move on ahead, the men coming after, and a boy of Jesus' age might be with either of the parents and not be missed until nightfall. R2558:5

Their kinsfolk -- Naturally enough, close relatives traveled in each other's company. R3291:2

Luke 2:46

After three days -- One day homeward, one day returning, and on the third day they found him. R2558:5, 4957:6

During these feasts great hospitality was exercised, especially toward strangers from a distance. Jesus was probably entertained by one and another of these new-found friends. R2559:2

Midst of the doctors -- Not unusual. At that time information was gained less from books and more from oral teaching and the Doctors of the Law were supposed to be ready to instruct all who desired information, especially during the holy Passover week. R2558:6

The custom seems to have been for the Doctors to sit on a special semi-circle of seats, while before them were low benches for the older students: the younger boys sat on the ground, literally "at their feet." R2558:6

Similarly Paul, as a youth, "sat at the feet of Gamaliel," one of the chief Doctors of the Law in his day. (Acts 22:3) R2558:6

Both hearing them -- And not instructing the doctors. R2559:2

Asking them questions -- Not that the boy Jesus was bold, but recognized many questions upon which he would like to have further information, asking his questions honestly with a desire and hope of obtaining satisfactory answers. R2558:3

His superior ability did not puff him up nor cause him to forget the respect and deference due to the advanced years and position of the Doctors and teachers. R1916:2, 1682:2

Meekness is especially desirable as a sling for the truth. Let the truth be shot forth with all the force it can carry, but always with meekness; and the question form of suggesting truth will often be found the most forceful. R2559:3

Wondering if becoming a "son of the Law" implied that he, at that age, should become in some measure identified with the Law as a student, or in some other capacity. R3711:2

Inquiring of the Doctors of the Law what time would be appropriate for him to enter upon his ministry. R5128:2, 4957:6, 3711:3, 2559:1

Doubtless a part of his inquiry was whether or not the custom of considering a boy the "son of the Law" at twelve years of age was founded upon anything in the Law or was merely a human tradition. R3711:3

Fresh inquiries about other types and symbols and their proper meaning. R4957:6, 3291:3

Not satisfied with simply their opinion, he desired references to the Law and the prophets that he himself might judge, and not rely too implicitly upon the conclusions of others. R4957:5

The one who was asking the questions was the one who ultimately would give correct answers to those questions in his own experiences. R3291:3

Even a child can ask questions, and in asking the questions, may suggest wonderful and powerful answers. R3291:3

Manifesting his depth of mind, clearness of understanding and logical reasoning. R2559:3, 2558:6

A good method for those who, by reason of sex or insufficient years, are not permitted to teach. R3291:3

Some of the Lord's people greatly injure their influence in the Truth by the display of too large a degree of self-assurance in speaking of the Truth to others, especially to the learned. R2559:3

Luke 2:47

Were astonished -- Doubtless remarking that they had never had such pointed questions asked them respecting the Law and the prophets, even by wise men of their day and by each other. R3291:4

This little item gives us a suggestion respecting the ability of mind that would belong to a perfect boy, and what we may expect of the ancient worthies when they shall be resurrected to human perfection. R3291:4

His understanding -- Nevertheless we are to remember that our Lord Jesus himself could not have understood the full meaning of the Law, shadows, and the prophecies at that time--not until after his anointing with the holy spirit. (1Cor. 2:14) R3291:4

His memory extended back to his previous existence with the Father. We have no reason to doubt that he then knew what in after years he affirmed, saying: "Before Abraham was, I am." (John 8:58) R1916:5

And answers -- They, in turn, considered it not beneath themselves to ply the boy with questions. R3291:4

Luke 2:48

His mother said -- Joseph, the foster father of Jesus, said nothing. R4957:6

Probably nothing was said to Jesus publicly respecting their disappointment and their subsequent search for him. It seems to indicate an unusual occurrence, which in turn speaks of parental obedience on the part of Jesus. R2559:3

Son -- They did not know of his previous spiritual existence. R1682:5

Why hast thou -- We must suppose that he had been so absorbed with the opportunities and studies that the time had passed without his appreciating the trouble and inconvenience he was causing to others. R3291:5

Thy father -- Joseph, having accepted Mary, accepted also her son, Jesus, and became his foster-father. R2559:4

Luke 2:49

He said unto them -- In his childlike simplicity seeming to think his mother and Joseph would fully realize and approve his course. R1916:3

Wist ye not -- Having been told he was specially holy and miraculously born, he asked Mary, Did not you tell me of this thing? He was surprised that Mary and Joseph should not understand that this was the very thing for him to do. R5065:4

Must be about -- On the alert to fulfil his mission. He surmised that, since at 12, Jewish boys came under the requirements of the Law Covenant, that that was the time at which he should begin his ministry. R4957:5

My Father's business -- Evidence of zeal; the mind of Christ is the will to do the Father's will. R1916:3, 5228:4

Somewhere about his house, his courts. R3711:4, 1916:5

"Did you not know that I would be somewhere about my Father's house?" We prefer this free translation, in accord with the Revised Version, to the one given in our Common Version. R3711:4

"Did you not know that I had reached the age when I am a "son of the Law," and that therefore certain responsibilities have come upon me in respect to the Heavenly Father and his Word and his plan?" R2559:4

He would have in mind the Heavenly Father, just as any consecrated child of God might think of him. From the information which he had received from his mother, Mary, he would know of his miraculous birth and special mission in the world. R5065:4

Though he had not yet been impressed with his previous experiences with the Father and of the remote past. R5065:1

Jesus never acknowledged Joseph to be his father; nor did he ever acknowledge his earthly life to be the beginning of his existence. E89
Having learned that he could not yet attend to the Father's business, he remained quietly at home until thirty. R5847:1

Luke 2:51

Subject unto them -- As a youth he was loyal and faithful to his earthly parents. R1114:4, 4958:1, 4809:2

Having learned that he could not assume the priestly function as a boy. R5064:4, 5128:2

He did not humble himself before he became a man, but afterwards. R5128:2

Unto them -- All of this earthly authority was exercised by his personal inferiors, even though they were his legal superiors. R4809:2, 1114:4

In her heart -- It was doubtless from her own lips that Luke received his knowledge of these events. R2559:5

Luke 2:52

And Jesus -- This verse relates to his life from twelve years of age upward to the time of his presentation to Israel in his thirtieth year as the Lamb of God. R3711:6

Increased -- It was not a boy who was to be the Redeemer, even as it was not a boy who had sinned. R4958:4

He kept on growing and he kept on coming up to full manhood and he did not reach full manhood until thirty years of age. Q378:2; R5748:2

Happily for us, we are not born under the Law nor under the limitations which hinders us from receiving the call and responding to it before 30 years of age. R2559:6

It is quite probable that the 18 years from this time to the time of his baptism were spent in the performance of the ordinary duties of life. What a thought this gives us with respect to our Lord's development of patience. R2559:5

Similarly all who hear the good tidings now would best not begin to minister the truth to others by explaining it until first they have received of God the unction from on high. R3711:6

The perfect babe became the perfect boy; the perfect boy became the perfect youth; the perfect youth became the perfect man. R4958:4; Q377:2

In wisdom -- He did not miraculously know all that was in the Law and the prophets. He acquired knowledge, but with that ease, rapidity and retentiveness with which only a perfect mind can grasp and hold it. R1916:3
From the twelfth to the thirtieth year he kept growing in wisdom and grace of character. R4958:4, 3711:6

And stature -- Though the wisdom of twelve years surpassed that of the sages among men, neither his mind nor his body had yet reached full development. R1618:3

With God -- Not in the sense of becoming less sinful and more righteous, but in the sense of becoming more developed, reaching human perfection. R4958:4
The whole matter was pleasing to God, to whom Jesus became more and more pleasing as he neared maturity. R5157:2

And man -- Humanity perceived that he was different from others. R5157:2
He was of winsome manner. R3711:2

In his early life of preparation for his public ministry and great sacrifice, his virtues commanded the admiration of all who knew him. R1916:6

Luke 3

Luke 3:1

The fifteenth year -- This is a clearly fixed date of which there can be no reasonable doubt. Tiberius became emperor at the death of Augustus Caesar, in the year of Rome 767, which was the year AD 14. B58
An unequivocal date. Tiberius began to reign in AD 14. The fifteenth year of his reign would therefore be the year AD 29. B60
Those who claim that Jesus began his ministry AD 27, instead of AD 29, claim that John's ministry began in AD 26, and are obliged to count the reign of Tiberius Caesar two years before its admitted date. R2562:2
The only people to raise a question about it are those who, following the inaccurate records of Josephus, want to twist Luke's plain statement into harmony with a date two years earlier. B59; R2132:4, 1975:4
Of Tiberius Caesar -- Luke connected the beginning of John's preaching with the reign of Tiberius for the very purpose of locating or fixing the event chronologically. R2132:4

Luke 3:2

Annas -- Was subsequently dragged through the streets, scourged and murdered. R3369:3
The word of God came -- When John was thirty years of age. R2562:2
In the spring, about April first, just as soon as he was of age; for God's plans are always carried out on exact time. B60
The Lord made clear to John that the time had come for the beginning of his ministry, not merely by an impression or surmise, but with positiveness, as in the case of all the prophets. R2563:1
Exactly at the right time to introduce the Lord Jesus to the Jewish nation. R3292:3
John -- The last of the prophets, none of whom was his superior, "There hath not arisen a greater prophet than John the Baptist." (Matt. 11:11)
R4958:2, 3292:1
Six months older than his second cousin, Jesus. B58; R2562:2
John's work at the first advent foreshadowed the closing work of the Church at the second advent. B253
In the wilderness -- Not in the sandy deserts, but more properly in the wilds, perhaps in the "hill country," where his parents resided at the time of his birth. R2562:5
The world is in a wilderness condition and needs the presence of the great King to bring order out of its confusion. R4113:5

Luke 3:3

About Jordan -- Thickly settled regions. R2563:1

John sought the pools, or deep places of the river, sufficiently deep for the purposes of immersion. R2563:1

The work of John the Baptist was merely to the Jew, and proportionately only was he the antitype of Elijah. Jesus in the flesh and all his faithful members in the flesh have constituted the larger antitype of John the Baptist. R4958:5, 2563:2

John was not preaching to Christians, he was not preaching the message that Jesus preached, he was preaching merely the demands of the Jewish Law. OV199:2

Baptism of repentance -- It is uncertain just when immersion was instituted as a symbol of repentance and reform. John the Baptist, it is claimed, followed a custom for some time in vogue among Jewish reformers. R1161:2

The remission of sins -- Those addressed were all Jews, already in covenant relationship with God. R1421:1

Not that repentance and baptism would work for them a remission of their sins. John preached a baptism signifying repentance unto, or preparation for, a remission of sins. R2563:1

If repentance and immersion in water would bring the forgiveness of sins, the "Savior and a great one" whom God had promised to Israel for so long would have been wholly unnecessary. R2563:2

Not original sin, which could be removed only by the blood of Christ--"without shedding of blood there is no remission" (Heb. 9:22)--but sins against the Law Covenant. R2931:3

Luke 3:4

As it is written -- A prophecy not even yet fulfilled, but which includes the entire work of the Millennial age. R2563:2

The voice -- Not "The Word." (John 1:1) R2409:2

Crying in the wilderness -- The Church has cried in "the wilderness" in the sense that she has been alienated and separated from the world. R4958:6
We are not, as John, to dwell in the wilderness, to criticize and denounce everything. We are to copy our Lord, not John the Baptist. R4978:5

Prepare ye the way -- But John's mission was not successful to his nation, and profited only a few of the people. R2563:3

The mission of the Elijah class is to exhort to repentance and to prepare men for the glorious setting up of the Messianic Kingdom. R2563:4, 4958:6
A highway for the coming King. R4113:5

As John the Baptist was unsuccessful, the Church in the flesh has not succeeded in preparing men for a triumphal entry of God's Kingdom upon earth. R2563:5

His paths straight -- Those who hear should walk circumspectly--make a straight pathway in the desert, a highway for the coming King. R4113:5
"An highway shall be there." (Isa. 35:8) R2563:5

Luke 3:5

Valley shall be filled -- The lifting up of the poor. R4958:6
Signifying that the humble shall be lifted up out of degradation. R4113:5
Leveling up the deep crevices of character. R2563:5

Mountain and hill -- Kingdom and less autocratic government. R4990:2,
5575:4; A318; D551

Shall be brought low -- Those who have reached high positions of influence and affluence under the reign of sin shall be humbled under the reign of righteousness. R4113:5

Leveling down the hills of pride to the proper level of humility. R2563:5

The conditions of society will be leveled. R4990:2

Little by little coming down to the level of popular demand. D551

The city of Quito, Ecuador, the highest city in the world, has subsided 76 feet in the past 122 years, indicating that this prophecy may have a literal fulfillment also. R1215:3

Showing that society is to be reconstructed and equality of classes obtain. R332:4

The crooked -- The great things which belong to the present time of sin and imperfection will all be straightened out. R4113:5

The perverse. R332:3

The rough ways -- The incongruous things will all be smoothed over. R4113:5

Luke 3:6

All flesh -- The dead, as well as the living. R2402:4

All flesh indeed shall see the salvation of our God, and so many as will may share therein. R2563:6

The world in general. T83

The promised deliverer is to bless not only Israel, but through Israel "all the families of the earth." (Gen. 22:18) A58

Shall see -- Greek, optomai, recognize. R141:4

Appreciate, understand, experience. R4958:6

Recognize God's gracious love more and more. T83

Whose mission it is to seek to prepare all flesh to see the salvation of God. R2563:5

The salvation of God -- As a result of the work of the "times of restitution of all things." (Acts 3:23) R4113:5

Both John and the Church declare that this salvation is to be brought through Jesus and his glorified Bride in Kingdom power. R4958:6

Luke 3:7

To the multitude -- The prepared instruments of the Lord are powerful in his hand. The whole nation was aroused. R1916:3

Generation of vipers -- Greek, gennema, race or posterity. D603

Rejectors of the divine favor. R2301:4

Their religion was one of outward forms and ceremony merely, and not of the heart. R2236:3

Some seemed to John to be so vile that he could not properly accept them until they had given some proofs of reform. R2563:6

We are not to understand that such language is proper to be copied by the Lord's people of today. "In meekness instructing those that oppose themselves." (2 Tim. 2:25) R2563:6

Similarly, today many have "a form of godliness" (2 Tim. 3:5), a devotion to Sectarianism. R2236:5

The wrath to come -- Not flames and torments after death, but divine judgments upon the Jewish nation for hypocrisy, formalism, and failure to live up to the light and privileges enjoyed. "There shall be great distress in the land and wrath upon this people" (Luke 21:23). "Wrath to the uttermost" (1 Thess. 2:16), which came upon the Jewish nation in the end of the Jewish age. R2236:6, 3292:5, 2564:1

The trouble that was about to come upon that nation unless they would receive Messiah, who had not yet been offered to them. R2564:1

There is a proper presentation of the truth, and a proper fear of God and his retribution, which may be properly kept before the mind of the transgressors; but this is wholly different from the terrorizing fear of eternal torment. R2564:5

Let us present the wrath to come truthfully, not misrepresenting the character of our God; for assuredly God will not hold them guiltless who blaspheme his holy name. R2564:4

"Wrath to come upon them to the uttermost." (1 Thess. 2:15,16) R2301:4

Picturing the wrath to come in the end of this age upon Christendom. R2564:5

Luke 3:8

Begin not to say -- Do not permit yourselves do be deceived into thinking that God is under compulsion to accept such as you, and that otherwise his word would become void. R2564:3

Within yourselves -- As nominal Christendom says to itself. R2564:2

Abraham to our father -- His hearers thought that they were God's specially chosen, "elect" people, whose glorification had been foretold in the prophets, and that since there were no better people in the world it was unreasonable to suppose that God would pass by the very best. R2564:1, 1457:3

The principle opposition to the teaching of holiness, entire consecration to the Lord, today throughout "Christendom," is the same error. R2564:2
Of these stones -- Out of some that you consider as far from the possibilities of being Abraham's children as though they were these stones at your feet. R2864:3

Children unto Abraham -- Who would have Abraham's loyalty of spirit. R2245:6

As a matter of fact we know, that after the "wheat" had been separated from the "chaff" of that nation, the Lord has been seeking from among the Gentiles others to complete the elect number of Israelites indeed, the true seed of Abraham. R2245:6

Luke 3:9

And now also -- Typifying the end of the Gospel Age. R2237:5

The axe -- Of divine judgment. R2237:1

The axe was about to be applied to that nation. Pruning would no longer do. R4958:6

Now the axe is laid to the root of the trees again, a test to every one in nominal Christendom. R2237:5

Unto the root -- Not, for the new creature, to lop off some of the unsightly branches of the fallen disposition, but the axe of truth is to cut down the whole tree, branches and all. R3986:4

Of the trees -- The three and a half years of our Lord's ministry to the Jewish nation, and their final rejection by him, are represented by the barren fig tree parable, in harmony with this statement of John (Luke 13:6-9). R2564:4

Good fruit -- The fruitage of righteousness. R2237:1

Is hewn down -- Nominal fleshly Israel was thus cut off from divine favor. R3292:5

Cast into the fire-- The time of trouble in 69-70 AD. R2564:1, 4958:6, 3292:5, 2237:1

Picturing the great fire of trouble with which this Gospel age shall end. R2565:1

Luke 3:11

He answereth -- If any now inquire, we answer: Practice righteousness, truth, godliness, kindness, benevolence, justice, trust in the Lord, seek to walk in his ways. (Zeph. 2:3) R2564:5

Let him impart -- Thus would they show their repentance from the selfishness and hard-heartedness which evidenced them as sinful--thus would they show a condition of heart necessary to an acceptance of Jesus. R4959:1

Luke 3:12

Also publicans -- Being cast off from the sympathies and friendships of the Jews in general, they were naturally less influenced by their prejudices and hence more ready to receive the truth. R1783:3

Luke 3:13

Appointed you -- No more than that to which you are entitled by the Law. R4959:1

Luke 3:14

The soldiers likewise -- Just such advice would be applicable to a soldier today. OV199:2

Violence to no man -- Not that they were to prove unfaithful to their duties as soldiers, not that they should let a man to be arrested go free or that, if attempted to escape, he might not suffer violence at their hands; but the responsibility was with their superior. OV199:3

The difficulty is not that the Law requires the soldier to do violent things, but that they frequently take advantage of the situation and give greater violence than the Law permits or sanctions. OV199:4

Violate no man's rights or interests, nor even his feelings or his reputation. OV199:4

Thus will you show that you have repented and that you are seeking to do the divine will, for such a course will be very different from the one to which you have been accustomed. R4959:1

Do not violate the laws of your government. F607

Accuse any falsely -- Neither exact anything wrongfully. R4959:1

Either spite, revenge, malice or affronted dignity might lead some police officer to exaggerate some fault and thus to falsely accuse--to accuse more than would be proper, or to make an accusation out of whole cloth. OV199:5

Be content -- Notwithstanding John's preaching of contentment he was apprehended as a disturber of the peace and beheaded. R4959:1

"Godliness with contentment is great gain" (1 Tim. 6:6). Only the unintelligent could be content without godliness. OV200:3

In addition to example, the counsel of the saints to those about them should be in harmony with their faith. It should be of the nature of ointment and healing balm, pointing the world to the good time coming. A341

With your wages -- Not that those who love righteousness must take whatever wages are offered to them, and be content. But, having contracted for a certain period of time, being content, because it is what they had bargained for. OV200:2

Infidelity assails such scriptures as this as being opposed to progress and advancement, but, as in other matters: Blind unbelief is sure to err and scan God's work in vain, God is his own interpreter, and he will make it plain. NS63:1

The people -- Even the Gentile world, as is manifest from the visit of the wise men from the east, possibly Persia. R1674:3; B21

In expectation -- Thirty years before his anointing as Messiah at the beginning of his ministry. There was a corresponding expectation on the part of many, culminating in the year AD 1844, just thirty years before AD 1874, when Christ actually came. B240; C85

Even if they were not all able to receive him in the way he came. B66

Yet, when he offered himself, they were ashamed of him and of his peculiar following of fishermen, publicans, etc. NS630:3

They were expecting a great general, king and lawgiver combined--full of dignity, hauteur, ambition, pride, self-will; haughty and domineering in word and in act--their ideal of the King who would conquer the world and make Israel the leading nation. E157

But his presentation was so different from all they had expected that their proud hearts were ashamed of him. E157

It was the hope of every Israelite that, as a people, God would exalt their nation under Messiah; and when the Lord came to them, it would be as their King, to establish the long promised Kingdom of God upon the earth. A273

The affairs of Israel were more prosperous than they had been for centuries, and they were hoping that this return of God's favor might culminate in the sending of the promised King for the exultation of their nation. R3292:3

Roman dominion had brought peace, and the fame of the Jewish prophets had gone into all the world. The sudden announcement of his birth attracted wide attention, as it would not have done in less peaceful times. R1673:6

Now, in the end of the Gospel age, all men realize that we are in a transition period, and the horoscope of the 20th century is full of terrors and premonitions of great revolutionary changes. D167

Probably because of Daniel's prophecy of the seventy weeks. (Dan. 9:24) B66
Because God had promised centuries before that a holy child would be born. R4963:2

Even the Gentile world was in expectation of the coming Messiah. R1674:3, 4714:6

And all men mused -- Just as all men are now considering whether the nominal church has fulfilled its mission. D167

John -- Different from that of Jesus, John's mission was pre-eminently that of a reprover and reformer. R4978:5

He were the Christ -- The establishment of the Kingdom of God was the hope of every Israelite. A273

Had he made the claim, how readily would the people have accepted it.

R1916:4

So powerful was John's presentation of the truth. R2564:5

Luke 3:16

Baptize you with water -- Not with the holy Spirit. R1916:6

One mightier than I -- Assuring them he was so inferior to the Messiah.

R2564:5, 4113:6

I am not worthy -- It was this complete self-abnegation and singleness of purpose to accomplish the will of God that constituted John's moral greatness. R1916:2 We who antitype him may also feel very humble in respect to all of our privileges in connection with the announcement of the glorious Kingdom. Any other attitude would be unworthy of us as his representatives and ambassadors. R4113:6

He shall baptize you -- Some of them (the few) with holy Spirit, the remainder (the mass) with the fire of judgment. R2564:6

With the Holy Ghost -- The "Israelites indeed" were gathered into the garner of the Christian Church, and baptized with the holy Spirit at Pentecost. B233; E290, 314; R5443:2, 4959:4, 2927:2

And with fire -- The remainder of the Jewish nation, who "knew not the time of their visitation" (Matt. 19:44), were burned as "chaff" (Luke 3:17) in a great time of trouble which overthrew their nation. R5443:2, 2090:5, 1916:6

After the holy Spirit had searched, sifted and winnowed out of the Jewish dispensation all of the true wheat, gathering it into the garner of the Gospel (spirit) dispensation, then the fire came upon the chaff. R2927:2

The fire of God's anger, wrath to the uttermost. (1 Thess. 2:16) R4959:4; F445

The fire of trouble on all others during the 36-1/2 years following their rejection. R2564:6, 5443:2, 4959:4, 2927:2; B233

Culminating in the destruction of the Jewish polity in the year 70 AD.

E290; R4959:4, 1916:6

There will come a great time of trouble, symbolically a time of fire, upon the world, and especially upon rejected Babylon, even as similar fiery vengeance came upon Israel after the flesh. R2746:6

Luke 3:17

Fan is in his hand -- Messiah was about to make a separation between the true wheat and the chaff class. R4594:3, 4113:1

Thoroughly purge -- The great separating work of the Jewish harvest.

R1917:1, 2564:6; B260

Gather the wheat -- Only the true Israelites. C149; B233; R5443:2, 4594:3, 2245:6, 273:6

By begetting them of the holy Spirit at Pentecost. R4959:4

All the true wheat, we may be sure; not a solitary grain was lost. R2564:6

The first members of the Gospel Church. R2564:6

A small proportion of the whole. B205; R1916:6

A larger fulfillment--world-wide. In the end of this age all the wheat class are to be gathered into the heavenly garner by the change of the first resurrection. R4959:4

Into his garner -- A place of safety, a higher dispensation. R2564:6

The Christian Church. B233; C149; R5443:2

Of the Gospel age. R2927:2, 2090:4, 1917:1

The chaff -- The refuse part of that church and nation. R273:6

Devoid of the real wheat principle within. C150

The balance of the nation, the refuse. B233; C149; R4594:3, 273:6

He will burn -- As the chaff class of the Jewish nation was consumed in the close of that harvest, so the tare class will be consumed in this harvest. The chaff ceased from all pretension to divine favor as the triumphant Kingdom of God. C148

Not physically destroy (though of course many lives were lost in their trouble), but were cut off from all Kingdom favors in which previously they trusted and boasted; and so also in the parallel or counterpart. C149

In the time of trouble coming all others than the true Church will be cut off from association with the Church and from all opportunity of membership in it. As tares they will be burned, reduced to the level of the rest of humanity. R4959:4

Fire unquenchable -- The great fire of religious and political contention which destroyed the Jewish nation. B233; C148; R5443:2, 5363:3, 4594:3, 2564:6

A time of trouble which nothing could stop or hinder. Even the Roman Emperor was desirous of preserving the nation and establishing order there. The Roman army went, not to destroy them, but to establish peace in their midst. But the Lord declared that it should do its work to the full; and it did. R2564:6, 273:6; A229

Represented by figure f on the Chart of the Ages. A229; R273:6 F196

Likewise the great fire of trouble with which this Gospel age shall end will completely consume earthly governments and Churchianity in a fire of anarchy. Nothing shall quench that fire, or hinder that utter destruction of present systems. R2565:1

Luke 3:19

But Herod -- Was living in adultery. R2621:4; 557:6

Representing the kings of the earth. B261

Reproved by him -- Perhaps John acted imprudently and exceeded his duty. R3326:2

We should expect that, as John's reproof of Herod for having an unlawful wife led to his imprisonment, so here, the reproof of the church and the world for their unlawful union, provokes the displeasure of both and leads to the ostracizing (beheading) of the faithful reprovers. R557:6; 2621:4

For Herodias -- Representing the unfaithful nominal church. B261

For all the evils -- As a result of this typical union of church and State, contrary to Scripture. B261

Luke 3:20

Shut up John -- Representing the Church in this harvest time. B261

Which surprised and stunned the people. R4138:6

After he had preached about a year. R3325:2

In prison -- Typifying the coming restraint of the Church's liberties because of faithfulness in opposing and condemning error. B261

Where he remained about a year before execution. R3325:2

Luke 3:21

That Jesus also -- Having reached 30 years of age, manhood according to the Law, and therefore the right time to consecrate himself as a man. A179
With the baptism of Christ the ordinance received a new signification of entire consecration to God. In this new view, some of the Jewish converts were baptized again. R1917:4, 1161:2

Being baptized -- The Royal Priesthood began with the anointing of Jesus, the High Priest, at baptism. T27

This is the Spirit dispensation; hence, it is proper to say that the Gospel age began with the anointing of Jesus at the time of his baptism. A224

Not because he or any other Jew was commanded to do so, but as a fitting symbol of his consecration even unto death, and his faith in Jehovah's power to raise him out of death. R1161:2; A179

He sacrificed all the blessings and favors which were his under the Law Covenant. R5090:1

And praying -- We should pray before believers and unbelievers. R2251:6, 3698:5, 2252:1

Literally, rent asunder. R4970:1

He began to understand the higher, spiritual things. R5080:6, 5157:5, 5128:5

His brain was impressed with the recollections of his pre-human condition. R5157:5, 2565:5

Luke 3:22

The Holy Ghost descended -- He received the divine adoption and the spirit without measure. (John 3:34) R182:3

Thus beginning the Gospel age or Spirit dispensation. A224; R273:1
In a bodily shape -- A manifestation representing the invisible. E212
Like a dove -- Emblematic of peace and purity, representing the fullness of Jehovah's spirit of love in Jesus. E212
Not violently like lightning, but gently like a dove. R3296:6
Upon him -- Jesus made the covenant to lay down his humanity as our ransom. R182:3
Giving him the "earnest of his inheritance" (Eph. 1:14), of the divine nature. A179
Anointing him. Jesus was not the Messiah, the Christ, until this anointing took place. B66; T27, 37
Thou art my beloved -- The witness of his relationship came at once. R182:3

Luke 3:23

Began to be -- Note his promptness to engage in his Heavenly Father's business at the very earliest moment. R3291:5, 4427:2
About thirty -- No Levite was permitted to engage in the work of the tabernacle under thirty. (See Num. 4:3.) So Christ did not begin the work of the antitypical tabernacle (the work of atonement) until he was thirty. R1161:2; B58
It was necessary that Jesus conform to the Law of Moses, given by God to the Jews; for Jesus as a man was a Jew, born under the Law and subject, therefore, to its every feature. R5536:2
The fact that our Lord Jesus waited until he was thirty years of age before making his special consecration and receiving his ordination and commission to preach does not mean that his followers should wait until they are thirty before they begin to preach. R5536:3
Happily for us we are not bound under the Law nor under the limitations which hinder us from receiving the call and responding to it before thirty years of age. R2559:6, 3291:5
Manhood according to the Law; in condition to be the sin-offering. R444:6, 5064:2, 4535:6, 4427:2
Able to begin the work of atonement of the antitypical tabernacle. R1161:2
When he emerged from obscurity and began to declare his mission. R1247:3
We may be sure he presented himself in sacrifice to the Lord at the very earliest possible moment. R4427:2, 3291:5
As was supposed -- Some suppose the same thing now, reminding us of those Pharisees who sarcastically said, "We have not been born of fornication; we have one Father, God." (John 8:41) R443:3*
The son of Joseph -- Luke shows the genealogy of Mary, by which our Lord was actually related, according to the flesh, to our race and to the royal family of David, through the line of Nathan. R2555:6; E129; Q791:2

A good illustration of the principle of inherited royalty through a mother is furnished in the heir-apparent to the throne of Great Britain--the Prince of Wales; not through his father, but through his mother, the present queen. R453:1

Legal father of Jesus, from Solomon's line. R2060:4

The son of Heli -- The son of Eli, Mary's father, by marriage, or legally; or, as we would say, on-in-law of Eli. By birth, Joseph was the son of Jacob, as stated in Matt. 1:16. E129; Q791:2

A custom of that day was to reckon the genealogy through the wife's ancestry and treat her husband as in her stead, the son of her father. We would call such a son-in-law. Here Joseph is called the son of Heli, Mary's father, who was the son of Nathan the son of David. R453:2; E129
The necessity of thoroughly establishing the pedigree was the more important, since of this tribe (Gen. 49:10) was to come the ruling King of Israel, as well as the promised Messiah, hence the minutiae of detail not given in other instances. (Gen. 39) A42; HG532:4

The son of Matthat -- Luke gives 42 generations, while Matthew gives 27. The difference need not be considered as remarkable. It would be remarkable had they been the same. Q791:2

Luke 3:31

Of Nathan -- Mary's ancestor. Only the legal heirship came through Solomon, through his descendant Joseph, the legal father of Jesus. R2060:4
While Joseph came of the royal line, as Matthew testifies, Mary came of the obscure one, beginning with Nathan. R468:4*

Luke 3:38

Son of Adam -- In the male of the human species has resided the power to communicate the spark of life, or living seed, to progeny. E99

The son of God -- Adam's form or organism was of and from earth (which therefore served as his mother); but his spark of life, which constituted him a man, came from God (who thus was his Father or life-giver). E99, 110; R776:5

Before Adam fell he was a son of God. He had the Spirit of God, in the sense of having the right spirit, disposition, will, intention. (Eph. 2:3)
R5582:3, 1717:2, 219:4; A225; E108; F40; T84

He was very good--morally, intellectually and physically--a likeness which God was not ashamed to own and to call his son. R1609:5, 1264:3, 1266:2; E407

From the moment of sin onward, Adam was not recognized as a son of God. R1005:2, 866:1; E108; SM615:1

The same Creator who, before his creation, called Adam his son, declares that Adam and we, his children, became "children of wrath" and passed under condemnation because of sin. F40

As God's creation. God was his Life-giver, Creator, Producer, or Father. R1005:2

God made a copy, an image of himself, a manifestation of himself in flesh. R1266:2

He was God's son, as well as his image. R1264:3

"If a son, then an heir" (Rom. 8:17), of the vast domain of earth, which he was to subdue and take possession of as his posterity would increase and require it. R1266:2

Every member of the human family is a human brother to every other human being. All are children of the one father, Adam, a son of God. D310

While Adam's transgression was a wilful one, it did not mean that Adam preferred to be "a child of the devil." R2707:1

From the time that sin entered the world through Adam's disobedience, God recognized none of the human family as his sons until Jesus came and died.

R5859:1, 2843:5, 1005:1; CR498:6

Adam, before he sinned, "was very good." (Gen. 1:31) R1609:3, 1717:2, 816:3, 382:1, 364:1, 273:2

A "sheep" that wandered from the fold. R2707:1

God's energy operating on spirit substances produced angels; on earthly substances, man. E105

All Adam's children are equally God's beneficiaries and are entitled to sympathy and aid in proportion to the degree of their impairment. D311

By our adoption into the divine family, God becomes our Father. R182:3

"As many as received him, to them gave he power [liberty] to become the sons of God" (John 1:12). "Beloved, now are we the sons of God" (1 John 3:2). R1005:5

Only those who have the right spirit, disposition, will or intention, can keep the divine law, and only those who are in perfect harmony with God will he recognize as sons. R5582:3

All who, at the end of the Kingdom, will have been restored to perfection will be recognized as sons of God, in the same sense that Adam was a son of God--human sons. R2607:2, 655:4, 382:1, 376:4

All who accept of Christ as their Redeemer are reckonedly on the plane of human perfection (N on the Chart of the Ages). All on this plane God calls sons--human sons, reckoned as restored to primitive purity. In consequence they have fellowship or communion with God. A225

The Church can now, being "justified from all things" (Acts 13:39), call God Father, as Adam did before sin, and be recognized by him as human sons. R364:1, 209:4

The Church is invited to be sons of God on a higher plane of sonship; higher than the angelic sons, as heirs of God, joint-heirs with the Logos, partakers with him of the divine nature. R2409:4

The father does not determine the nature. Jehovah, of the divine nature, has begotten sons of the same, as well as other natures--angelic (Job 2:1); human (Luke 3:38), and "new creatures," who shall be of his own divine nature. (2 Pet. 1:4) E104; R777:4, 354:5

God is a Father of his creatures on different planes. But there is no mother on either plane. As the Creator of angels and men, he is their Father, and they his sons, though on different planes. R315:3, 777:4, 376:4, 354:5

Freedom from death and trouble is the glorious liberty common to sons of God on whatever plane of being they may be, whether sons of the human nature, the angelic nature (Job 38:7), or sons of the divine nature (1 John 3:2; 2 Pet. 1:4). R816:3; T84

Luke 4:1

And Jesus -- Not God, for "God tempteth not, neither is tempted of any." (James 1:13) R370:2

Being full -- "God gave not the spirit by measure unto him." (John 3:34) T37; R72:5

Of the holy Ghost -- The holy Spirit, from his baptism, but not before. A224

The zeal to accomplish his appointed mission. R1688:1

This new power is what Satan wanted him to use for the flesh, but it was not given for that purpose. R681:3

Returned from Jordan -- Notice that special trials immediately followed consecration. R3296:2

Led by the Spirit -- The Gospel age is the Spirit dispensation; hence it is proper to say that it began with the anointing of Jesus, "by the Holy Ghost, and with power." (Acts 10:38) A224; R273:1

His earnest desire to know fully and completely the will of the Father. R4641:5, 4970:2; CR95:6

We should never voluntarily go into temptation, but knowing our own imperfection, seek to avoid it. R3715:6

His own spirit, his new mind. Thus it is our new minds, the result of our full consecration, that lead us into temptations, trials and difficulties.

R3716:1, 4970:2, 4641:5; CR95:6

Into the wilderness -- For study and meditation relative to the great work to which he had just consecrated himself, represented in his baptism. R680:1

Away from every distracting person or thing, that he might study the Word treasured in his perfect memory, now fully intelligible by the power of the Spirit. "The natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit." (1 Cor. 2:14) R3297:3, 3716:4, 1688:2, 680:1

Luke 4:2

Being forty days -- Doubtless the entire period was spent in prayer and contemplation of the prophecies, including those which showed that he would be lifted up as the serpent in the wilderness (Num. 21:8, 9); be despised and rejected of men, and led as a lamb to the slaughter (Isa. 53:3, 7). He found it necessary, before attempting to serve God, to Study to show himself approved. (2 Tim. 2:15) R3716:5, 3717:1

While carefully studying the Law, he endured a most subtle and severe conflict with the powers of darkness. R1917:2

Tempted -- Along the lines of selfishness. R3715:3

He was not tempted like the world--to godlessness, vice and criminality. R1689:4, 4970:3

Of the devil -- Greek, diabolus. The word always appears in the singular and evidently refers to Satan. R3716:1

Whose very existence is now denied by many. F609

Afterward hungered -- When he was weak from fasting and was overwhelmed with the importance and cost of the covenant he had made, the Adversary appeared--as a tempter. R4970:2

Up to this time his perfect mind was so absorbed in his great theme that he probably neither ate nor slept. R3716:6, 1689:2

Shipwrecked sailors have been exonerated for cannibalism when they have been without food much less than 40 days. In the siege of Jerusalem mothers ate their own children. R2243:4

The sin is not in being tempted, but in yielding to temptation. R1689:5

Luke 4:3

And the devil -- Choosing the time when his overtaxed human powers sought refreshment and recuperation. R3717:2

Appearing not as an enemy and a fiend, but as a friend. R4970:3

Said unto him -- Probably not personally, but by suggestion; representing himself as an "angel of light." (2 Cor. 11:14) R3717:3, 1688:1

Be made bread -- Use your consecrated talents and powers, and your office as God's children and representatives, in such a manner as to further your "bread and butter" interests. R681:3, 4970:6, 3717:6; E111, 123

For a man to use any or all of his powers to satisfy hunger would certainly, under normal circumstances, be no sin. But the circumstances were peculiar--Jesus had just consecrated himself as a man, and had received special powers in connection with the holy Spirit. R681:3

Illustrating our temptations to preach for worldly applause, wealth and social position, and to seek the healing of our bodies, which we have consecrated to death in God's service. R3717:6, 4970:6, 1689:2

Luke 4:4

Jesus answered -- Ignoring all suggestions contrary to God's plan.

R1125:5

It is written -- Though tempted in all points like as we are, he ignored his own will and all suggestions from others contrary to God's plan, and obeyed God implicitly. Therein lay the secret of his success. HG292:6 Our Lord's success was by being rightly exercised by his knowledge of God; as it is written: "By his knowledge shall my righteous servant justify many," while bearing their iniquities. (Isa. 53:11) R1125:5

Our Lord's reply to temptation; the sure defense of the true child of God.

F200; R1688:4

Live by bread alone -- Refusing to use divine power for his personal comfort. F636, 650

My eternal life is not dependent upon the maintenance of this physical body. R4970:4

Our meat and drink should be to do the will of God. (John 4:34) R1689:3

I am not afraid of starving, God has more ways and means of sustaining my life than food. R681:4

Another thought, especially for the sisters: In your daily life remember that "man shall not live by bread alone," and, therefore, that all your energies should not be spent in merely gratifying the palate. (Luke 10:40-42) R681:4

Word of God -- The Scriptures do claim to be the Word of God, though their authority by no means depends upon the finding of that expression in the Scriptures. R1584:3

My hope is in God and in his promise. R4970:4

Not merely the milk of the Word. R3622:2

Every admonition, encouragement and promise is necessary for those now called. R3060:4

Luke 4:5

The devil -- Satan, "the prince of this world" (John 14:30), came to our Lord just as he comes to his followers--as an angel of light, and with his real character and purposes cloaked. R1688:1

Again posing as a friend. R3719:3

Taking him up -- Mentally, not physically. R3719:2, 3299:1

From no mountain on earth could all the kingdoms of the world be seen. R4970:5, 3719:2, 3299:1

An high mountain -- Kingdom; Satan's own dominion over the world.

R1688:6, 4970:5, 3719:2

All the kingdoms -- Christ clearly understood that at some time he was to have authority over these kingdoms, but probably he did not yet see how or when, hence the peculiar force of this temptation. R3299:1-3

Luke 4:6

The devil -- He is the instigator; the natural and often legitimate desires of the flesh are the mediums through which his temptations are presented. R1689:5

Said -- Some erroneously regard this as a sham temptation; that he offered what he did not possess. R680:2

Will I give thee -- Satan's dominion has both an invisible spiritual and a visible human phase. A251

Saying, Let us unite to bring humanity out of sin and death. Thus you will attain your hopes without suffering. R4970:5

Satan says: "Serve God, bless mankind, and spread the Gospel; but do it my way." R681:5

Look well to it that no element of worldly ambition or worldly policy ensnare your feet and allure you from the narrow way. R2163:2

Delivered unto me -- You realize that I am the prince of this world. R4970:5

Your church must first of all recognize these governments of mine, and must call them Christian governments, no matter how un-Christlike may be their rulers and laws. R680:6

To whomsoever I will I give it -- Satan, faithful to his promise, exalted the nominal church. R680:6

Luke 4:7

Worship me -- The thought is not of adoration and prayer, but of service, to follow Satan's directions. R680:3

Cooperate with me for the world's uplift. E113; R680:4

As does the nominal church when it seeks to increase its membership by resorting to worldly forms, customs, fairs, games, entertainments, etc.

R3719:5

When Papacy did this, Satan was true to his promise. B293

The Adversary tempts the Lord's followers to compromise with the spirit and methods of the world, by church federations, etc. R4970:6, 3719:5

This same temptation beset the infant Church during the first five centuries, and finally was successful. Satan, faithful to his promise, exalted the nominal church, resulting in the placing over the world the Church of Rome as the head of both civil and ecclesiastical government.

R680:5

Satan presented the same temptation to the Reformers, and again with success. R680:6

To us the same temptation is one of the most difficult to withstand--associate yourselves with some large and influential organization. Thus your influence among men will be greater and more good will be accomplished. R681:1

Others are tempted to think that they can serve God's cause and truth best by spending their best energies and talents in acquiring wealth, to be spent in spreading the Gospel. R681:2

Luke 4:8

Behind me, Satan -- Adversary, opposing spirit. F611

I will not serve you nor cooperate with you in any sense of the word. R4970:6, 3299:4; E74

The loyalty of the Lord's heart was shown. Q184:T

He did not say, Let us talk it over and discuss it a little. Q184:T

It is written -- This was his reply to temptation. R1688:4

God, and him only -- As the great Supreme Ruler. E74

But reverence of others, if not rivals of Jehovah, is entirely proper. E73

Jesus could not accept any suggestion out of harmony with God's plan. R1689:1

All of Israel's difficulties and failures to attain the blessings that were before them were because they did not sufficiently sanctify the Lord God in their hearts and let him be their only fear and only dread. R3468:1 Similarly, nominal spiritual Israel has neglected putting the Lord first and has been disposed to forget the Lord and to affiliate with the world, to seek worldly favor and cooperation. R3468:4

Shalt thou serve -- Jesus escaped this temptation, not by arguing the reasonableness of God's plan, but by simply relying on the fact that under all circumstances it was right to obey God, and wrong to disobey. R680:5 He ignored his own will, and all suggestions from others contrary to God's plan, and obeyed God implicitly. R1125:5

To Jerusalem -- Mentally, not physically. R3718:2, 4970:4

On a pinnacle -- The roof of the southern wing. R3718:2 Probably the central part of the royal portico, which was very high and overlooked a deep ravine. Josephus says 100 cubits high over a 400 cubit valley. R681:4 Overlooking the valley of Gehenna. R3718:2, 3298:2

About 600 feet above the bottom of the valley. R3298:2, 681:4

And said unto him -- Still posing as a friend, an angel of light. R3718:3

Cast thyself down -- Recklessly expose yourself in proof of mission, thus drawing the immediate attention of all Israel to the fact that you are the Messiah. E111; R4970:4

This would have been reckless presumption and daring, and not the proper faith in God. R681:5

The Adversary tempts the Lord's followers by suggesting some wild, foolish way of capturing the world for God. R4970:6

"A wicked and adulterous generation seeketh after a sign" (Matt. 16:4), such as the laying on of hands, the gift of tongues, physical healing, peculiar dress, robes, mitres, relics of saints, etc. R3718:5

Illustrating additionally our temptations to go into debt without knowing how the debt can be paid, or to recklessly expose ourselves to any danger, moral, financial, physical or spiritual, expecting miraculous deliverance. R2244:3,2

We not only need the Bible, but we also need the guidance of the holy Spirit to apply the Word. R3719:1, 3298:3, 681:5

It is this temptation which sometimes leads men to call upon God loudly, to come down in power and convert fifty sinners here this evening. R681:5

Luke 4:10

It is written -- The Adversary can use Scripture, and does use it often in the presentation of error. R681:5, 3718:6, 288:1

Luke 4:11

Bear thee up -- Quotation from Psa. 91:12. R4970:4

Foot -- Feet or last part of the Body of Christ. R288:1, 3719:1, 3298:4, 757:6, 681:5

This prophecy refers to the Christ as a whole; its personal application was rejected by Jesus; but when we apply the reference "foot" to the feet, or last part of the body of Christ, all is harmonious. R757:6, 681:6, 288:1 "The feet of him" have been privileged to say "unto Zion, Thy God reigneth." (Isa. 52:7) R288:5, 757:3

Possibly our Lord himself did not at this time know the correction of this Scripture; that the "feet" refer to the last members of the Body of Christ, and that he himself was to be the "stone" of stumbling and rock of offence to both the houses of Israel. (Isa. 8:14) R3298:3,4

Against a stone -- The stone referred to, we understand, is the same as that of Isa. 8:14--that Jesus is the stone of stumbling. R757:6, 681:6

Luke 4:12

Jesus answering -- Seemingly conflicting Scriptures could be harmonized by examining underlying principles. R3298:3

Ignoring all suggestions contrary to God's plan. R1125:5, 3718:4

It is said -- Its personal application by Satan was rejected by Jesus as a misapplication of Scripture. R288:1, 757:6

Not tempt the Lord -- Try the Lord. R681:4

By doing things which are directly contrary to the laws of nature, which would require miraculous intervention to save you. R3718:4, 4970:5, 1688:4

The Church is tempted as Jesus was: to a deceitful handling of the Word of God, to ambitious efforts to gain present power and advantage, to take the sacrifice off the altar. R1689:4

Luke 4:13

Departed from him -- The sword of the Spirit did its work; Satan left in disgust. R1689:5; CR95:6

"Resist the devil, and he will flee from you." (James 4:7) R1689:5

Luke 4:14

Jesus returned -- Remembering the proverb, "A prophet has no honor in his own country," our Lord did not begin his ministry in Nazareth, but in Judea. The people of Nazareth heard of his works and words. This would tend to prepare them to receive Messiah and his message, offsetting the familiarity which so frequently breeds contempt. R2579:1

Our Lord began his ministry in Judea, and is supposed to have spent a year there before going to Galilee. R3300:1

Power of the spirit -- The people "were astonished at his doctrine, for his word was with power." (Luke 4:32) R1917:2, 1921:1

"God gave not the spirit by measure unto him." (John 3:34) R1917:1

The secret of all power in the work of the Lord. Learning, worldly wisdom or fluency of speech are no substitutes. No preaching, no teaching is of value, except it be in the power of the holy Spirit. R1917:1

Jesus obtained this power in the same way his followers may obtain it; viz., by entire consecration to God, faithfulness to that consecration, and by communion with him in prayer, and meditation upon his Word. R1917:2

The preacher or teacher acceptable to God must, like his Lord, be first sincerely and fully consecrated to God. Then, when tried and tempted, he must prove his faithfulness to that consecration. R1917:3

Fame of him -- Because of his miracles and teaching. R1735:3

As Messiah, with power and authority. R1743:1

Tending to his immediate advancement to the kingly office. R1754:3

Attracting one class and repelling another. R3153:2, 356:5

As his fame increased, the opposition became more and more pronounced, especially from the chief priests, scribes and Pharisees, as they were brought into competition and unfavorable comparison with him as public teachers. R1735:3

Luke 4:15

Taught in their synagogues -- The Lord and the apostles could go into the synagogues and teach the people for a time, but they were soon hindered. R986:5

Today the clergy keep out all who would feed the sheep "meat in due season" (Matt. 24:45); hence the sheep are called out of Babylon. R986:6
Jairus, the ruler of the synagogue in Capernaum, our Lord's home city, sometimes called upon him to read the Sabbath lesson. R4588:3

Glorified of all -- Honored. R1069:3

So great was the attention which his teaching and works attracted that Pharisees and doctors of the Law came out of every town of Galilee, Judea and Jerusalem to hear and to see. R1921:2

On more than one occasion it appeared as though the people would take him by force to make him a king; but our Lord avoided the matter and withdrew himself and discouraged the efforts. NS629:3

As you enter a field mixed with tares, being filled with the Spirit, you may be received and welcomed, as was Jesus before the truth began to cut. R356:4

Luke 4:16

He came to Nazareth -- Even when he did go to his home province he chose to go to Capernaum before going to his native city, Nazareth. R3300:2

The beginning of the second year of his ministry. R3300:1

A prophet is generally less esteemed at home than abroad. R3300:2

The people of Nazareth were proud of Jesus as the representative of their city, and hoped that he would perform great miracles there. R3301:6

Had been brought up -- From about three years of age to 30. R3300:2

As his custom was -- Not only to attend the synagogue meetings every Sabbath, but to be the reader for the congregation. R3300:3

Implying an education far beyond that of the majority of his day. R2579:1

"Forsake not the assembling of yourselves." (Heb. 10:25) R2579:2

Into the synagogue -- Our Lord's example in seeking to associate as far as possible with the most religious people of his day, and his willingness to take part in the public services, are a lesson to his people everywhere. R2579:2

The synagogue more nearly resembled present-day Bible classes, where the Scriptures are read and freely discussed, a method still appropriate to the Lord's people and still beneficial for the elucidation of truth. R3300:3

A certain amount of pride in their fellow-townsmen had been awakened, and we may be sure that there was a large attendance on the first Sabbath day after our Lord's arrival in Nazareth. R3300:2

For to read -- Quite probably the passage was the stated Scripture lesson for that day. R2579:2

Luke 4:17

Delivered unto him -- He had been recognized as one of the few able to read, and had done the congregational reading of the Holy Scriptures.

R5068:1

The prophet Esaias -- The Jews had a certain order in which the Scriptures were read in the synagogue, and apparently the book of Isaiah was the appropriate one for this occasion. R3300:3

Where it was written -- A Greek translation of Isaiah 61. R2579:2

Luke 4:18

Spirit of the Lord -- Not the "ghost" nor a person in any sense. E169
There is no ground for thinking of the holy Spirit as another God. Quite to the contrary, it was the Father's Spirit that was communicated to our Lord Jesus. E169

Is upon me -- Since the time of my baptism. A224; R273:1

Because -- The anointing is for the very purpose of fitting those so anointed, whether male or female, to preach the good tidings. Therefore all the anointed, male or female, Jew or Greek, bond or free, are anointed to preach. R1549:1

He hath anointed -- At 30 years of age. R240:1

The holy Spirit had come upon the Lord Jesus about a year before, after his consecration at Jordan. It constituted his anointing. R3300:5

The value of the anointing was that by it the Father gave witness that the sacrifice was accepted; it was the seal or evidence to him that the Father would give him the promised divine nature when he had actually given his life. R240:4

Our Lord told how he was ordained to be a preacher; and the Scriptures tell us we are to walk in his steps. All who have received the ordination of God have the authority to preach according to their opportunities and abilities. R5807:3

From the time of Jesus' baptism God dwelt in him in a peculiar manner; as the Apostle John says of the Church, "God dwelleth in us and we in God." (1 John 4:16) R5291:6

The holy anointing oil was poured upon the head of Aaron, but ran down even unto the skirts of his garments, thus anointing in the figure, each member of his body. R3301:2, 72:3; F132; T37

As this ordination came upon Jesus, it later came upon the disciples at Pentecost; and all down the Gospel age it has come upon the followers of Christ, anointing them to preach the Gospel. Q514:3

Although this anointing did not come directly upon them until Pentecost, they had previously had a foretaste of it in that the Lord conferred upon them a share of his holy Spirit, power, when he sent them out to preach.

F212

See what was the purpose of his anointing, and learn therefrom the purpose of your own anointing under him. R942:4

None but the anointed body of Christ are commissioned to preach the good tidings, and every member of that body is so commissioned, irrespective of human distinctions of "clergy" and "laity"; and whosoever does not fulfill this mission is unfaithful to his commission. R2580:5

All of those called of God to preach have the anointing of the holy Spirit of God as their necessary preparation for this service. Without this anointing they are as sounding brass and tinkling cymbals, having no commission from God to declare his truth. R2057:3, 241:2

They could teach the people in the synagogue, for a time, but as they shunned not to declare the whole counsel of God, they soon found little, and finally, no opportunity to teach the people in the synagogue. R986:5

The commission of the apostles was, in the main, the same as the commission of the Lord and of the whole Church. R1521:5

This commission, through the Prophet Isaiah, is the only divinely authorized commission that was ever given to any man to preach the Gospel.

No man should be regarded by the saints as a minister of the Gospel, or received or heard as such, who cannot claim this commission. R1715:2

The Apostle John says that "the anointing which we have received of him abideth in us." (1 John 2:27) R5536:6, 241:2

The anointing of the Church is for a work yet future. R5537:1, 3301:2

Speaking of the ultimate result of his work. As we gladly accept the divine arrangement, so we must also accept the divine times and seasons, and realize that they are wisely ordained. R2098:5

With God, human ordination counts for nothing. In human ordination, each denomination qualifies its own ministers. But the ordained ministers of God are servants of God and not of error. R5537:2

Our Lord's authority to preach did not come from the Jewish ecclesiastics.

"The anointing which ye have received abideth in you." (1 John 2:27)

R1917:5 Every member of the anointed Body of Christ will be a preacher of the Gospel. R942:4

Me -- To all appearance the prophet Isaiah was the person meant, yet when Jesus here points out its fulfillment in himself, we see that in him its conditions were fully met. R436:2, 240:1 While this prophecy was primarily fulfilled in Jesus and applied especially to him, we understand also that it applies to the members of Christ. R5536:5

Intimating that nobody is to speak in God's name except those who have been divinely commissioned to do so. R5537:2

As the unleavened wafers of fine flour were anointed with oil in Lev. 2:1. R84:3

To preach -- The commission was one of service--they were to serve one another, to serve the Lord, and to lay down their lives for the brethren. These services were to be rendered especially in connection with the promulgation of the Gospel. F212

We are to distinguish between the preaching of the Gospel and the good tidings promised, which are to come to pass in due time. R2579:6

After this preaching of the Gospel shall have been given and shall have accomplished its purpose and intention, then will follow the glorious actualities referred to in it. R2580:1

Every member of the Body, however humble or obscure, being "anointed to preach," is failing in his mission if he does not preach. R1917:5

Preaching is not always public declaration. Every influence that we can send out is preaching the Gospel. R1917:5

Tract distribution, personal visits, personal letters and personal conversation (wise, discreet and backed by noble and consistent Christian character) are effective means. In these various ways all can preach the Gospel. R1891:2, 241:3

Some can do several of these things, some can do all of them, and all can and should preach by their life and customs the power of the good news to transform, for we are all living epistles, known and read of all men. (2 Cor. 3:2) R241:4

Preaching a good message rather than raising a great army. R3300:6

The gospel -- Jesus preached the "good news" in two parts: first, to the world, a restitution of all things, illustrated by his miracles; second, the great prize obtainable by those who will now walk in the "narrow way," illustrated in his own person. R241:2

The news was so new to them and so good that the Pharisees and religious leaders could not believe it to be true. R241:3

To the poor -- Not the literally poor any more than the literally broken-hearted, but the "poor in spirit," the humble minded, who are also the sympathetic, the tender, the heart-broken, as in contrast with the hard-hearted. R2580:1

To all who were meek enough to receive it by faith from the humble and unpretentious Nazarene. R1714:3

The meek of the earth, who gladly receive the truth and constitute the Church of God. R931:6

To the meek, not to the rebellious or indifferent; these are to be dealt with by and by. R5537:2

Not wasting time and effort upon those whom they find to be mentally "rich and increased in goods, and feeling that they have need of nothing." (Rev. 3:17) R2580:2

Rather than rallying round himself the rich, wise and proud. R3300:6

"I pray not for the world, but for them which thou hast given me." (John 17:9) R798:6

The meek, not the proud, hard-hearted, profane. E488; R3300:6, 2821:4, 2310:5, 798:6

The meek alone can or shall see Present Truth. E90

"The poor have the gospel preached to them." (Matt. 11:5) R5145:1

He hath sent me -- Jesus merely proclaimed these things, with a few examples of healing, etc.; the actual blessings belong to the Messianic Kingdom time. R5068:5

To heal -- Greek, iaomai, meaning to heal; also has the significance of saved, as in Matt. 13:15. R4099:3

As in "Pray for one another that ye may be healed." (James 5:16) R4099:3

The broken-hearted -- Broken by the trials, difficulties, perplexities and adversities of the present life. R2580:2

The anointed ones are not to spend their time endeavoring to break the hard hearts of the worldly, for this is not part of their commission.

R2580:2, 3436:1, 3301:2, 2965:6, 2821:4

They had expected their deliverer would be the one who would cause the loss of many lives and the breaking of many hearts with sorrow and trouble. R3300:6

How his words ought to have appealed to all that were broken-hearted! The difficulty probably was that they were hard-hearted. R5608:4

To tell those in trouble that by and by the Kingdom would bring order, peace and joy out of present confusion and trouble. R1714:3

Pouring in the oil and the wine of the divine promise to cheer, comfort, bless and prepare for joint-heirship in the Kingdom. R2580:3

Help to allay the sufferings of others, especially of the Lord's household, though they are to assist any as they have suitable opportunity. But their special work in blessing and comforting the world will be in the Kingdom. R5537:1

To point them to the ransom, the resurrection, and to tell them that "joy cometh in the morning." (Psa. 30:5) R3436:1

To preach -- "The hour is coming, in which all that are in their graves shall hear his [Jesus'] voice and shall come forth." (John 5:28) R240:6, 1903:3, 1714:6; NS119:1, 209:4

Deliverance -- The gospel of the resurrection. E378

Signifying the liberation of Satan's captives from the bondage of sin, and ultimately the release from death and its bondage. R3300:6

By his death he secured the key. (Rev. 1:18) HG497:4; NS139:3, 209:3

To the captives -- Surely our Lord opened no earthly prison doors at his first advent. HG497:4; NS118:6

John the Baptist was in Herod's prison at that very time, and the Lord never mentioned his deliverance, nor attempted it. NS209:3

The dead race, still lying in the prison-house of death, the grave. R1715:6

All in that prison-house shall be delivered, not one shall be left. NS209:4

Captives of sin, and receiving daily its wages--dying by inches and entering the great prison-house, the tomb. R1086:1

"Sold under sin." (Rom. 7:14) R2580:4, 2310:3; C315; E122; SM611:3

All are mentioned as "prisoners," some in the prison, and some prisoners in bondage, "captives" not yet barred in. R838:6

Sin is represented as the great oppressive Monarch, from whose power we have been delivered by Christ. Regaining our liberty, we have become associated with the Redeemer of all the slaves of sin and death. R930:6
"Prisoners of hope." (Zech. 9:12) R2601:1

The grave is really a symbol of hope; for we would not speak of it as a prison house were it not for our hopes of resurrection. R894:1

Were they not captives, bound by the fetters of sin, bound also by the chains and fetters of heredity, sickness, imperfection and death? R5068:5

Their thoughts may have gone out to John the Baptist, who at this time was in prison, and they may have wondered whether Jesus would take any steps for his release. R3300:6

We have no hope for the opening of the blind eyes in the present age--only the few now get the eyesalve. It is better that the majority should be permitted to remain blinded, that when the eyes of their understanding have been opened, and their responsibilities proportionately increased, it may be under circumstances more favorable to them. R2580:5

Under "the bondage of corruption" (Rom. 8:21), decay and death. R838:6, 2310:4; SM611:3

To the blind -- Mentally, morally and physically. HG293:3

The blindness which sin has brought upon the hearts of men, perverting their mental vision, hindering them from seeing the divine being and his divine attributes in their true light. R2580:5

Whose minds the god of this world hath blinded. (2 Cor. 4:4) R2310:5

Were not some of them actually blind also, as respected the eyes of their understanding? R5068:5

To set at liberty -- Freedom from the domination of Satan and sin.

R3301:3

To become members of the house of sons. R3302:4

They have no liberty so long as they are under the bondage of corruption (decay and death), hence the deliverance of the prisoners in the tomb, and the captives not entombed, to perfect life, are equally the work of the Restorer. R838:6

Them that are bruised -- Were they not all bruised by the fall, imperfect, blemished, wounded, sore--mentally, morally and physically. R5068:5

This figure fitly represents the bondage of corruption, infirmity, etc., which are concomitants to the death penalty. R2580:6

How comparatively valueless would all the other features of blessings be if sickness, pain and imperfection continued. R2580:6

Luke 4:19

The acceptable year -- Time, period. R3301:1, 2581:1

The Gospel age is the only opportunity to attain unto the divine nature, immortality--we see no "second chance" for that. R527:3*

The time in which God will accept your sacrifices, because he accepts you as "members" of the Body of the Christ, the great High Priest, the great Mediator of the New Covenant. R4535:3, 3301:1, 2581:1, 241:6

The entire Gospel age, the "acceptable time" in the sense that, during this period, God is willing, through the merit of Christ's sacrifice, to accept from amongst the sinners a Little Flock of joint-sacrificers to share with their Redeemer the Kingdom. R5068:5

The Gospel age antitypes Israel's Day of Atonement, and the sacrifices of our Lord and his Church, his Body, are the "better sacrifices," foreshadowed by the bullock and goat offered typically by the Jews. SM48:2

The acceptance of the world, after their restoration by Christ, is very different from the acceptance of the Church in this present time. R3301:1

Luke 4:20

He closed the book -- Our Lord read discriminatingly, "rightly dividing the word of truth" (2 Tim. 2:15). He read the part appropriate to the time, but did not read about the day of vengeance. R3300:3, 59:3*; A218 Similarly our Lord referred to two of the "three ways" in Matt. 7:13,14, because the third was not yet due to be opened up. A218

His teaching was to test the people: if his message were received, no day of vengeance would be necessary; if not received, the day of vengeance would follow, as it did follow upon that nation after it had rejected him. R3300:3

Omitting "and the day of vengeance of our God." That part of the prophecy was not due to be proclaimed. Today the passage is due to be given as a whole. R5537:5, 1917:6, 241:6

It was not yet time to proclaim "the day of vengeance of our God," nor to comfort all that mourn--the whole "groaning creation," nor to grant unto the mourners in Zion beauty for ashes, etc. R1715:1

And sat down -- It is better that we should read one verse understandingly and appreciatingly than that we should merely read chapter after chapter of the Lord's Word in a formal manner. R3300:3

Fastened on him -- The audience had a mixed sentiment respecting him--the natural feeling of irreverence for those with whom we are intimately acquainted, and another feeling of pride in a fellow-citizen who had attained such renown. R2579:2

Began to say -- The Lord's discourse is not given, but unquestionably it was a grand one, based upon so grand a text. R3301:6, 2579:2

This day -- Why did he not read the entire commission? The answer is obvious: it was because the remainder was not fulfilled in that day. R1714:3

Now, in the harvest of their age, for the first time it could be said that it was fulfilled. R3300:5

Fulfilled -- He did not, in any coarse or rude manner, say: "I am the Messiah, I am the anointed of Jehovah." He did it in a quiet, unassuming manner, by calling attention to the prophecy and declaring that its fulfillment had now taken place. R3300:5

Primarily fulfilled in Jesus, but applies also to the members of Christ. R5536:5, 1714:3

Luke 4:22

And all -- Lengthy quotes praising Jesus from Rousseau and Napoleon Bonaparte. E154, 155

Bare him witness -- His superiority as a reader and exponent was recognized, and the service was usually turned over to him. R4957:3
Yet faithfulness to the truth quickly aroused hatred and opposition. Very soon the great ones in the church began to oppose him bitterly; but still many of the common people heard him gladly. R1069:3

The people of Nazareth would of course feel a certain sense of pride in their fellow-citizen, whose fame was spreading throughout all Galilee and Judea. R5067:3

Wondered at -- Recognizing him as far beyond the ordinary. "Never man spake like this man." (John 7:46) E154

They had never before seen one in whom was Life. R4107:4

Filled with admiration. R2579:3

The explanation of the matter is that Jesus was perfect, while all about him were imperfect. R4957:3, 4107:4

Not merely because he was a perfect man, but also because his words were indited of the indwelling Spirit of the Father. R240:4

Receiving his testimony, but later deserting him, walking no more with him as he continued to enforce the lessons of divine truth. (See verse 28)

R5507:6

Gracious words -- Words of favor, of blessing, of comfort. R3301:3

Words of love, and promises of release from death. R241:3

"Never man spake like this man" (John 7:46); "Beautiful words, wonderful words of life." SM263:1

"He taught as one having authority [as one who understood his subject thoroughly] and not as the scribes [not doubtfully]." (Matt. 7:29) R3803:2

"Grace is poured into thy lips" (Psa. 45:2); "Let your speech be always with grace [with manifest love and kindness], seasoned with salt [a purifying and preservative influence]." (Col. 4:6) R1937:2

No threats of eternal torment to nine-tenths of the human family. R2569:6, 1502:4

Yet faithfulness to the truth quickly aroused hatred and opposition.

R1069:3, 5068:2

The grace of our Lord's lips is manifest to us in the message which he left. SM55:1

Even at the age of twelve, he was intellectually superior to the mature and learned doctors. R1682:2

Out of his mouth -- "Grace is poured into thy lips" (Psa. 45:2). "My doctrine shall drop as the rain, my speech shall distill as the dew, as the small rain upon the tender herb and as the showers upon the grass." (Deut. 32:2) R1937:2

Is not this Joseph's son? -- It was just as some remarked on other occasions: "Whence hath this man this wisdom?" (Matt. 13:54) Ah, it was by reason of the anointing. R1715:5

One of their humblest citizens. R1715:5

Luke 4:23

Do also here -- Our Lord does not say that he was not permitted of the Father to do miracles at Nazareth, although this is implied in the fact that he did none, and in the examples and illustrations which he gave. R2579:3

He might not use his power selfishly in his own interest. We may likewise suppose that he would not be at liberty to use it simply as a gratification to curiosity, but that it could be used only in response to proper faith. R2579:4

We may surmise the reason the Lord did not perform any miracles at Nazareth was because the people, being in a right condition of mind, should have been ready to accept the good tidings without any attestation of miracles. R3494:2

Luke 4:24

Verily I say -- Words of reproof to a heedless and merely curiosity-seeking people. R1715:5 Human nature esteems grander that which is distant. R3494:2

Luke 4:25

The days of Elias -- Our Lord's reference to this incident confirms this entire piece of history respecting Elijah, the three and a half years of famine and his visit to Sarepta. R2326:4

Three years and six months -- Foretelling the flight of the true Church into the wilderness from the face of the false church during 1260 years, while the harlot reigned as a queen. (Rev. 12:6) R389:3*
Illustrating the period of Papacy's reign "as a queen." (See 1 Kings 17:1,7) B256; R389:3*

Great famine -- Israel may already have had six months' drought when Elijah announced that no rain was to be expected until he would announce it. (See 1 Kings 18:1) R4740:1

As copious rains followed, so at the end of the 1260 years, AD 1799, the power of the truth and its witnesses was manifested. B256

Luke 4:26

Save unto Sarepta -- In Zidon, implying that she, a Gentile, was more worthy of the blessings than were any of the widows of Israel. (See 1Kings 17:9) R5741:3, 2326:4

A woman -- A Gentile, but more worthy of the blessings Elijah accorded than were any of the widows of the land of Israel. R5741:3

There was faith found in the widow. R2348:1

Luke 4:27

Many lepers -- Had not thought it worth while to seek Elijah for help. R2348:1

Saving Naaman -- There was faith found in Naaman. The "many lepers" of Israel had heard of this prophet, no doubt; but Naaman had faith in God to come seeking Elisha. R2348:1

Luke 4:28

In the synagogue -- They could teach the people in the synagogue, for a time, but as they shunned not to declare the whole counsel of God, they soon found little, and finally, no opportunity to teach the people in the synagogue. R986:5

When they heard -- The apt illustrations were unkindly received by his hearers because, drawing the parallel, it likened them to starving, poor and diseased lepers, and implied our Lord's comparative greatness and superiority to them as a dispenser of divine bounty. R2579:5

Filled with wrath -- What a picture of the natural man in his fallen position! At one moment rejoicing in the Master's gracious words, at another desiring to destroy him because of the failure of their selfish hopes and ambitions. R3302:1

Those who followed the Lord for only a little season and then forsook him ceased then to be his disciples, and were no longer so recognized. R3153:2

What made the change? The plain declaration that, because they did not believe in him fully, therefore it would not be God's will that he should perform any miracles for them. R5068:2

The miracles were practical, and they could appreciate them; but his teaching that he was the Messiah seemed far-fetched, when they had known him for so long as the son of Joseph, the carpenter. R2579:3

Their pride and patriotism made them wild. R5068:2

What consternation would follow in the churches of today if the whole "counsel of God" (Acts 20:27) were declared! R5507:6

Luke 4:29

Thrust him out -- It seems that persecution from his earthly kindred was not lacking, and that he was unwelcome in the home of his childhood.

R1069:3

If you are faithful in proclaiming the truth, which is sharper than any two-edged sword, it will not be long before they will do with you as they did with Jesus. R356:5

And led him -- Not daring to lay hands on him, but merely as a mob gnashing upon him and pushing onward in a direction in which they desired.

R5068:2

Brow of the hill -- A precipitous hill about forty or fifty feet high.

R3302:1

Luke 4:30

Passing through the midst -- Not a disappearance in the sense of becoming invisible to the people. It was merely an adroit, prompt movement, by which he eluded the murderous designs of his enemies. B126

Apparently our Lord permitted the matter to go far enough to show the real spirit of his opposers. R3302:1

By the exercise of some power, possibly a power natural to a perfect human being, our Lord mastered them with his mind, and passed from their midst.

R2579:6

Overawing them by the dignity of his presence. R5068:2

Went his way -- His hour had not yet come and therefore he seems to have exerted that power which belonged to him as a perfect man over the weaker, imperfect men--the power of his mind alone, we believe. R1715:6

The same power was exercised on similar occasions. (See John 7:30,43-46.)

But when his hour was come he opened not his mouth nor resisted in any degree the throngs that sought his life. R1715:6

As the Father had a due time for the Son in which to accomplish his work, so, doubtless, divine providence is overruling and guiding the affairs of each member of the Body of Christ so that not even a hair of their heads could fall without divine notice. R3302:1

Went his way -- Unmolested; his hour had not yet come. R3302:1, 1715:6

Luke 4:31

Taught them -- The Lord has not seen fit to provide us with even a condensed statement of his discourse, but the clear inference of the following story is that he was speaking against sin, and incidentally mentioned demoniacal possession. R2581:3

The sabbath days -- Type of the seventh thousand-year day. B40

Luke 4:32

They were astonished -- Truth is stranger than fiction. The fallen condition seems to lead us to accept as more reasonable its own imaginings or those of others, rather than the direct, clear statement of the divine Word. R3861:1

Many, as they hear of the glorious plan of the ages, make the remark that they are astonished at the teaching, its beauty, its power, its reasonableness, and the way it glorifies God. R3861:4

Never imagine you can overturn an old lie without causing terrible confusion and alarm among the children of this world living under it, as illustrated by what transpires when your turn over a big, flat stone which for years has remained surrounded by grass. R3860:3

With power -- Of the holy Spirit. R1917:1

He was the greatest teacher that ever lived. R1917:1

As one who knew the truth by an implicit faith in God which admitted of no doubt, and by the practical demonstration of its power upon his own heart. R1917:2

Our Lord had a clear understanding of the subjects he handled, and his presentations were not vague, but clear-cut and distinct; and well-proven by the testimony of the Law and the Prophets. R2581:3

Luke 4:33

In the synagogue -- The devil went to church then as he not infrequently does now, and he was as opposed to having the truth preached then as he is now. R3309:2

There was a man -- Similar to perhaps half of the insane of the present day. R3310:4

Which had a spirit -- Apparently the human will must consent before these evil spirits have power to take possession. But when they do take possession apparently the willpower is so broken down that the individual is almost helpless to resist their presence and further encroachment, even though he so desires. R2173:3

Of an unclean devil -- One of the fallen angels from the time of the flood mentioned in Jude 6, 7 and 2 Pet. 2:4. R3309:3

This tendency to congregate in one person indicates the desire they have still to exercise the power originally given them; namely, the power to materialize as men. R2173:3

And cried out -- Believing that the Lord's teachings were condemnatory of himself and associates using the mouth of the possessed man. R3309:3

Luke 4:34

Let us alone -- Jesus had evidently made some reference in his sermon to the subject of demoniacal obsession. R2581:5

There are many amongst men who have similarly perverted notions of their vested rights to defraud, mislead, pillage and injure others. R3772:2

Wherever the true Gospel goes, its effect is to cause uproar and confusion in the kingdom of the prince of darkness. R1633:3

To do with thee -- In common with thee. R3772:2 To destroy us -- Not only not attempting to deny their own identity, but admitting his lordship and power over them, and their expectation of some future termination of their present restraint or imprisonment--a culmination or judgment in their case. F626

Apparently this demon recognized that the time was still distant when the power of Satan and all the fallen angels is doomed to be overthrown.

It is expressly stated that those angels which sinned are to have a future trial. (2 Pet. 2:4) R697:1

These imprisoned spirits had in mind destruction as their final doom, but it does not prove that their suppositions were correct. R697:1; HG729:6

The faith of devils can only inspire trembling, dread and fear. (James 2:19) R606:5

I know thee -- As Satan recognized Jesus in the temptation, so all of the fallen angels knew that the Holy One of God had become a man for the purpose of redeeming, reclaiming and restoring humanity. R3309:3

The Holy One of God -- The testimony of the demon seemed to be reverential, and might by some have been construed in the Lord's favor. Jesus, however, was not willing to accept such a testimony from such a source. R3309:4, 3122:3

By contrast, the Pharisees said, "Is not this Jesus, the son of Joseph?" (John 6:42) R1680:1

Luke 4:35

Rebuked him -- Our Lord did not deign to hold conversation with these spirit beings, a lesson to every one of his followers. R2581:6

The divine method seems to be to make a clear separation between the servants of God and the servants of evil. The privilege of testifying for God, being Ambassadors for the truth, is a favor reserved for the Lord's own people. R3309:4

Being unwilling to accept testimony from such a source. The Lord's people should resent the service of any who do not give evidence of heart-union with the Lord. R3309:5

Come out of him -- Give up his hold upon the man's mind and body. R3727:2
Evil spirits can do nothing except as God permits them. R1722:1

When the devil -- Today Satan, acting more skillfully than in the past, is leading on as a scientist and is pooh-poohing suggestions that there are evil spirits or a Beelzebub or prince of demons. R3310:5, 3122:5

Had thrown him -- Tearing him, that is to say, causing a convulsion, a fit. R3310:3

Our Lord could have forbidden such manifestations of the demon spirit, but preferred to allow it to be so, that thus might be manifested the malignant disposition of the evil spirits. R2582:1, 3727:3

The demon was powerless to resist the authority of Jesus, but he caused the man considerable torture in going from him. R3727:2

There are no such obsessions or possessions by holy Spirits. R3727:3

In the midst -- On the floor of the synagogue, in the midst of the people. R3310:4

He came out -- Undoubtedly there are cases of demon possession today--obsession. The customs of our day removes these to asylums, where they are called insane. R3310:4

Hurt him not -- Not having power to do him injury, under the Lord's command. R3310:4

Luke 4:36

What a word is this! -- Inquiring, What new teaching is this which has authority to cast out the evil demons? R3310:4

He commandeth -- Exercising in their very presence a superhuman power--controlling spirit beings. R2582:2

Luke 4:37

The fame of him -- There was a reason why miracles were necessary at the beginning of this dispensation. Had our Lord Jesus performed no miracles, how could we today feel the confidence, the assurance, that we do feel respecting him? R3310:1

Today we have no necessity for such manifestations of miraculous power. R3310:1

As Messiah, with power and authority. R1743:1

Tending to his immediate advancement of the kingly office. R1754:3

Luke 4:38

Out of the synagogue -- It was the Sabbath day, and the Jews, however irreligious and even devilish some of them were, were all strict Sabbatarians. R3311:1

A great fever -- How many today are being consumed by a fever of ambition, pride or discontent? R2582:6 They besought him -- The casting out of the demon suggested to them our Lord's power to heal diseases. R3727:4

How can we, who have devoted or consecrated our earthly advantages for the heavenly ones, ask to have again the earthly advantages? R3310:3

Luke 4:39

Stood over her -- Took her by the hand and helped her up. R2582:2, 3727:5

It left her -- Jesus is unquestionably able to heal the sickness of our bodies today, but should we expect such healings? R3311:4, 3301:6

Immediately she arose -- Instead of being weak and enervated, as is usually the case after a severe fever. R3310:6, 2582:2

Ministered unto them -- Probably in the setting forth of refreshments and other household matters. R3311:1

An operation of the mind could not have restored at once the strength lost by the fever. R3311:1

Luke 4:40

When the sun was setting -- The cooler time of the day, in which the diseased could come in a warm country such as Palestine. R3311:1, 2582:2

Divers diseases -- The lamenesses and impotencies of the past find analogies in the present: dead hands, worse than dead, used actively in the service of evil, have been recovered for activity in the service of the Lord; men and women, dead in trespasses and sins, awakened to newness of life in the service of the truth. R2582:6

Healed them -- As Jesus preached freedom from evil maladies and death, he exemplified the power and authority of his preaching by "healing all manner of diseases." (Matt. 4:23) R241:1

Why such miracles? Why not more of them? Why not rebuke all the fevers? The miracles were merely a prophecy of the healing blessing which is to be fulfilled in due time in his Kingdom. R2582:3

Luke 4:41

And devils also -- Persons; not human propensities. R2171:6

Out of many -- Apparently there were great numbers thus possessed throughout Israel. R2173:2

Thou art Christ -- Spiritualists talk much as we do; but every counterfeit is a proof of a genuine; second, only valuable things are counterfeited; and a counterfeit must resemble the genuine very closely, or it would not deceive. R267:4

Rebuking them -- Praise and commendation from an evil source are never to be desired. R2582:2

Suffered them -- Notice the personality and intelligence attributed to these demons. R2171:6; HG725:5

Not to speak -- Further. R2171:6

The Lord does not desire the testimony of devils respecting himself or his plan. "Unto the wicked God saith, What hast thou to do to declare my statutes?" (Psa. 50:16) R3727:6

Luke 4:42

A desert place -- A wilderness, a place deserted. R114:1

Luke 4:43

Preach the kingdom -- Not only was the Kingdom the topic with which the Lord began his public ministry, but it was really the main topic of all his preaching, other subjects being mentioned merely in connection with or in explanation of this one subject. A273

Luke 4:44

Synagogues -- The Lord could go into the synagogues and teach for a time; but soon found little, and finally no, opportunity to teach there. R986:5

Today the "clergy" keep out all who would feed the sheep "meat in due season" (Matt. 24:45); hence the sheep are called out of Babylon. R986:6

Luke 5

Luke 5:1

It came to pass -- A period of about a year elapsed between the temptation in the wilderness and this scene on the Lake of Galilee.

R3720:1 The people pressed -- Hungry for the word of life. R3720:2

A different reception from his rejection in Nazareth. R3307:2

Luke 5:2

Two ships -- Peter and his brother Andrew were managing one of the boats, and James and his brother John another of the same partnership. R3720:2

Washing their nets -- These fishermen, and perhaps others in the same vicinity, proceeded with their work while the Lord was preaching, no doubt giving earnest attention to his words at the same time. R3720:2

Preparing for the next night's fishing. R3720:2

Christ did not call idlers but workers into his ministry. R2246:1

Lake of Gennesaret -- Sea of Galilee. R3307:2, 5554:3, 3720:2

Luke 5:3

Thrust out a little -- From which position he could the more easily address the large crowds on the shelving beach. R3720:2

Out of the ship -- The voice carries remarkably well at this spot. R2627:2

Luke 5:4

Had left speaking -- We wonder that more of our Lord's discourses have not been preserved for us. It is because that without the spirit of adoption, they could not understand spiritual things. R3307:2,3

Luke 5:5

Have taken nothing -- For some reason the fish were not in that quarter of the lake at that time. R3307:6

The net -- The Gospel call of the Gospel age. (Matt. 13:47) R3308:5

Luke 5:6

Multitude of fishes -- Symbol of men of all classes, suitable and unsuitable for the Kingdom. C214; R3308:5

Luke 5:6

A great multitude -- A miracle was performed however we may view it: the creation of fish on the spot, the Lord bringing a great school of fish to the vicinity, or the knowledge of the Lord that such a school of fish was in the vicinity. R3720:3

Teaching that the success or failure of their efforts, in any direction, he can control if he please. B118

Here also was a prophecy of their success as fishers of men. They were to catch multitudes. R1716:1

This furnished the precedent for them to recognize him when he appeared in another form to them after his resurrection, but performed a similar miracle. (John 21:6) B118; R941:4

The thickness of the schools of fish in the lake of Gennesaret is almost incredible. They often cover an area of more than an acre, packed closely together. R3720:3

And their net -- Representing the nominal Christian church. C214; R1716:1

Luke 5:8

When -- Peter's impulsiveness, by itself, is an attractive trait. R3308:1

Simon Peter -- It was probably at an earlier interview that our Lord gave Simon this surname of Peter. R3307:6

Fell down -- Recognizing that no ordinary human being could have produced such results under such circumstances. R3308:1

Depart from me -- Peter's real sentiment was probably the reverse: "O Lord, although I am a sinful man, permit me to be near thee, that I may be blessed by contact with thee." R3308:1

He realized that he was in the presence of one possessed of more than human wisdom and power, and correspondingly he felt afraid. R3720:3

A sinful man -- I recognize the great difference between us. R3308:1

A prayer which Jesus answered in making him one of the twelve. R3308:1

Luke 5:9

He was astonished -- This miracle was performed for the purpose of finally convincing Peter, Andrew, James and John respecting the Lord's relationship to the Father, and his power of control in respect to things temporal as well as things spiritual. R3720:3

Luke 5:10

James...John...Simon -- Men from the humbler walks of life. R1521:2,3
The three who seemed to have the zeal, energy and vim which the Lord appreciates. R3308:1

And Jesus -- Who had doubtless performed the miracle for the purpose of fully convincing them of his control of things temporal as well as spiritual. R3720:3

Henceforth thou -- Only four of all the multitude were specially chosen and called. R3720:5

They were already his disciples in a general sense of the word, followers, believers, but now the time had come for the Lord's selection of the twelve apostles who should be with him continually. R3307:6; F210

Catch men -- For the Lord and his service; not for our personal profit or gain, not for sectarian upbuilding. R3308:4

The Lord does not invite at first to a full consecration, but rather gives instruction along the lines of justification, and after they have grown to some degree, the privilege of forsaking all to be his special disciples. R3720:5

Gathering them into the Gospel net, with a view to their ultimate glorification as new creatures in Christ. R3721:1

Not trying to get disciples into some sectarian bondage, but to catch men with the glorious hopes of the Gospel, to bring them into such relationship with the Lord that they would fully and gladly surrender their all to him. R3308:4

Fishing requires energy, tact, proper bait, and that the fishermen keep himself out of sight. These four things are requisites in the spiritual fishing in which the Lord privileges us to engage. R3308:3, 5555:3
The skillful fisherman catches the fish individually. Likewise, very much of the work of this age has been an individual work, accomplished by talking to people. R5555:1

Fishermen usually hide themselves, so that the fish will not see them, but the bait. So in drawing men to the truth, we should hide ourselves, and throw out as bait those features of God's Word which would apply to the one with whom we might be dealing. R5555:3

Fish are easily alarmed when they find out anyone wishes to take them, so humanity is shy of being captured by anything--especially if they suspect they may lose their liberties; and thus consecration appears to the world. R3308:4

However, the fishing business does not fully illustrate the matter, because all who are of the Lord's catch must be willingly his, else they will not remain caught, but be cast forth. R3308:4

The fishing of the next age will be different and on a much larger scale. R3308:5

They were to catch multitudes. R1716:1

The work of the Gospel age. R5555:1

All the fish have not yet been caught. R5555:3

Luke 5:11

To land -- Represents the harvest time of this age. R3308:5

They forsook all -- They had been with the Lord for more or less about a year, yet had not until now reached the place where they were ready to forsake all. R3720:5

Mark 1:20 informs us that the boats were left in the care of Zebedee. Nor need we suppose that these four started away that same day. It may have taken time to make proper arrangements for the fish and the business interests of the partnership. R3720:6

Not all are called to a ministry requiring all their time; the majority the Lord evidently intends to instruct while they are about their ordinary business. These also, however, must forsake their boats and fishing tackle in the heart from the moment that a full consecration is made to the Lord. R3721:2, 3308:2

Similarly, we have duties and responsibilities in life which would be wrong to abruptly cast aside and ignore. R3721:1

Evidently retaining some sort of interest, however, as they had no difficulty in regaining possession of the boats when they re-embarked in the fishing business after our Lord's death. R3308:2

If we would be his disciples we must forsake all ambitions and hopes for wealth, name or fame, and not look back. R3721:4

Followed him -- The opposite course from what Peter had suggested--that the Lord depart from them because he was perfect while they were poor, weak and imperfect through the fall. R3720:4

Luke 5:14

Tell no man -- The testimony of his Messiahship was to be hidden from the common people until the rulers of the Jewish church had been given a full opportunity to decide for or against Christ. C168

Luke 5:15

Fame abroad of him -- Because of his miracles and teaching. R1735:3
As Messiah, with power and authority. R1743:1
Tending to his immediate advancement to the kingly office. R1754:3
As the fame of Jesus increased, the opposition to him became more and more pronounced, especially from the chief priests, scribes and Pharisees as they were brought into competition and unfavorable comparison with him as public teachers. R1735:3

To be healed -- Healings today, when the agencies employed are not in opposition to the Lord, may be slight intimations to men that the times of restitution are at hand. Other manifestations of healing through agencies in subtle opposition to the Lord we can only regard as the efforts of Satan to offset the power of God. R1921:6

And prayed -- Our Lord frequently spent whole nights in earnest prayer. R1865:5
Let no child of God hesitate to come to him often or to tarry long. R1865:3

Luke 5:17

Pharisees -- When they found that he received sinners and ate with them, they hated him. R1460:1
Doctors of the law -- Rabbis, scribes. R2583:2

Luke 5:18

Men brought -- It might be questioned whether the faith was that of the palsied man, or that of his friends. We think the circumstances warrant the latter thought, that the sick man exercised faith and prompted his friends to help. R2583:5
In the present time some, like this paralytic, are not past feeling and yet are so helpless as to need the assistance of friends to bring them to the Lord. R2584:4

The chief business of every member of Christ, besides his own development, is to help others to the Redeemer. R3315:5

With a palsy -- Representing a condition of sin in which the individual loses his power; in combination with this may come an insensibility of conscience, a deadness to all principles of righteousness, "past feeling." (Eph. 4:19) R2584:4

Luke 5:19

Upon the housetop -- By the outside stairway customary in that country, the buildings being usually but one story in height. R2583:3

Let him down -- We should not be readily stopped by impediments and obstacles but, like these, be ready and willing to take advantage of every proper circumstance and condition to place our friends near to the Lord and his power. R2584:4

Through the tiling -- The extemporaneous device of plain peasants accustomed to opening their roofs and letting down grain, straw and other articles. R2583:3

Demonstrating a persevering, trusting faith in Christ. R1921:2

Luke 5:20

And when he -- Jesus, acting as the special agent and representative of the Father. R3729:2

Saw their faith -- The faith of the sick man and those interested in him. R1921:2

So far from feeling offended at the intrusion, he overlooked these because of the quality he so much admires--faith. We also should overlook rudeness, especially where there is evidence of sincerity of heart. R2583:4

Thy sins are forgiven -- Evidently an unlooked-for answer. R1921:2

Forgiveness of sins is the first essential step toward acceptable Christianity. Some are inclined to put doctrine instead of faith and repentance, but this will not do. R2584:5

"Behold the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world," said John. (John 1:29) R1921:5

While the forgiveness of sins is an assurance that the healing, or removal of the penalty of sin, will surely follow, it does not signify that the recovery from the penalty will immediately follow. R1921:5

Similar forgiveness of sins may be declared by members of the Body of Christ to all who come unto God in his appointed way. R3315:2

The Gospel Church receives forgiveness of sins in this age, and will be "delivered from the bondage of corruption" (Rom. 8:21) at the dawn of the Millennium. R1921:5

Luke 5:21

Who is this -- The question was a very proper one, and they are not to be blamed for making the enquiry. R2583:6

Who can forgive sins -- Our Lord's authority to pronounce the forgiveness of sins was in virtue of his having sacrificed his humanity; while he, as a new creature, was a priest of the new order, fully empowered to forgive sins. R2584:2

God never gave power to bishops, priests or ministers of any denomination to forgive sins. Nor did Jesus give authority to the apostles to forgive sins. They might preach forgiveness, but only in his name. HG737:5

But God alone -- The divinely appointed way for the cancellation of sins was by means of the ransom as the legal settlement of the penalty, and faith in Christ the Redeemer. R1921:3

Though the ransom price had not yet been actually given, the Lamb for sacrifice had already been presented by our Lord at his baptism, and had been accepted of God and was on the altar of sacrifice. R1921:3

Luke 5:22

Perceived their thoughts -- Even though their murmuring words did not reach his ears. R1921:2

He answering -- Not wishing that the miracle would detract from the preaching which it interrupted, but, on the contrary, should impress it as well as illustrate it. R2583:5

Luke 5:23

Whether is easier -- Equally easy, for both the authority and the power are committed unto Jehovah's Anointed. R1921:5

The same divine authority that was necessary to the forgiveness of sins was also necessary to the healing. If the forgiveness of sins was blasphemy, so also was the healing. R1921:3

Thy sins be forgiven -- In every instance the healing of the soul from the sickness and condemnation of sin should be placed first, as the highest and most important thing, far outranking physical conditions and blessings. R2584:1

There was a provision in the Jewish law for the forgiveness of sins, through the offering of special sin offerings. The paralytic evidently brought to the Lord the sacrifice appropriate to the new dispensation, "a broken and a contrite heart." (Psa. 51:17) R2584:2

Unto the sick -- Healing did not follow as a result of the forgiveness of sins. The forgiveness of sins was one thing and the healing was another. R1921:3

Arise -- Thus our Lord called attention to his miracles of healing as the divine testimonials of his claims to be the Son of God, the long-looked-for Messiah of Israel. R1921:5

All our Lord's healings were both instantaneous and complete, showing the fullness of his authority and power. R1921:6

Luke 5:25

He arose -- A proof, not only of our Lord's healing power, but also of his power to forgive sins. R2583:6

Luke 5:26

Filled with fear -- Reverence, a fear in the sense of respect for the God whose love, sympathy and compassion had been so wonderfully manifested. R2583:6

Luke 5:27

Saw a publican -- Probably Matthew had not only knowledge of our Lord, but also faith in him, as the Messiah. Not until now, however, had Jesus invited him to become one of his immediate disciples; not until now, therefore, could Matthew essay to become such. R2591:1, 2260:1

Named Levi -- As Simon's name was changed by the Lord to Peter, so Levi's name was changed to Matthew, which signifies "the gift of God." R2591:1, 2260:3

The receipt of custom -- A revenue collector. R2590:6, 2260:2

Receipt of custom -- An occupation despised by the average Jew as being unpatriotic. R2591:1

Follow me -- Our Lord's choice of a publican to be one of the favored apostles indicates the impartiality of his selections; and implies that Matthew could not have been one of the dishonest publicans. It also showed that he passed by no Israelite indeed merely because there was prejudice amongst the people against him or his class. R2260:2

The influence of the fact that our Lord would accept a publican to be his disciple was far-reaching, and no doubt inspired an interest in our Lord amongst the degraded and outcast classes. R2260:3

While the Lord called each apostle individually, there was also a special occasion upon which he dedicated them to their office as apostles. R1521:2

Luke 5:28

He left all -- Not that he left his money-drawer open and his accounts with the Roman government unsettled, to immediately follow the Master. It may have taken days or weeks to straighten his affairs and enable him to respond to the Lord's call. R2591:1

Luke 5:29

A great feast -- Probably several weeks after Matthew's call. R2591:5
As a man of influence he responded to the Lord's call by consecrating himself and his all, and set about to use these to draw others to the Savior by announcing his devotion under such favorable circumstances as might possibly win some. R2591:2

Each should seek to exert his influence where it is greatest, amongst those with whom he is acquainted and who are acquainted with him. R2591:3
From the connection of the narrative it is supposed that it was on one of the regular fast days of the Pharisees. R2591:5

In his own house -- Hospitality should be used as a channel for the advancement of the truth. The homes of those who have consecrated themselves to the Lord should be consecrated homes, in which the first consideration should be the service of the Master. R2591:3

Of publicans -- Publicans were counted unpatriotic, disloyal to their own nation, in that they accepted the service of an alien government, and made use of their knowledge of their country and people in assisting to collect revenues deemed unjust. R2591:1

Of others -- Publicans, ostracized not because they were wicked, but because their business was disesteemed, were forced to have most of their social intercourse with the non-religious, called "sinners". R2591:2
Being cast off from the sympathies and friendship of the Jews in general, they were naturally less influenced by their prejudices and hence more ready to receive the truth. R1783:3

Luke 5:30

Why do you eat -- The objection was not that our Lord should not teach the publicans and sinners, but that he should not eat with them, which implied a social equality. R2591:5

Our Lord's strict observance of the Law no doubt made him at first a favorite with the Pharisees. But when they found that he received sinners, they began to realize that his righteousness was of a different sort from theirs and, as darkness is opposed to light, they hated him. R1459:6
They should have had the yearning compassion which would have delighted to lift them out of sin and brought them nearer to the Lord and nearer to righteous influences. R2592:1

With publicans -- They were classed with sinners and harlots in New Testament usage. The Hebrew Talmud classes them with murderers and thieves, and regards their repentance as impossible. R2260:2

Sinners -- Not necessarily vile persons and evil-doers, but rather persons who did not profess nor attempt the holiness claimed by the Pharisees, persons who did not claim to be absolute keepers of the divine law. R2591:2

One class of Jews at that time was designated the holy people, Pharisees, and another class was designated as not professing absolute holiness, sinners. R2591:3

Luke 5:31

They that are whole -- Not that the Pharisees were not sick, and that they did not need our Lord's ministry. The fact was, that not admitting they were sin-sick, they were not disposed to receive his good medicine of doctrine. R2591:6

A physician -- The physician had a right to go and mingle with those whom he sought to relieve, and might mingle with them in whatever manner he saw to be expedient for their cure. R2591:6

Luke 5:32

The righteous -- Anyone who considered himself to be righteous would be beyond the call of repentance. R2591:6

But sinners -- His call to the Kingdom was not a call of the righteous, but of those who realized themselves to be imperfect. R2260:4

In God's sight the publicans had the better standing, because of his acknowledgment of imperfections and his petition for mercy. R2591:6

Humility and the realization of the need of a Savior are essential to all who would come to the Father through Christ and his atonement. R2260:5

Luke 5:34

Fast -- Fasting is a concomitant of mourning and sorrow. R2260:5

A very plain diet for a season, if not total abstinence. R2260:6

The bridegroom -- Jesus, personally, is the Bridegroom, and not Jesus and the overcomers. R398:4

Is with them -- Cheering their hearts, refreshing and strengthening them, opening the eyes of their understanding, and giving them hearing ears to appreciate the divine favor that was coming unto them. R2592:1
Now, in the Lord's second Presence, we might say that the feast has begun again. R2592:2

Luke 5:35

Then shall they fast -- Throughout the Gospel age the Lord's people have frequently felt called upon, in time of darkness and adversity, to seek a very close approach to the Lord by humbling of the flesh, and have found fasting a valuable means to this end. R2592:2

Fasting has a typical significance. It means self-denial. When the Master was with his people it required little self-denial to be his follower. But later on, when he got into the toils of his enemies, it required self-denial to confess and follow him. R2592:2

Throughout the Gospel age none could be a follower of the Lamb without self-denial, fasting, refusing the desires and appetites of the flesh--sacrificing some and mortifying others in the interest of spiritual development. R2592:2

Fasting is proper enough when intelligently done and from a right motive, specially commendable to the Lord's people at times when they find themselves lacking in spirituality and exposed to severe temptations. By impoverishing the physical force and vitality, to may assist the full-blooded and impulsive to self-control in every direction. R2260:5

Discipline the body by abstaining from delicacies and relishes. R3659:5
Very plain diet or total abstinence from food is occasionally desirable to many of the Lord's people. R2260:5

Fasting is worse than useless when done as a formality or ceremony. R2260:5

Luke 5:36

A parable -- Given to emphasize that before the blessing could come to natural Israel, spiritual Israel must be selected. R4987:5

No man putteth -- Combining Christianity with Judaism would have been disastrous to both for they are opposites--the one demanding absolute righteousness, impossible for sinners; the other demanding that the impossibility of personal righteousness be acknowledged and that faith be the only condition of forgiveness and mercy. R2592:4

Perhaps the first intimation our Lord had given of the fact that Israel as a nation would not be found worthy of the Kingdom and would be rejected. R2260:6

A new garment -- The fuller light of truth due at the first and second advents of the Lord. C160

An imputed righteousness according to faith, based upon the merits of his own sacrifice for sins. R2592:4

Upon an old -- An old sect or organization; Judaism. C160; R4987:5
The impossible righteousness required by the law. R2592:4

Maketh a rent -- Would only make the weakness more noticeable. C160; R4987:5

Luke 5:37

And no man -- Similarly now, we perceive the impossibility of putting the new wine which the Master is now providing into the old wine-skins of sectarianism. R2592:5

Putteth new wine -- Which has not finished its fermentation. R4987:5, 509:5

New doctrines. R2592:5

Into old bottles -- Wineskins, whose elasticity had been exhausted. C160; R4987:5, 509:5

Old systems; Judaism. C160; R2134:2

Burst the bottles -- New wine, put into such skins, in fermenting would stretch them to almost bursting point. Such skins could never be used again for new wine because, the elasticity having gone out of them, the new wine, in fermenting, would surely burst them. R2592:5

Showing that the wine in use at that time did ferment, and that therefore the wine used at the last supper was probably fermented. R509:5

By the fermentation process of trials, disciplines and testings. R4987:5

Rending them asunder by new truths which are out of harmony with sectarian pride, errors, traditions and superstitions of which these systems are built. C160

And be spilled -- Left stranded, hampered by all the old errors of the sect and held responsible for its past record by the world in general. C160
Not only the Jewish nation would have been convulsed and wrecked by the spirit of the new teachings, but also the doctrines themselves would have gone down with the wreck of the nation. R2592:5

Luke 5:38

Into new bottles -- New wineskins that will be able to stand the stress of the fermentation sure to come--trials, disciplines, testings. R4987:5
Our Lord's work was not like that of John the Baptist, not a work of reformation, patching up the Jewish system and arrangement. R2592:4
He was making an entirely new institution, gathering out a church, which would not be a Jewish church, nor a Reformed Jewish church, but a wholly different institution, a Christian church. R2592:4

God is now, as in the end of the Jewish age, calling out of the whole system such as are Israelites indeed, that they may receive at his hands the new wine, doctrine, of the new dispensation just at hand. R2592:6

Luke 6

Luke 6:1

That he went -- Probably on the way to the synagogue. R3316:6

Through the corn -- Through the wheat. R3754:1

Plucked the ears -- The Pharisees claimed that rubbing the grain in the hands and blowing away the chaff constituted winnowing and threshing, thus violating the Sabbath. R3754:2

And did eat -- The Pharisees had a rule that no food should be eaten until after worship in the synagogue. R3316:6

Luke 6:5

Is Lord also of -- The proper teacher to set forth the real significance to the Jew. R3754:4

Luke 6:6

On another Sabbath -- Type of the Millennial age. B40

Luke 6:9

To save life -- Greek, psuche; better translated "being" or "soul" to prevent confusion. E335

Luke 6:10

Whole -- Complete--not in the full sense of the word, but enough so to have a new start. R5167:4

Luke 6:11

Filled with madness -- Manifesting a rabid spirit of sectarianism and self-importance imitated by some in our day who lack the spirit of the truth. R3754:5

Luke 6:12

Continued all night -- Take time to pray. R5379:3*

The Apostle urged the saints to "strive together (Greek, agonize) with me in prayers to God." (Rom. 15:30) R1865:5

Our Lord frequently spent whole nights in earnest prayer. R1865:5

To take counsel of God with reference to the interests of the prospective Church. F210; R1521:3

Luke 6:13

When it was day -- While the Lord called each individually, there was also a special occasion where he dedicated them to their office as apostles. R1521:2

His disciples -- Greek, mathetas, learners, or pupils. R1521:3
To the disciples belong the special teaching, training and discipline of the holy Spirit given unto them as the seal of divine sonship, and all the exceeding great and precious promises of the gospel. R2072:3

Of them -- From amongst invited followers, disciples. F210

Because of humility and strength of character. F211

He chose twelve -- Twelve alone were chosen, and not in succession, but at once. The last pages of inspiration show us that only the teachings of the twelve are foundations for the faith of the Church, the New Jerusalem. (Rev. 21:14) R1526:3

Only the males were chosen. F265

They were a distinct and separate class among the Lord's disciples, fully under the Lord's direction and careful students of his character, Gospel and methods. F210; R1521:3,5

The twelve wells at Elim remind us of the Apostles. R4011:2

Named apostles -- Greek, apostolos, ones sent forth. Thus the twelve were marked as a distinct and separate class among the Lord's disciples. R1521:3

Luke 6:14

Peter -- Bold and impulsive. R2261:1

Andrew -- Far-seeing, careful, cautious. R2261:1

James -- Elderly. R2261:1

John -- Youthful. R2261:1

Phillip -- Slow-witted. R2261:1

Bartholomew -- Nathaniel, the quick-witted. R2261:1

Luke 6:15

Matthew -- One of the heroes of faith. R2261:2

Thomas -- The doubting, skeptical intellect. R2261:2

James -- The advocate of works. R2261:2

Jude -- Thaddeus, Lebbeus, a man of doctrine. R2261:2

Luke 6:16

Simon -- The zealot, enthusiastic and independent. R2261:2

Judas Iscariot -- The conservative economist. R2261:2

Luke 6:17

And the company -- Making the distinction very clear between the twelve and the other disciples, not so chosen but also beloved of the Lord, and doubtless in full sympathy with the appointment of the twelve, recognizing it as in the interests of the work in general. R1521:3

Luke 6:18

They were healed -- It was by these healings that Israelites were to recognize him as Messiah, in fulfillment of the predictions of the prophets. R1314:5

Luke 6:19

Went virtue out -- Healing vigor. R2000:1

Strength, vitality, power. R574:4

Vitality. The Great Teacher's miracles were not performed without cost to himself. R4669:5, 4576:3

The healing of the sick, as performed by the Lord, was not by superhuman power, but, on the contrary, in healing the sick he expended upon them a part of his own vitality. Consequently, the greater number healed, the greater was our Lord's loss of vitality, strength. E124

"Being free from sin, he was free also from pain. Since he could not suffer pain and sickness because of sin, he was placed for a time among sinners, so their weaknesses and pains bore down upon him. R2000:1

Jesus experienced the woes and sufferings of humanity without sharing in the imperfections and sins. R454:3

Jesus took "the likeness of sinful flesh," but he took that likeness in its perfection. He did not partake of its sin or share its imperfection, except as he voluntarily shared the sorrows and pains of some during his ministry. A230

Every healing performed, to a proportionate extent, decreased the Lord's vitality. R4576:3

All of our Lord's miracles caused him a measure of self-sacrifice, loss of vitality. He thus daily, little by little, laid down his life. R4138:1

For three and a half years the Lord's ministry had been a constant drain upon his vital forces, not merely in connection with his public preaching, but specially in connection with the miracles which he wrought at the expense of his own vitality. R2787:2

The using of strength for the assisting of others continued to the end of his ministry, when through non-resistance, submission to the Father's will, he permitted himself to be crucified for sinners. R3727:5

A part of his dying, finally ending in death, even the literal death of the cross. SM645:1

Our Lord suffered pain from the infirmities of those whom he relieved because, being without sin, he was also without sickness and pain, except as he thus "took" and "bare" it from others that he might be touched with a feeling of our infirmities. R2028:6, 1359:3; F632

He, as the one who was giving his life as man's substitute and redeemer, violated no law that we understand or can appreciate, when he healed the multitudes by letting his vitality go out into them. R1314:5

It is the most refined and perfect organisms which can suffer most. R454:3

It is possible to share the troubles of a friend, and sympathetically to relieve in a measure the depressed one, and, to some extent, impart increased vitality and lightness of spirit. E125

The gift which costs nothing cannot be so highly esteemed as that gift which costs much. R4138:2

"Himself took our infirmities." (Matt. 8:17) A230; E125; F632; R3727:5, 574:5, 4576:3

He impoverished himself to bless others. R1735:4, 1359:3

"Surely he hath borne our griefs and carried our sorrows." (Isa. 53:4) R1359:3, 574:5

Healed them all -- In mind and body. SM645:1

He kept back nothing for the purpose of recuperating his vigor, but was daily yielding his life in obedience to what he understood to be the Father's will. R5085:3

Luke 6:20

Lifted up his eyes -- Tenderly and approvingly. R1735:2

On his disciples -- The twelve especially. R1735:2 Beginning St. Luke's account of the sermon on the Mount. It does not profess to be a regulation for the world, but merely applies to saints, to those who have consecrated their lives fully to follow in the footsteps of Jesus. R5005:1

Blessed -- Impressing on their minds a sense of blessedness of their privilege of service, and even of suffering. R1735:2

All of their experiences tend to develop faith, while those of the rich tend rather to develop self-reliance, self-assurance. The experiences of the poor and ignorant tend to develop meekness, teachableness, whereas the experiences of the learned tend naturally toward self-conceit. CR423:4

Relates to that permanent joy and comfort which are the result of the atunement of character to harmony with the divine. R3733:2

Be ye poor -- Not all the poor are to be blessed and to inherit the kingdom of God--but, to the disciples, he said "ye poor." R5004:2

Those who were poor, or became so, as his disciples; or, as Matthew records it, "Blessed are the poor in spirit." (Matt. 5:3) R1920:5; CR423:5

"In spirit" was Matthew's comment, and not our Lord's exact words. R1493:3

Some poor, instead of being drawn to God by their poverty, cultivate a spirit of anger, malice, hatred, strife, and are thus not only embittered in spirit, but have their faces turned in the opposite direction from the one in which God's blessings come. CR423:5

Poor in any sense of the word, whether financially, socially or otherwise, by sacrificing themselves. Blessed are all the sacrificers. R1493:5; CR423:5

Having nothing of their own, they can lose nothing. CR424:5

Who having nothing to call their own. R1735:2

Undoubtedly poverty is a greater aid to discipleship than wealth. The cost of discipleship is the surrender of every earthly ambition to follow in the footsteps of Jesus. The rich are disadvantaged because theirs would be the greater sacrifice. "How hardly shall a rich man enter into the kingdom of God." (Matt. 19:23) R5004:2

Not the rich, the learned, the rulers, the self-contented; but those lacking self-confidence and self-esteem, who appreciate their own littleness and imperfection. R3733:6; CR423:5

Not necessarily the poor in pocket. Some who are poor in pocket are very proud in spirit. R2585:5

Those who have sacrificed earthly blessings in order to become "heirs of God and joint-heirs with Christ." (Rom. 8:17) CR423:5

Those who follow their Lord who, "Though he was rich, yet for our sakes he became poor, that ye through his poverty might be rich." (2 Cor. 8:9) R1493:5

Yours is the kingdom -- As inheritors of that promise, they are rich with the wealth which moth and rust cannot corrupt, and which thieves cannot destroy or steal. CR424:5

Luke 6:21

That hunger now -- For righteousness and truth. R1735:2

Shall be filled -- Your hunger shall be satisfied. R1735:2

That weep now -- The sympathetic, who realize their own imperfections, and are touched with pity for the poor groaning creation, dying in sorrow, pain and disappointment. R3734:2,1, 1735:2

Ye shall laugh -- Your sorrow shall be turned into joy. R1735:2

Luke 6:22

Blessed are ye when -- As a result of making the Gospel the all-absorbing theme of life. A347

Men shall hate you -- "Ye shall be hated of all men for my sake." (Mark 13:13) E490

Separate you -- Those who use their liberty to preach the good tidings in the synagogues of today will succeed, either in converting whole congregations, or else in awakening a storm of opposition. C182

Shall reproach you -- "When he was reviled he reviled not again." (1 Pet. 2:23) R3736:3

Consecration of reputation. R465:4

Cast out your name -- Boycotted, socially or otherwise. HG694:1

When the blind man (John 9:34-39) was cast out for confessing Jesus, then it was that Jesus "found him" and graciously revealed himself more and more unto him. R805:3

As the Word of God becomes the all-absorbing theme of life, it will not only separate one from the world and from many nominal Christians, in spirit, but it will lead to separation from such entirely. A347

Son of man's sake -- Every ache, pain or wound of person or of feelings, and beheading socially or literally for the truth's sake becomes a witness of the spirit testifying to our faithfulness. R2007:5

By the favor of God, the endurance of the reproaches of Christ are not in vain. R785:4

"Your brethren that hated you, that cast you out for my name's sake, said, Let the Lord be glorified." (Isa. 66:5) (We do this for the Lord's glory.)

C182

Luke 6:23

Rejoice ye in that day -- "He shall see the travail of his soul and shall be satisfied." (Isa. 53:11) R785:4

In heaven -- In spiritual things, not temporal matters. R3223:2

The Kingdom of heaven is yours. R1735:2

Luke 6:24

Woe

In "a time of trouble such as never was since there was a nation." (Dan. 12:1) R1735:3

The woes of the Bible apply to the present life. CR423:1

Unto you -- You are less likely to gain this wonderful high calling of God than if you were in humbler circumstances. R4969:4

The rich, the learned, the favored, have trials and difficulties, perplexities, cares, doubts and fears, which the poor, the unlearned, know nothing about. CR423:3

As we see retribution coming upon the rich, proud, mighty and hypocritical, let us each endeavor that our own life be honest, humble and Christ-like that we may be spared in this day of exposure of sin. R2045:5

That are rich -- Not only those who are rich in a financial sense, wealthy; but he includes also those who are rich in the honors of men, rich in education, or in any particular sense of special privileges, advantages and opportunities. CR422:4

The intellectually, politically, socially and financially rich at that time were very self-satisfied, very prosperous, and looked for the Messianic Kingdom in an opposite direction from that which Jesus taught. So also today. CR423:2

The rich have more on which to set their hearts, more to occupy their time, more to cultivate self-will, more opportunity for self-gratification, more riches for which to be responsible, more education by which errors are more likely to influence, more to divert them and cultivate their pride. R423:3

Who revel in luxury and pleasure now, unmindful of the suffering, death and sorrow that reign abroad. R1735:3

God, himself very rich, is able to sympathize with both the poor and the rich; so is the Savior, who, being rich, for our sakes became poor, that we through his poverty might become rich in the truest sense of that word. CR422:6

A great disadvantage, because it leads to pride and self-conceit. R5839:6, 4969:3

Our Master was actually betrayed and killed by the "money-lovers." R2045:5
Does not mean that the great, noble, wise and rich are condemned to eternal torment. R4969:4

Ye have received -- Not that, if they had riches of learning, they must ignore their knowledge and speak and act ignorantly. It means, however, that their learning is no longer theirs, but the Lord's. CR423:6

Luke 6:25

Woe unto you -- "Go to now, ye rich men, weep and howl for your miseries that shall come upon you." (Jas. 5:1) R4997:1; CR424:5

That are full -- Satisfied. D634

Who enjoy the favor of the world because they partake of its selfish spirit. R1735:3

Many who are now stewards of wealth, influence, position and honor of men, will be called to account and dispossessed of their stewardship. R4997:2

Ye shall hunger -- Be dissatisfied. Those previously accustomed to riches will find difficulties not experienced by those previously disciplined in the school of adversity. D634

Ye shall mourn -- St. Paul, living near the close of the Jewish age, when the woes were being poured out, declared: Wrath has come upon this people to the uttermost. (1 Thess. 2:16) CR423:1

In the "day of recompense" with the levelling of things that are high, proud, domineering, and the lifting up of the poor and humble; rewarding the well-doer in proportion to his zeal and self-sacrificing spirit, and the evil-doer according to his knowledge of better things and the selfishness to which he yielded. NS220:2

A time of trouble such as never was since there was a nation, the iron rod of Christ's rule, must bring down every high thing, and subdue all things unto him. R1735:3

Their course in life will come under reprobation and stripes. R4997:1

Luke 6:26

Woe unto you -- Look well to it that no element of worldly ambition or worldly policy be in it to ensnare your feet and to allure you from the narrow way. R2163:2

Speak well of you -- Not that honor of men is to be disesteemed. It will always be true that "a good name is rather to be chosen than great riches." (Prov. 22:1) It means that worldly reputation will be held secondary to the Lord, the Truth and service for the Lord's cause. CR423:6 The popularity with the world for which the sects so much seek, and in a large measure have gained, is a bad and not a good omen to them, as well as to their prototype, the nominal Jewish church at our Lord's first advent. R730:3

But I say -- The two tables of the law given to Israel were requirements of justice, but Jesus and his followers take a still higher plane and, waiving their own rights, they become sacrificers of their own comforts, preferences and desires. R5005:3

Applies to the consecrated, but all mankind may be measurably enlightened by this lesson. R5005:1,3

Love your enemies -- The mark of perfect love. F189

Make due allowance for hereditary taint and weakness and temptation. R1735:5

The Law given Israel at Mt. Sinai expressed merely justice in its command, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." (Lev. 19:18) PD84/97

Do not merely observe the Golden Rule toward your enemies, but love them. R5005:5

The standard for the Lord's people is still higher than that of gratitude, though it must include this. Our standard is benevolence, a forgiveness of those who transgress against us. R4200:5

How may we determine that it is the sin that we hate and not the sinner? R3849:6

Do good to them -- Seek to heal the wounds and bruises which have resulted to them from the fall, rather than to have revenge upon them.

R1735:5

Not wish to do them harm, but on the contrary wish to open the eyes of their understanding and to do them good. R5260:4

Not only are we not to do unrighteousness, but if another proposes to do an evil in our interests, we would be so in sympathy with the law of brotherly love that we would oppose the act with all our energy. R4226:5
Which hate you -- The majority of those who perpetrate evil do so because they do not appreciate the principles involved in the matter. R5260:4

Luke 6:28

That curse you -- Greek, kataraoimi, signifying the very opposite of blessing, a curse in the sense usually understood. Webster defines it thus: execrable, hateful, detestable, abominable. R701:5

Pray for them -- Pray for their deliverance from the snares and delusions of Satan and the blindness which hinders them from discerning the beauty of holiness. R1735:5

Despitefully use you -- Be willing to suffer violence and injustice, if need be. R606:2

Luke 6:29

That smiteth thee -- Cause you to suffer injustice. R5897:2

Also the other -- In the indirect sense of not opposing the law; or, if smitten illegally, as were Jesus and Paul, by kindly expostulating with the evil-doer for his own good. R2470:1, 3738:2

A figurative expression signifying the willingness to have both cheeks smitten rather than to do injury to another. OV357:3

We are not authorized to retaliate. R3738:3

Luke 6:29

Offer also the other -- Signifying simply, do not render evil for evil, even though he smite thee on the other cheek also. R5005:5

Simply teaching: Don't strike back or try to get even with them. Show them that you are willing to endure hardness, and even to suffer violence and injustice if needs be. R606:2

Our Lord himself, when smitten, did not invite the smiting of the other cheek, but rather he defended himself to the extent of criticizing the evil deed. R5005:5

The Apostle Paul defended himself, frequently, before priests and kings, explaining the justice of his cause. Nevertheless, whenever the laws did not support him, we find him bringing no railing accusation against the laws, nor against magistrates, but submitting himself. R2944:6

That taketh away -- That would sue thee at law to take away. R1735:6, 2945:1

Our Master was not addressing nations, but individuals, his disciples. SM451:2

Forbid not -- If no lawful redress can be obtained--lawfully, even though unjustly. (Matt. 5:39-42) R1735:5

Take thy coat -- Matthew adds, "at the law." The follower of Jesus may flee from an adversary, or he may resist him to the extent of proper expostulation, but he is to be thoroughly responsive to all government. R5005:5, 2518:2

Settle peaceably with him, even if it costs more than you would have lost by letting the case go into court. R3738:3

Unmurmuringly submit to what the court demands. R5005:5

Luke 6:30

Give to every man -- A spirit of generosity, which prefers to let some men take advantage in temporal things, rather than, by contention, to have their treasure on earth instead of in heaven. R1735:5

A spirit of liberality that will shame their meanness. R606:2

Not to be taken with absolute literalness, but to be generous, tender-hearted, to err on the side of too great generosity rather than to be hard-hearted and selfish. R5005:6

Love and justice would, if possible, feed and clothe your neighbor if he is unable by industry and economy to do it for himself. But neither love nor justice to him nor to yourself would encourage indolence, prodigality or meanness. R606:2

That asketh of thee -- That demands your valuables. R2518:3

To a certain extent we are to permit ourselves to be imposed upon. R5897:5

Ask them not again -- Don't be exacting with the debtor. R1735:6

Luke 6:31

As ye would -- Not as they would have you do to them, but, as you would have them do to you. R606:1

Do ye also -- Measure every act, word and thought of life by the Golden Rule. R2329:3

It does not say that we should do to our neighbor as he might wish us to do to him, because he might wish a very unreasonable thing. R2688:4

That men -- Chiefly the household of faith. R2690:5

Should do to you -- Putting off anger, malice, hatred, strife, envy, slanders, etc.; charging only a reasonable profit on goods sold and expecting to pay a reasonable profit to him who sells. R2688:6,5

Do ye also -- This is a positive rule to do good, not a negative rule to abstain from doing evil. R2329:2, 2688:2

To them likewise -- By acting kindly, speaking gently, being patient toward weaknesses, not expecting too much. F376; R2329:2

Be generous to others, but not granting requests which might harm them. R5005:6

Doing for them now the kind of work which God desires to have done; leaving for the future the things which God has planned to have done in the future. R2690:2

This is the golden rule; and by comparison the rule of Confucius, "Do not do to others what you would not wish them to do to you," might be considered the brazen rule. R2688:1

The Christian businessman's ideal is the Golden Rule; it applies to his buying, selling, dealings with clerks and customers. OV369:2

The Golden Rule is rejected as impracticable, but it has not been given a trial. R5723:5

Luke 6:32

If ye love them -- We are to distinguish between natural love and the love of God--unmerited, sacrificing love--wholly different from anything that is known to fallen humanity. R2648:2

From a selfish motive. R5005:6

It is easy enough to love some of the refined or wealthy or naturally noble or the educated. R4253:6

Which love you -- Implies that it is not the love of God. R2648:2

Nothing specially creditable in this. R5005:6

It is easy enough to love some of the brethren. We are apt to love those who are about on our plane and of our own style and liking. R4253:6

What thank have ye -- What merit is their in it? R4805:1, 1938:5

What proof have you that you have passed from death unto life? R4253:6

The standard of the Lord's people is higher than gratitude, though it must include this, which is a keeping power in our lives. R4200:5,6

Luke 6:33

What thank have ye -- Let us examine ourselves, let us be very humble lest the thoughts of self-congratulation and self-satisfaction which we may consider in our hearts, even if we do not utter them aloud, bring our condemnation. R4805:1 It would be doing from a selfish motive. R5005:6 Our standard is benevolence, a forgiveness of those who transgress against us. R4200:5

Sinners also love -- All mankind has some share of natural love; love of self, family, friends. R2648:2

Luke 6:33

What thank have ye? -- What merit is there in it? R1938:5, 4805:4

Luke 6:35

Love ye your enemies -- The more noble, the less of the Lord's grace is sufficient for them; the more degraded, the more of the Lord's grace is necessary and will be supplied. Thus we are to love the brethren. R4254:1
Be kind to all men, but not friends in the sense of having communion and fellowship. R1588:1

The mark of perfect love. F189

Be large-hearted and generous toward them, illustrated by David's forbearance toward King Saul. R3739:1, 5672:6, 5673:1, 2933:4

Even an "enemy" should be fed, if hungry. R2933:5

In order that our characters may be developed. R5266:5

Show a spirit of liberality that will shame their meanness; show love and mercy that will win their respect. R606:2

Do good -- A love and mercy that will win their secret respect even while they openly oppose us. R606:2

For principle's sake, for goodness' sake. R5005:6

To be in accord with the Heavenly Father. R5005:6, 3738:6

Exercise a benevolent spirit whenever possible and proper. R3739:1, 3738:6

"Do good unto all men, especially unto them who are of the household of faith. (Gal. 6:10) R4971:1

And lend -- Bear with neighbors who wish to borrow for the truth's sake, for the Lord's sake--not directly, but indirectly--but not, of course, to an extreme which injures your own interests. R2539:2

We may do good and lend according to our opportunities and abilities, but are not to obligate ourselves beyond what we would be willing to give or lend outright. R2241:2 There is nothing in the Scripture that says that we should lend to everybody that wishes to ask for a loan, either of goods or money; but we should not turn away with a deaf ear from those in need.

R4971:1; Q135:3

Meaningless if we should understand Jesus' teaching to be that we were to give away every farthing to the poor; for then we should be the poorest of all the poor, and have nothing either to lend or to give. R855:1

If we cannot always give much money, we can give a word of encouragement, a kindly look, a helping hand over difficulties; and these will be often more valuable than money, and sometimes more appreciated. R2933:5

What course does brotherly love dictate in the matter of "borrowing and lending"? R3654:2

Not without security; if security cannot be given it should be given as a gift. F567, 568

The Lord's people may be lenders, but not borrowers. R2539:2

Merely in case of necessity, not impairing your own credit or family obligations. OV369:5

Hoping for nothing -- For no interest unless it is a business loan, and without thought of gaining favors in return. F567, 568; R2933:5, 2241:2, 854:6; OV358:3

No reward. R2933:5

And your reward -- Corroborative of the view of future rewards and punishments. R2613:6, 723:4 Kind unto the unthankful -- Reminding us afresh that we should pray, "Forgive us our trespasses as we forgive those who trespass against us," and thus it tend to make our hearts and minds more tender, more gentle, more forgiving toward all with whom we have to do. NS674:6

Not a cruel God, as depicted by men. R5834:3; CR353:5

So we should be who have God's spirit. R5006:1, 2539:2

And to the evil -- Even an "enemy" should be fed, if hungry; but neither friend nor foe should be encouraged in indolence, nor in wastefulness.

R2933:5

Similarly, we should not be unkind or unneighborly to the unbelieving.

R1588:1

Luke 6:36

Merciful -- But so far as the general principles of righteousness are concerned, we must not interfere. R5259:6

We must expect divine mercy to cover our many imperfections only in proportion as we show mercy to others. R5006:1

As your Father -- Where the interests of the Lord's cause are involved, it is our duty to say something in defense of the truth; but not in a personal matter. This is illustrated in the case of the Apostle Paul at court. (Acts 13:10,11) R5260:1

Luke 6:37

Judge not -- New creatures are not competent to be judges one of another for two reasons: (1) few of them have fully comprehended and appreciate the Divine Law of Love governing all; (2) evidently few can read their own hearts unerringly. F403

Harshly, unmercifully, ungenerously. R2329:3

We should not reckon ourselves as competent judges of men's hearts. But in the cases of disguised wolves, swine and dogs, the condemnation of that law, which is God's judgment, not ours merely, should always be recognized. R1712:5

Some people must be held at arm's length, but at the same time we should be careful to give them credit for any good motives they claim to have.

N'05-3-26

Condemn not -- No one but the Lord certainly, truly, knows which are the goats. OV123:1

And ye -- Not applicable to everybody; to so understand it would be to ignore the ransom and faith in the same, and other conditions of discipleship. It is applicable only to believers, already justified and brought into harmony with God. R2294:2

Shall not be judged -- He who stands upon justice will fall before the sword of justice. Realize your own weakness and imperfection and need of help and exercise a similar generosity with your fellows in tribulation.

R2294:6

A condition upon which we receive divine mercy is that we ourselves are governed by the same rule of love and mercy toward our fellow-creatures.

R2329:3

Forgive -- Heart forgiveness leaves no sting, no animosity, no grudge.

R2296:1

Our hearts should be so full of this disposition toward forgiveness that our face would not have a hard look, nor our words a reproof, a bitter sting. R2296:4

Forgiveness in our hearts is the condition which is always to obtain there: we should never harbor any other feeling than that of forgiveness and good will toward all, no matter how seriously they may have trespassed against us. R2296:4

The very essence of Christian principle is love, sympathy and the forgiveness of the faults of others. We may not forgive in the absolute sense until our forgiveness is asked, yet we should be always in a forgiving attitude. R2253:3,4, 4650:5, 2295:6

Ye shall be forgiven -- Believers, already justified and brought into harmony with God. R2294:2

This does not relate to the Adamic guilt of the saints, but to their daily shortcomings. Their share in original sin and condemnation was cancelled through the merit of Christ before they were accepted as his disciples.

R5006:1

Luke 6:38

Give -- The general principle of divine dealing--"The Lord loveth a cheerful giver." (2Cor. 9:7) R2514:4

Reckon yourself God's steward, commissioned by him to use all your goods, as well as your personal talents, to his glory in serving those about you.

R855:2

Love may go beyond the law and do more than justice could require, in self-sacrifice, but it cannot do less. R5006:4

Running over -- The salesman fills the bushel, then jars or shakes it down solid and fills to the top, then puts in his hand and presses it, then spreads out the top so as to pile on as much as possible and then, running over, empties it to his customer. R1396:4

Exemplifying the good measure of the glorious work of Christ's Millennial Kingdom. R1396:4

Ye mete -- Measure to others. R2253:4

The forgiving of God's children is dependent upon their having a spirit of forgiveness towards the brethren. R5135:5

To you again -- Because you will have shown yourselves either children of wrath or children of love, and God must deal with you accordingly. F403

Luke 6:39

Can the blind -- The scribes, Pharisees and Doctors of the Law. R5029:1

Lead -- The destination sought by the Jews was fellowship with, and relationship to, God. R5029:1

They both -- Both leaders and masses stumbled and fell. So, too, Jesus says of the nominal church here, "Thou knowest not that thou art poor and blind" (Rev. 3:17). Again, for the same reasons, many stumble and fall.

R178:4

Fall into the ditch -- The entire Jewish race was blinded and turned aside and fell into the pit of confusion, darkness and separation from God. R5029:1

Into the labyrinths of error. R1875:1

General doubt and unbelief; difficulties. R2948:1, 5029:1

The great time of trouble in the end of the Jewish age. R2615:3

Not into a hell of torment. R2615:3

Luke 6:40

Not above his Master -- As our Lord suffered violence from the prince of this world, so will his followers. OV343:2; R1816:1

"All that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution." (2 Tim. 3:12) R1816:1

Luke 6:41

And why -- "Busybodying in other men's matters." (1Pet. 4:15) F583

The Master here inculcated the necessity of humility on the part of those who would be taught of God. R5029:3

The mote -- A grain of sawdust. R2589:3

The little difficulties and weaknesses with which all the Lord's people have to contend. R2589:3

It is wrong to encourage in oneself a fault-finding disposition. R1922:1

Thy brother's eye -- True brotherly love remembers that, while our neighbor's faults are unpleasant to us, ours may be equally unpleasant to them. R1922:1

Busy-bodies. There are some who are so constituted that it is second nature for them to attempt to regulate everybody else according to their own ideals and standards. R4282:2

Not the beam -- The great fault of lovelessness. R2589:3

Satan possesses this to such an extent that he is called the "Accuser of the brethren." (Rev. 12:10) R2589:4

Luke 6:42

Pull out the mote -- Busybody themselves with other men's affairs.

R4282:2

The continual fault-finder, who sees great blemishes in others, but is blind to his own defects. R4567:6

Beholdest not -- Those who think they know everything can learn nothing.

"The more a man does examine, the more does he discover the infirmities of his own character"--Chalmers. "Ten thousand of the greatest faults in our neighbors are of less consequence to us than one of the smallest in ourselves"--Wheatley. R5029:3

Thou hypocrite -- A vain pretension to a zeal for righteousness which is not sincere. A sincere zeal for righteousness will always begin with self-discipline. R1922:1

Wishing to give the inference that they are not afflicted with the malady of sin. R2589:4

A loveless, fault-finding, brethren-accusing class. R2589:4

Then shalt thou see -- If any man does not submit his own heart to the leading and teaching of the Lord, he has no authority from him to teach others to do so. R1922:1

Luke 6:43

A good tree -- A healthy Christian. R3747:3

Bringeth not forth corrupt -- Either God, in causing evil, was unholy, impure and sinful; or else he is pure and holy and, as such, could not be the creator or producer of any other quality. R848:3

A corrupt tree -- A Christian that has failed to grow in grace, knowledge and love, one that has not appropriated the nourishment provided, not submitted to pruning, and whose heart has become decayed. R3747:3,4

A perverted and misguided Christian. R3747:3

Good fruit -- The fruit of the lives of the Lord's people is nourishing and refreshing toward all who have fellowship with them. R3747:2

Luke 6:44

Known by his own fruit -- All of our words and actions in the little, as in the great things of life, testify in judgment, either for or against us, every day. R1922:4

While not condemning the heart, we are to judge of the outward character. R5029:4

The fruit-bearing test of being his disciples. R3317:2

Of thorns -- Some people, like thorns, continually reach out to impede, irritate, annoy, vex, poison and injure all those with whom they come in contact. R3747:2

A bramble bush -- Mankind in general, ready to scratch, tear and injure at the slightest provocation; merely self-sustaining and not bringing forth fruitage that would be a blessing to others. R5029:4, 3318:2
It is said at times that a bramble bush will be entirely covered by a vine, so that the grapes would appear to be coming from the bush. We are not to be mistaken. A good tree cannot bring forth evil fruitage, neither can an injurious tree bring forth good fruitage. R5029:5, 3318:2
Should we find some of the fruits of the spirit commingling with a thorniness of life, an evil and injurious disposition, we are to assume that, in some sense of the word, the fruitage is merely put on and does not belong to the bramble-bush character. R5029:5
"By their fruits ye shall know them." (Matt. 7:20) R5029:4
Grapes -- God's people are likened to the grape-vine, which produces no thorns, but luscious clusters of fruit. R5029:4

Luke 6:45

Good treasure -- As one thinks upon good, pure, holy things, the mind becomes stored with good treasure. R5518:5,6

Evil treasure -- An evil disposition--a mind in which evil has been stored. R5518:6

That which is evil -- Despite all endeavors to hide it. R5518:6

Abundance of the heart -- Hence the importance of having our hearts filled with good things, in order that out of the abundance of these good things our mouths may speak continually good things that the Lord would approve, and that would minister blessing to those who hear. R2588:3

His mouth speaketh -- The heart is representative of the character, and the mouth is the index of that character. The heart is used with the force of the word mind. R5518:4

How are words the index of our hearts? R3769:5

All of our words and actions testify in judgment, for or against us, every day. R1922:4

If it speaks slander, it shows the real heart condition. F408

Whatever is stored up in the mind is sure to be spoken. R5518:6

Those who think on true, lovely, good and beautiful things will speak to each other of the same. R2588:3

Luke 6:46

And do not -- Many seem content simply to know things. Knowledge does not bring, nor produce, happiness. Obedience does. R1802:2*

Luke 6:47

Heareth my sayings -- Understands my teaching. R3318:4

Doeth them -- To do, as the Lord indicated, signified, not an insincere outward show of righteousness, but radical and thorough reform. R1922:4

Luke 6:48

He -- Not the heathen in any sense of the word, but believers. R3318:4

Luke 6:48

A man -- A prudent and careful believer. R5029:6

In this parable our Lord gives a forceful picture of the tests to come upon Christendom at the close of this age. R5443:4

Built an house -- The faith structure of all professed followers. R5443:4, 5029:6, 564:2

Digged deep -- Digging down deep through all the rubbish of pride and conceit, and laying well the foundations of a sincere and righteous character. R1922:

One who seeks for the doctrines and principles of the divine Word. R5029:6

Laid the foundation -- No man can build a proper life unless he has some foundation, some doctrine, some faith. A man with no faith, no hope, is sure to be correspondingly lacking in character. R3318:4

On a rock -- Christ is the rock. R1922:5

The solid rock, the ransom, the only sure foundation, which God hath provided. R3823:1

Flood -- Of temptation. R1922:5

Ere long the storm of truth will wash out the quicksand foundation upon which nominal Christianity is built. "The hail shall sweep away the refuge of lies, and the waters shall overflow the hiding places." (Isa. 28:17-19) R5443:4

Luke 6:49

A man -- An unwise believer. R5029:6

Built an house -- Whether they use good or bad materials. R3823:1

Upon the earth -- The sand alongside the rock. R564:2

In ourselves we find no ground of stability upon which to rear our building of character and faith. R1922:5

The traditions of the elders and the creeds of the dark ages. R5029:6, 1922:5

The stream -- The floods of temptation. R1922:5

Beat vehemently -- Time of stress and storm with which this age will end. R5029:6

It fell -- Their faith will surely be swept away; and character must necessarily suffer from the decline of faith. R1922:5

There will be a general fall of Babylon. Everything not well founded upon the sure Word of God will give way. R5029:6

Well illustrating the overthrow of all systems which reject the only foundation. R564:2

Ruin of that house -- The utter wreck of nominal Christendom. R3748:5, 5443:4

Was great -- Those whose faith structure will fail will thereby suffer great loss, though they themselves may be saved as by fire--through great tribulation. (1 Cor. 3:13-15) R5029:6

Confusion, darkness and separation from God. R5029:1

Luke 7

Luke 7:1

When he had ended -- Following the Sermon on the Mount. Matthew and Luke, in thus arranging matters, show that he who had given the wonderful teachings on the mount was fully attested by the miraculous powers shown to reside in him. R3755:3

Capernaum -- The home city of Peter and others, and now the home city of Jesus, since he had been spurned and rejected at Nazareth. R3755:3

Luke 7:2

Centurion's -- In our judgment the circumstantial evidences are strong that this centurion was Cornelius. R1922:6, 2132:2

A captain of the Roman guard. R3755:3, 2620:2, 1922:1

All three of the centurions mentioned in the New Testament were evidently reverential: this one; the one who put Jesus to death and subsequently declared, "Surely this man was the Son of God"; and Cornelius, the first Gentile convert. (Matt. 27:54; Acts 10:1) R3755:4

Servant -- One lesson connected with this subject which should especially commend itself to any of the Lord's people who are masters or employers is the lesson of kindness for servants. R2620:6

Masters and servants in olden times occupied a much closer relationship to each other than they do today, a relationship which took on more of paternal sentiment. R2620:1

The employer, under present conditions, feels no responsibility for the employee. All discern that this division between the interest of masters and servants stands closely related to the great time of trouble which now impends. R2620:1

Dear unto him -- So loved, that he went to much trouble to secure his healing. R1922:3

Luke 7:3

He sent -- The fact that it was not presented personally is presumed not to signify any lack of respect, but the very reverse, a realization on his part that Jews were not to have any dealings with Gentiles, except along strictly business lines. R2620:3

The elders -- Not the elders of the Synagogue, but the chief men of the city. R3755:4

Of the Jews -- Realizing that, as a Gentile, he could have no special claim upon this Jewish prophet. R3755:4

Luke 7:4

They -- Jairus, the ruler of the synagogue in Capernaum, with others. R4588:3, 2620:3

Luke 7:5

He loveth our nation -- Testifying that although he was not a Jew, he was a noble character, a lover of Israel. R3755:4

Built us a synagogue -- Evidencing his feelings of reverence for God and love for righteousness and truth. R1922:3

Or, house of worship and Bible study. Its ruins described in detail in article. R2581:2

Evidently respecting the religion of the Jews. R2620:3

In which he himself could not engage, because a Gentile. R3755:4

The ruins of which are supposed to have been found recently and described in the article by Edersheim. R2620:3

The ruins of this synagogue show that great wealth was expended in its elaborate carvings of cornices, tablets, capitals and niches. R2620:2, 2581:2

Luke 7:6

Went with them -- Possibly toward Caesarea, about 45 miles away, with Nain being on the way, about 20 miles from Capernaum. R1922:6

The centurion -- Possibly Cornelius, "A devout man and one that feared God with all his house, which gave much alms to the people and prayed to God alway." (Acts 10:2) "Them that honor me, I will honor." (1 Sam. 2:30) R1922:6, 2620:6, 2123:3

Sent friends -- Not servants. R2620:3

I am not worthy -- He was like the Syro-Phoenician woman who desired a crumb from the children's table without claiming to be one of the children. R3755:4

We, too, should concede that we have nothing of right or of merit to demand, that we should approach the Lord from the standpoint of unworthy suppliants, seekers of grace and mercy, not justice, at his hands. R3755:5

That thou shouldst enter -- According to Jewish custom, a certain measure of defilement would be implied. R3755:5, 2620:3

Luke 7:7

Say in a word -- Let all the Lord's people, instead of requiring signs and further evidences and assurances, rest content that he who has so graciously done for us in the past is equally faithful today and will fulfill to us all his good promises. R2620:4

Possibly he had heard of the healing of the son of the nobleman of his own city, Capernaum, when Jesus was at Cana and merely spoke the word. R3755:5

Luke 7:8

Go, and he goeth -- Recognizing Jesus, as the Lord's anointed, had control over the influences of nature as his servants, so that he could bid the disease go from the servant and he should be well. R3755:6, 2620:4

Luke 7:9

He marvelled -- Only in one other place do we read that Jesus "marvelled," and that was at the instance of the people of Nazareth. (Mark 6:6) R3755:6

Turned him about -- Having already started toward the Centurion's house, he discontinued his journey and instantly granted the healing of the servant. R1922:6

So great faith -- Nevertheless he could not and did not invite the centurion to become one of his disciples, because "the gifts and callings of God were not things to be repented of." (Rom. 11:29) R2620:5

It is certainly within the range of possibility that this centurion might have been removed from Capernaum to Caesarea, another fortress, and may have been the centurion named Cornelius, the first Gentile convert. R2620:5

No, not in Israel -- Where he had much more reason to expect it. R1922:5
Indicating that the Lord's favor had been confined to Israel not merely because of worthiness and faith. R2620:5

Luke 7:11

The day after -- Soon afterward (Revised Version). R3756:1

Nain -- About 20 miles from Capernaum. R1922:6

Luke 7:12

Dead man -- In the great prison-house of death. R3755:1

Luke 7:13

Had compassion -- We have an High Priest who can touched, was touched and is still touched with a feeling of our infirmities. (Heb. 4:15) R3530:3

Luke 7:14

They -- The pall-bearers. R3756:1

Luke 7:14

Arise -- Greek, egeiro, to awaken, arouse, stir (Liddell and Scott).
This word is used in speaking of the temporary awakenings of our Lord's miracles. R1512:2
These restorations of a faint spark of life are never called a resurrection (Greek, anastasis) in the Scriptures. R360:2

Luke 7:15

He that was dead -- Having died, paid the penalty, he was not free from death after Jesus restored life to him, but died again. R392:1
Foreshadowing the resurrection. R4603:4

Luke 7:16

A fear on all -- A reverential fear. R1923:1:
The very thought of the imminence of God is very sure to bring awe to mankind as they realize the holiness, the absolute perfection of the Almighty, and their own blemishes and imperfections in contrast. R3756:1
They glorified God -- Not with loud hosannas, but with a reverent appreciation of the fact that a great Prophet, a great Teacher, was in their midst, and that God was thus with them. R3756:2
God hath visited -- That, in him, God had visited his people to bless them with his love and grace. R1923:4
A realization that God was very near to them as represented in the power of Jesus. R3756:1

Luke 7:17

Throughout all Judea -- As the fame of Jesus increased, because of his miracles and teaching, the opposition to him became more and more pronounced, especially from the Chief Priests, Scribes and Pharisees, as they were brought into competition and unfavorable comparison with him as public teachers. R1735:3

Luke 7:19

John -- Signifies "The favor of God." R4940:2

Then in prison, about 120 miles from where Jesus was laboring so successfully. R2620:6

We are to be copies of Jesus, not of John the Baptizer. R2621:5

To be shut up in a dark dungeon, and to have the Lord proceeding with his work, raising no voice of protest on his behalf and exercising none of his mighty power for his deliverance, probably seemed very strange to John. R2621:1

Notwithstanding the great disappointment he felt, his faith continued in its firm hold on the Lord, as is indicated in his sending of his disciples to Jesus. R2621:1

The proper course of all God's servants when perplexed is the one followed by John, namely to go to the Lord with the perplexity--not doubtingly, but inquiringly--and be set at rest by his word. R2621:3

He that should come? -- Seeking a sign that he was the true Messiah, then present. R712:4

For another -- For a still greater Messiah of whom even you are but a forerunner. R2621:1

Luke 7:20

Look we for another -- Strictly speaking, this was exactly the case.

Jesus, in the flesh, was indeed the forerunner and preparer of the way before the still greater glorified Christ of the second advent. R2621:1

Luke 7:21

In that same hour -- While John's messengers were with Jesus, a number of miracles were performed in their sight. R2621:2

Luke 7:22

Jesus answering said -- Calling attention to transpiring events, the fulfillment of their own Scriptures as proof that he was the Messiah. He might have said: "I am he." An imposter might have made the same claim. Jesus called their attention to evidence such as would convince them of the truth of his claim. R821:3*

And tell John -- We may not always hear the Lord's words with our own ears, but we can receive it second-hand as did John--through the testimonies of the apostles and prophets, by whose writings God has provided in advance replies to all proper queries. R2621:4

What things ye have seen -- Another pointed proof of his own identity with the predicted Messiah. R1736:3

Similar manifestations will accompany Jesus' second presence in this world. Since now he is a spiritual being, we might expect he would use human agencies as his channels and, in harmony with other parts of his plan, it is now on a higher plane R712:4.

The blind see -- Are not eyes and ears long closed by prejudice, superstition and human tradition being opened? R712:4

It should not, and does not, surprise us that now both phases of healing, spiritual and physical, are in progress and being blessed, each to its class. Notice that physical healings now, as at the first advent, are not performed upon the saints, but upon those not consecrated to sacrifice. R712:2

The lame walk -- Are not those who have long been lame, and who have halted between the service of God and the devil, been healed by the truth? R712:4

The gospel is preached -- Is not the gospel, "good tidings," being preached to the poor and to them that have no money? R712:4

Luke 7:23

Be offended -- Made to stumble. R821:3*

Luke 7:24

Were departed -- So that his words could not be construed as a sop of flattery to hold John's confidence. R2622:1

Unto the people -- The multitude who stood about must have heard the message which John's disciples brought to Jesus, and no doubt queried within themselves, if not audibly, Is John losing faith in Jesus as the Messiah? R2622:1

A reed -- Because God spoke through him as a Prophet as the wind makes music through the reeds. R5031:1

Shaken with the wind -- Pliable to those who would influence him. No, they found a rugged character, strong, independent in the advocacy of the truth. R4595:1, 2622:1

Luke 7:25

In soft raiment -- Giving evidence of being related to the great, the wealthy, the noble of that time. No, he was simply clad, living in seclusion. R4595:1

Luke 7:26

More than a prophet -- A special ambassador and messenger of God at this present time. R2622:1
God's chosen servant for heralding the Messiah to Israel. R4594:3

Luke 7:27

My messenger -- His message was that the kingdom of heaven was about to be offered to them, and that only the holy would be ready to receive it. R5031:1

Neither John nor his hearers fully realized in what way the kingdom would be offered, namely, that it would be an offer, first of a place or share in the kingdom, and that the terms would be full consecration to the Lord. R5031:1

Prepare thy way -- For those able to appreciate the matter, John the Baptist did a work which was in full accord with the prophecy which declared Elijah must first come and do a reformatory work before Messiah would come. R5030:6

Not a greater -- It would be difficult to express in words a higher tribute to John the Baptist. R5030:2

Attesting that John the Baptist was the last of the ancient worthies, the last prophet, the last of the faithful under the Jewish dispensation. R5859:2, 4940:2, 4595:4

Because none of them was entrusted with a more important service of the Lord. R4112:6

A great holy man; he will have a great reward of being one of the glorious princes on the earthly plane. R5069:2

Prophet -- Proclaimer. R4112:3

He was supernaturally guided in the course he took. R2621:5

He was also a special ambassador of God to do an introductory work related to the Kingdom. R2622:1, 1737:4

John the Baptist-- John's mission was pre-eminently that of a reformer. R2621:5

The last of the prophets, he introduced Jesus as the Head of the kingdom class. R5030:6

He that is least -- To have the humblest position in the Church class, in the Bride class being selected during this age, is a higher honor than that which belongs to the very noblest of the previous dispensations. SM251:2

John does not belong to the kingdom class at all, but to the previous dispensation. R2622:2

The kingdom of God -- God had promised a Messianic kingdom, and Jesus had come that he might be the Head of that kingdom. "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I overcame and am set down with my Father in his throne" (Rev. 3:21). These would be followers in his footsteps, none could precede him. R5030:3

The spiritual phase of the Kingdom. A288; R1737:4

Greater than he -- John could not be of the Kingdom class. His grand work terminated before the Redeemer's sacrifice was finished. R4940:2, 4653:5

This applies to the entire class of ancient worthies. It refers not merely to the earthly status of the Gospel church as being superior, but also marks the church as a superior class in the future. R4653:1

In God's providence their reward will be different from that of the Church--theirs will be an earthly reward. R5030:3

They will come forth as perfect human beings as a reward of their faithfulness. God promised them the earthly perfection, while he has promised the bride of Christ the heavenly perfection. R5030:5

This does not imply that the ancient worthies will be disappointed; their cup of blessing, being full, and never having been begotten to a spirit nature, they will not be able to comprehend or appreciate any blessings higher than their own. R5030:6

None, prior to Jesus' time, manifestly, could have been invited to "follow in his steps." (1Pet. 2:21) R5774:6

Therefore greater also than Enoch, Abraham, etc.; not because they were more worthy than these, but that the opportunity of becoming members of the house of sons has been granted only since Pentecost. R5775:1, 5030:3

While we draw lessons from the experiences of the noble characters of the past, our patterns are Jesus and his apostles, whom we are to copy--walking in their footsteps in the narrow way of self-sacrifice even unto death. R3248:5

The least one in the house of sons is on a higher plane than the greatest one in the house of servants. R2562:3, 5775:1,2, 2622:2

Greater than the entire class of Ancient Worthies. R4653:1

We are not to infer that those glorious characters who lived before Christ were less faithful than the Gospel Church. R5030:3

In justice God could not show any preference; but by grace he may do what he will with his own. R5069:4

Because only from the time of Christ has the prize of joint-heirship with the Lord been open. T108

"God having provided some better thing for us." (Heb. 11:40) F86; R5030:5, 4595:4, 3248:5

As Christ was to have the pre-eminence in the Kingdom, it was necessary that he should be the first member of it. F86; R5030:2

Only those justified to life could be invited to the high calling, and John died before the sacrifice of the atonement had been completed. D625; F112; R4653:5, 4940:2, 5774:6

Luke 7:29

And the publicans -- Being cast off from the sympathies and friendship of the Jews in general, they were naturally less influenced by their prejudices and hence more ready to receive the truth. R1783:3

Justified God -- Making manifest his justice. R1246:3

Luke 7:30

Rejected -- Jesus testified, "If ye had received John ye would have received me." R5031:4

Luke 7:32

Like unto children -- Having no interest in what was going on. R1737:1

Market-place -- Greek, agora, root of agorazo, to redeem. E429

Ye have not wept -- No matter what kind of evidence was produced, they were so out of harmony with the truth, that they objected to everything which our Lord did. R1737:1

Luke 7:33

Neither eating nor drinking -- John lived a very abstemious life. R2621:5

Wine -- The word is oinos, and signifies grape wine of the usual sort, which always intoxicates when used to excess. R509:4

Luke 7:34

Eating and drinking -- He attended wedding feasts and banquets made in his honor. R2621:5

Luke 7:35

Wisdom -- The divine wisdom, divine truth. R1737:1

Is justified -- Proved right, accepted. R1737:1

Of all her children -- Those who have the spirit or disposition of the truth are not slow to understand the evidences nor to accept the facts. R1737:1

Luke 7:36

One of the Pharisees -- Who believed on Jesus, but did not confess the Lord lest he should be put out of the synagogue, for he "loved the praise of men more than the praise of God." (John 12:43) R2201:1

Desired him -- Evidently considerably impressed with our Lord's character and teachings, and more favorably inclined toward him than the majority. R2625:6

Our Lord's strict observance of the Law no doubt made him at first a favorite with the Pharisees. R1459:6

Not that Simon was a disciple and believer, but rather that, as a prominent man, he posed as a liberal one also. R3761:1

But when they found that he received sinners and ate with them, they realized that his righteousness was different from theirs, and they hated him. R1460:1

Luke 7:37

A woman -- Possibly Mary of Magdala, but surely not Mary of Bethany. R3761:2, 2200:3

Scholars are generally coming to the opinion that it is a mistake to suppose that Mary Magdalene had ever been an unchaste woman--a mistake to identify her with this woman at the house of the Pharisee. R2797:4

Of the city -- Evidently a common character, widely known to the people of the city, though she might not be known to Jesus and the disciples, who were not residents. R2626:2

Which was a sinner -- A harlot, deeply penitent. R5032:5

The Gospel of Christ is the message of divine compassion toward sinners. The Bible, of all the religious books we know, alone tells of a God touched with the feeling of human infirmities and with sympathy toward sinners. R5032:1

An alabaster box -- Our alabaster boxes of perfume, our daily endeavors to serve and please him who has done so much for us. R3762:4

It was about a year and a half after the incident here related before the other anointing of Jesus by Mary, the sister of Lazarus, took place in the house of Simon the Leper. (Compare Matt. 26:6-13.) R2625:3

Luke 7:38

Stood at his feet -- Privacy in the home is still unusual in the East. Neighbors, friends and visitors feel at liberty to come and go as they please, sometimes coming in to converse with the guests while dinner is being served. R3761:2

Weeping -- Without our recognition of our sins and of his forgiveness we could bring nothing acceptable to him. R3762:4

To wash his feet -- As was sometimes done with dignitaries of that time. R5032:5 It is not our privilege or opportunity to anoint the Head of the body, the Lord Jesus. With us the privilege remains of anointing the feet members of the body of Christ, and day by day we are tested along this very line. R3762:6

With tears -- By her tears he should know, more eloquently that she could voice her sentiments in words, what were the true longings of her heart for forgiveness and for reconciliation. R2626:3

How merciful and considerate of our needs is the Lord's provision that when we come penitently to his feet for forgiveness, he can read our hearts and accepts our tears and even our humblest efforts to make amends. R2626:3

Kind words and looks, a little assistance, may be the tears or the perfume, as circumstances may permit. R3762:6

Many, who would resent well-meant efforts to wash their feet as interferences with their private business, would be very amenable if approached by such evidences of true devotion and loving interest as would be symbolized by tears. R2202:4

With the hairs -- Her tears having fallen quite contrary to her intention, and dishonoring the very feet she intended to honor, she loosened her hair, using it as a towel, entirely regardless of the fact that for a woman at that time it was considered dishonorable to let down her hair in public. R5032:5

Kissed his feet -- Repeatedly, so implied in the Greek text. R3761:2

Anointed them -- As an honor to the One from whom she had heard "wonderful words of life," words of divine compassion and pity for sinners, words of hope for herself. R5032:5

Luke 7:39

When the Pharisee -- A holiness professor. R3762:3

We see Simon indifferent because he felt his sin was less, the woman repentant because she felt her sin was great. R3761:5

Would have known -- Thinking that Jesus evidently did not know her character and therefore is permitting her to anoint his feet. This seems a proof that he is not a prophet. R2626:3

The Pharisee seems to have entertained no thought of impurity on the part of our Lord, or that there was any acquaintance between him and the sinful woman who did him honor. R3761:3

Although Jesus recognized the woman as a sinner, he had compassion upon her, especially in view of the evidence she gave of shame, contrition and reformation. R3761:3

She is a sinner -- When the Pharisees found that he received sinners, they began to realize that his righteousness was of a different sort from theirs, and, as darkness is opposed to light, they hated him. R1460:1

Some noble characters, like Simon the Pharisee, know not how much they miss; they realize not that some of their more blemished neighbors receive forgiveness, which they lack, not sufficiently humble in heart to make the request. R3761:6

Simon -- A Pharisee. R2625:6

A very common name amongst the Jews. Hence it is not remarkable that there were two Simons at whose home Jesus was entertained. It is a little peculiar that at both of them our Lord's feet were anointed. (Matt. 26:6-13) R2625:3

Luke 7:41

The one 500 -- Representing the woman, living in open violation of the Law. R2626:5, 3761:4

And the other 50 -- Representing Simon, trying to keep the Law. R2626:5, 3761:4

Not that Mary was ten times as guilty before the divine law as was Simon. Strictly speaking, both owed the same amount, the lives of both were forfeited because of sin. The ratio does not represent Jesus' view of the situation, but illustrates the sentiments of Mary and Simon. R2200:3

Luke 7:42

Forgave them -- Greek, karazomai; nearly the same meaning as pardon, signifying to forgive freely. E462; R1058:5, 324:4

It is not Jehovah, but Christ and the disciples who do the free forgiving. R324:4, 1058:6; E463

Love him most -- Zeal is the measure of love. R3830:4

Luke 7:43

I suppose that he -- Up to this moment not realizing the bearing of the parable upon his own case and that of the woman--that he represented the debtor owing fifty pence and the woman, the greater sinner, owing five hundred. R3761:4, 2626:4

To whom he forgave -- Greek, karazomai, pardoned. E462; R324:4, 1058:6

Luke 7:44

Unto Simon -- From God's standpoint, undoubtedly Simon was in a better attitude than this sinful woman--he was nearer to God and to righteousness; but he also must depend for divine mercy for forgiveness, as had the woman. R3761:5, 2626:5

This woman -- Her greater love was developed by a greater realization of sin and a greater desire to be relieved from it. R2626:4

I entered into thine house -- Simon treated him kindly and politely, but did not go to any extreme of politeness in his entertainment; perhaps thinking of him as not being used to special attentions. R2625:6

Gavest me no water -- As is customary in that land to those one desired to honor. R5032:6, 3762:2

For the washing of the guest's feet, uncomfortable by reason of travel along the dusty roads of that time. R2200:6

Nor send his servant to take off the Master's sandals, and wash his feet. R2626:1

It could not be that Simon had accidentally omitted these courtesies, for all Pharisees were punctilious on the subject of washings; nor need we suppose that it was an intentional slight put on our Lord. R2201:1

To prevent the thought that he had anything more than a general interest and curiosity respecting Christ, and to maintain the good opinion of his co-religionists, he entertained Jesus as an inferior. R2201:1

Simon, as a wealthy and prominent man, knew all this, and would doubtless have followed the ordinary custom had his guest been one in high social standing; but his invitation had been of a patronizing sort. R3762:2

But she hath -- The still greater attentions of the woman, and the still greater marks of respect which she showed, were evidences that, while they both loved, the woman loved the more. R2626:4

Mary, at this time, had no knowledge of the extent to which the Master would go on her behalf and ours, to redeem us from sin and its sentence of death--Calvary was then still in the future. R2201:2

Washed my feet -- It is still possible to wash and to anoint the Lord's feet. The Lord is still in the flesh, representatively; his faithful are to be esteemed "members of his body." (Eph. 5:30; Col. 1:24) R2201:2
As members of the feet class, many are weary, discouraged, needing rest, refreshment and comfort, such as was bestowed upon the literal feet of the Master. R2201:3

With tears -- It is the sympathetic ones that are most successful in helping the various members of the Body of Christ out of the difficulties, besetments and defilements which will always be theirs so long as they are in the world. R2202:4

Luke 7:45

Gavest me no kiss -- As is customary amongst friends, as it is now our custom to shake hands. R2200:6, 5032:6, 3762:2

Luke 7:46

Thou didst not anoint -- With special guests, sometimes perfumed ointments for the hair and toilet were provided. R2201:1

Anointed my feet -- How few pour upon one another the spikenard ointment of comforting words, helpful suggestions and encouragements. R2201:4

Luke 7:47

Which are many -- A sin is a sin, a violation of divine law, whether in a great or lesser matter. We are not to understand that in God's sight there is any difference as to enormities of sin, but that some are more deeply involved in it than others. R3761:4

Are forgiven -- Not that our Lord loves less those who are more moral, but when the moralist spurns divine favor and ignores his own blemishes, and when the degraded, realizing their sins, cry out for mercy, the contrite heart is more acceptable to God than the other. R3762:1

Although Jesus knew what was in man he was very charitable, which leads us to suppose that if we were perfect we would be all the more charitable towards sinners, though not at all sympathetic with sin. R5032:4

She loved much -- Her greater love was developed by a greater realization of sin and a greater desire to be relieved from it. R2626:4

Those who are helpful to one another will be found filled with a genuine love for the "Head," the "body," and even the "feet." The secret of their love, as in Mary's case, will be found in a large appreciation of their own imperfections and of the Lord's mercy and grace toward them in the forgiveness of their sins. R2201:4

The majority of those who love the Lord most are such as realize their own sinful and fallen condition most. R5032:6

Loveth little -- The secret of the difference of sentiment lay in the fact that Simon loved him little, and that Mary loved him much. R2201:1 Having less to be forgiven, he had been less appreciative of the privilege of forgiveness. R3762:3

Those who are most moral, and therefore might be said to have less to be forgiven, have correspondingly less love. But this should not be the case.

The less degraded ought naturally to be more able to love and appreciate divine goodness. R5032:6

Little is forgiven -- Frequently we see people living moral lives, evidently seeking to walk in the paths of righteousness, much less prepared to accept forgiveness through the Lord Jesus Christ than are some others who have been living more carelessly. R2626:6

Luke 7:48

Thy sins are forgiven -- The woman was justified, her sins forgiven, while the Pharisee, with really fewer sins, was unforgiven because he had not appealed for forgiveness, nor appreciated properly his need therefor. R3761:5

On the strength of his covenant and sacrifice he had authority to tell the woman that her sins were forgiven, because he was making the Atonement which would be applicable to her. R5033:4

It was one of his unostentatious methods of calling attention to the fact that he was the Messiah, and that as such, and in view of this work which he has yet to do, all power to forgive sins was in his hands. R2627:1

Every other hope, every other blessing, is based upon this one--the forgiveness of our sins. R3762:4

Her prayer was answered; all the past was treated as forever blotted out. R2626:5

As the Messiah, and in view of the work he was yet to do, all power to forgive sins was in his hands. R2627:1, 2583:6

The ransom price for the sins of the whole world was already on the altar. R1921:3

A blessed illustration of the Lord's sympathy for those who come to him accepting his mercy, love and forgiveness, however unworthy they may be. R3761:3

Forgiveness must be the first message to each one of us; otherwise we could have no peace, joy, or hope of a glorious future. R3762:3

The broken and contrite heart is more acceptable to God and justified rather than the other. R3762:1

Jesus was in the very act of paying the ransom-price. R324:4; E463; 4981:2, 3730:5, 1058:6

Luke 7:49

Who is this -- The only satisfactory answer is that he is the one he professes to be, the Son of God, the Redeemer of the world. R5033:1

Luke 7:50

Thy faith -- It was not the woman's works that saved her, nor the ointment, nor the tears, nor the kiss--it was the faith. But faith must work. If it does not work, it is a sure sign that it is dead. R3762:5, 2627:1

Tears and offerings could avail us nothing except as we present to the Lord our faith, accepting him as the one who has power to forgive sins and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness. R2627:4

True faith produces worship and praise. These conditions will surely manifest themselves, as did the woman's, by tears, by services to the feet of the Master, by an anointing of the most precious perfume that we can bring. R3762:5

Go in peace -- None but the forgiven know the peace of God. Their peace will be in proportion to their faith, and their faith in proportion to their knowledge. R3762:5

Luke 8

Luke 8:1

Glad tidings -- Thus far, only to God's servants; but it shall be to all. R5370:3

The same good tidings that were heralded by the angels at Jesus' birth.
R5370:3

Of the kingdom of God -- This is the key to all the preaching that Jesus did; his one message was the good tidings of the Kingdom of God. R5370:2
Not only was the Kingdom the topic with which the Lord began his public ministry, but it was really the main topic of all his preaching, other subjects being mentioned merely in connection with, or in explanation of, this one subject. A274

The very center and essence of the hope of the Church and the world.
R5370:3

Luke 8:2

Mary -- Apparently a woman of wealth. R5370:6, 2797:5

Called Magdalene -- Not the same woman who washed and anointed our Lord's feet in the house of the Pharisee. (Luke 7:37) R2797:5
Signifying that this Mary was of, or from, Magdala, a town on the sea of Galilee. R2797:5

Went seven devils -- The poor woman was in the condition which many are who are in insane asylums. Her trouble was not organic, but caused by the harassing of the seven fallen angels who had taken possession of her.

R5370:6

Being set free from their control, she became a very loyal servant of the Lord. R2173:3

Luke 8:3

The wife of Chuza -- Some suppose Chuza to be the nobleman of John 4:46 who traveled 25 miles from Capernaum to Cana to appeal to Jesus for the healing of his son, who was at the point of death. R4132:6

Herod's steward -- Or chamberlain, the king's officer. R4132:6

Ministered unto him -- Voluntarily contributing to the Master's support.

R5552:1

The moneys contributed were given to Jesus, and not to the disciples. He voluntarily shared with them. R3257:2

The disciples evidently never lacked, though it is equally evident that they never solicited alms. F286

We have no suggestion that he ever took up a collection or in any manner solicited money. Many think that this is a suggestion that the followers of Christ should likewise make no appeals for money, but merely use of their own substance and such other moneys as shall voluntarily be given unto them. R5370:3

Such voluntary donations made it proper that there should be a common treasurer for the company, and that he should be of superior business acumen. R5552:1

His seamless robe, so beautifully representing his own personal perfection, had probably been a gift from one of these noble women.

R2316:1

Luke 8:4

Much people were gathered -- As the fame of Jesus increased his opposition became more and more pronounced; especially from the chief priests, scribes and Pharisees, as they were brought into competition and unfavorable comparison with him as public teachers. R1735:3 Many of them illustrated truths not revealed at that time, and hence not understood.

R1742:1

Luke 8:5

A sower -- It is never said, "The kingdom of heaven is likened unto a sower." There was no Church of Christ, or Kingdom of heaven, until the day of Pentecost. R97:3*

The work of sowing the word was to prepare them for a place in the Kingdom. Thus this parable prepares the way for that of the wheat and tares. This deals with the individual, the other with the Church collectively. R97:4*

Sow -- First the Jewish wheatfield, then that of Christendom, and not in heathendom where the Word has never gone. R3764:3

By the way side -- The fields of Palestine are not fenced and the paths of travel frequently cross them. R3763:2

Trodden down -- By life's experiences. R3764:3

And the fowls -- Representing Satan and his agents. R2634:6

The birds of Palestine are so numerous as to be one of the farmer's chief pests. R3763:2

Luke 8:6

Upon a rock -- Palestine abounds with limestone, which renders the soil very rich but, when shallow, very hot. R3763:2

It withered away -- Under the hot sun of persecution. R5650:5, 4910:5

Luke 8:7

Among thorns -- There are fifty kinds of thorny plants in Palestine, and the thistles sometimes grow to a height of 15 feet. R3763:2

Luke 8:8

An hundredfold -- A single grain of barley has been known to produce a fruitage of 276 grains. R3763:2

Luke 8:10

Unto you -- The Little Flock, the faithful, the saints. NS524:2

So constituted through acceptance of Christ, consecration to him, and begetting of the holy Spirit. NS598:1

The meek, honest and faithful of God's people only--in God's due time and way. D614

Not only to the disciples of that day, but to the disciples all through the age. R1742:1

The wise who will understand the mysteries of the Kingdom of the Melchizedek Priesthood are not the worldly-wise or great; they are chiefly the poor of this world, rich in faith. SM13:2

Truth is not intended for all. SM109:2

Not for the blind, not for the deaf, but for those "blessed," favored ones who have eyes and ears. R2414:5

"Blessed are your eyes for they see, and your ears for they hear." (Matt. 13:16) SM109:2

It is given to know -- At the first advent, the humble Israelites indeed were not confused, but enlightened; and the same is true now in the second advent. D599

Passing from grace to grace, and from knowledge to knowledge. SM14:2
Our Lord thus indicated that his disciples should have been able to interpret this parable, because of their knowledge of the truth it was designed to illustrate. R1742:1

While "given," it is not given indiscriminately; it is given only to those of certain character. R4444:6

Those wholly consecrated now, and gladly following the "Lamb whithersoever he goeth" (Rev. 14:4), know that their Master will continue to give them meat in due season (Matt. 13:52), both in things new and old, as they are able to bear it. (John 16:12) R1151:1*

The mysteries -- Even partially. R1149:1*

"The Mystery hidden from past ages and dispensations, but now revealed unto the saints." (Col. 1:26) SM246:T

The Mystery is this: that God's purpose from the first was that the great Deliverer should be not only the Lord Jesus, but should include also the elect Little Flock of this Gospel age. SM246:T

It is proper that the saints should know this Mystery, for now the strength which this knowledge would give will be of special value in their combat with the special trials and difficulties immediately before them. SM246:T

The Pentecostal blessing, evidencing our forgiveness, has reached every member of the consecrated class to enlighten the eyes of our understanding and to enable us to see the deep things of God and his gracious promises. R3590:6

We may tell of these mysteries, knowing that none will be able to comprehend thoroughly all of these mysteries except such as have taken several degrees in the Order of the Melchizedek Priesthood. SM14:2
Parables, which illustrated truths, can only be seen as the truths they illustrate become manifest. R1742:4

"Ye, brethren, are not in darkness that that day should overtake you as a thief." (1 Thess. 5:4) C215

Israelites indeed, learn precept upon precept, line upon line. (Isa. 28:9, 10) SM109:2

The permission of evil was not understood until the Gospel age, and more fully in this harvest period; but only by the spirit-begotten. R1506:1 But to others -- All not members of the inner circle of Israelites indeed.

NS632:3; SM109:2

Not disciples. R72:2

The masses of Christendom. NS307:2

"Them that are without"--outside the pale of the believing disciples, which included the whole nation of Israel except a small "remnant." R1742:4

We need not be afraid of giving away the secrets of the Lord. SM246:T

In parables -- Not understood by the people who heard them, and which seem to be but little better comprehended today. HG394:6

Because they are not in the right attitude of heart to properly profit by the knowledge. NS524:2

Dark sayings. D614

It was not because of Israelitish stupidity that they did not perceive the antitypes, not because of superiority of acumen that we see them now and they do not. NS598:1

So that they might fail to perceive the blessings of which they were proving themselves unworthy. R1742:4

Jesus taught a punishment and trouble now and in the future for the wicked, but it was always by parable. R1151:1*; A128

That seeing -- They had indeed the natural sight and the natural hearing, but they lacked the mental sight and hearing. R2414:4

They might not see -- So hard for the Jew to understand, and equally impossible for the natural man of the Gentiles to comprehend. R3590:6

Our Lord spake in this dark manner with the very intention that the majority might not understand. NS307:2

Natural men and not new creatures, never begotten of the holy Spirit, cannot see and understand spiritual things. R3328:4

Might not understand -- Even if we tell it, all cannot hear. SM246:T

"I work a work in your days, a work which ye shall in no wise believe, though a man declare it unto you." (Acts 13:41) NS632:3

The parables and teachings were not uttered with the intention of making the blind see and the deaf hear, but purposely so that the deaf might not hear, and so that the blind might not see. R2414:4

Even now the dark sayings of our Lord are not understood except by his footstep followers. A128; D614; R2414:4, 1149:1*; SM109:2

Parables can be understood only as the truths they illustrate become manifest. R1742:4

Luke 8:11

The word of God -- The good seed represents the message of the Kingdom, not a truth about the philosophies of men, or some scientific truth.

R5736:5

Even as false teaching, human philosophies and doctrines of devils are not wheat-seed, but tare-seed. R2627:3

Matthew says, "the word of the kingdom." Our Lord, no doubt, used both expressions. R2628:5

The entire revelation which God has made to us--the Bible. R3764:1, 2627:3

Luke 8:12

By the way side -- Hardened by prosperity, needing the plowshare of trouble. R3764:3

Their hearts being solid and compact with selfishness; not bad people, but unsuited to the Lord's present work and call. R2627:3

They that hear -- But into whose hearts it did not enter at all. They simply heard with the outer ear and forgot. It made no impression. R5736:2

Cometh the devil -- We have so much more to contend with than the weaknesses of our own flesh and the imperfections of fellow men. F609
Whose very existence is denied by many. F609

Taketh away the word -- Stealing away from them every element of truth they once had seen. R3764:3

The Adversary would always, if possible, prevent the seed from entering the heart and taking root. R5736:2

Out of their hearts -- In this parable the field of operation is the heart of each individual, while in the wheat and the tares the field is the world. (Matt. 13:38) R97:2*

Luke 8:13

They on the rock -- Having a veneer of outward grace but at heart a character of selfishness. R2627:5

Receive the word -- At first give evidence of great fruitfulness and vigor. R2791:2, 5650:5, 4910:4, 3764:4

With joy -- At first very much enthused, but they lack depth of character. They will not bring forth the fruitage, for they have not sufficient depth for rooting. They are shallow. R5736:2

Have no root -- They lack depth of character. R5736:2, 5650:5, 3764:4, 2627:5

In time of temptation -- As soon as they find out that the truth is not popular, they foresee persecution or social ostracism; then their ardor cools and their interest in the harvest message wanes and gradually dies out. R5736:2

Fall away -- Not endure. R4910:5, 2791:2

Wither under the sun of persecution. R4910:4, 5736:2, 2791:2, 3764:4, 5650:5

Such cannot be of the Kingdom class. R2791:2, 4910:5, 2627:6

Luke 8:14

Among thorns -- Good ground, with fine prospects for developing the fruits of the holy Spirit, but it is infested with thorns--not frivolous pleasures, theater, cards, dancing, etc., but the cares and ambitions of life, the deceitfulness of riches. R5736:3

Earthly projects and ambitions whose interests conflict with the interests of the Kingdom. R3764:5

In Palestine these thorns or thistles grow in the very best kind of soil. R2627:6

Are they -- They may be good business men, fine politicians, or immersed in some kind of study. Others may be fine housekeepers, having a pride in how well things are kept, or they may be leaders in society or in works of reform. R5736:3

And are choked -- The ground, while good, is otherwise occupied, and the message of the Kingdom and its work are crowded out to a large degree, so that no fruit is brought to perfection. R5736:3

Riches -- There are but few of the Lord's people that can be trusted with riches. R2520:2

And bring no fruit -- "Ye cannot serve God and mammon." (Luke 16:13) We cannot bring forth both thorns and wheat. R3764:5

Luke 8:15

But that -- The truth is represented by the seed, and the individuals are also represented by the seed. A grain of truth is planted in an honest heart and it produces a character which is in harmony with that truth. R5736:5

On the good ground -- This condition represents entire consecration to God. Everything which would hinder has been cast out. The cares of this life are not permitted to enter this heart and choke the word. R5736:3

Honest and good heart -- Proper quality or depth of character, honesty being the most important feature of all. R5736:3, 5

Keep it -- His words should lead to self-examination, as not the hearers only, but the doers of the Word, are acceptable with God. R1741:3

Bring forth fruit -- Those of this class grow daily in knowledge, in love, and are building one another up in the most holy faith. R5737:1
Their very best, according to circumstances, conditions and ability. R5736:5

To the very largest degree of our possibilities, surroundings and opportunities. R3765:4

Which will be measured by the degree of our zeal and our love for the Lord. R2628:4

With patience -- The Greek word hypomonee has a deeper and fuller significance than attaches to the English word. It signifies rather constancy--the thought of being an endurance of evil in a cheerful, willing, patient manner. R2971:1, 4910:4, 3584:3

Patient endurance follows after the receiving and sprouting of the seed, and is necessary in order that the fruit may be developed and thoroughly ripened. R5650:5, 4910:5, 2791:2

Luke 8:16

Lighted a candle -- "Ye are the light of the world." (Matt. 5:14) E293; R3243:2, 2036:3

A measure of light in the world, emanating from our dear Redeemer, and still shining forth from all those who are truly his. R3686:2, 5769:5
It is "the light that is in you," a light of faith, hope and love ignited in the heart. R3686:2

Luke 8:16

Covereth it -- If unfaithful in shining for the light under the present conditions of prevalent darkness, they will not be esteemed worthy of a place with the glorified faithful in the Kingdom which shall shine forth as the sun. HG438:6

The extinguishing of their light, the stoppage of their growth, if persevered in, would mean second death. R2966:5

Luke 8:17

Nothing is secret -- Faithfulness consists in a proper and diligent use of our gifts in harmony with the divine purpose and methods; and both the Lord and the Apostle point to a day of reckoning when the secret things will be brought to light. R1972:3

The day of his presence will bring to light the hidden things of darkness and make manifest the secret counsels of the heart. (1 Cor. 4:5) R2979:6

That shall not -- In the Millennial age. A303

Be made manifest -- A testimony dreaded but disbelieved by unjust stewards of wealth and power. C20

The murderer will be faced by his victim, the debtor by his creditor, the thief by his dupe, the defamer by the one defamed. R1655:1

Luke 8:18

Take heed -- Divine truth, coming to us through the appointed channel of God's Word, comes with a moral and logical power, proving its authority and enforcing it with an emphasis which carries warning with it. R2057:3*

How ye hear -- See that your heart is in a right condition to receive the truth. R2627:3

For whosoever hath -- Hath used. R2496:6

Whosoever hath not -- Hath not used. R2496:6

That which he seemeth to have -- The flood is sweeping away what little faith nominal Christians have. R2142:5*

Luke 8:21

And my brethren -- In my new family, the "household of faith." (Gal. 6:10) F589

Luke 8:23

He fell asleep -- Evidently thoroughly exhausted with the labors of his journey and ministry. R3324:3

Came down a storm -- Picturing the experiences of the Church during the Gospel age, tempest-tossed by the Adversary. R3325:1

Of wind -- The Sea of Galilee is quite subject to such wind storms. R3324:2 This storm may have been supernatural and of the Adversary. R3324:4

Luke 8:24

Awoke him -- Tired, weary and asleep. R1063:2*

Raging of the water -- Symbolizing the restless, anarchistic masses. A318

There was a calm -- "Peace be still" (Mark 4:39)--after the time of trouble. R3325:4, 5058:3,6

Waters lashed to a fury cannot thus be quickly calmed except by a miracle. R3324:4

Yet he refused to miraculously deliver himself from his captors in Gethsemane. F650

"He maketh the storm a calm." (Psa. 107:29) R3324:1

Whoever can, by faith, take hold upon the Lord will find a great peace and calm come into his heart and affairs. R5058:6

Picturing the world's great rest from the evil one for a thousand years. R3325:4

Luke 8:25

Where is your faith? -- When the adversary brings a whirlwind of temptation, opposition or persecution, with waves of adversity or affliction, and the Lord seems heedless, our faith is being tested. R3324:6 We today, by faith, are able to see the Lord with us in the ship, about to speak peace to the world. R3325:4

Luke 8:27

Which had devils -- Apparently the human will must consent before these evil spirits have power to take possession. But when they do take possession apparently the will power is so broken down that the individual is almost helpless to resist their presence, even though he so desires. R2173:3

Luke 8:28

Torment me not -- Implying that an interference with their tormenting of mankind would be an injury to their rights. Similarly today, some men claim that their rights are interfered with when they are stopped from pillaging and injuring their fellow-creatures. R3772:2

Luke 8:30

Many devils -- The tendency of fallen spirits to congregate in one person indicates the desire they have still to exercise the power originally given them--namely, the power to materialize as men. R2173:3

Luke 8:31

Out into the deep -- Into the abyss, the second death, utter destruction. R3772:4

Luke 8:32

Herd of many swine -- Unclean to the Jew, and unlawful for them to eat. R2173:3

And they -- Not attempting to palm themselves off as spirits of deceased human beings. F626

Assuredly these were persons and not merely a disease of the man's mind. R3772:5

Besought him -- Evidently fallen angels cannot impose themselves upon even the dumb animals until given some sort of permission. R2173:3

Luke 8:37

Depart from them -- Wherever the true Gospel goes its effect is to cause uproar and confusion in the kingdom of darkness. R1633:3

Luke 8:38

Might be with him -- "Unto you which believe he is precious." (1 Pet. 2:7) R3773:2

Luke 8:39

Had done unto him -- Our Lord's journey on that occasion seems to have resulted in the conversion of but one person, the demonic, who then became the Lord's mouthpiece there. R3773:4

Luke 8:41

He fell down -- Figuratively expressing his homage, obedience and faith. R4588:5

Besought him -- Here the faith was exercised by another on behalf of the patient, who, being dead, had no ability to exercise faith. R1939:2

Luke 8:44

Touched...his garment -- Believing in his greatness and power, she immediately felt the thrill of life and strength in her body like an electric current. R4588:6

Who touched me? -- Our Lord was full of vital energy, and felt the loss of it as electricity is drawn from a battery. R4588:6

Luke 8:46

I perceive -- He felt the consequent weakness. R1359:4

Virtue is gone out -- Since he could not suffer pain and sickness because of sin, he was placed among sinners, where their weaknesses and pains bore down upon him--he "himself took our infirmities and bare our sickness." (Matt. 8:17; Isa. 53:4,5) R2000:1

Every cure performed by Jesus served to exhaust his very life forces, yet he gave himself--spent his life in acts of love and kindness to poor, fallen humanity. R105:4

Jesus experienced the woes and sufferings of humanity without sharing in the imperfections and sins. R454:3

He impoverished himself to bless others. R1735:4

It is daily more recognized among scientific men that some persons possess greater vitality than others, and can communicate it to others who have less, though such are liable to feel for a time the weakness which is cured in the weaker one. R574:4

Power, vitality, strength, healing vigor. R574:4, 4588:6, 2000:1, 454:3, 105:4

See also comments on 6:19.

Luke 8:47

She came trembling -- Fearful she had stolen a blessing of which she felt unworthy. R4588:6

Luke 8:49

Trouble not -- Their faith in the power of Jesus was a very weak faith. When they saw the child was dead all hope departed. They had considerable faith in Christ, but they did not believe that his power extended to the raising of the dead. R1939:2

Luke 8:50

Shall be made whole -- Merely an awakening; nowhere styled resurrection.

R5578:3; OV352:1

Not in heaven, purgatory, or hell. R5611:5

Luke 8:52

But sleepeth -- As in the case of Lazarus, our Lord here referred to death as a sleep, in view of the fact of the resurrection. R1939:4

All the dead are to be reckoned as sleeping, waiting for his return and his exaltation with his elect bride in glory. R2197:6

The second death, from which there shall be no resurrection, is never called "sleep" in the Bible. R1939:4

Luke 8:54

He put them all out -- Because they manifested their lack of faith.

While he rewarded their faith, weak though it was, he reproved them also.

R1939:4

Luke 8:55

Her spirit came again -- Simply signifying, "And her breath returned," and is so rendered in the Diaglott. The Greek word pneuma, translated "spirit" in the Common Version, signifies breath, wind, or the spirit or breath of life. R1939:4

And she arose -- Thus the Lord rewarded even the weak in faith, and gave them additional and overwhelming evidence to strengthen and establish their faith. R1939:4

Did not come back from heaven or hell, and was not resurrected, but was merely awakened out of the sleep of death. Christ was "the first fruits of them that slept" (1 Cor. 15:20), "the first that should rise from the dead." (Acts 26:23) R2618:2,4; OV352:1

Foreshadowing or illustrating the resurrection. R4603:4

Luke 9

Luke 9:1

His twelve disciples -- His apostles; specially called and ordained, a class distinct and separate from other disciples. R1522:3

They were continually under his training, witnesses of his teachings, personal character, manner of life and miracles; the only ones invited to partake with him of the last Passover Supper; witnesses of the agonies of Gethsemane, his betrayal and arrest, his crucifixion, death, burial and the fact of his resurrection. R1522:3,4

Only "the eleven" were the chosen witnesses of the Lord's ascension. R1522:5

And gave them power -- Not until they had received considerable instruction from him were they recognized in their office as apostles and fully empowered for their special work. R2261:1

Over all devils -- Apparently there were great numbers possessed throughout the land of Israel. R2173:2

And to cure -- At the expense of Jesus' vitality. R2636:1

Diseases -- Illustrating our present privilege of opening deaf ears and blind eyes to the knowledge of the Lord's great plan. R2636:4

Luke 9:2

He sent them -- Some little time before sending the seventy, whom he probably sent in the last year of his ministry. R2674:1

Preach the kingdom -- Not only was the kingdom the topic with which the Lord began his public ministry, but it was really the main topic of all his preaching, other subjects being mentioned merely in connection with, or in explanation of, this one subject. A273

The hope of every Israelite. A273

Luke 9:3

Said unto them -- During our Lord's earthly ministry the work of the apostles differed nothing from that of the "seventy" (Compare Luke 10:17); yet they were more directly and continually under his training and were the chosen witnesses of every remarkable feature and event of his course.

R1522:3

Take nothing -- Not going as travelers, but rather as persons who were thoroughly at home, and who expected to find a home and the necessities of life wherever they went. R2261:5

Nor scrip -- That is, no valise or satchel wherein to carry surplus. The apostles had something to give, but not to sell. R2261:5

Luke 9:4

There abide -- He sent them to a covenant people, whose duty it was to receive and entertain the messengers of the Lord. Their receiving or rejecting would be a test of their fidelity to God as his covenant people.

R1988:2

The family would be blessed of the Lord because of the presence of his representatives. R2261:6

The messengers of present truth are not self-seekers, or money-gatherers, but merely accept, in exchange for the blessings which they confer, enough financial support to meet their expenses, economically. R2262:1

Luke 9:5

Will not receive you -- They were not to stay in any place where the Lord's blessing would not be appreciated. R2261:6

Shake off the very dust -- Not as a vindictive expression of hatred, but rather as a symbolic act implying that they renounced all responsibility for what the consequences might be. R2262:4

Luke 9:6

And they departed -- Himself going also. R1754:2

And healing -- Merely as foregleams of the blessings which, in fuller measure, would result from the inauguration of Messiah's Kingdom. R2261:5

Luke 9:10

When they were returned -- The news of John's death and the possible effect of this sudden outburst of royal wrath seems to have brought them all together again to take counsel of the Lord. R1754:2

Told him all -- Just so, the Lord would have all his disciples come to him for counsel, rest and refreshment. "He never asks of us such busy labor as finds no time for resting at his feet." R1754:3

Went aside privately -- Probably in part for private meditation and conference with his disciples, who undoubtedly would be greatly agitated by the news of John's beheading, and needed his calming influence and assurance that Herod could have no power over them except such as might be permitted by the Father. R2435:2

Bethsaida -- Just outside the boundary of Herod's dominion. R2435:3, 1754:3

Luke 9:11

He received them -- He could not refrain from giving them his vitality in curing their ailments, and pouring in the oil and wine of truth, and satisfying their hungers and thirstings of heart with the good promise of the Kingdom, and finally providing them natural food; and such should be the spirit of all the Lord's followers. R2435:3

Our delight will be, not in self-gratification, but chiefly in "doing good to all men as we have opportunity, especially to the household of faith." (Gal. 6:10) R2435:5 He is today looking with sympathetic compassion upon the multitudes of so-called "Christendom" and beholds them, dissatisfied with the husks of human tradition and philosophy, hungering and thirsting after righteousness. R2436:1

And get victuals -- The people themselves seem to have been so entranced with the good tidings that they entirely forgot their own necessities. R2435:5

Luke 9:13

Give ye them to eat -- It is remarkable that the Gospels do not parade our Lord's generosity and kindness, but content themselves with recording the simple facts. R2435:3

Seeing the dark night approaching, the Lord today instructs his disciples to supply them with something to eat--spiritual food, truths pertaining to the Kingdom, which will afford them some strength and encouragement in the time of trouble. R2436:1

We should be ready at any time to distribute our store of truth. It should be sufficient for us to know that someone present is hungering and thirsting after righteousness. R3333:5

And two fishes -- The Lord takes our time and talents, little and unworthy as these are, and blesses them and uses them in his service, and accomplishes great things. R3780:5

Our Lord's miracles of feeding and healing were performed, not upon the consecrated disciples, but upon others. R1754:6

Luke 9:14

Five thousand -- The largeness of the company is accounted for by the fact that it was near the time of the Feast of the Passover, and according to custom large numbers of the religiously inclined were on their pilgrimage to Jerusalem. R2435:3

Men -- Besides women and children. R1754:3

Yet at the time of his temptation he refused to miraculously appease his own hunger. F650

Luke 9:16

And the two fishes -- We offer no objection to those who claim better health as a result of a purely vegetable diet, but we do object to the claim of special sanctity on account of it. R3098:3

And looking up -- It is incomprehensible how any consecrated Christian dare to neglect to render thanks for his daily food. R2643:6, 3780:6, 2644:2

He blessed them -- The giving of thanks did indeed bring a blessing upon the food. R3780:6

To the disciples -- Representing the Little Flock during the Millennial age. R3781:4

Though he could have fed the multitude without their help. R2644:4
Similarly, he could feed hungry spiritual Israelites with the harvest message without our aid, but is pleased to use us as disseminators of the truth. R2644:4

Luke 9:17

They did eat -- The Lord's miracles of feeding and healing were performed, not upon his consecrated disciples, but upon others. His followers were covenanted to share with him in the work of sacrifice. R1754:6

Were all filled -- Plainness and simplicity of food would not only be more healthful, but would leave much more time for the spiritual refreshment. R3781:1

The skeptics who deny this miracle cannot question but that this grain and these fishes could in due time, in the course of nature, have brought forth a harvest sufficient for the 5,000. R3333:2

There was taken up -- A good supply for their future necessities. R2435:5

Of fragments -- Those who receive of the Lord's bounty should be none the less appreciative of it, and careful in its use. R2435:6

We are not to waste spiritual privileges because they are God's free gifts. Rather, we are to prize every spiritual morsel and to gather up in store for future needs of ourselves and others. R2435:6

Not the fragments left by the multitude, but those broken by the Lord and not distributed. R3781:4

Twelve baskets -- Haversacks, in which the twelve apostles carried their provision. R2435:5

So that none of God's provision for his people might be wasted. R3333:3
It was those who scattered to others who had their haversacks full in the end. Those who are most intent upon feeding others the Bread of Life are themselves most bountifully supplied. R3504:2

Our memories are our haversacks in which we are to gather up in store for ourselves and others every spiritual morsel. R2435:6

Luke 9:20

Whom say ye -- The teaching of Jesus was chiefly by induction. R5767:5

Peter -- Probably the oldest of the disciples and their spokesman. R3339:6

The Christ of God -- The word Christ or kristos is a Greek word, introduced into our English language, but not translated into it. Its translation is anointed. R270:2, 134:2

Jesus was always his name, but from the time of his baptism, when the holy Spirit descended upon him and anointed him as the High Priest, his title has been "The Anointed." R270:2, 134:2

Jesus was frequently called by this title instead of by his name; as English people most often speak of their sovereign as "the Queen," instead of calling her by her name. R270:2, 134:3

As Jesus was the "anointed one," we also, the Church of Christ, have the same anointing of the Spirit, as members of his Body. R134:3, 270:3

He indicated that Jesus was the son of God, not the son of Joseph. R5767:5

Luke 9:21

Tell no man -- The Lord preferred to give the people the evidences, rather than the assertions, of his Messiahship, and to let the logic of his mighty works lead them to the only reasonable conclusions. R1939:2
Because it might interfere with the divine program respecting his crucifixion, either hastening or hindering it. R3790:1

Luke 9:22

Must suffer -- Even with this forewarning, the faith of most of those who believed proved very superficial. They were swayed in judgment by the opposition of their leaders, and only a few stood firm in the midst of the trials following. R1939:3

Testings of faith and loyalty to God are as necessary to Jesus' followers as they were to himself--to develop and crystallize character. PD76:4/90
Consequently if any followed him from wrong motives, the trial coming would sweep them away. R1939:2

Luke 9:23

If any man -- Already a disciple. R3235:6

If we turn aside from the path of humiliation and daily cross-bearing, and strive for present exaltation and preferment, we are forgetting the very conditions upon which the future exaltation depends. R1988:2

Will come after me -- He had showed them how he must suffer, and that, if they would follow him and continue to be his disciples, they must do as he did. R1939:5

Will follow my example. Our Lord's life was an illustration. R3790:3, 5654:1, 4557:4

As sheep. R5654:1

Let him deny himself -- Sacrifice himself, his personal interests and ambitions. R3846:4, 4557:4

Kill his will outright, not merely hack and mutilate it. This is not and must not be a cross. The desire to give up our will and accept God's will must be a pleasure, or God will take no joy in our service. "I delight to do thy will, O my God." (Psa. 40:8) R5654:1, 5719:2, 3237:1,2; Q399:T "If we be dead with him we shall also live with him." (2 Tim. 2:11) R2615:6 "Blest Savior, Thou knowest the weakness of man; With strength that thou givest, we answer, We can." R401:4*

Take up his cross -- At the very beginning of our course we each found the cross confronting us. Had we not taken it up we would not have been accounted worthy even to look with intelligent appreciation into the precious truths of God's plan. R3103:6

Having counted the cost of discipleship. R3235:6, 3236:4

The trials, difficulties, disappointments, the crossing of the human will made necessary by the doing of God's will under present unfavorable conditions. R3236:4, 3237:3

Being sacrificed of earthly interests. Q399:T

As soon as we take hold of the cross and put forth our efforts, our Lord lifts the real weight of it. R3236:6, 5222:4

And follow me -- Who has set an example, to live separate from the world, to live for God and the truth and for the blessing of fellowmen. SM383:2

The difference between the masses of nominal Christians and the true Christian is that the latter take the name Christian to mean followers of Christ, and not merely to mean respectable and moral people. NS263:2

This Kingdom class must all be footstep followers of Jesus. R4754:4

"Walk not after the flesh but after the spirit." (Rom. 8:4) R3237:5

Luke 9:24

Lose his life for my sake -- The Greek word is psuche, signifying existence or being. R248:6; E336

Our Lord's human life and restitution rights, applied "for us," give us by faith those rights, as a loan, on condition that we do not keep them, but follow his example and sacrifice them, that God might reward the sacrifice with the new, spirit nature. R4556:5

Only by sacrificing present interests and life itself can any now obtain eternal life. R4556:5, 1939:5

Loss of worldly and sectarian life is really gain. R508:5*

The same shall save it -- Faithfulness to our covenant of sacrifice insures eternal life as spiritual beings, while the repudiation of it would surely forfeit that life. R1939:6

That we may be members of the Christ--the world's Prophet, Priest, King, Mediator. R4556:6

Luke 9:26

Be ashamed of me -- Ashamed to confess themselves his followers; ashamed to own his "brethren," the members of his Body. E237; R3777:1, 3776:3 To know the Song of Moses and not to sing it, to understand the good tidings and not to proclaim them, would mean fear, shame or lack of zeal, any of which would be quite sufficient reasons for losing a knowledge of the Song. NS636:5

As of one unfit for the Kingdom--unfit to be entrusted with so great power, honor and glory, and with immortality. R4115:3

It is not a matter of favoritism, but of character-development. If they will not endure to the end, if they do not prove overcomers, they will not be fit for the Kingdom and association with their Lord. R5669:4

The Lord is still present in the world in the flesh--in the flesh of his consecrated members. The world is still ashamed of Christ. R3776:6

Love for the brethren means love for the Lord. "He that despiseth you despiseth me; he that rejected you rejecteth me and him that sent me." (Luke 10:16) R3777:1

And of my words -- Ashamed to confess the doctrines which he taught. E237; R5120:4

The Bible and the literature which expounds and illustrates it. The Lord puts his Word on a parity with himself--his representative. R3777:4, 3776:3, 2597:4, 2430:5 The teaching of the great Teacher and of his chosen twelve apostles is to be the criterion or rule of judgment (Greek: krino) to his followers. R2430:5

Not addressing those who burn the Bible, or do not have one, or neglect to read it, or fail to take their texts from it, or quote it incorrectly, but those who in their hearts are ashamed of the Word of God, and give evidence of that shame by failing to take a stand in support of the truth. R3777:1

The Word of God is not merely the Bible, but it includes sermons, tracts, books, etc., in proportion as they contain and truly represent the message of God's dear Son. R3777:4

The Son of man -- The seed of Adam, through Eve; the Son of the Man. E152, 153; R944:1

Be ashamed -- Not fit for the Kingdom. R2966:5, 5669:4, 4967:6, 4115:3, 3777:1

One must not, cannot, keep silence nor put their light under a bushel. If they do, it means the extinguishment of their light and the stoppage of their growth. R2966:5

Will not own them as members of his Bride Class. R4967:6

When he makes up his jewels (Mal. 3:17) at his second coming. E237

When he shall come -- In the Kingdom of God. C302

Of the holy angels -- "The Lord cometh with ten thousand of his saints." (Jude 14) C302

"The Son of man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels [the saints, his holy messengers] with him." (Matt. 25:31) C302

Luke 9:27

See the kingdom -- A prophecy which received almost immediate fulfillment. R1761:1

Little did the disciples imagine that our Lord's statement would be fulfilled within six days to Peter, James and John in the Mount of Transfiguration. R2288:3

He did not explain to them whether they would see the Kingdom in reality established in eight days, or whether they would see a vision of the Kingdom. R3793:2

Showing clearly that the transfiguration vision, eight days later, was intended to be a foreshadowing of the glories and honors of the Kingdom in some sense of the word. R3793:5

A vision of it, as explained in next nine verses. R3790:5, 1939:6, 1761:1

Luke 9:28

About an eight days -- Six days later; the eight counts the one in which this was uttered and the one in which it was fulfilled. R2659:1

Peter and John and James -- The Lord showed distinctly his appreciation of the warm, ardent temperament of these three in the fact that they were his closest companions. F135

The three most advanced of the Lord's followers. So since then, it is the most advanced followers, the most humble, zealous and faithful, who are granted the clearest perceptions of the Kingdom, to reveal to others of the elect Little Flock. R3794:2, 2659:1

If we would be closest to the Master and most frequently privileged to have fellowship with him, we should have a similar earnest and zealous spirit. R2289:3

The three favorite disciples who accompanied the Lord on this occasion and had also done so on several other occasions. R2289:2

Representatives of the twelve. R3793:6

Into a mountain -- Presumably Mount Hermon. R3793:2

Type of the Kingdom. A318

To pray -- From a comparison of the accounts some have surmised that possibly the Lord and the apostles remained in the mountain all night, as Jesus sometimes did. R3793:2

Luke 9:29

As he prayed -- The "vision" came in answer to the Lord's prayer. R1761:4

So all those who seek God in prayer may, to a large extent, with the eye of faith realize this same blessed vision of the Kingdom. R2660:1

Countenance was altered -- Not changed actually. The change from human to divine began at his baptism, but did not actually occur until three days after Calvary, when he was raised from the dead by the glory of the Father. R3793:6, 2659:5

White and glistering -- Radiant like the sun, as in Rev. 1:14-16. R3794:4

After the manner of angels, the vision thus representing the Lord after having experienced his resurrection change from earthly to heavenly conditions. R5121:2

Representing him as no longer the man Christ Jesus, but the risen, glorified, Son of the Highest. R2659:4

Representing the "Glory to follow" (1 Pet. 1:11), when the sufferings are all complete. B20; R1761:2

Luke 9:30

There talked -- Probably while the disciples were asleep and, therefore, specially for his own comfort. R1761:4

With him -- The central figure of the vision was Jesus himself. Moses and Elias were merely accessories to fill out the picture. R3793:5

The object of the "vision" was probably two-fold: for the comfort and strengthening of the Lord; and for the enlightenment of his chosen witnesses. R1761:4

Moses and Elias -- They appeared to be present, but they were not actually present, because it was merely a "vision." R2659:5, 2288:3, 1761:2
Moses represented the faithful of natural Israel, the "house of servants," and Elijah represented The Christ in the flesh, the "house of sons." The glorified one stood between the Moses class, called previously, and the Elijah class, which had just begun to be called. R5121:5, 3794:3, 2659:4, 2289:1, 1761:2

Representing the Law and the Prophets. Moses spoke of the sufferings of Christ in all the arrangements of the Law, its sacrifices, etc., and the prophets declare not only the coming glories, but also the sufferings which must precede them. R2659:3

These two, like Jesus, had each fasted forty days: thus, representatively, they were one with the Lord in a remarkable devotion to the heavenly Father--in the practice of self-denial. R3794:3

A figure of Moses, representing the Ancient Worthies. F677; B20; R3794:3,4, 2659:4, 2289:1

A figure of Moses, representing the earthly phase of the Kingdom. R1761:2, 2289:2

A figure of Moses, representing the Mosaic or Law dispensation. B255; R5772:4, 3794:3

Jesus and the Church, spiritual Israel, their spiritual resurrection shown by Moses' hidden grave. R4054:4; D629

A figure of Elijah, representing the Gospel age Church. R3794:3; F677; B20, 252; R2659:4, 2289:1

A figure of Elijah, representing a united work of Christ and the Church. B255

A figure of Elijah, representing the spiritual or heavenly phase of the Kingdom. A288; R1761:2

A figure of Elijah, representing the Gospel or Christian dispensation. B255; R5772:4

Luke 9:31

Appeared in glory -- It was only an appearance, because Christ was the firstborn from the dead, and neither Moses nor Elias is as yet "made perfect." (Heb. 11:40) R2659:5, 1761:2; Q761:3; F676

A picture of the glory of the Kingdom. R2659:2

Radiant, but less so than Jesus. R5121:2

Spake of his decease -- Intended for the ears of the disciples to convince them that the matters which should occur before long on Mount Calvary would all be features of the divine plan. R2659:3

Intending to assure the apostles respecting the certainty of the Kingdom, notwithstanding the apparent failure of all Kingdom hopes in our Lord's crucifixion. R2659:2

Drawing their minds gradually to a realization that his death would not mean a repudiation of the promise of the Kingdom and its glory. R5121:1
There could have been no Kingdom glory without the redemptive work. But this vision portrays the Kingdom glories which will ultimately result from our Lord's death. R2289:1

Not only the ancient ones trusted in a sacrifice to come, but the Gospel Church trusts in the sacrifice already accomplished for her, and there is a full communion of fellowship between the two. R3794:4

Illustrating how the death of Christ was fully attested beforehand. Moses spoke of it in the sacrifices of the Law, and all the Prophets declared it and the coming glories. (Luke 24:25-27) R2659:3

Luke 9:32

Peter and they -- In this tableau, the three disciples formed no part. They were merely witnesses. R2288:6

They saw -- So far as the apostles were concerned, what they saw was so actual, so real, that they supposed the whole matter actual. Our assurance that the transfiguration was a vision is in our Lord's words, "Tell the vision to no man." (Matt. 17:9) R3793:3, 1761:1

A vision was just as useful to the purpose as a reality could have been. R2659:5

In this vision, as in all visions, the unreal appears real. R2288:3

His glory -- The "vision" was a vivid and refreshing symbolic view of the Kingdom, but without the "sure word of prophecy" (2 Pet. 1:19), it would have been unintelligible. R1761:4

Luke 9:33

Make three tabernacles -- Evidently thinking that the Master would be rejoiced at such blessed fellowship, and willing to do anything for his aid. R5121:2

We cannot build tabernacles on the mountain heights of faith and hope, and expect to dwell there in enraptured vision always. We must remember that the duties and trials of present experiences in conflict with sin and self and the Adversary are essential to our development and part of our covenant. R2660:1,4

How many there are who, Peter-like, want to be doing something, want to be rearing earthly tabernacles. All about us we see the disposition to rear costly temples of an earthly kind to the Lord, and a neglect of the vision in its real meaning. R3795:1

Not knowing what he said -- He was bewildered and confused, but in harmony with his natural temperament, he wished to say something. R2289:3 Peter's rash expression found a reproof in the voice from heaven which said, "Hear ye him." And fear fell upon the disciples. R2289:4

There came a cloud -- A misty cloud of light, saying to the apostles and to us, that glory will, in a considerable measure, be obscured for a time, so that you will see your Lord only with the eye of faith; though more or less cloudy, the cloud will nevertheless be bright unto those who look unto him. R2659:6

Representing the darkness and trouble which would be permitted to come upon the Lord's followers in the midst of all the trials of the dark days that were coming upon them in connection with Jesus' rejection by the Jews. R3794:5

And they feared -- Overpowered by the brilliancy of the vision; so we, in our weak and imperfect conditions, sometimes find it difficult to grasp the glorious things which God hath set before us. R3794:6

Not only is the fear of the Lord valuable as a beginning of true wisdom, but it is valuable all our journey through. R2289:4

The fear which we are to lose entirely is the "fear of man which bringeth a snare." (Prov. 29:25) He who loses the fear of God and of losing the great prize is in a very dangerous position. He is likely to become self-conscious and self-satisfied. R2289:5 One account shows that it was necessary for the Lord to touch the apostles, saying, "Arise, and be not afraid." (Matt. 17:7) R3793:3

Representing our fears lest we should fail in the great undertaking.
R3794:6

Luke 9:35

There came a voice -- The voice of God. R2659:6

"This voice which came from heaven we heard when we were with him in the holy mount. (2 Pet. 1:18) B255; R5121:1, 4649:3, 1761:1

This is my beloved Son -- Their faith was corroborated; God himself had testified in this miraculous manner that Jesus was his Son. R5121:3

At his birth the heavenly messengers announced him; at his baptism the heavenly voice declared him the acceptable Son of God, and here it is reiterated. R1761:5

Jesus was the first Son of God after Adam; and since our Lord's time, the Church have been called sons of God. (1 John 3:2) R5623:5

Hear him -- The voice seemed to say, Be still! hearken rather to the words of my beloved Son. Not a few need to learn the lesson of quietness --to hear and learn, be taught of God. R2289:3

Hear and obey his word. All through the Gospel age, we will have great need to continually hearken to the Word of the Lord. R2659:6

We have taken the first step of belief; we have taken the second step of response, and agreed to do these things; the important question with each of us, therefore, must be--Am I obedient? R3163:6

Continually hearken to the Word of the Lord, the very essence of wisdom and righteousness. R2659:6, 3163:6

"My sheep hear my voice." (John 10:27) R3346:5

"Let every man be swift to hear, slow to speak." (James 1:19) R2289:4

Luke 9:36

Was found alone -- Only Jesus with them, no longer with radiant appearance. R5121:2, 4649:3, 1761:5

The vision, the voice and the cloud had all passed away, while the lessons of that solemn hour remained to gain a yet broader significance after Pentecost. R1761:5

Which they had seen -- A symbolic representation of the glory of Christ's Millennial Kingdom. R1761:1

Luke 9:46

Should be greatest -- A question naturally suggested by the Lord's selection of the three to witness the experiences on the Mount of Transfiguration. R1766:2

While the humility of the Lord's apostles is very marked in their subsequent career, in the beginning of their course they were all to some extent influenced by old ideas which it was the object of Christ's teaching gradually to eradicate. R1766:2

To aspire to advancement for self-glory or self-gratification, to desire personal preferment above others, is contrary to the spirit of God's plan, which is love. R875:4*

It would be the very height of presumption on the part of any human being, as it was on the part of Satan, to aspire to the divine nature if we were not invited to that position by God himself. R875:2*

We have no intimation that either Jesus, or any of the angels that kept their first estate, ever aspired to anything beyond that sphere to which divine wisdom had appointed them. R875:1*

It was to ambition that Satan tempted Eve, saying, "God doth know that in the day that ye eat thereof, your eyes shall be opened, and ye shall be as gods." (Gen. 3:5) R875:1* 9:47

And Jesus -- Avoiding personalities, as it is always best to do wherever possible. R3796:2

Took a child -- The special characteristics of a little child are: simplicity of heart, meekness, truthfulness, freedom from ambition and rivalry, faith, confiding trust, love, obedience, teachableness, indifference to social distinctions and popular opinions, guilelessness. R1766:6, 3796:4

Luke 9:48

And said unto them -- His manner is impressive and solemn, as though he would say, I want you to take this lesson to heart and ponder it well. R1766:6

Receive this child -- Recognize, and show kindness to the least and humblest of God's children. R1767:4

If we would be pleasing to God, we must have the spirit of a little child with regard to others--an unselfish, guileless spirit, full of love and without hypocrisy. R875:4*

Receiving such disciples as have this childlike character. R3797:2

In my name -- Because he is mine. R1767:4

He that is least -- Not only a warning to the individual seeking preferment in the Church, but also an instruction to the Church to accept as its honored servants only such as he describes. R875:4* Jesus was a perfect illustration of humbling himself; first, to become a man; and then when a man, to become obedient unto death. R875:1*

Shall be great -- Not by any arbitrary law of retribution, but on the philosophical principle that humility leads to greatness. R1767:2

Will be most honored. Humility and child-likeness among the brethren now should be considered a mark of true greatness. R3796:5

Luke 9:49

We forbid him -- This one forbidden by John would correspond well with some now holding meetings other than those which we attend. R5501:3

Followeth not with us -- In the school of Christ there are various classes. Their exercise and instruction is under the direction of the principal teacher, Christ, who will lead each class as it may be able and willing to advance. R226:3

Luke 9:50

Forbid him not -- Conscience is always to be respected, never to be throttled or violated. Nor is any one who stands faithful to his conscience to be disesteemed therefor by his brethren, even if their consciences view the matter differently. R5501:6

Where brethren find it advantageous to meet in different classes, it will usually be found, we believe, that originally too great restraint of personal liberty was exercised, and that the majority were too careless of the sentiments of the brethren constituting the minority. R5502:1

It is for the Lord to bless them or not to bless them, according to his wisdom. R5501:3

Is for us -- We should love and wish Godspeed to all who love the Lord and manifest his Spirit, whether they associate with us or not. R3747:1

Luke 9:51

Steadfastly set his face -- He knew his hour was come, that his sacrificial life of three and a half years should be accomplished. He was full of courage. "But of the people there were none with him" in the sense of sympathetic appreciation of the conditions. (Isa. 63:3) R4701:3

Luke 9:52

Of the Samaritans -- Of mixed blood, Jewish and Gentile. They were counted by the Jews as though they were Gentiles; hence "the Jews had no dealings with the Samaritans." (John 4:9) R2960:3

Could not receive special blessings until the seventy weeks of favor to the Jews was ended. R4132:3

To make ready -- Another account intimates that James and John visited the Samaritan city for the purchase of bread and supplies. R4701:3

Luke 9:53

Did not receive him -- Or permit him to pass through their city on his journey. R2574:2

In contrast with the Samaritan city of Sychar, where he was received and stayed for two days. (John 4:19-29) R4132:2

Refused to sell the disciples food. R4132:3, 5698:6, 4540:4, 2960:3; CR480:3

Would go to Jerusalem -- Would the Great Teacher recognize them and heal their sickness, or would he treat them as Jews generally treated them--unkindly? They believed the latter. R4701:6

Luke 9:54

And John -- Nevertheless this earnest, active disciple was specially loved of the Master, and doubtless he himself was very loving. NS818:1

We command fire -- Said in their zeal, but not according to knowledge. R2289:2

Let the brethren of exuberant and effervescent disposition learn the moderation which the Apostle commanded. F135

In comparison with eternal torture, this proposal of burning up the city, and incidentally burning them for a few minutes, would be as nothing.

R4702:1; NS839:1

So there are some today who are ready to quarrel on every occasion.

Although this tendency does not prove that they are not children of the Lord, nevertheless it demonstrates that they are not in the right attitude and that improvement is necessary. R5699:1

Reminiscent of the translators who translate John 5:28,29 as the "resurrection of damnation," instead of "judgment." NS315:4

An illustration of what an impulsive temperament may lead to; yet these were specially close to the Lord in the Mount of Transfiguration, at the raising of Jairus' daughter, and in Gethsemane's garden. F135

The same delusion caused men to be burned at the stake, and put through torture, in the name of Jesus. CR480:3

Luke 9:55

What manner of spirit -- They had not yet realized what is the spirit of a true disciple. It was therefore no wonder that they did things contrary to the Lord's spirit. CR495:2; OV433:4

They had a vengeful spirit, contrary to the loving kindness and tender mercy of God who planned the salvation of mankind. CR480:4

Luke 9:56

Destroy men's lives -- Greek, psuche, souls, beings. E336

"For God sent not his Son into the world to condemn the world." (John 3:17) A255

A guide for all the Lord's followers for today, as well as before. We are not to render evil for evil or slander for slander; but, contrariwise, to speak kindly, lovingly and generously of those who say all manner of evil against us falsely for Christ's sake. R4540:4

God's work in Christ was not to sacrifice the world, but to save it. R539:1*

But to save them -- Jesus had the Father's spirit; his teaching was sympathetic, loving, kind. R4702:1

Thank God for the coming Kingdom and its righteous judgments and assistances. R3320:5

Nevertheless, we remember that Jesus would not perform miracles in healing the Samaritan sick, and that it was for this reason that the Samaritans resented and would not receive him. R2574:2

The first work of the Savior is the redemptive work of Calvary. His second work is the selection of his Church to be joint-heirs in the Kingdom. His third work will be the saving of Adam and all his race from sin and death. R4702:4

Luke 9:57

I will follow thee -- Evidently with the thought that one so gifted and so well supplied with the necessities of life must be wealthy. R5370:6

Luke 9:58

Hath not where -- That is to say, Are you willing, if need be, to be thus homeless and comfortless that thereby you may render greater service to our Heavenly Father? R540:3*

Apparently his ardor was cooled when Jesus informed him that he had no property. None but the very sincere would likely be attracted to follow a leader under such circumstances. Wealth attracts many, poverty few. R5370:6

Luke 9:59

Suffer me first -- As honey was forbidden in sacrifice, so whatever is sweet to nature must be disowned, if we would walk after the example of Christ, who pleased not himself. R84:6*

Bury my father -- After my father's death I will come and be one of your disciples. While the old gentlemen lives I had better stay with him, but after he is dead I will become one of your disciples. Q217:1

Luke 9:60

Let the dead -- The whole world is already dead from the divine standpoint. R5371:1; Q287:4

His father, not being united to the Life-giver, and still therefore under the curse of death as the wages of sin, would find plenty of others similarly dead in Adam to perform the necessary services down to the very last. HG357:4

"The hour is coming and now is when the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God." (John 5:25) R2435:1

Bury their dead -- Not that our Lord required the disciple to absent himself from the funeral of his own father; but the young man probably thought to leave the Lord's service and serve his father until his death. In doing this, other business or pleasure would crowd upon him, and he might never return to the higher service. R1987:1

There are plenty in the world who can attend to the earthly things; few who can attend to the greater and more important work of proclaiming the Kingdom and gathering the Kingdom class. R5371:1

But go thou -- The young man should consider himself as figuratively risen from the dead, as no longer one of those dead in trespasses and sins. HG357:4

As one figuratively risen from the dead and alive through faith in Christ, and hoping to have that life perfected in the First Resurrection, should live and act in all the affairs of life from this new standpoint. HG357:4

Preach the kingdom -- The sum and substance of the Gospel theme. R1579:3, 1351:3, 702:2*

Most of God's people grasp earthly reforms and push them, instead of prosecuting the work for the promised but deferred and unseen Kingdom. R1227:5

Jesus' reply shows the importance he attaches to every service we can render in the Father's cause. R5371:1

The present embryo Kingdom in its humiliation, and the Kingdom to be established in power and glory. R1579:3

Luke 9:61

Bid them farewell -- Spend a little time with them. R5371:2

Luke 9:62

And Jesus said -- It was not heartlessness on Jesus' part that suggested this answer. R5371:2

Having put -- We should make up our mind to use all of our powers, or else stand aside. R5422:5

Hand to the plough -- The Lord counsels those who would come to him to "first count the cost." (Luke 14:28) R854:3, 5223:2, 2081:4*; SM390:1
The consecration, the covenant, the promise, will avail nothing if we prove unfaithful to it. R2154:5

And looking back -- Through fear that the Lord is abandoning him in trial, or through unwillingness to longer submit to polishing. R2405:2

It would be better not to take up the cross unless we have the determination to go on unto the end. R5223:2

We are to have no thought of turning back. SM347:T; R1775:4 "If any man draw back, my soul shall have no pleasure in him." (Heb. 10:38) R1775:4, R2081:4*

"Remember Lot's wife." (Luke 17:32) C194

Preferring the world. R854:3

Holding back the word of truth. R3211:2

"Better is it that thou shouldst not vow, than that thou shouldst vow and not pay." (Eccles. 5:5) R2154:5

Regretting your consecration, and desiring to be excused from faithful service as the Lord's steward. R819:3

Looking back regretfully, desiring to abandon the plow, and really doing it. NS746:1

In the sense of declining to go forward, in harmony with the consecration of their lives, unto death. NS746:1

Do not think of reconsidering the question of consecration now. R935:5*

"Sit down first and count the cost," before you undertake such a consecration of your life, such a sacrifice of your earthly interests.

(Luke 14:28) SM390:1; R5223:2

Day by day, week by week, month by month, we are to carry out the terms of our covenant. We are to have no thought of turning back. SM347:T

To look back is one step, and a long one, towards ignoring and breaking our covenant. It is the first step in unrighteousness, and if not quickly retraced, it will sooner or later lead to darkness and apostasy. R947:1

To even look back longingly at the things of the present time, to even in their hearts rue the sacrifice which they had made, would mean that they would be unworthy of a place in the Kingdom. NS308:4

Looking back at the things behind prepares the way for turning back, and makes onward progress in the narrow way more and more difficult, and finally impossible. R955:5*

It is not enough that we have consecrated ourselves to God as living sacrifices; that we have covenanted to follow in the footsteps of Jesus; for the consecration and covenant will avail nothing if we prove unfaithful to them. R2154:5

"If any man draw back, my soul shall have no pleasure in him." The Apostle Paul shows that some, at least, will draw back unto perdition, destruction. (Heb. 10:38,39) R2081:4*

However difficult and thorny the path may be, forget not the privilege of walking in it. We may not repine and wish it otherwise. R1263:4

When, in answer to our inquiring prayer, "What lack I yet?", the Lord applies some test to prove our standing before him, let us bravely determine that, by his grace, we will not draw back. R1775:4

This class must be thoroughly imbued with a zeal for God and for righteousness, else they will not be persevering enough, nor zealous enough, to fight the good fight of faith, and overcome. R3236:1

Many not only are looking back and making special provisions for the social amenities of life, but additionally are plunging into many of the luxuries, pleasures and frivolities of the world. R5371:2

Is fit -- There is one certain standard of fitness for the Kingdom; but there may be quite a variety of conditions which make one unfit for the Kingdom. (Article describes three--murder, drunkenness and pride--in detail). NS745:2

Not fit to be of the Bride class, whatever else they may be fit for. R3211:2, 819:6; SM390:1

It would unfit you for the world, and you would not be fit for the Kingdom of heaven. R854:3

It would be better not to take up the cross unless we have the determination to go on unto the end. R5223:2

We may require much more trimming on some sides of our characters than on others. The disposition often is to "draw back," to be not fully submissive. But to draw back would leave us unfit for the Kingdom. R2405:2

To be fit, such must have a zeal for righteousness, a conception of what God has in reservation, and an appreciation of Kingdom privileges. R3236:1
Must be absorbed with interest in the Kingdom blessings and in conferring blessings upon others. R5371:4

Only the saints are fit. R3507:1

Fit for a place with himself in that glorious Messianic empire. R5371:4

The kingdom of God -- Not the Millennial reign, nor the perfect Kingdom as it will be turned over to the Father at the end of the Millennium, but the Church class, now called of the Father to be the "Kingdom," in the sense of being the kings and priests of that Kingdom. NS744:3

Our Lord could not refer to the Millennial Kingdom, because that Kingdom is designed for the very purpose of dealing with the unfit and gradually uplifting them out of sin and death conditions. NS744:4

Luke 10

Luke 10:1

After these things -- Our Lord had previously sent forth the twelve apostles. The sending forth of the seventy was evidently some little time afterward, probably in the last year of his ministry. R2674:1

The harvest work during the three and a half years of our Lord's ministry seems to have been crowded chiefly into the last nine months of that period. R3346:2

As the principal part of the Lord's work at the first advent was crowded into the closing six months, so we anticipate that the principal work of the present harvest will be crowded into the last six years. R3347:4

The Lord appointed -- Ordination does not relate to a ceremony, or form, as many suppose. It signifies an authorization, a commission to preach. R5362:6

Not to be apostles, but to be general ministers, or missionaries. R5363:1
Partakers of the pre-anointing that had already come upon their Master. Although this anointing did not come directly upon them until Pentecost, they had a foretaste of it when the Lord conferred upon them a share of his spirit, power, when he sent them out to preach. F212

Other seventy -- Representatives of a much larger company of deeply interested ones. R2674:1

Undoubtedly a part of the "five hundred brethren" mentioned by the Apostle as having seen our Lord after his resurrection. (1 Cor. 15:6) R3346:3

As the twelve apostles corresponded to the twelve tribes of Israel, so the seventy evangelists corresponded to the seventy elders of Israel appointed by Moses in the wilderness, afterward represented in the Jewish Sanhedrin. R3346:3

The honor and privilege passing by those of influence and education who might have enjoyed it had they been worthy--the seventy members of the Sanhedrin. R2674:5

They represented all the elders or leaders amongst God's people today. R3346:3

Ready to send as many more as might become ready. R1742:3

Also -- Not apostles in the special sense, but additional to the twelve apostles, they were evangelists. R3346:3

Typified by the seventy palm trees at Elim. R4011:2

If the Jewish nation had been in a proper condition of heart, the 70 members of the Sanhedrin would by that time have been proclaiming the Messiah throughout the length and breadth of Palestine. R2674:5

Sent them -- Across Jordan into the district known as Perea. R5369:2

On a work of service, not lordship. F212

Under his direction and supervision. R1742:3

Two and two -- Similarly we, at the present time, encourage the colporteurs to go two and two, for mutual encouragement and helpfulness.

"So when two work together, each for each, is quick to plan and can the other teach." R2674:4

As advance missionaries to proclaim the Kingdom of God. R3346:2

He himself would come -- They were to prepare the people for the later arrival of Jesus in the various cities of Israel east of the Jordan.

R3346:3

Luke 10:2

Said he unto them -- Their commission reads almost in the same words as that given to the twelve, though they are not recognized anywhere as apostles, on an equality with the twelve. R2674:1, 1521:5

During our Lord's ministry the work of the apostles differed nothing from that of the "seventy," nor were there labors any more signally blessed; yet they were more directly and continually under his training and the chosen witnesses of every remarkable feature and event of his course. R1522:3

The harvest -- The Lord designated the end of the Jewish age as the "harvest" time for the reaping of the wheat of that people; a figure, type or foreshadowing of the harvest time in the end of this Gospel age. R3346:6

Truly is great -- Not necessarily that the amount of ripe "wheat" to be garnered is great. It means rather, that the difficulties and oppositions, and multitudes of "tares," make it difficult to reach all of the "wheat" class. The work is great. R2674:2

The harvest there, so far as Jesus was concerned, was the gathering in of 500 brethren, but that was not all of the Jewish harvest, more were gathered later. Q319:6

Relatively--there is a great work to do in comparison with the few that are ready and willing to do it. Q319:6

Sympathizingly drawing the attention of the believers of that time to the ripeness of the conditions around them. R3346:6

And so it is today. As we look all about us we see nominal Christendom like a great wheat field, ripe and ready for the reaping. R3346:6

So now, do not expect that the harvest work here will include millions, but a considerable number, and in my judgment there is yet a great work to be done. Q319:6

Labourers are few -- Too few to properly consummate the work in the time appointed of the Father. R2674:1; Q319:6

We have more opportunities for using unencumbered brethren, filled with the Spirit, than ever before. R5200:2

The Lord is opening up the use of worldly newspapers and sending them to millions of people. Why? There are not enough reapers. Q320:1

Pray ye therefore -- While praying, ask yourself, What can I do? If he has a work going on you want to get your share, so with everyone. Q320:1 Pray to the Lord to send them forth into his service, or if already engaged in it, that he would graciously open to them doors of opportunity for greater usefulness in his service. R2674:2

Apparently it was those who prayed who consecrated themselves to this service, this evangelistic ministry. R3346:6

It is not supposable that our Lord meant that any should appeal to him to send forth more laborers who, at the same time, would not be willing and anxious, to the extent of their ability, to enter the harvest service themselves. R2674:3

We may be sure that those who are most earnestly sympathetic and most earnestly praying are those who are most earnestly laboring in this harvest. R3347:1

Lord of the harvest -- None could engage in the service unless they were sent forth by him--the Lord of the harvest. R3347:1

That age ended with a harvest, in which Jesus in the flesh was the reaper, the disciples being the assistant reapers, under his direction. Our age also ends with a harvest, of a spiritual house, in which Jesus a spiritual body is the reaper, while the angels, also spiritual bodies, are the assistants. R175:5

Send forth labourers -- All of the Lord's faithful ones at the end of the Jewish age were to recognize the great privilege of being engaged in the harvest work, and the same must be true now. R5363:4

The Lord is sending forth more laborers continually; yet only such as recognize the Kingdom as nigh, the parousia of the King, have the zeal to tell the joyful tidings to others. R2674:3

Into his harvest -- The harvesting of the Jewish Age did not close with AD 70, and we know of no time limit here. R5950:6, 5951:1

At one time we supposed that the harvest work would be fully accomplished with the ending of Gentile Times. That was merely a supposition; the gathering in of the ripe grain has been progressing since 1914 as never before. Ci; R5950:6

Luke 10:3

Go your ways -- The fact that seventy men would voluntarily go forth as ministers of the Lord, without hope of earthly reward or salary, is sufficient evidence that a strong influence had already been exerted by Jesus' teaching. R2674:1

I send you -- Harvest workers acceptable to the Lord are fully consecrated to him. Other cannot expect the same success and blessing as such. Thus we find unbelievers--book agents and book stores--are not successful in handling our publications. R3347:2

Now, as then, we cannot hope that any would succeed in doing harvest work unless specially commissioned or sent forth by the Chief Reaper. R2674:2

As lambs -- Gentle, inoffensive. R5363:4

Innocent and almost helpless creatures, harmless. R3347:2

Among wolves -- Jews, Israelites, nominally God's favored people for centuries--now ravenous, destructive, selfish. R3347:2

The self-righteous, Sabbath-keeping, street-corner praying, tithe-giving scribes and Pharisees, who had the form of godliness, but not the power of it in their hearts and lives. R3347:3

The selfish, unregenerate world. R5363:4

Should the sheep suffer at their hands, we may be sure it will not be permitted until the due time. It will not be permitted to interfere with the harvest work, and none can be seriously molested except by permission of the Chief Reaper. R3347:4

Consecrated to self and selfishness, sect and party. R2674:6

Nominal Christendom of today is likewise wolflike. R3347:3

Luke 10:4

Carry neither purse -- Special instructions were given to these special sent-forth ones. They had a peculiar work to do and the conditions accorded. They were not, therefore, a criterion for subsequent workers under different circumstances. R2674:6

Both testing the faith of those who went forth, keeping them continually dependent upon the Lord's supervising care; and furnishing an opportunity for hospitality to those to whom they preached. R2674:6

Depending wholly upon the Lord and making no attempt to provide for their needs, Later, Jesus sent forth his disciples, telling them to provide for their wants to the best of their ability. R5363:4

These evangelists were not to take up any collections. R3347:5

Similarly the pilgrim brothers go from place to place taking no collections. The same is true of the colporteurs. Although the message is sold for a price, that price is no more than the seventy received when they went from place to place. R3347:5

Nor shoes -- Their journey was to be quickly made and all attention was to be given to their missionary duties. They were not to attempt to make themselves specially comfortable. R3347:5

Extra shoes; house shoes or slippers. R2674:6, 3347:4

Salute no man -- Not that they might not say "Good morning," but that they were not to follow the custom of their times of stopping by the way to discuss whatever matter of news might be carried from one village to another. R3347:5, 2675:1; Q618:3

We have no time for ordinary converse; the time is short; the harvest work is great; the laborers are few; our time is consecrated; we must work while it is called day. R2675:2

Less time should be spent in news reading and gossip. Q618:3

What time have we for frivolities or worldliness or the many social amenities? R2675:2; Q618:3

Luke 10:5

Whatsoever house -- Their message was to be a house to house message, and not a public one, not given in the streets or in the public squares. R5979:3

Inquiring for the most worthy people in every village. R5363:4

Peace be -- Wherever the Lord's representatives go peace should go, not strife, contention, turmoil or quarreling. R3347:6

How few, comparatively, have learned how to speak the truth in love; and always to give a soft answer which turneth away wrath; and always to avoid the grievous words which stir up anger. R2675:2

Upon entering any house, our thought should be to do good, to carry blessing, to exercise an influence favorable to the peace, joy and uplift of those within. R5980:2, 3348:1

The Lord's people should be peacemakers, peace-promoters, peace-lovers.
R2675:2, 5979:6, 5980:2

The heart-sentiment of every one of the Lord's people, that peace and blessing may accompany them wherever they go. R3484:3

"So far as lieth in you live peaceably with all men." (Rom. 12:18)
R3348:1, 5980:2

It is not the great time of trouble that constitutes our message, but a message of peace. R5979:6

It was a custom in Palestine 19 centuries ago to salute a house thus.
R2675:2

This form of salutation sounds rather peculiar to us; for it is not our custom to use this style of greetings. But it is still customary in Eastern countries to salute one another thus. R5979:3

This salutation was to prove a test to the people. R5979:5

Luke 10:6

The son of peace -- A child of God. R2675:1

If we find one having the same spirit of the Lord we should rejoice to meet him as a brother and communicate to him the harvest message as he might have ears to hear it. Thus a blessing would be his. R3348:2

Turn to you again -- Our Lord would not have us violate courtesy by imposing ourselves or our teachings upon those who are unappreciative.
R3348:2, 5980:3

Luke 10:7

Remain, eating -- They were to find those in Israel who would have an ear for God's message then due to be presented--the "Israelites indeed."
These would gladly entertain them free of charge. R5979:2

Today conditions are different. With us it is much better to take some tracts, or to sell literature at a moderate price, which will stir up their interest and fix it. R5979:6

As they give -- Not considering these hospitalities in the light of alms; for as the Lord's representatives they were to confer blessings greater far than they would receive; and even as common laborers the service they rendered should be worth at least their keep. R5980:3, 3348:2, 449:5*

The Lord's true people should be on the lookout to entertain hospitably any servants of the Lord, who they are sure carry his message; and just as careful not to entertain, assist, or bid Godspeed to any who are bearing a false gospel, denying that the Lord bought us. (2 John 10) R2675:3

Worthy of his hire -- Our hire is, in this present life, difficulties and sacrifices as respects earthly things; but the divine favor and blessing upon our hearts, and our faith and hope beyond the veil constitute the chief elements of our wage. NS489:3

The necessities of life in exchange for the spiritual blessings bestowed.
R2261:5

Even the strongest statements of Scripture refer not to princely salaries, but to bare necessities. F287

If the labor is desired and accepted, it is equivalent to hire. R449:5*

These instructions, afterwards changed by the Lord, are not applicable to the present time. R2500:2, 5363:4

Later, Jesus sent forth his disciples, telling them to provide for their wants to the best of their ability. R5363:4

Subsequently the apostles acted very differently. The Apostle Paul, for instance, made tents; and their change of course was under the Lord's direction. (See Luke 22:35,36.) R2500:2

Go not -- Not to change from house to house during their stay in the place. R5979:5

From house to house -- As beggars, to get a meal here, a lodging there.
R5980:3, 3348:2

Luke 10:8

Into whatsoever city -- The same principle was to apply, not only to a house, but to a city. R3348:2

They receive you -- Inquire for the most worthy people in the village;
if received, remain there until having given a witness in that village.
R5363:4

Luke 10:9

Heal the sick -- The Master's spirit was given to them in such measure that they were enabled to do as he did--heal the sick, etc. R5363:4

Their commission was one of service--they were to serve one another, to serve the Lord, and to lay down their lives for their brethren. These services were to be rendered specially in connection with the promulgation of the Gospel. F212

Might at first appear applicable to the Jewish harvest only; but not so.

There is spiritual as well as physical sickness, and the Lord's ambassadors today should consider it their business to open blind eyes, unstop deaf ears, and assist the spiritually sick by pouring the balm of Gilead upon bruised and broken hearts. R5980:4, 5363:4, 3348:2

We are not to understand that there is such an authorization of the Lord's people today. R5363:4

We are to help others out of soul-sickness by administering the good medicine of the present truth. R2675:6

The kingdom of God -- The hope of every Israelite. A273

This announcement has not been proper all through the age, but has been appropriate merely in the ends, or harvests, of the two ages. R5980:4

It is not the great time of trouble that constitutes our message. The time of trouble, if referred to at all, should be mentioned only as a necessary accompaniment of the change of dispensation. R5979:6

Is come nigh -- The Kingdom of God would be so different from what was expected. The Kingdom of God would be a spiritual one. All who would be its members would be spirit beings, as invisible to mankind as are the angels at the present time. NS100:6

The Jews had been waiting for the coming of Messiah and the establishment of the Kingdom for many centuries. NS100:5

In its glory and completeness now, as, at the time of the Jewish harvest, it was at hand in its embryo condition. R1742:3

It is this message which was the test of natural Israel and is now the test of spiritual Israel. C136

Peter's suggestion to return to fishing after Jesus' crucifixion was because he did not then see how he could continue the message. B117

Luke 10:10

Go your ways out -- The message is not now for the swinish, quarrelsome, selfish and wicked. R5980:1

And say -- Peradventure they found no entertainer in the village, they were, nevertheless, to give their testimony. R2675:1

Luke 10:11

We do wipe off -- To the Oriental mind, a very solemn and final testimony. R2675:1

If, as the Lord's ministers, we should be rebuffed and disdained, not welcomed, we should be careful not to intrude ourselves further, hastening away to find those whose hearts are hungry for the Word of grace. R5980:2, 3348:1

To leave the place, figuratively shaking the dust of that city from their feet. R5979:5

Is come nigh -- The Israelites had been waiting for it many centuries. R5363:5

Luke 10:12

More tolerable -- More favorable for them to fall in line with the Lord's gracious arrangements. R3349:4

In that day -- The Millennial day. R3348:5

The terms of the Millennial age will be equally open to all mankind, but all mankind will not be in equal readiness to profit by those blessed conditions of the kingdom. It is a law of nature that a blessing, once despised, and truth, once rejected, is on that account more difficult to be grasped if offered again. R3349:1

For Sodom -- Degraded ones who never heard of the grace of God, never tasted divine favors, never witnessed divine healings, nor were taught of the Lord. R3348:5

Because its sin was against less light and privilege. R5363:6

The eternal fate of the Sodomites is not sealed. R5179:6

Than for that city -- Those who had such large favor and were not moved to repentance and obedience. R3348:4

Luke 10:13

Woe unto thee -- They rejected the privilege of becoming disciples and joint-heirs in the Kingdom. That will never be offered to them again. When next divine favor is exercised toward them it will be with the privilege of restitution to the human nature. R3348:6, 624:2

"That servant that knew his Lord's will and did it not shall be punished with many stripes." (Luke 12:47) R2612:2.

Chorazin -- The people of Bethsaida, Chorazin and Capernaum were regular attendants of the synagogues--decent people, having a form of godliness, but knowing little or nothing of its power. HG647:6

Tyre and Sidon -- Both of which then were in ruins, brought down to hades, down to the dust. R5363:5

All six cities mentioned are utterly destroyed, and their inhabitants all totally dead. R3348:4

Notoriously unholy, licentious, unclean cities. R2623:3

While ago repented -- Yet the worldly wise and prudent tell us that these poor sinners long ago passed into eternal torment. R2624:4

Luke 10:14

More tolerable -- Meaning that in the Millennium it will be favorable even for those who were not moved by the Lord's miracles to repentance; and still more tolerable for the heathen of Tyre and Sidon. R3348:5

If they will, they may then learn the lessons necessary and eventually attain everlasting life. But because of their greater privileges, the blessings they will enjoy in the future will be correspondingly curtailed. HG647:6

The Sodomites were not so great sinners in God's sight as were the Jews who had more knowledge. A110

Than for you -- Under Millennial arrangements conditions will be favorable or tolerable, even for those people who witnessed divine healings, or had opportunities of being taught of the Lord, or being accepted as disciples of Christ. R3348:5

Exalted to heaven -- Hyperbolically speaking. It was highly privileged in that it had our Lord as a resident for some time, enjoyed the privilege of his teaching, and witnessed many of his mighty works. E376; R2600:4

Thrust down -- The people of the cities of Galilee and of all Palestine were involved in the great time of trouble with which the Jewish age was wound up and that nation blotted out of existence as a nation. R3349:1

To hell -- Because of the misuse of God's favors, it would be debased, overthrown, destroyed. It is now so thoroughly buried in oblivion that even the site where it stood is a matter of dispute. R2600:4; E376
Greek, hades, oblivion, death, as a city. R2623:2; E376; R5363:5, 4557:1, 2600:4

Luke 10:16

He that heareth you -- These faithful members of Christ are in every Church and outside of every human system. PD88/102

Heareth me -- It should prompt us to feel the dignity of the smallest service rendered to the Lord's cause. It should banish fear of man and all feelings of weakness and trepidation. It should make us more dignified in manner, more earnest in service, as well as less careful of what man might say to us. Our whole concern would be that we might please him who hath chosen us. R3349:4

Despiseth you -- Demonstrating that a wrong condition of heart and mind prevailed. R3777:1

Despiseth me -- He who is ashamed of the brother or sister or tract or book by which God was pleased to send him the truth shows clearly that, had he lived in the days of our Lord's humiliation, he would have been ashamed of him and the humble men he chose and used to promulgate his Gospel in the beginning. R2026:2

In despising the brethren, they are despising the Lord, and not fit for the Kingdom. R3777:1

"Whosoever shall be ashamed of me, of him shall the Son of man be ashamed." (Luke 9:26) R3776:3

Nominal Christians are as much ashamed of him today as was natural Israel then. R3776:6

This is one of the great tests of our relationship to him and the Father. R3777:1

Him that sent me -- The Father. R5363:6

Luke 10:17

The seventy -- These all had the Lord's special love, fellowship and instruction. R2072:3*

Whom the Lord appointed to the ministry, though not to the apostleship.
R1521:6

Even the devils -- Those who deny the Scriptures say that these people were deceived and that our Lord was unscientific. Our holding is the reverse: that the Lord and the Apostles were scientific, and that the people of our day are deceived in supposing that there are no evil spirits. R4976:3

Apparently there were great numbers possessed throughout the land of Israel. R2173:2

Our Lord and the apostles had frequently cast out these evil spirits.
R5908:2

Some physicians say that more than half of those in insane asylums are obsessed by evil spirits. R4976:3

Are subject -- Their success in their work was as marked at that time as were the apostles in their work. R1521:6 Through thy name -- By the power of the spirit, Jesus had communicated to them. R5392:6

Luke 10:18

I beheld -- In his pre-human condition. R2675:3

Satan -- Whose very existence now is being denied by many. F609

It is for those who deny the personality of Satan and who deny that there are any fallen angels, to explain away these plain statements of Scripture. R2675:4

As lightning -- An angel of light. R1833:3

As a bright one. R2675:4

Spiritual bodies are represented as shining as the lightning. (Matt. 28:3; Dan. 10:6; 1 Cor. 15:8) HG25:5

Fall from heaven -- Fall from high glory, privilege and position to his present attitude of chief adversary of God. R2675:4

When all is complete Satan will fall from his present position as ruler "like lightning." This Jesus saw in vision. R519:1*

Luke 10:19

I give unto you power -- Confined to the twelve and the subsequent seventy, never given to the Church in general. The only text that seems to so imply is Mark 16:9 to the end, and these verses are not found in the oldest Greek manuscripts, and are evidently interpolations. R2675:5

Granting us the privilege of successfully contending against the great Adversary and his servants, and hindering us from being stung or "hurt" by their words, looks or deeds. R2675:6

Serpents and scorpions -- All enemies, but specially the enemy, Satan. R2675:5

Hurt you -- As new creatures in Christ. R5862:5, 2675:5
Surely anxiety would be a lack of faith, a lack of confidence, or else ignorance of the divine promises, character and arrangement. SM271:2

Luke 10:20

Rejoice not -- Cautioning them against thinking too highly of such miraculous gifts, assuring them that their chiefest cause of joy lay in another direction. R2675:5

They were overlooking their chief cause of joy. So with us, salvation is a personal matter, and works and preachings are merely incidentals connected with the work of personal salvation. R5369:2

In harmony with 1 Cor. 13:1, where Paul assures us that the miraculous gifts are not proofs of spirit-begotten conditions; that a greater proof is the possession of the spirit of the Lord, the spirit of love that never faileth. R2675:5

Written in heaven -- But we have no record to indicate that they were enrolled on earth. R1420:6, 1309:2

God's Church is separate from all human institutions. Only saintly persons, regardless of denominational lines, are members of the true Church. HG693:4

We belong to no earthly organization. We adhere only to the heavenly organization. All the saints now living, or that have lived during this age, belong to our church organization. R584:3

Some would have followed Jesus and have been willing to join his church, if he had one--but the Church He represented was bound together by the truths he taught. R213:5

As prospective joint-heirs with Christ in his Kingdom, prospective members of the Body of Christ. R2675:5

And not in any human organization called a church. R4033:1

They can be blotted out because of unfaithfulness. (Rev. 3:5) R1908:3

Our first work now is to prepare our own hearts and characters for divine approval that we may share in the glorious Kingdom work of the future. R5369:3

Luke 10:21

Rejoiced in spirit -- From the standpoint of the flesh he was in very unfavorable and uncongenial surroundings, but from the standpoint of his mind, his heart, he was in a very favorable condition. NS190:6

And said -- Prayer may be properly offered audibly, in the presence of fellow-believers. This prayer could not have been recorded if it had not been heard by the apostles. R2251:3, 2023:3

Hid these things -- In the sense of permitting it to come through unpopular channels. Sometimes the unpopularity is deserved and sometime undeserved, but it always serves to keep away those who are not in the right attitude of heart. R3483:2

This gracious plan which provides such wonderful future opportunities for the people of Tyre, Sidon and Sodom. R2624:4

The wise -- Their position in society and professionally has made them arrogant and self-conceited. From their standpoint the words of the Bible have become to them foolishness. As the Scriptures declare, the world by wisdom knows not God. R3328:4

The "remnant" which the Lord will own as his, will contain few of the chief priests, scribes, Pharisees--few of the clergy or great ones, more of the "laity"--those reckoned publicans and sinners in comparison with the "holier than thou" ministers and priests. R921:1

Their school will open by and by--during the Millennial reign of Christ and the Church, who will be their instructors. R2882:4

Among the Apostles, only Paul was before a theologian--a Pharisee. R921:4

The truth is not intended for the worldly-wise, proud or the dishonest. R2026:5

Some preachers and teachers hide the truth from the Lord's people, so they might use it for their own benefit; but such make little progress. R3138:4

And prudent -- Those who might preserve God's Word to themselves and dole it out second-hand to the church, either as a whole or such parts of it as in their judgment would be prudent. R3138:4

Prudence, as generally exercised by the world, has greatly hindered the truth always. It is better termed policy. We want none of it. R508:4

Unto babes -- Those who will utter it unreservedly. R508:4

We are not to despise the least, the most ignoble or illiterate of those who give evidence of a purity and honesty of heart toward God, and to whom he seems to give the anointing of his spirit. R3226:6

Those who make no boast of wisdom according to the course of this world. R2492:6

"God looketh on the heart." (1 Sam. 16:7) R3226:5

By candor and humility and zeal let us keep ourselves in the love of God.

R2026:5 "Humble yourselves therefore under the mighty hand of God." (1 Pet. 5:6) R2882:4

Luke 10:22

But the Son -- Whose prehuman fellowship with the Father was impressed with sufficient clearness to enable our Lord to say that "what he hath seen and heard, that he testifieth." (John 3:32) E91

Luke 10:23

Unto his disciples -- Confined, during the Gospel age, to a special few. HG145:5

The eyes which see -- There are many who have not this sight and hearing, for the Apostle says, "The god of this world [Satan] hath blinded the minds of them that believe not, lest the light of the goodness of God should shine unto them." (2 Cor. 4:4) HG145:5

Luke 10:25

A certain lawyer -- One well versed in the teachings of the books of Moses, a theological doctor. R5369:3, 2683:2
Probably of the Sadducees, who denied a resurrection and any future or eternal life. R2683:3

Stood up -- Thus politely intimating his desire to say a word in connection with the subject under discussion. R2683:2

Tempted him -- That is, to prove him, to draw him out, to expose the weakness of his argument. R2683:3

The insincerity and evil disposition toward Jesus on the part of the Jewish teachers was very manifest in the questions they publicly propounded to trap him. It was for this purpose that they mingled with the multitudes. R1939:3

Jealousy of Jesus sprang up among the Doctors of the Law. To them he was a rival teacher, and accordingly they sought to entrap him, with a view to exposing him to ridicule before his followers. R3803:2

The questioner probably thought he would say, You must believe that I am the Son of God, the promised Messiah. Then they would have said, He repudiates the Law. R1939:6

What shall I do -- A scribe, a Doctor of the Law, a teacher; one, therefore, who is living a godly and upright life, so far, at least, as his neighbors and pupils may be able to discern. R2683:3

There are some people of the same kind today, who are ready to acknowledge that God has a perfect standard, but believe that they are sufficiently near the divine standard to have eternal life, and are therefore not looking for any Savior. R3803:5

To inherit eternal life -- The best of the nation had not inherited eternal life; on the contrary, they had died as other men--whether it be of the Lord's failure to fulfill his promise, or man's failure to comply with the conditions. R2683:3

What is written -- Practically saying, I stand by the Scriptural record. R2683:5

The answer was politely deferential to the office of the inquirer. R1767:3

Note how, in meekness, the Lord instructed those that opposed themselves (2 Tim. 2:24-26). He did not bluntly say to his insincere inquirer, Your heart is not right, but rather sought carefully and wisely to lead his opposer to this realization and to consequent repentance. R1767:6

In the law -- God has but one standard, which is fully set forth in the Scriptures. The law of God is the standard. NS690:4

Referring the inquirer to the law for his answer because he was vainly trusting in the Law for salvation, and opposing the new and only way of life through Christ. R1767:3

Why did Jesus thus refer to the Law? Why did he not avail himself of this opportunity for preaching the Gospel? It was necessary that the lawyer recognize his own inability to keep the full letter of the divine law, so that he might be prepared to look for divine mercy through Jesus. R3803:4

How readest thou -- Quote, as you understand it, the teachings of the Law on this subject. R2683:5

Luke 10:27

He answering said -- Quoting Deut. 6:4,5. He added nothing, because nothing could be added. R5521:3

The Ten Commandments are divided into two parts: one part related to the duty and obligation toward God; the other to the duty and obligation to fellow-men. R5699:3

The Ten Commandments delivered to Moses were written upon two stone tablets. One bore the first four commandments, which appertain to God; the other bore the remaining six, which appertain to humanity. R5287:2

Thou shalt love -- This love (Greek, agapee) which God exemplifies, is the kind he sets before us as the highest standard or "mark" toward which we must run if we would gain the prize. R2807:4

Love is the principal thing. R5521:3, 5370:1

Substantially the same law of God which is now over mankind must ultimately govern all of God's intelligent creatures, and that law is briefly comprehended in the one word, love. A136

The "thou shalt not's" might be multiplied indefinitely to fit the thousands of occurrences in daily life, but the one "thou shalt" covers the entire situation. R5287:2

We should judge ourselves by this law, to see to what extent we are loving God thus, and are loving our neighbors as ourselves. This is our primary work of judging. R5887:2

The law is the Father's law. It existed before Jesus came. It still exists. It will always be in existence. Jesus did not put it to an end, and never will put it to an end. Q431:5

Failure to keep this law is the direct cause of the time of trouble. A309

This is the very essence of the great law of God. R5887:2; Q179:6

"Love is the fulfilling of the Law." (Rom. 13:10) A246

The Lord thy God -- Jehovah. E40; R5521:3

With all thy heart -- Meaning that the sum of all our affections would center upon the Lord, so that our love for him would far excel all of our dear ones of the home and family and of the whole world. R3803:6

The true God is to be recognized and have first place in our heart; any division of the heart or strength or mind or soul violates this commandment. R5286:3, 3803:6

The first test of relationship to the Lord, preceding meekness, gentleness, patience, etc. R4480:4

It is impossible to live up to this standard without the Redeemer's merit to cover our shortcomings. R5638:6

The Church must reach this standard in the spirit of their minds and hearts. R4479:2

Such love does not wait for commands, but appeals for service. F124

Obedience to this part of the Law enabled Christ to fulfill the Law Covenant and to become heir of the Abrahamic Covenant at the same time that he redeemed Adam. F357

The Lord thus epitomized the Ten Commandments, which are in themselves a brief epitome of the whole Law. A45; R5521:3

Ultimately, obedience to this law will be required of all who shall have life on any plane. A136

With all thy soul -- With all our being--to manifest our love not merely by our words and looks, by our praises, but by our services and all of our conduct in life, everything testifying that God is first in our affections and in all of life's interests. R3803:6

With all thy strength -- Signifying that time, talent and influence would all be at the service of our God. R3803:6

With all thy mind -- Implying that we are to intellectually attempt to appreciate the Lord, to understand the divine laws, and to enter into heart sympathy with them, so that our service and worship would be the more intelligent. R3804:1

We are not being judged according to the flesh, but according to the spirit, according to the mind, according to the new creature. Q458:T
